WRESTLERS CAPTURE MEET FROM AMHERST

Overwhelming Victory Ends Year After Defeat at Hands of Norwich Cadets

AMHERST MEET

Animated and aggressive wrestling against inexperienced but obstinate opponents won for the Williams matmen a 27½-1½ victory over Amherst in their final meet of the season in Lasell Gymnasium Wednesday evening. The meet, though perhaps more overwhelming in score than in fact, came by way of atonement for the loss to Norwich last Saturday afternoon by a margin of one decision in a series of dull matches.

The Amherst meet got off to a flying start when Richardson brought Snyder of the visitors to the mat with a leg hold and then, with a head and crotch combination, stood him on his shoulders, feet in the air, for a fall in two and a half minutes. Taylor, following immediately and with even speedier effectiveness, brought Tracy down from the rear and with a half-nelson ended second match in 1 minute, 44 seconds.

Lisle drew the most difficult assignment of the meet in Dudley, who on several occasions in the first minutes of the match threatened to throw the Williams captain. After the mid-way point, however, Lisle held a definite advantage, and Dudley twice barely escaped being the third Amherst victim, and though the latter was again in the advantage when the period ended, the decision went to Lisle by a fair margin. In the 145-pound class, Mandell of Williams was also seriously threatened at one time, but after his escape he had only to secure a half nelson and body hold and wait for the remarkable bridging capacities of his adversary to wear themselves out.

The 158-pound match was different only in that it was shorter, for Lumb, wrestling for Williams, obtained the same hold almost at once and had less than four minutes to wait for a fall. The 175-pound wrestlers were on their feet most of the period, but Downing managed to be on top of his Amherst opponent on the few occasions that they came to the mat. Andersen started the fastest heavy-weight wrestling that has been seen in Williams-town this year against the huge Harper.

Purple Basketball Five Elects Betham Captain

Following two years of spectacular playing for Williams, Herbert L. Betham, '29 of Troy, New York, was elected captain of the 1928-29 basketball team at a meeting of the squad held at Coach Messer's house last Tuesday. During his freshman year Betham was moved up from the yearling team to the Varsity squad and although his playing was excellent he did not play in enough games to make his "bWb".

His sophomore year he played regularly at left forward and made a creditable running mate for Shumway and Zinn. Betham's work this year has been remarkable in that he not only was high scorer but also displayed flashy floor work which enabled the other members of the team to score. His ability for making spot shots from any angle has made him prominent in the East as a forward.

Betham prepared at Troy High School where he played on the baseball, football, and basketball teams, having been a regular for four years with the indoor team. Since coming to Williams he has played on his freshmen football and baseball team and the Varsity basketball team.

Avery Receives Ph.D. Degree

Mr. Maurice W. Avery, instructor in Greek and Latin, has recently received his Ph.D. from Harvard University. Mr. Avery took his M.A. at that institution in 1922, and after two years' graduate work in residence toward the more advanced degree he was called to Williams, where he has filled his present position for the last five years. During this period he has been steadily at work, having completed his thesis several years ago and taken the final examinations in Cambridge last January. Mr. Avery is a member of the American Philological Association and of the Phi Beta Kappa Society.

Preacher

Dean Willard L. Sperry of Harvard University will preach at the regular Sunday morning service in the Thompson Memorial Chapel.

SIR W. T. GRENFELL TO DELIVER TALK TONIGHT

Celebrated Labrador Doctor Will Give Illustrated Lecture in Chapin Hall

Friday, March 16—Sir Wilfred Grenfell, universally known as the famous Labrador doctor to deep-sea fishermen, and recently knighted by King George of England, will deliver a lecture before the College tonight in Chapin Hall at 8.00 p. m. under the auspices of the Williams Christian Association, taking for his subject "The Far North, Labrador, and Newfoundland". Ever since Sir Wilfred set foot on American soil some 36 years ago, he has devoted himself tirelessly to promoting the welfare and education of the primitive peoples living along our northern coast, and now he is traveling throughout the country recounting his experiences and illustrating his talks by several thousand feet of motion picture film.

In his preliminary missionary work Sir Wilfred gave his attention and energies to creating hospitals, thus lessening untold hardships incurred through lack of knowledge of even the most rudimentary forms of medical and surgical aid. Everywhere he preached sanitation, and rapidly succeeded in greatly reducing cases of smallpox, typhoid, and tuberculosis, which diseases had ravaged the country with fearful effects. Following these services, the missionary inaugurated religious services, and then fostered cottage industries, such as rug-making, so that his people would not be wholly dependent upon the sale of their fish. He stimulated the development of water power, securing for usage the tremendous power of Grand Falls, in the heart of Labrador, and also endeavored to interest capital in its lumber resources.

The remarkable success of Sir Wilfred is due largely to his exceptional personal charm. Throughout the civilized world he has been received with honor and respect, Oxford bestowing upon him the only honorary degree of M.D. ever given by that university. For his quality of great physical audacity, Labrador has furnished a perfect background, with its icebergs and gloomy cliffs rising for thousands of feet from the sea, and its tales of incredible suffering and heroism, in many of which Sir Wilfred has had such a large part.

Musical Clubs Change Spring Tour Program

Offering a lighter and more-varied program than in former years, the Musical Clubs will start their annual spring tour at Stamford, Conn., on Tuesday, April 10, appearing at the Ritz Hotel in New York on Friday of the same week. Several innovations will be present on the program, including a smaller Mandolin Club of 12 pieces, which will play popular semi-classical music, and in all probability one or two pieces from the entertaining mid-year musical show.

The Glee Club for this year's trip, which will contain about 35 voices will be heard in a college medley, as well as in several light classical selections. The Mandolin Club, which will be without the customary brass instruments this year, will consist of two first and two second mandolins, two violins, flute, banjo, bass viol, clarinet, piano, and traps.

The schedule for the trip: Tuesday, April 10, Stamford, Conn.; Wednesday, April 11, East Orange, N. J.; Thursday, April 12, Plainfield, N. J.; Friday, April 13, New York City, Ritz Hotel; Saturday, April 14, Montclair, N. J.

Williams To Debate Cornell

Defending the candidacy of Hoover as opposed to that of Smith, the debating team will send three men to Ithaca on April 21 to oppose the Cornell team in a non-league debate. The three men recently chosen to represent Williams are Overton '29, captain, and Erskine and Gilbert '30.

Physics Profs To Lecture

Messrs. William M. Pierce and K. V. Manning of the Physics Department will lecture on the recent developments in television by the Bell Telephone Company at the next meeting of the Science Club, which is to be held on March 22 in the Physics Laboratory. A demonstration will be included in the lecture, and possibly there will be a discussion of the new Coolidge tube.

Cross-Country, Track Managerships Merged

According to a new ruling adopted by the Student Council at a meeting held on Tuesday, March 6, and subject to ratification by the College body, the managership of cross-country will be merged with that of track, and there will be no cross-country competition in the football competition. Hereafter the winner of the track competition by becoming recommended and elected Manager of Track automatically would be recommended and elected Manager of Cross-Country.

This rule, which was thought wise because of the close relationship between track and cross-country, was formulated on recommendation of the Track Association, and is a return to the system which had been used up to the football competition of 1926. It will be submitted for approval to the College body some time in the near future.

INSIGNIA IS AWARDED TO WINTER ATHLETES

Schott To Enter Intercollegiate Swim Meets—Holy Cross Nine Here May 2

Five Old English "W's," seven swimming letters, 15 hockey letters, 12 basketball letters, and 16 freshmen numerals were awarded to undergraduates of the College for participation in winter sports contests by the Athletic Council when it met last Monday. At the same time it was decided to allow W. R. Schott '29, holder of the national intercollegiate record in the 200-yard breast stroke, to participate in the Intercollegiate Swimming Association championships on March 23 and 24, as well as in the national collegiate championships on March 30 and 31.

An addition of one game was made to the baseball schedule this spring with the approval of a contest with Holy Cross here on May 2. The following members of the swimming team were awarded the Old English "W" because of having been point winners in the New England Intercollegiate Swimming Association meet held here last week: Boynton, Captain Butcher, Healy, Putney and Schott. "SW's" went to the following: Davis, Dawes, Doughty, Noble, van der Bogert, Manager Gordinier and Assistant Manager Strong, Bancroft, Birnie, Goodbody, Gregg, Kimball, and Shaw '31 will receive class numerals for swimming.

Hockey letters were awarded to Ballou, Banks, Captain Blaney, Brigham, Hazard, Captain-elect Howe, Hoyt, Hutches, Nye, Shepler, Smith, Watters, Wheeler, Manager Eaton and Assistant Manager Williamson. Palmer received a "2W9" as manager of Freshman hockey.

Basketball insignia went to Alexander, Allen, Captain-elect Betham, Brown, Cuddeback, Fowle, Howse, Captain Sterling, Thoms, Webster, Manager Rudolph and Assistant Manager Huested. Ten freshmen were rewarded with numerals for having participated in the required number of basketball games. These were Booth, Brown, Dence, Field, Haefner, Heine, Leber, Thomas and Williams.

1931 Editorial Competition

There will be a meeting of all members of the class of 1931 who are interested in the second Freshman competition for the editorial board of THE RECORD immediately after chapel on Sunday morning, March 18, in THE RECORD office on the ground floor of Jesup Hall. At this time the competition will be explained, and the details of the work outlined. At the end of this competition, which will run for seventeen issues, two and possibly three men will be elected to the board. All work will be over before final examinations begin in June.

SPRINGFIELD TAKES FIRST PLACE IN N. E. I. C. S. A. MEET

Winners Show All-Round Power in Scoring 35 Points; Nose Out Brown; M. I. T. and Wesleyan Tie for Fourth Place

Preliminary Practice Is Held by Lacrosse Squad

In spite of the inclement weather, the candidates for the lacrosse team have been drilling in fundamentals under Coaches Bellerose and Bullock in order to be prepared for the opening game of the season against Springfield on April 28.

Although lacrosse is new at Williams, being recognized as a minor sport for the first time this year, eleven players who have had previous experience will be available for the team, and with a number of new men reporting, Coach Bellerose will not be handicapped by a lack of numbers as he was last year.

Practice thus far has been held on the Jesup Hall Campus because of the poor condition of Cole Field, but as soon as weather permits and as soon as Cole Field is put into playing condition, the squad will practice there. During his recent visit here, Coach Caldwell of the football team suggested that, since there would be no spring football practice this year, candidates should report for lacrosse this spring. The players who have had previous experience and who are expected to report to Coach Bellerose are Thurston, Dunn, J. Brown, Lawder, Siegel, Warner, Ashby, Collins, Rosasco, Willmot, and Seneal. Freshmen are also expected to report.

1927 CHAMPIONS THIRD

Six Pool and Four N. E. Marks Fall in Meet; Bardo and Schott Lead Scoring

Taking four first places and scoring in every event, except the individual medley and the 200-yd. breast stroke, for a total of 35 points, Springfield College, in its first year of membership in the association, won the annual N. E. I. C. S. A. swimming meet held in the Lasell Pool before a fairly large crowd last Friday and Saturday. Brown was the runner-up for the plaque with 30 points, while third place went to Williams, last year's champions, who scored 24 points. M. I. T. and Wesleyan were tied at 9 apiece, Amherst being last with no score. Finishing first in the 50 and 100-yd. events in addition to swimming anchor man on their relay team, Bardo of the winners shared high scoring honors with Schott, who also gained ten points through victories in the 300-yd. individual medley and 200-breast stroke. Six pool records and three New England marks were lowered during the meet, which was the first to be held at Williams.

Springfield took first place in the 50, 100, 440, and the dives; second in the two relays; third in the 440 and dives; and fourth in the backstroke and dives, while two first, four seconds, and two thirds went to Brown. The home team was able to gain only two victories, those taken by Schott, but Captain Butcher and Healy accounted for seconds in the 440 and the individual medley. Healy and Boynton took third and fourth in the breast stroke, and Putney scored twice for the Purple with a fourth place in the 50 and a third in the hundred. The medley relay team and the free style quartet finished fourth in both of these events. Of last year's titleholders Schott alone was able to retain his crown, Lucy of M. I. T. beating Merchant of Brown, 1927 backstroke champion, and Littlefield of Springfield nosing out Captain Butcher, the N. E. I. C. S. A. record holder in the 440. Although the new N. E. records were due to recently adopted events, and the pool marks due to its newness, the times were consistently good.

Bardo of Springfield, Littlefield of Brown, Putney of Williams, and Van Deusen of Wesleyan took the preliminaries of the 50 yd. dash on Friday night, while in the semi-finals held later that evening Bardo and Van Deusen took their heats with Putney and Littlefield close behind each time. After a hard race with Goff of Brown, Healy was able to win the first heat of the 300-yd. individual medley, Burgess, who finished third, being disqualified. In the next trial heat, Schott won easily from Appleton of M. I. T. in ten seconds faster time than the previous race. Hoar, Docket, and Orcutt, all of Springfield took the first three places in the diving trials, with Peck and Bodol of

Dr. Vincenzo Nitti, Thrice Decorated for Bravery in World War, Tells of War Experiences and Mussolini

Relating some of his experiences in the World War in an interview with a RECORD reporter recently, Dr. Vincenzo Nitti, eminent Italian historian who lectured at the open meeting of the Forum last Sunday, gave a vivid picture of the battles along the Italian Front. Dr. Nitti joined the army the day after his seventeenth birthday, fought for eleven months, and then being captured and wounded, spent 15 months in a German prison camp.

Although the youngest officer in the Italian army, Dr. Nitti served with distinction. He was decorated three times, the first for taking command of his division when all the superior officers had been killed and holding the position for three days against the Austrian attacks. He was decorated a second time for organizing and leading a patrol against an Austrian machine gun nest. The third decoration came when he was wounded severely but refused to leave the trenches. Commenting on the situation after the war, Dr. Nitti said that there was a certain ill feeling against France, but none against American capital.

Concerning tourists Dr. Nitti said that in most of the country they were welcomed by the people. Mussolini took care, however, that these foreigners saw only the better parts of Fascism. This is the reason for the general misconception of the movement on the part of Americans. Discussing the educational system in Italy, Dr. Nitti remarked that students at the Universities of Naples and Milan secretly published anti-Fascist newspapers.

When asked about the movies in Italy, Dr. Nitti said that, although the great majority of the pictures were American, the only ones which were really appreciated by the intelligent class of people were the ones by Charlie Chaplin. In proof of this he cited the books in French on the "Art of Chaplin". Dancing and cabaret scenes have been suppressed from the movies by Mussolini for the public moral good.

BY WAY OF INTRODUCTION

Somewhat it seems to be impossible for undergraduates and politicians to slip into a new office without making a noise about it. A few days ago The Record completed its forty-first volume, and with the grace and dignity of wise old age the 1928 editorial board retired—quietly, as seniors should. Enter 1929, quivering with raw enthusiasm to say things never said before, awkwardly self-conscious in its new position, and rather pathetic in its eagerness to please. We apologize for the noise, but it is a part of our nature.

It is an ancient custom that Record boards upon their coming of age shall immediately swear unanimous allegiance to a policy of no policies. This insures a sort of non-committal sanctity to anything that may happen in the future, and relieves the honest editor from the painful burden of breaking a promise. This is all very well if by "policy" is meant a rigid and predestined course of procedure to be followed on every little question that may pop up during the course of a college year. But taking the word in its broader and preferred sense to mean "wisdom in managing affairs", we could hardly afford to repudiate such a lofty ideal. So if we must have a policy—well, this is it.

As we turn now to the somewhat presumptuous task of understanding and interpreting that medley of sounds which a community of young men is wont to make while getting a liberal education, we pause a moment that we may hear more distinctly.

It would indeed be an insensitive sort of person that has not noticed that Williams is growing—not precociously, but gently, with the insistent force of ripening maturity. One need only look back a few years to realize how definite this course of development has been; and if we do not feel that Williams still moves on under our very feet, it is because we are too near it.

Once in a while, it is true, there is a great bustling about and jangling of bells, and Alma Mater emerges from some zealous college meeting with a few dubious exhibits added to her stature. Everyone murmurs, "Ah, progress!" and then the valley becomes peaceful again. But we must go a little deeper if we are to understand fully such historical events as curriculum reforms, chapel revolutions, houseparty crusades, and fraternity spring cleanings. These things, most commendable in themselves, are after all but meagre headlines of the real progress that moves slowly and softly below the surface—sometimes aloof from the madding campus: more often a part of it.

It is inevitable that during the course of the next few months various questions and problems will arise from the ferment of our buzzing activities. Some will be important; some trivial. But we shall seek to regard them all not merely as erratic eruptions, come to disturb our academic siestas, but as natural manifestations of a broadening growth that takes place in the minds of men. And as these interesting tendencies become apparent, we shall endeavor to relate them to that harmony of progress which we believe to be so characteristic of Williams. It is in this sense that we hope to show some "wisdom in managing affairs".

It would indeed be strange if an incoming board had no soft words of commendation for the retiring board. But in our case the retiring board has managed to make this little formality seem almost unnecessary. A volume of evidence in black and white speaks for the work they have done. For once a body of particular readers has been made more eager to praise than to blame. We add our own congratulations, and hope they will not be mistaken for college paper etiquette.

COMMUNICATION

Although communications may be published unsigned if so requested, the name of the writer must in every case be submitted to the editor. The Board assumes no responsibility, however, for the facts as stated nor for the opinions expressed in this department.

THREE-PARTY RIVALRY

To the Editor of THE RECORD:
Dear Sir:

To one who has heard from his infancy many graphic and vivid tales of bygone encounters with our ancient and honorable foe, Amherst College, and to one who not only had the pleasure of being one of those to rub Amherst's nose in the dust on one occasion at Weston Field but also had the delightful experience of having his own nose rubbed in the dust at least a dozen times one afternoon at Pratt Field (Amherst, by the way, made untold thousands that afternoon by rubbing all our noses collectively and individually, so you can see the encounter was very worth while), your position taken in the proposed triangular agreement to be entered upon by Amherst, Wesleyan and ourselves is absolutely sound.

Certainly rarely, if ever, as far as the writer knows, has there ever been a satisfactory tripartite rivalry. First of all, in the field of sport, and by sport, I mean to include all contests between two rivals whether they be mental or physical or a combination of both, one usually encounters one foe who calls on all your resources to break even with him, leave alone conquering him consistently. Amherst has always offered us just this type of competition.

Secondly, in order to keep relationships between two rivals harmonious even in the face of hard fought, keenly felt engagements, it is necessary to have a rival with whom you are constantly in touch and of whose traditions and history you have knowledge. Historically and actually Amherst is that rival.

The obvious example in a similar case is, of course, Harvard, Yale and Princeton: Harvard and Yale ancient and legitimate rivals, Princeton also becoming a rival of Yale, later growing to such stature and power that it demanded and received atten-

ALUMNI COLUMN

(To the Alumni: Beginning with the first April issue of THE RECORD, this column will be devoted as often as possible to articles of strictly alumni interest. This may include extracts from old papers or documents, news of particular alumni, or simply alumni notes. This innovation will be adopted for the benefit of the large number of alumni subscribers, and it is earnestly requested that alumni cooperate by forwarding whatever suitable information they may have to: The Alumni Column Editor, Box 661, Williamstown.)

HIGH LIGHTS OF HISTORY

(The following are extracts from the WEEKLY of 1888)

Much interest is manifested at Williams in the College Brass Band, which is the first of its kind in the history of American colleges.

Mr. Casey of the Philadelphia league team, arrived last Friday and began at once a thorough course of training with the nine. The southern trip of the baseball team will include games with the Washingtons (American League), Philadelphia Athletics, University of Pennsylvania, Brooklyn, and New York.

A floating item says that a Williamstown girl has received seventy student callers during the last twenty-one days. "This is a pretty good society showing for an old conservative town" adds the intelligent paragrapher of the Springfield Weekly Republican.

Two of the college quartet were snowed in at Wellesley.

(At Amherst) Each recipient of a scholarship must sign a document saying that he has not entered a billiard room, except that in the gymnasium, during the term time, nor used tobacco, nor drunk liquor as a beverage, nor paid any money as tuition for dancing.

A Prohibition Club has been organized at Brown, and over thirty students have joined.

The nine wore their new suits at the gymnasium exhibition. The return to striped blazers and caps is a step in the right direction.

ALUMNI NOTES

1885

Harry G. Dunham of Scranton, Penna., recently resigned from the presidency of the Peoples Savings and Dime Bank of the same city, having held the position for a number of years.

1897

George T. Grundy has been reappointed town clerk of Williamstown.

1904

Max Eastman has published a new book called Venture. Nation has the following to say about it: "—a gay and exciting story about a strong young man who loves life. He gets into trouble on all sides. Real life is a whole lot harder to live than he thought it was, but he does not give up the effort. He is still at it when the book ends".

1914

Arthur N. Pack has written an article entitled Camera Hunting on the Continental Divide, which appears as the feature of the January number of Nature Magazine.

1923

Kenneth P. Britton, who is now living in Paris, has published a book of poems which is made up of his contributions to the Lantern column in the New York Herald Tribune. He is at present engaged in writing a book which will be called One Drop of Midnight.

William B. Quaintance Jr. was married on Monday, January 9, to Miss Dolly Warren Stiles, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mark D. Stiles of Mount Vernon, N. Y., at the First Baptist Church in Mount Vernon. Mr. and Mrs. Quaintance, after a bridal trip to Cuba, will reside in Mount Vernon.

Abbot K. Spencer of West Orange, N. J., is engaged to marry Miss Elizabeth Camp, daughter of Mrs. G. S. Camp of New York and Sackett's Harbor. The wedding will take place early in June.

LEHMAN CUP EVENTS TO BEGIN WEDNESDAY

Close Competition Is Expected In Annual Meet; Keep Unable To Compete

Starting next Wednesday afternoon, the annual Lehman cup meet for all-around track ability will take place throughout the week, the nine events being run off on Wednesday, Thursday, Saturday, Monday, and the following Wednesday. Competition for the two cups, which are awarded annually by H. H. Lehman '99 of New York City, is expected to be unusually close this year, since Thomas '27, who during the past three years won the meet twice and finished second once, has graduated, and Keep '28, captain of the track team, who was first last year and runner-up to Thomas in the two preceding meets, will be unable to compete because of sickness.

Nine events will be on the program: 50-yd. dash, 60-yd. high hurdles, 60-yd. low hurdles, 440-yd. dash, 880-yd. run, mile run, shot put, high jump, and potato race. For the first five places in the 50-yd. dash and two hurdle events, the scoring will be as follows: five, three and one-half, two, one, and one-half. In the other races points will be awarded on a basis of ten, seven, four, two, and one points for first, second, third, fourth, and fifth places, respectively. One point will be given for every inch over four feet, six inches in the high jump, and in the shot put one point for every six inches beyond 29 feet.

A large number of contestants is expected this year, since the three men, who finished highest in 1927, will not compete again. Brauley '28 was fourth with 19 points, 15 less than Adams '27 who was third, while fifth place went to Little '29 with 15 points. Gailer '29 followed Little with 13 points, gained in the shot put. Skinner '30, who scored 11 points last year and Beals '29, who is the leading sprinter now in college, are also expected to be among the high point scorers. The events will be held at four each day on the board track, with the exception of the high jump, which will take place in the Lasell Gymnasium on Thursday afternoon. Entries for the various events can be made now on blanks posted at the entrance to the Gymnasium and on the bulletin board in the Locker room.

'29 'Gul', Containing New Features, Almost Ready

With all the pictures and a quarter of the written material already completed, the Editors of the 1929 Gulielmsonian plan to have the whole book on the press before the Easter vacation and to bring out the finished volume before the exams in June. The book, which is being printed this year by Hammersmith, Kortmeyer and Company of Milwaukee, will be a change from last year's Gul in several features, notably the increase in the number of rotogravure pages from 6 to 16 and the doubling of the Senior feature section from 13 to 26 pages.

As a whole the book will be more compact than in former years with the elimination of material whose interest is not general. The theme of the volume is Colonial, the drawings being done by Heller '28, Eisner, Layman '29, and Anderson '30. In the Senior feature section votes on "class favorites" will be listed down to those of two in number, and also the opinions of each man in the class on seven questions will be printed with names. These questions range from "What is Williams greatest need?" to "What would you do if you ran Williams?"

'Round Table' Discusses Bennington College Plans

"Some Suggestions for the Organization of Bennington College" was the subject for discussion at the Forum Round Table gathering presided over by Professor Robert D. Leigh in Griffin Hall last Sunday night. As president-elect of the new institution Professor Leigh opened the meeting with some informal remarks on curriculum, admission requirements, and tentative general plans for organization, after which the floor was thrown open for the suggestions and questions of the audience, which was composed of about 75 students.

Professor Leigh made it known that on the basis of close investigation of other similar institutions it had been decided definitely to limit the enrollment to 325 women. Living arrangements were discussed, as well as the problem of selecting a faculty and deciding upon a system of salaries and promotions, and Professor Leigh outlined proposed staff facilities for physical and mental hygiene. It was emphasized that the intellectual qualifications for admission would be equal in severity to, although of different content from, those of any existing women's college, and that the requirements for staying in college especially after the first two years, would be such as to discourage all but the really serious student.

DUTTON LIKENS NEW ROMANTICISM TO OLD

Classifies English Writers in Last of Four Tuesday Lectures on Romanticism

Showing that the ideal of "escape from rationalism" which characterized English romantic literature of the 19th century, lay dormant during the Victorian age only to break forth anew in our own era, Professor George B. Dutton, head of the English department, concluded a series of four Tuesday lectures by members of the faculty concerning romanticism with a talk on "Romanticism, the Old and the New", in the Thompson Physical Laboratory. Often evoking laughter from his audience, especially in references to the Victorian era, Professor Dutton, while not attempting to define romanticism, said that the English movement embodied three main trends as expressed by different men: sentimentalism, transcendentalism, and exoticism.

Although the romantic period in English literature dates roughly from 1798 to 1832, the speaker stated that "the first real note of romanticism was sounded by that madman and prophet, William Blake". In direct contrast to his predecessor, Pope, whose work was an orderly treatment of a logical world, Blake expressed uncontrollable energy. He was followed by a host of romanticists: Wordsworth, Coleridge, Byron, Shelley, Keats, and Lamb, who fall into three general groups.

The first of these, the sentimentalists, "believed in the goodness of the feeling of natural man, unaffected by experience", the lecturer continued. Wordsworth was a representative of the second class, called transcendentalists, who held that "all we really know of the world is what our senses feel there. The realities are far away". Thus they believed in the neglect of rationalism. Exoticism was cited by the speaker as the third classification, of which Coleridge was a typical exponent. He wrote of "the past, the remote, and even the impossible". "All these schools emphasized the necessity of the non-rational self", and disregarded reason in a sacrifice to beauty. "Romanticism was the spirit of the age", but soon came the Victorian era, with its practicality and skepticism, and romanticism died out.

"However", the lecturer continued, "the great conceptions did not perish", as is shown by the renewed popularity of the romantic novel. The theory that "we are irrational beings in an irrational universe" is the same as that held a hundred years ago. "Men now arrange words to give a sensuous appeal without the danger of confusing ideas—attempt to make a direct appeal to the unintellectual knowledge of the life cells." The fiction of Mrs. Wolf, Dorothy Richardson and Thornton Wilder "brings the reader in contact not with events, but with the personalities that form the background of the events". In closing, the lecturer quoted from the "Bridge of San Luis Rey", which, he said, "represents an esthetic conception emphasizing the beauty of conduct and ideas."

MR. McDUFFEE INVENTS U-BOAT SAFETY DEVICE

College Chief Engineer Has Hopes His Scheme Will Be Adopted by Government

When interrogated by a Record reporter recently as to the reasons for the apparent delay of the Navy Department in considering his eminently practical scheme for raising sunken submarines, Mr. Robert McDuffee, chief engineer of the College, discouraged the idea that the naval engineers intend to reject his method or that they have adopted a better one from the large number submitted. "They don't dispute the practicability of my plan," said Mr. McDuffee, "and the House has passed a resolution that all submarines must be equipped with effective safety devices."

Mr. McDuffee went on to point out, however, that this resolution must go before the Senate, and that the Navy Department has announced the intention of attempting to influence the Senate to vote against the resolution if the installation of safety devices entails placing bands and hooks on present underwater craft. Experts claim that such equipment would render the submarines from eight to twelve tons heavier and that this handicap would interfere with rapid return to the surface after diving. To this Mr. McDuffee replied that safety in war consisted in diving quickly rather than in a speedy return to the surface, but he admitted that his plan as originally conceived involved the affixing of bands and hooks to the submarine's hull and that this might lower the boat's efficiency.

While in Washington interviewing committees Mr. McDuffee invented an addition to his idea which seems to obviate this difficulty, but which he was unable to present officially to the authorities at the time. This consists in placing internal braces in the ships to take up the strain of the hooks attached to the shell, and not only has it been proved effective in several try-outs but it has been estimated that braces for four hooks would add a bare half ton to the original displacement and would materially strengthen the hull.

Naval authorities have signified their desire unofficially to have the revision submitted to the Naval Inquiry Board, but no action can be taken before the Senate passes upon the House resolution. Captain Thilien, assistant to the Secretary of the Navy, is of the opinion that public feeling will force Congress to some action eventually, and Mr. McDuffee expressed himself as believing that the authorities will "dilly-dally along and then invent something similar themselves" unless Senatorial action attains a hitherto unprecedented speed.

Kappa Alpha Will Race Delta Upsilon in Finals

Kappa Alpha and Delta Upsilon, with victories over Phi Sigma Kappa and Sigma Phi respectively, advanced to the final bracket of the interfraternity running relay championship. Delta Upsilon so far holds the record time of 3:35, while Kappa Alpha is second with a time of 3:37.

In the basketball games last Monday afternoon Sigma Phi defeated Theta Delta Chi 5-4 in a slow game. Beta Theta Pi overcame Delta Phi, 11-8, and Kappa Alpha succumbed to Delta Psi by an 18-12 score. In the final game Delta Kappa Epsilon won from Phi Sigma Kappa, 16-14. On Tuesday Beta Theta Pi won a close game from Chi Psi by a 10-9 score. In the second game Theta Delta Chi defeated Delta Upsilon 20-11. Psi Upsilon forfeited their game to Phi Sigma Kappa, while the Commons Club trounced Delta Psi, 29-10.

Boys' Clubs Will Be Run by Executive Committee

As the executive work of the Boys' Clubs has gradually become more complex and has been greatly increased, an executive committee composed of six men will replace the single executive system thus far in use, and will meet every two weeks throughout the year. The committee now consists of: Kepner '28, chairman; French '29, vice-chairman; Wells '29, secretary; McNeil '29, divisional director; Arthur '29, chairman of Williamstown Clubs; John Cornell, superintendent.

The Committee is very anxious to receive the cooperation of at least 120 students in aiding the Big Brother Banquet, which will be held soon. The entertainment program will vary from that of past years in that it will include only members of the college body.

Dr. Garfield Will Attend Chicago Alumni Banquet

Friday, March 16—Following the lead of New York and Boston Alumni, who held their annual reunions in February, the Williams men of the Middle West have decided to gather at the Palmer House in Chicago on March 16. President Harry A. Garfield will be present at the annual banquet, which will probably be attended by more than three hundred Williams alumni in the vicinity of Chicago.

The speakers will include former Dean Frederick C. Ferry '91, now President of Hamilton, Marvin A. Chapman '05, President of the Williams Club of New York, and Linsley V. Dodge '24, member of the Athletic Council. Representatives will be present from the Alumni Association of Detroit, Columbus, Indianapolis, St. Louis, St. Paul, and Minneapolis as well as the Alumni Secretary, Mr. E. H. Botsford. New officers for the Chicago Alumni Association in 1928-29 were elected at the banquet.

Seniors Send Exams to Prof. Milham in Bombay

Before a makeup examination in Astronomy taken by two members of the class of 1928 can be graded, it will have to travel over half way around the world, as Professor Milham of the Astronomy Department is now on leave and is at the present time in India. The examination will be first sent to London where it will be forwarded to Bombay, a distance of over 12,000 miles.

Since the grades of the examination must be in the Dean's office before either student can graduate in June, it has been necessary to forward the exam to Professor Milham, post haste. The results of the examination will be cabled to the Dean as it is feared that if sent by mail they might not arrive in time to permit the two students to graduate. The men were to have taken the examination at the conclusion of the course last June, but on account of prolonged illnesses at the time this was impossible.

Empire State Students at Williams Number 309

Enrollment statistics recently compiled at Amherst College show that of the 749 students attending the college, slightly more than one-fourth, or 218, live in New York State, while the second greatest number, 152, comes from Massachusetts. Figures concerning the home states of students at Williams show that the Empire State is represented here by an even greater comparative number of undergraduates, since 309 of the 815 now registered at College reside in that State.

The number of Massachusetts students at Amherst exceeds that here by 38. The states which rank third, fourth, and fifth at the Sabrina college are Connecticut, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania, being represented respectively by 75, 60, and 52 undergraduates. These figures are not far different from those at Williams, where there are 65 students from New Jersey, 58 from Pennsylvania, 51 from Illinois, and 28 from Connecticut. Amherst seems to have the greater attraction this year for foreign students, as it numbers among those enrolled three men from China and one each from Bulgaria, England, and Japan, while the only non-American residents here are one from Germany, one from Canada, and one from Japan.

Article by Spear '28 to Feature March 'Graphic'

Presenting pictures of the outgoing Senior boards of the Graphic, The Record, and the Purple Cow, the March number of the Graphic and Literary Monthly will appear next week. The feature of this issue, which is the first to be put out under the direction of the new board, will be an article by Spear '28, entitled "Certain Outbursts on Mozart, Occasioned and Inspired by Romaine Rolland".

Among the other prose contributions which comprise rather a large part of the whole, is a one-act play, "The Man-God", written by Kobler '31. The remaining prose articles are "One Step on the Stairs" by Heaton '30; "The Modern Drama", a sketch by Gibson '31; and "The Day of Glory Passed" by Baxter '30. The poetry section is headed by "Spring Song" by Doughty '29, while the other selections are "The Trinity" by Armstrong '30, and two sonnets by Prescott '30, "Nightmares from Antiquity" and "Ars Poetica".

Infirmary

Wilson '30 and Denne '31 are at present confined in the Thompson Infirmary. If an undergraduate becomes seriously ill, his parents are immediately notified by College authorities.

PROF. R. PERRY WILL ADDRESS PHIL UNION

'A Philosopher's Apology' Will Be Subject of Former Williams
Instructor

Choosing as his subject, "A Philosopher's Apology", Ralph Barton Perry, professor of Philosophy at Harvard University, will address the Philosophical Union next Sunday evening, March 18, at 8.00 p. m. in Griffin Hall. Professor Perry, one of the most eminent philosophers of our time, holds the chair formerly held by William James and is considered, in a sense, his successor.

Dr. Perry was graduated from Princeton University in 1896 with an A.B. degree. The following year at Harvard he received his Master's degree and two years later that of Doctor of Philosophy. His first teaching experience was obtained at Williams, when he was appointed instructor of Philosophy in 1899. He stayed here but one year, however, then taking up duties at Smith College as instructor in the same subject. From 1902-1905 he held the same position at Harvard. In 1905 he rose to assistant-professorship, and in 1913 he was appointed to the chair which he now holds. Dr. Perry was active during the World War, being a major in the army and serving on the committee on Education and Special Training. After the war he lectured in philosophy at many French universities.

Professor Perry is the author of the following books: An Approach to Philosophy, The Moral Economy, Present Philosophical Tendencies, The New Realism, The Free Man and the Soldier, The Present Conflict of Ideas, The Plattsburg Movement, together with many books on William James.

Bible Examination Will Be Held About April 5

Sophomore and Freshman Bible examinations, newly added to the curriculum this year, will consist of a regular three-hour questionnaire and thesis, given to the students immediately before spring recess, probably April 5. The examination will cover all the reading required of the two lower classes, including the Synoptic Gospels, geography of Palestine, historical background and early history of the Church, and the life and teachings of Christ.

The examination this year will probably consist of three parts. The first, of about one and a half hours duration, will be an essay, or several brief essays upon some aspect of the fundamental teachings of Jesus. The second part, lasting one hour, will contain questions calculated to show knowledge of the principal events of Jesus' life and the beginnings of the Christian Church. The final half-hour will be devoted to brief "yes" and "no" questions.

Senior Activity Cards Show Class Versatility

According to the activity cards handed in by the senior class for this year's Gid, seventy eight per cent of the 161 members of 1928 have taken part in extracurricular activities during their college career, dramas attracting the largest number with 46 participants. Of the 161, 57 have taken part in both athletic and non-athletic fields, 41 have devoted their attention solely to athletics, and 28 have confined themselves to non-athletic activities.

In athletic lines, football with 34 enthusiasts takes the lead, while track is not far behind with a following of 30. Others were, baseball 17, wrestling 16, soccer 15, swimming 13, basketball 11, lacrosse 11, tennis 10, hockey 8. College publications, on the non-athletic side, called forth the talents of 36 seniors, while 27 displayed an interest in the proceedings of the Williams Christian Association, proving that the graduating class this year entertains an exceedingly versatile nature.

1931 Pentathlon Starts Soon

Changing the five events which make up the Freshman Pentathlon, the Athletic Department has decided to have the following events: Swimming (100-150 yds.), rope climb, running, high jump, and broad jump. This contest will take place sometime between March 15 and April 1, and all freshmen will compete.

Dr. Schlesinger To Lecture

Assistant Professor Schlesinger will deliver the next of the Tuesday Lecture series on March 20. His subject will be "Messengers and Off-Stage Scenes in Greek Tragedy."

WORLD NEWS SUMMARY

Slight hope is held for the safety of Walter Hinchcliffe, British aviator, who left England at 8.35 a. m. on Tuesday in an attempt to make the first westward passage of the Atlantic in a heavier-than-air machine. He and his passenger, the Hon. Elsie Mackay, daughter of Lord Inchcape, are several hours overdue.

The flood following the bursting of the St. Francis Dam of the Los Angeles water works has already taken a toll of 296 lives, and by the time that the searchers complete their task, the total is expected to reach 400, while the property loss may touch $15,000,000.

Rumors of a technical corner in "Radio" have started an investigation by the N. Y. Stock Exchange authorities, while the market has been breaking all records.

Early returns in the New Hampshire presidential primaries, the first of the year, indicate Hoover and Smith as the candidates of the two major parties for the coming campaign.

Democrats are jubilant over the disclosures made at the hearings of the Senate committee investigating the 1920 oil scandals. Secretary Mellon was absolved by Senator Walsh, and ex-Chairman Butler made satisfactory replies, but Will Hays, now "movie" czar, excused his silence on grounds of "irrelevance".

New England Football Association Is Formed

Representing Williams football interests, Professor Guerdon N. Messer last Sunday attended a meeting in Springfield at which delegates from seven Connecticut Valley institutions formed an "Association of New England Colleges" and appointed Mr. Walter Okeson of Bethlehem, Pa., dictator for naming officials for gridiron games for the next five years. Long dissatisfied with the state of affairs as managed in the past by the Central board, delegates from the leading eastern colleges to the last meeting of the rules committee approached Mr. Okeson with the request that he take charge.

A slight difficulty arose in having the dictator so removed from his charges, but at Professor Messer's suggestion it was decided to have each college send in a list of the officials in their vicinity favorable to them and to have Mr. Okeson choose the referees with them in mind. At the same time the Association of New England Colleges was formed with Curry S. Hicks of M. A. C. at its head, and a committee was appointed consisting of Mr. Hicks, Dr. Paul Phillips of Amherst, who is secretary-treasurer of the new group, and Coach Jack Rothacher of Springfield to draw up a list of desirable officials. Amherst, Connecticut Agricultural College, M. A. C., Springfield, Trinity, Wesleyan, and Williams are at present members of the association, while invitations have been sent to Vermont, Norwich, Middlebury, New Hampshire, Rhode Island State, Holy Cross, Providence, Boston College, Coast Guard Academy, Lowell Textile, and Worcester Tech in order that the work may be done more thoroughly.

Wrestlers Capture Meet from Amherst

In the last minutes of the match he escaped from under the apparently inevitable force of the full weight of his opponent. The result of the match was a draw.

The summary is as follows:
115-lb. class: Richardson (W) won from Snyder (A) by a fall. Time: 2.29.
125-lb. class: Taylor (W) won from Tracy (A) by a fall. Time: 1.44.
135-lb. class: Lisle (W) won from Dudley (A) by referee's decision.
145-lb. class: Mandell (W) won from Mainville (A) by a fall. Time: 6.2.
158-lb. class: Lumb (W) won from Dawson (A) by a fall. Time: 3.56.
175-lb. class: Denning (W) won from Streeter (A) by referee's decision.
Unlimited: Andersen (W) and Harper (A) draw.

NORWICH MEET

Richardson also opened the Norwich meet with a fall. The wrestlers stalled for six minutes on their feet, but once on the mat a half-nelson did the trick in a matter of seconds. Chao of Norwich had the advantage over Taylor throughout, but the latter postponed the fall for over four minutes. Lisle, after being carried to the mat in a miscarriage of his original onslaught, nevertheless stood Pierce of Norwich on his shoulders in the shortest time of the season up to that point. The score was tied when, after 14 minutes of foot work, Mandell failed to escape the advantage with which Felch of Norwich started the second overtime and fell and was thrown a minute later.

Ring of Norwich never lost his advantage over Hartshorn throughout the 158-pound match, but by sitting out of a far half-nelson in the latter half of the contest Hartshorn turned a fall into a decision. Koutsonerolis was awarded a decision over Deming by a narrow margin. Andersen had an opportunity to try nearly every expedient known to wrestling in an attempt to overturn his heavy but rather inert opponent, but was unable to get more than a decision from the match.

The summary follows:
115-lb. class: Richardson (W) won from Smith (N) by a fall. Time: 7.15.
125-lb. class: Chao (N) won from Taylor (W) by a fall. Time: 4.10.
135-lb. class: Lisle (W) won from Pierce (N) by a fall. Time: 2.55.
145-lb. class: Felch (N) won from Mandell (W) by a fall. Time: 14.00.
158-lb. class: Ring (N) won from Hartshorn (W) by referee's decision. Time: 9.00.
175-lb. class: Koutsonerolis (N) won from Deming (W) by referee's decision. Time: 2.10.
Unlimited: Andersen (W) won from Molter (N) by referee's decision. Time: 10.

All 'Little Three' Five Chosen

Amherst was given three positions, Wesleyan one, and Williams one, by Coach Messer on his theoretical all—"Little Three" basketball team, picked last Thursday. At right forward, he placed Betham of Williams, and at left, Latham of Amherst. Walker of Amherst was chosen for the center position, while Miller of Amherst was picked for right guard and the other position went to Travis of Wesleyan.

'LITTLE THEATRE' WILL PRESENT THREE PLAYS

Plays by Tarkington, John Erskine and Sheridan To Be Seen in Jesup Tonight

Following their custom of a mixed bill, the Little Theatre will present three types of drama this evening in Jesup Hall at 8.15 p. m. The plays selected for this St. Patrick's Day entertainment are "Hearts Enduring" by John Erskine, "Beauty and the Jacobin" by Booth Tarkington, and "The Scheming Lieutenant" by Richard Binsley Sheridan.

Although freshmen were eligible to take part in the "Theatre" productions after mid-years, only two have been chosen for this bill, Hiles, who will play the part of Lieutenant O'Connor, and French, who has the role of Corporal Flint in the farce "The Scheming Lieutenant." Foster, '28, and Mrs. Graham make up the cast for "Hearts Enduring", a short tragedy which bears little resemblance to the works for which John Erskine is now famous. MacMullan, '28, is directing this play. A newcomer to the Williams-town stage, Mrs. Prentiss Bloedel, will have the part of Anne in "Beauty and the Jacobin", while Mrs. Lawrence Bloedel will have the other female role, that of "Eloise". Hilmer, '28, Gross, and R. S. Chapman, '30, fill out the cast, while Shoemaker, '28, is director. The only comic element on the bill will be supplied by Sheridan's farce, "The Scheming Lieutenant" in which Mrs. Safford and Miss Lincoln have the female parts while Reiff, '30, and McQuatters, '28, play the male roles. The direction of this play is being undertaken by Casaday, '29.

The casts are as follows:

Beauty and the Jacobin
Booth Tarkington

Eloise Mrs. Lawrence Bloedel
Anne Mrs. Prentiss Bloedel
Valis Hilmer, '28
Louis Gross, '30

Professor Cru Finishes War Treatise in French

After four years of intensive research and writing, Professor J. Norton Cru, of the French Department, has recently completed a treatise in French, reviewing a number of selected accounts of the Great War, written by actual French combatants. It will be published this spring in France by the Presses Universitaires, as one of the French series on the economic and social aspects of the World War, sponsored by the Carnegie Peace Foundation.

Although there are several World War bibliographies, Professor Cru's work includes a great deal of personal and authoritative memoranda, devoting pages of criticism to each account from which it is compiled. It fills an imperative need for a reliable account, accessible to future generations, of those who participated in the War.

Senior Class Ratifies Class Tax Allotments

When the Senior class convened in Jesup Hall a week ago, the principal business dealt with a decision of the items to compose the class tax. The latter in aggregate was found to amount to $21.00 per man, which amount is allotted as follows: $8.00 for the Gulielmian; $2.00 for such of the class movie as had already been taken (it was voted to do away with the remaining pictures, such as individual shots, etc., thus saving each man approximately $6.00); $3.00 in advance as a safety fund for the promenade to be held Monday night, June 25; $3.00 for the Alumni Association; $5.00 for incidentals; i.e., class booklets, banquet, etc.

Consideration of insurance plans was postponed until the class officers should have had more time to investigate every possibility thoroughly.

Springfield Takes First Place in N. E. I. C. S. A. Meet

Wesleyan, and Edwards of Brown following them to qualify for the finals.

Merchant of Brown took the opening heat of the 150-yd. backstroke in good time and, after trailing Sittler of Brown for the first five laps, Lucy of M. I. T. passed him in the final 25 yards to turn in the fastest trial time in the second heat. Bardo and Putney finished first and second in the first preliminary for the 100-yd. dash. The following two heats were taken by Arnold of Brown and Van Deusen of Wesleyan without much trouble. Williams dominated the breast stroke event, Schott winning from C. Brown of Springfield by more than half a length. Offering much more opposition, Borden of Brown only lost to Healy by a foot, while Boynton, although he won the heat because his opponent was disqualified, was barely nosed out by Wells of Brown. In these preliminaries, Springfield led with ten qualifiers, followed by Brown and Williams with seven, Wesleyan with four, and M. I. T. with two.

The Brown trio of Merchant, Borden, and Arnold won the 300-yd. medley relay, the opening event on Saturday's program by 20 feet from Springfield and M. I. T. in 3:27.8. This easily broke the pool record of 3:41.4, and, since it was added to the N. E. I. C. S. A. program this year, also constitutes a new association mark. Williams took fourth place in this race. With all the swimmers closely bunched at the finish, the 50-yd. dash was one of the most exciting events of the day. Bardo finished first, Litchfield, Van Deusen, and Putney following him in that order, only a foot separating each of them. The time of 24.9 set another pool mark.

Schott proved his all-around power in easily winning the individual medley race in 4:28.4, a second slower than his time in the trials, while Healy repeated his victory of the preceding night over Goff of Brown. Since this event also was adopted only this year, the time was a new pool and N. E. I. C. S. A. record. Littlefield, who had won from Butcher earlier in the season, took a slight lead at the start of the 440-yd. swim, which he barely managed to maintain until the finish to stave off Butcher's last minute spurt. The time was 5:52.6, faster than the existing pool mark set in the Amherst meet a week before.

Although Peck showing an improvement over his Friday's form took second place from Orcutt and Hoar, Springfield again took three places in the diving. Docket won with the comparatively low percentage of 67.2, the next three men being within one point of each other. Another exciting contest was staged in the 150-yd. backstroke by Lucy, Merchant and Sittler. The M. I. T. man once more came from behind to win in 1:54.5, which lowered the previous fastest time in the new pool. Like the 50, the 100-yd. dash was won by Bardo, while Arnold of Brown nosed out Putney for second place, who in turn barely beat Van Deusen. The fifth pool record fell in this event, the time being 57 flat.

Schott gradually increased his lead in the breast stroke to win without extending himself, while Healy, Boynton, and Borden staged an exciting fight for second place half a length behind the winner, the latter swimmer getting the decision by a touch. In the freshman relay, after the favorite, Brown, had been disqualified by taking three false starts, Springfield was victorious over Amherst and M. I. T. by a small margin in 1:48.8, setting the sixth pool record and also establishing a N. E. I. C.

S. A. mark. The Williams quartet took fourth place in this also. Brown took first in the 200-yd. free style relay, because of their more evenly-distributed strength. Springfield and Wesleyan had a close race for second, Bardo winning the place for the former, while Davis and Putney tried to make up the home team's lost distance on the last two laps, but Williams was unable to get better than fourth.

At the annual meeting of the N. E. I. C. S. A. held Saturday morning at the Williams Inn, Mr. Messer, Director of Athletics, was elected president of the association. Dr. Phillips of Amherst and Mr. Rothacker of Springfield were elected vice-president and secretary-and-treasurer. The undergraduate managers of M. I. T. and Wesleyan were appointed as the two other members of the executive committee. It was decided to hold next year's meet at the University Club in Boston under the auspices of M. I. T. A vote was taken, limiting the number of relay teams from each college entered in a single event to one, while a change in the order of the medley races, and the suggestion that a judge act as a check upon the starting of each man in the relay were also considered.

The summary follows:

50-yd. dash—Won by Bardo (Springfield); Litchfield (Brown), second; Van Deusen (Wesleyan), third; Putney (Williams), fourth. Time: 24.9 sec. (New Pool Record).

100-yd. dash—Won by Bardo (Springfield); Arnold (Brown), second; Putney (Williams), third; Van Deusen (Wesleyan), fourth. Time: 57 sec. (New Pool record).

150-yd. backstroke—Won by Lucy (M. I. T.); Sittler (Brown), second; Merchant (Brown), third; A. Brown (Springfield), fourth. Time: 1 min. 54.4 sec. (New Pool record).

200-yd. breast stroke—Won by Schott (Williams); Borden (Brown), second; Healy (Williams), third; Boynton (Williams), fourth. Time: 2 min. 45 sec.

300-yd. individual medley—Won by Schott (Williams); Healy (Williams) second; Goff (Brown), third; Appleton (M. I. T.), fourth. Time: 4 min. 28.4 sec. (New N. E. I. C. S. A. and Pool record).

440-yd. swim—Won by Littlefield (Springfield); Butcher (Williams), second;

Clark (Springfield), third; Jarosh (M. I. T.), fourth. Time: 5 min. 52.6 sec. (New Pool record).

Diving—Won by Docket (Springfield), 67.2; Peck (Wesleyan), second, 61.9; Orcutt (Springfield), third, 61.7; Hoar (Springfield), fourth, 61.0.

300-yd. medley relay—Won by Brown (Merchant, Borden, and Arnold); Springfield, second; M. I. T., third; Williams, fourth. Time: 3 min. 27.8 sec. (New N. E. I. C. S. A. and Pool record).

200-yd. freshman relay—Won by Springfield; Amherst, second; M. I. T., third; Williams, fourth. Time: 1 min. 48.8 sec. (New N. E. I. C. S. A. and Pool record).

200-yd. relay—Won by Brown (Goff, Arnold, Barrows, and Litchfield); Springfield, second; Wesleyan, third; Williams, fourth. Time: 1 min. 44.2 sec. (New N. E. I. C. S. A. record).

Final standing: Springfield, 35 points; Brown, 30; Williams, 24; M. I. T. and Wesleyan, 9; Amherst, 0.

Communication

tion as the third part of a Harvard, Yale and Princeton agreement. What happens? Arguments arise concerning the football schedule, then a few particularly hard fought games, interminations, threats, rumors, smoke, fire and then the whole proposition blows up, due largely to the fact that the parties involved do not understand each other nor the traditions and spirit of each other's campus and, most important, because they never were natural rivals.

Wesleyan is in an analogous position. Today she stands in a position just as strong as either Amherst or Williams and naturally demands equal footing if the present arrangement of competition continues. The question before us is not whether Wesleyan is a worthy foe but whether it is possible to have a three-party rivalry. Since Amherst has been and still is so naturally our rival, and let us hope will continue to be for untold years to come, let us not forget our ancient, worthy and respected foe,—Lord Jeff and his Henchmen.

Yours sincerely,

Will You Be Prepared for Business Leadership?

WHEN you finish College will you have a knowledge of business fundamentals which will enable you to succeed? Or are you facing years of apprenticeship—the trial and error method—which may never lead to success?

Babson Institute training serves as an excellent transition from College to the business world. Here you would be taught the fundamental laws of Finance, Production and Distribution. By frequent trips to factories and business organizations you would be shown how these laws are applied in actual business life. You would be in a small conference group, working in a business environment, under the personal direction of business executives.

You may enter at the beginning of any quarter term and complete the work in nine consecutive months.

Send for Booklet!

Every College man who is ambitious to succeed in business should read our booklet "Training for Business Leadership." It explains in detail the work given, the unique features of our course in business fundamentals, and how leadership is achieved. A copy will be sent free. Write for it in time to discuss Babson Institute at home during the Spring vacation. Mail this coupon now.

BASEBALL TEAM WILL TRAIN IN NEW JERSEY

Squad Will Go to Long Branch To Prepare for Opening Game in New York

Having put the candidates for the baseball team through a long period of preliminary practice in the cage, which was climaxed last Saturday with a work-out on Weston Field, Coach Fox is nearly ready to select the fifteen men who will make the trip at the end of spring vacation to Long Branch, N. J., where three days will be spent preparing for the opening game of the season on April 14 with N. Y. U. in New York. Battery men have been working for five weeks, while the candidates for the other positions, totalling in all about 45 players, reported three weeks later, but even in this short period, the squad has shown a great deal of promise, and several men in particular are beginning to prove themselves capable of filling the gaps left in last year's team.

Coach Fox announced at the beginning of the practice sessions that in choosing the team, he would sacrifice fielding strength for hitting strength in an effort to overcome the most apparent weakness of last year's squad. In view of this fact, he has made several shifts, the most notable of which is converting Thompson, last year's catcher, into an infielder, probably a second baseman, and, for this same reason, Alexander will probably have the call over Tyson at first base. Winn, a star of the 1930 nine has been making a strong bid for shortstop, although he is closely pressed by Delano, a converted pitcher, who is also trying out for the second base position. Other infielders who show promise are K. Smith and Inverso, a sophomore. Putnam, the only regular infielder from the 1927 team, is out for his former position at third base, while C. H. Smith, with his Varsity experience of last spring, will probably do most of the catching, holding the advantage over Newcomb and Allen, last year's Freshman players. The pitching staff is the chief source of trouble with Captain T. H. Smith, the only regular from last season, and Singmaster and Wolcott, both of whom had some Varsity experience, bearing the brunt of the burden, while Amerling, Dunlop, and C. E. Smith will also be available.

The outfield is fairly well stocked with material with Titman, Cavanagh, and Danielli of last year's squad fighting for positions against a number of Sophomores, among which are D. P. Williams and Thoms. The latter, however is still handicapped by a weak ankle which resulted from the basketball season. The trip to Long Branch will take the place of the usual southern training trip, and will be at the end of the Easter vacation, on April 11, 12, and 13. Immediately following the stay in Long Branch, the team will go to New York, where they will meet New York University. The University Heights institution will be represented by one of its customary strong teams, being made up of most of last year's powerful nine. Because of the mild weather in New York, this squad has benefitted from a number of outdoor practices and is characterized as "the furthest advanced squad of ball players since Coach McCarthy took charge as head coach of baseball at N. Y. U." Following this game, the Williams nine will meet the United States Military Academy in the first home on April 21.

To Present 'Oliver Twist'

Members of the Faculty, their wives and undergraduate students will present a four act dramatization of Dickens' "Oliver Twist" in Chapin Hall on Friday, March 30, at 8.15. The proceeds of this performance will be used for the endowment fund of Olivet College in Michigan. The cast is as follows:

Mrs. Bedwin	Mrs. Wild
Bill Sikes	R. F. Chapman '30
Nancy	Miss Ridgley
Rose Maylie	Mrs. McElfresh
Monks	J. D. Lucas '31

A public funeral was held yesterday for the 203 victims of the St. Francis dam disaster. California has been refused national aid.

Freshmen Oppose Taft in Dual Debate Tonight

Arranging a schedule of outside Freshman debates for the first time in several years, the Adelphe Union will sponsor two 1931 debates in a dual contest against Taft this evening. A Williams team composed of Sommer, captain, East, and Manning will uphold the affirmative of the question, "Resolved: That this house should support the policy of the United States in Nicaragua" against a Taft negative team in Jesup Hall at 7.30 p. m., while a team of Jenks, captain, D. S. Meiklejohn, and Oxtoby will travel to Watertown, Conn. to defend the negative of the question.

The speeches will be 10 minutes each, with the exception of the first affirmative speaker, who will talk for seven, and return after the final negative speech for a three minute conclusion. In the home debate the order of speakers will be Sommer, East, Manning, while the Williams negative will debate in the order Meiklejohn, Jenks, Oxtoby. The alternates are Kelly for the affirmative, and R. P. Meiklejohn for the negative.

'RECORD' PRESIDENTIAL POLL TO END TUESDAY

Voters Choose Nominees of Each Party in Two-Day Straw Vote of College

Monday, March 19—In conclusion of The Record's two-day straw vote of the College on presidential possibilities in 1928, the ballots which were distributed to all the fraternities and eating houses this noon will be collected Tuesday night. The names of the ten leading candidates, five Republicans and five Democrats, several of which have been discussed in recent articles in The Record, appear on the ballots in the poll, and voters are given the opportunity either to support one of these or to write in the name of their own candidate.

Herbert C. Hoover was the choice of the majority of Yale students in a recent poll held under the auspices of the Daily News, receiving 1,258 of 2,177 ballots cast. Hoover's vote represented 339 more than all the other candidates combined received, while his plurality over Governor Smith, who received 428 votes, the next largest number, was 830. He either carried or tied the vote in forty-three of the forty-eight States, losing to Governor Smith in Delaware and Kentucky, but defeating him in New York by 267 to 119. Regarding the straw vote there, the Yale Daily News comments: "From the results of the Governor Smith vote it would appear that the University is, for the most part, dry. Party factors go a long way to explain Hoover's victory, but it seems as if the question of the Volstead Act may have had some influence in the Hoover voting."

The ten candidates whose names appear on the ballot are: Democrats—A. Victor Donahey, of Ohio; James A. Reed, of Missouri; Albert C. Ritchie, of Maryland; Alfred E. Smith, of New York; and Thomas J. Walsh, of Montana; Republicans—Charles Curtis, of Kansas; Charles G. Dawes, of Illinois; Herbert C. Hoover, of California; Frank O. Lowden, of Illinois; and Frank B. Willis, of Ohio.

Council Acts To Save Lawns

In an effort to preserve the campus the Student Council, at its meeting held last Thursday night, decreed that not only freshmen but upper classmen as well must refrain from walking across the Chapin Hall and Lab campuses. It was pointed out that work will be done this Spring on these grounds and that student cooperation is necessary. A committee on delinquent athletic taxes reported that only 26 students had failed to pay their taxes and as a result these men will be barred from participating in or viewing any athletic contests.

Organ Recital

Charles L. Safford will present his usual organ programs each day this week at 5.30 p. m. in the Chapel. The preludes, which immediately precede the daily Lenten services at 5.45 are as follows:

Tuesday, March 20 Chorale Cesar Fraack
Wednesday Irish Air (Traditional)
Thursday Intermezzo (Agnus Dei) Bizet
Friday Chorale Prelude in E flat J.S. Bach

SIR GRENFELL TALKS ON MISSIONARY WORK

Remarkable Improvement in Lives of Labrador Natives Shown by Colored Slides

Speaking on "The Far North, Labrador, and New Foundland", Sir Wilfred Thomason Grenfell, known the world over for his extraordinary missionary work along the coasts of the northern Atlantic, stressed the need for cooperation in the gigantic enterprise he has undertaken and showed by means of slides the remarkable improvement he has fostered during his stay of 36 years, along educational, medical, and industrial lines in a lecture in Chapin Hall last Friday night. Sir Wilfred asserted that the inhabitants of Newfoundland and Labrador, mostly of Scotch or Irish decent, were by nature devout Christians and had the satisfying faith that "they can do things", a belief that has been mainly responsible for their great measure of happiness, and has done away with all thoughts of suicide or divorce.

The initial slides depicted the vast, open regions of the Labrador country, with enormous icebergs now on their way down from the polar regions, and the numerous fjords that cover the middle part of the country. These are teeming with salmon and produce millions of horse power, which unfortunately have not as yet been brought into use. Unlike the statements of early discoverers and explorers, these large tracts of land have untold wealth in forests, fishing, and fur-bearing animals, in

Reverend McMaster to Discuss Hebrew Origins

The Reverend McMaster of the Congregational Church of Williamstown will lecture next Sunday afternoon at 4 p. m. in the lecture room of the Church. His subject will be: "Hebrew Origins—A Study of the Mental Characteristics and Peculiar Social Habits of this Race before the time of Moses".

The Reverend McMaster has made a special study of this subject and has been giving a series of talks on it to a small group after the Sunday morning service. In order that more people may avail themselves of the opportunity of attending these discussions, he has consented to give them in the form of lectures every Sunday afternoon. No charge for admission will be made, and the public is cordially invited to attend.

Plans for Big Brother Banquet Made by W. C. A.

Provided that a sufficient number of undergraduates subscribe, over 150 boys, members of Boys' Clubs from five nearby communities, will be entertained at the annual Big Brother Banquet to be held under the auspices of the Williams Christian Association next Tuesday evening, March 27, in the dining room of the Commons Club at 6.30 p. m. Departing from the custom of past years, the Deputations Committee of the W. C. A., which has charge of the entertainment, has decided that all the speakers will be Williams men, and have engaged the Purple Pirates to play during dinner.

According to the committee in charge, it will be impossible to hold the banquet without the attendance of 100 more men. It is requested that all those intending to be present communicate with Kepner '28 or Rohrbach '29 as soon as possible. There is a charge of one dollar per person to defray the expenses of the banquet.

'FEBRUARY GRAPHIC IS DRAB AND CHEERLESS'

Dr. C. O. Chapman Suggests 'Some Good, Clean Spring Air' for Last Number

It is a pleasant sensation to settle back into a deep chair, light a cigar, and survey the cheerful cover of the current Graphic. To what unknown delight leads the winding road that loses itself in the distance?

We open to On A Last Art. Pictures of old Venetian glass come to our mind, and we settle back more comfortably in our chair. But, horrors! the 'art' is murder. This discovery deals the first serious blow to our pleasant sensation, but there is no turning back now. We brace ourselves and push on through all the niceties of this gentle craft, and the names of its most eminent craftsmen. When we reach the end, we give reverent thanks that the branches of the haute école, pogroms, massacres, wholesale homicides, are passed over in silence. Our cigar has gone out and the pleasant sensation has ebbed considerably.

A fresh match and some new smoke give us courage to begin Mourning Waters, a name we now view with suspicion. For a while we read with interest, but our suspicion was only too well founded, and again gloom gathers around us. Poor Nida proves to be no better than she ought to be, and there is Billy Fliderman haunted by Peter Nast's ghost, and held fast in the mysterious grip of the stream that flows past his home. Even Nida's offer of marriage and a job in the foundry can not drag the crazed boy away. Is it Fate, or wisdom greater than we suspect, that finally leads him forth to plunge into the water? We feel it is wisdom, and only the search for another match to light our dead cigar saves us from seeking a similar deliverance from the gloom that is now complete. Our pleasant sensation has disappeared entirely.

With less vigour than before we start East to the Hill. Perhaps this is the distant hill in the vignette on the cover, and we take new hope. This story is long getting started, but we find an interest in Mr. Osborn and the Arms, but here again

CRITIC LAUDS PLAYS OF 'LITTLE THEATRE'

'Williamstown May Count Itself Lucky in Its 'Little Theatre'
—Prof. Bushnell

(Courtesy of Mr. N. S. Bushnell)

Williamstown may count itself lucky in its Little Theatre, if the triple bill presented last Saturday evening is typical of the entertainment we shall be offered in the future. (Of the past this reviewer is not in a position to speak.) And the players, in turn, have an audience for which they may well be grateful; it fills Jesup Hall, and promptly; it appreciates not only those effects seen and heard upon the stage, but the equally important labors of preparation; and it accepts, cheerfully, the limitations imposed by a stage and auditorium not designed for dramatic purposes.

Of the three plays which we have just seen, Professor Erskine's Hearts Enduring made the severest demands upon actors and observers. It was placed at the beginning of the program, before the inauguration of the audience could be prepared to cope with its stripped compactness; and the play in itself is hardly long enough to accommodate a gradual development of mood and illusion. Although a fore-curtain of gauze helped to remove the action into the "Fairy Away" and "Long Ago", the setting itself, in its austere formality of design, with walls reaching up to a cold, unflickering radiance, was hardly consistent with the plague-stricken hut that the lines suggest. Might not a subtle changing of lights have eeked out the scanty action and dialogue? This critic's chief objection, however, was to the monotonous pitch and tempo of the speeches. Where every word must count, pauses must count too. Did He realize this, when asking in calm and level tones, "Is Lady Alice—is Lady Alice—did the plague come to all here?" Or in that bitterest question, "Was she like that?" Perhaps, however, his colorless quality was due only to an excess of the fine grace and restraint with which She met his questions. And, too, the play itself hardly permits that He be a character rich in feeling and perception.

The setting of Beauty and the Jacobin was worth waiting for, though the opened suitcase hid too much of the stage, and we might have been spared the gilt chair in garret lodgings. Here the action moved with admirable speed and vigor, and there were no distracting gaps in the well-planned business. Amid all the bustle, hardly a line was lost; and if flashes of real wit, like Yalsin's "Intimacy confuses a gentleman", were sadly infrequent, we have only Booth Tarkington to blame. To be sure, there were occasional opportunities lost in the acting. Louis's manner gave never a hint of his repressed love for Eloise; Yalsin, in stressing wit and elegance (Did the agents of the Terror wear silks and satins?) neglected the sinister aspects of his character; and Dossomville's effort to bring out all the possibilities of a small role was too obvious. But such a flaw as the last is inevitable in an actor's progress toward acquiring a style of his own, while the emigré and the government official doubtless had good and sufficient reasons for playing their parts as they understood them. It would be carping to look for petty errors in the work of Anne

Miss Houghteling Asserts That New Developments in Labrador Will Hold Interest of Economic World

In a brief outline of the present conditions and future prospects of Labrador and northern Newfoundland, Miss Harriet Houghteling, head of the Staff Selection Committee of the International Grenfell Association, stated to a Record reporter that the recent introductions and further improvements in modern machinery and methods which will soon be installed, will tend to draw the attention of the civilized world to this new territory that has undergone such remarkable development and presents such vast prospects. The new system of refrigerating fish has revolutionized that particular trade and now enables the inhabitants to send supplies to all parts of the world, while radios have brought the country into close touch with the outside world and new joy to a people quite remote from the center of civilization.

Discussing the educational side of the life in the Grenfell country, Miss Houghteling said that at present there are three schools, two of which give instruction up to the sixth grade, and the other to approximately the ninth, although as yet little classification of grades has been made, since these institutions are only about two or three years old. Geography, History, French, and Algebra are the subjects taught by women instructors who average about one to every 30 or 40 pupils. Special emphasis is being laid upon mathematics, which gives the children practical knowledge necessary in their later outdoor work, while efforts are being made to secure competent men to give Boy Scout instruction to the boys.

Sports are even a newer institution than schools and have been entered upon with equal enthusiasm by both young and old. People gather from miles around to join periodic tournaments, consisting mostly of target shooting and dog racing. Although prizes were at first awarded in cash, this system has been discarded for one providing prizes of more practical nature, (Continued on Third Page)

VOTE FOR —

As the blaring crescendo of the 1928 presidential campaign grows louder and more terrible, it seems to exert a hypnotic influence over us, and in spite of ourselves we feel compelled to listen to it. The press—with its palpitating messages about primaries, splits, deadlocks, and dark horses—begins to grip us. Soon the candidates sound more familiar; perhaps we take a special fancy to one, and secretly hope that he will win. President picking is a fascinating game, as well as a serious business.

One of the most interesting phases of this year's campaign is the stir it is making among colleges and universities throughout the country. At least seventy institutions are holding straw votes this week; a few, like Yale and Middlebury, have already made public their preconvention choices; and undergraduate news sheets everywhere have been decorating themselves for many days with portraits and biographies of Hoover, Smith, Curtis, Dawes, Lowden, Willis, Donahay, Reed, Ritchie, and Walsh.

Whatever we may think of the efficacy of the straw vote as a means of predicting the future, it is at least a fair indication of the trend of the present—especially when taken in moderate doses. The mere fact that the modern undergraduate can exert himself to the extent of scratching an X on a ballot slip is in itself a trend, for it shows that American colleges are not always provincially indifferent to national affairs.

In league, then, with a nation-wide conspiracy of colleges to meddle in affairs of state, THE RECORD is offering undergraduates of Williams a chance to register their presidential preferences on the straw vote now being taken. We may feel that the tremendous problem of picking candidates for the presidency of the United States cannot possibly be affected by a small, unofficial voice crying out in Williamstown wilderness. At the same time it is rather absurd and, indeed, difficult to affect an attitude of haughty indifference to the excitement of the campaign merely because we do not happen to be in the thick of it. After all, it is not impossible that the result of our vote will give some hint as to which way the presidential wind is blowing. And when we compare our "nomination" with that of Yale or Harvard, some interesting conclusions may be drawn. When Yale gave Hoover a plurality of 830 votes over Smith a few weeks ago, the News had this to say: "From the result of the Smith vote it would appear that the University, for the most part, is dry."

Williams, too, may decide that it is dry! The announcement will be made shortly.

Sir Grenfell Talks

On Missionary Work

addition to the probable existence of rich minerals.

The speaker described the wretched conditions that existed when he first landed in 1892, when only the most primitive means of living were in use. The following year he opened the first small hospital on the Labrador Coast at Battle Harbour, and in subsequent years added five more, which formed a chain along the coast, at about two-hundred-mile intervals. Several nursing stations have been constructed where fishermen congregate in winter quarters for trapping. The welfare of children has been one of the chief concerns and for their betterment a large permanent school and numerous orphanages are being used, from where they go to receive supplementary education in Canada or the United States, and return later to instruct their own people.

Industry has been stimulated everywhere, one of the chief occupations among the women being that of weaving hooked mats. Cooperative stores are a recent institution and have given the natives valuable knowledge in regard to money, doing away with the old-fashioned, impractical system of bartering. Sports, too, have made splendid progress and have enjoyed great popularity in all these schools. Shooting, association football, and dog races receive the most attention; but in all sports a special agreement must be made beforehand that neither team shall win, as sportsmanship has not as yet been developed to any great extent.

Toward the close of his lecture Sir Wilfred paid special tribute to the wonderful spirit and courage of the dogs, with which he works throughout the long winter months. During the long, hard trips that are made continually, they are always content with their meagre rations and do not show complaint against their difficult lot, but serve their master so faithfully as to follow his dead body to the grave, to die there beside him. After the lecture booklets containing an outline of the work done by the International Grenfell Association were sold at the door for the benefit of one of the orphanages that recently burned down.

and Blaise; the intelligence with which they handled their lines, as in the speeches at the window, and the emotional sincerity of their presentation, deserve only praise.

Finally, The Scheming Lieutenant, adapted from a hasty farce of Sheridan's—too hasty for the brilliance in dialogue and situation that we expect from the author of The School for Scandal. Here, where the shallow stage was most embarrassing, the scenery was most ingeniously adjusted to it; the severe doorway, the little iron fence and the blue distance made a set less imposing than those of the two preceding plays, but excelling them in charm and fitness. The two soldiers will be more convincing when they have gained in self-confidence and assertiveness upon the stage; what a shame that they had so little of the gusto and vigor with which the "French nation", in the preceding play, made its unconscionably long and loud progress up the attic stairs! Justice Credulous, too, weakened his part by letting us see how immensely he was enjoying it; but the other two men, Doctor Rosy and John, were splendid, and never permitted their delightful "stage" voices to obscure the clarity of a single word, while Lauretta and Bridget Credulous might have been born to their parts; perhaps we are unfair in suggesting that any actor could keep a straight face on the stage between them. Even with its occasional weaknesses, this last play was full of brightness and good humor. It made us long to see the same cast, under the same direction, and in a similar setting, undertake a scene from She Stoops to Conquer or The Rivals. And it sent us home in high spirits, regretting only that weeks must pass before another evening of the Little Theatre.

In conclusion, we wish to suggest the one phase of its work to which this group of amateur actors must pay long and careful attention. The lines are often faulty in their timing and their enunciation. Cues are not caught up quickly enough on interrupted speeches—even Valsin was careless in this respect; time is not given for the audience to enjoy its own laughter—several of Lieutenant O'Connor's speeches as the quack were lost in applause. Many words significant of the action or valuable in themselves never crossed the footlights—how many of the listeners knew, on Humfrey Hum's first appearance, that he was O'Connor? How many had a chance to appreciate Louis de Laseyne's "amiable vultures"? Occasional mispronunciations marred the polish of two of the plays at least—even such trifling flaws as The D'Anville's "incognito," Valsin's "lugzhury," or Doctor Rosy's "mandamus," were unpleasant, if only because they could so easily have been corrected. Many of the voices were flat and indistinct because of their improper placing; an actor must not be afraid to open his mouth and use his lips, and in this respect every one upon the stage Saturday night could have profited by a study of the enunciation of Justice Credulous's lady. As evidence of this vital importance of voice, it is interesting to note that the director of a semi-professional "little theatre", one of the most successful in the country, selects amateurs for parts in his productions solely on the basis of their ability to read lines.

In the staging of its plays the Williams Little Theatre has illustrated its ability to overcome handicaps and do really splendid work. In their physical action upon the stage the majority of the players show their responsiveness to capable direction; and in a number of individuals the sincerity with which emotions are represented testifies to a real histrionic skill. When the power of clear and intelligent speech has been equally developed, the Little Theatre may well rest satisfied with all its accomplishments.

Go the economical way with adventurers of your own age—people who are determined that they will see, and get all the advantages of having seen Europe but who want to save their money to spend while traveling there and who enjoy a trip on the ocean for its own sake.

Do you realize how very inexpensively this can be done on big Cunard ships such as the CARONIA, CARMANIA, SCYTHIA, LACONIA, LANCASTRIA, and TUSCANIA? You are berthed in a comfortable, clean cabin, you have good food, nicely served, with ample deck space and you enjoy the company of your own kind of people... because they are others like you who feel the adventurous call of traveling Tourist Third Cabin. You will dance on moonlit decks to the rhythm of a college orchestra no feet have yet resisted. You will swim in salt water in an improvised deck tank. You'll play the delightful deck games that youth-on-a-lark devises. And there'll be bridge,--and conversation;--and sometimes lost sleep! ## PROF. RALPH B. PERRY TALKS ON PHILOSOPHY

'Philosophy Sets No Limits to the Questions It Asks,' Says Harvard Professor

"Philosophy is a subject matter of investigation, not a way of life or a state of mind" said Dr. Ralph Barton Perry, Professor of Philosophy at Harvard University in an address to the Philosophical Union in Griffin Hall last Sunday evening. Professor Perry, who is considered one of the most eminent American philosophers of the time, and who holds the chair formerly occupied by William James, took as his subject "A Philosopher's Apology" and defended the subject which he is interested in from the various forms of censure which are directed against it.

After W. Brown '28 had called the meeting to order and introduced the speaker, Professor Perry spoke briefly of his associations with William James, where he gained his first teaching experience in 1899. Telling what a philosopher would answer when called upon to state his business, he said "My firm manufactures and discovers ultimate truth". He then proceeded to define what philosophers are as opposed to what people think they are. "The trouble with philosophy is that people have never seen it done", he explained. "People think that a philosopher thinks he knows everything. Of course no sane philosopher can claim to be omniscient." "If you know everything about nothing you are a philosopher. If you know nothing about everything you are a sociologist" was a comment on the subject which Professor Perry quoted. "Philosophy sets no limits to the questions it asks except that they be really questions" continued the speaker. "Philosophy is that branch of knowledge that sets itself up to be both profound and comprehensible. Philosophy is a deliberate affront upon common sense. The abstractions of philosophy exceed all others in abstraction. Philosophy is proverbially unintelligent."

The methods of philosophers, Professor Perry brought out, are conceptional abstraction and creative insight. The problem which they are dealing with is the problem of the ultimate, which can be divided up under the four headings of ultimate reality, ultimate cause, ultimate truth, and ultimate value. The distinction between philosophy and common sense is that the former deals with the ultimate and the latter with the immediate.

Dean Sperry Discusses Cynicism in Ecclesiastes

The cynicism of the Book of Ecclesiastes was the subject of the sermon delivered last Sunday morning in the Thompson Memorial Chapel by Dean Willard L. Sperry, of Harvard University. Although the Bible would seem to be no place for the religion of cynicism, which is found in the Ecclesiastes, Dean Sperry pointed out that this cynicism "makes the Bible more human."

With illustrations and quotations Dean Sperry showed that the author of the book was a "true thoroughbred". He had a task to do and "like the Irish hunters in the Dublin steeplechase, he took the jump well. This religion does not say much," the preacher concluded, "but what it does say is good enough and has a great practical value."

Lehman Cup Competition to Commence Tomorrow

Starting with the 50-yd. dash, trials of the 440-yd. dash, and the 60-yd. low hurdles tomorrow, the Lehman Cup meet will continue for a week, events taking place on the board track each day at four with the exception of Friday and Tuesday. The two highest scorers will receive cups donated annually by H. H. Lehman '99.

Five places will be counted in all the track events. For the 50-yd. dash and the hurdle events, scoring will be as follows: five, three and one-half, two, one, and one-half. In the remaining races the points for the first five men will be ten, seven, four, two, and one. One point will be given for every inch over four feet six in the high jump, while every six inches over 29 feet in the shot put will get a point. Entries can be made until six tonight at the entrance to the gymnasium or in the locker room.

The program of events is as follows:
Wednesday, March 21: 50-yd. dash, 60-yd. low hurdles, and trials for the 440-yd. dash.

Thursday, March 22: High jump (to be held in the gymnasium).

Saturday, March 24: 60-yd. high hurdles, 880-yd. run, and shot put.

such as a set of tools, or some other useful object, and because the people have not yet realized the value of money they much prefer the latter system.

The education of the people of Labrador is an extremely difficult task, according to Miss Houghteling, because the rising generation has inherited absolutely nothing intellectually from the preceding uneducated generation, which in turn, had ancestors of minimum learning, who had come over from the primitive regions along the seacoasts of England and Scotland. The inhabitants, however, are rapidly educating themselves along the lines of their particular trades and are receiving fair treatment from the traders, who have profited much from the native's ignorance by contracting deals that were unfair to them and which left them practically helpless and dependent upon their more worldly dealers.

KAPPA ALPHA WINS INTRAMURAL RELAYS

Eight Man Team Gains Trophy By Defeating Delta Upsilon in Finals Friday

Running on the indoor track in Lasell Gymnasium last Friday afternoon, the Kappa Alpha eight-man relay team defeated Delta Upsilon for the Interfraternity Relay Cup. On Saturday afternoon, Beta Theta Pi, as a result of a victory over Phi Delta Theta, moved into a tie with Chi Psi for leadership of the National division of the basketball league.

Kappa Alpha dropped slightly behind throughout the first half of the relay race, and was several yards in the rear at the half-way mark. Fine running by Little and Tenney, however, recovered the distance and acquired a three-yard lead which Truman held to the finish. Kappa Alpha's championship team was composed of F. Bartow, Angell, Higginbotham, Sears, R. Sewell, Little, Tenney, and Truman, running in that order with the last as anchor man.

Only two games were played in the intramural basketball league on Saturday, that between Phi Sigma Kappa and Phi Gamma Delta being postponed, and Delta Upsilon defaulting to Delta Phi. In the other games of the afternoon, Beta Theta Pi won from Phi Delta Theta, while the Commons Club administered the first defeat of the season to Delta Kappa Epsilon, leader of the American division of the league.

As a result of the relays, but excluding all basketball games, the standing of the Interfraternity league is as follows:

	Relay Points	Total
Phi Sigma Kappa	9	62
Commons Club	7	50
Sigma Phi	9	49
Chi Psi	7	44½
Delta Upsilon	11	43
Psi Upsilon	5	43
Phi Gamma Delta	7	38
Kappa Alpha	16	36
Delta Phi	5	34½
Zeta Psi	5	33
Delta Psi	5	29
Theta Delta Chi	7	29
Phi Delta Theta	5	28
Alpha Delta Phi	5	27
Delta Kappa Epsilon	5	26

WORLD NEWS SUMMARY

Secretary of the Navy Willbur announced last Saturday that more than 1,000 marines will go to Nicaragua within the next few days. The expedition is to be undertaken, it is believed, with a view to making such a show of force that the Nicaraguan government, which refused to pass the electoral laws several days ago, will meet the demand of the United States for authority to supervise a fair and free election as provided for in the Stimson agreement of last May.

Another rumor to the effect that President Coolidge might toss his hat into the coming Republican nomination ring started a boom on the stock exchange last Saturday with the result that 3,883,065 shares changed hands, a volume exceeded only by that of last Thursday when a corner in radio was threatened. Brokers who anticipated a restful week-end were forced to their offices to handle the situation.

Ten thousand sons and daughters of Ireland marched up Fifth Avenue, New York City, last Saturday afternoon in celebration of St. Patrick's day. Mayor Walker, headed south for a rest, was absent from the festivities.

Dr. Robert A. Millikan, one of the world's foremost physicists, announced recently at a meeting of the associates of the California Institute of Technology that the process of creation is now going on in the heavens and that the earth, instead of being a disintegrating world, as has been long believed, is a continuously changing and evolving one. He also declared a warning to wait further proof.

What to see in BRITAIN

The first college of Cambridge University was founded in 1284. Seven centuries of history and development have endowed this old-world University with scenes and traditions that are intensely interesting to American students.

When you travel through Britain on the London and North Eastern Railway, you explore some of the most historic and romantic spots in all Europe. Over this historical highway lie the ancient cities of Ely, Lincoln, Norwich, York, Edinburgh and many old-world towns celebrated in romance and legend.

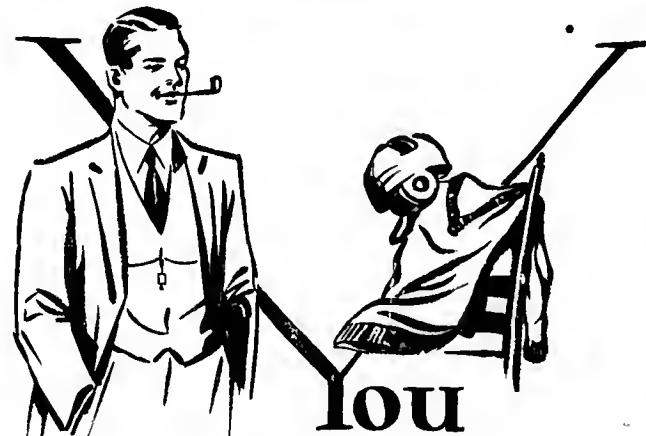

Added to the attractions of natural beauty and climate are literary and historical associations, mighty castles and landmarks famous in American life.

You will understand and be better understood in England and Scotland than anywhere else in Europe. You can play golf on the world famous courses at St. Andrews and North Berwick—in the land of the game.

In addition to the "Flying Scotsman", the famous train between London and Edinburgh, there are fast and frequent trains to all the numerous points of interest.

WILLIAMS WRESTLERS HAD MEDIOCRE SEASON

Captain Lisle Leads Scoring While Team Wins Three out of Seven Meets

Although not entering a team in the New England Intercollegiate Meet held at Tufts over the past week end, the Williams wrestlers brought to a close with their Amherst victory a season with a record considerably superior to that of 1927. Having scored 87 points against 110 for their opponents while winning a fall to match every one of the 12 falls marked up against them, they have to their credit victories over C. C. N. Y. and the North Adams Y. M. C. A. in addition to Amherst to partially balance defeats at the hands of Alfred, Tufts, Norwich, and Harvard.

Captain Lisle easily leads his team in scoring, although he has consistently drawn some of the most skillful adversaries on the opposing teams. The speed of his attack, while sometimes miscarrying at the opening of the matches, apparently the result of too reckless aggression, has come to be a thing looked forward to by wrestling fans and has added as much to the interest of the meets as it has to the score. Lisle has 24 points to his credit, almost a third of the Purple total. He has secured three falls, without himself being thrown during the season.

Richardson, who has carried the burden of the 115-pound matches through the year, is second in the scoring list with 18 points and a record entirely the equal of that of Lisle in point of falls. He has given a discouraging welcome to C. C. N. Y., Norwich, and Amherst by his falls, and it is particularly remembered that Edwards of Tufts, who threw his opponent in the second team match at the Intercollegiate Saturday, could not carry a very optimistic message to the bench after barely bridging out the time period against Richardson's half-Nelson.

Lam, who appeared in the Williams line-up only in the C. C. N. Y. and Amherst meets as 158-pound wrestler, won his right to third place in the team scoring by winning falls in both meets in less than four minutes time. Deming contributed a fall to the C. C. N. Y. victory and added three points to the landslide which engulfed Amherst.

On surveying the Williams record according to weights, it is seen that its strength rests in the 135 and 145-pound classes, between which Lisle shared his efforts, and the 115-pound group maintained by Richardson. Reynolds, who held the 135-pound post for the first half of the season, added a fall to the score of that class in the North Adams meet, while Mandell, who followed Lisle in the 145-pound group, upheld the honor of the post with a fall in the Amherst meet, though he was thrown by Harvard and Norwich wrestlers. The 125-pound class has been divided between Taylor, Mailey, and Shoaff, who have accounted for eight points. The score by classes is as follows: 145, 21; 115, 18; 135, 13; 158, 11½; 175, 11; 125, 8; unlimited 4½.

That the overwhelming 29-0 defeat by Harvard was at least a loss to worthy opponents was confirmed by the results of the Intercollegiate meet last Saturday, which the Cambridge team won by a margin of ten points in spite of the victories of the famous Cornsweets of Brown in the heavyweights. Lifrak, who retained his 135-pound championship, had very little more advantage over Lisle than he did over the runner up at the Intercollegiate, while Shoaff held Burns to the same margin by which the latter won the championship in the 125-pound class.

Major Grant, '10, Plans a Unique World Cruise

Despite the fact that two university travel cruises have been abandoned—one co-educational, one for men only—because of insufficient enrollment, Major Chapman Grant '10, has a unique plan whereby "the poor boy may see part of the world while digging out his education". He has named his tentative cruise the "University Under Sail" because of the fact that a sailing vessel will be chartered for the voyage and the students, under navy discipline, will man the ship in return for their passage.

Major Grant, a grandson of Ulysses S. Grant, has sailed the seas for many years before becoming an officer in the army and is well acquainted with the materials necessary for a successful cruise. In speaking of his plan he gives a daily schedule which will be used:

"6.30 Reveille; stretching exercises. Following this, time is allowed for toilet and policing. Breakfast followed by a short reading; announcements. Two one hour classes. Half hour calisthenics. Two one hour classes. Hour for lunch. Two one hour classes. 4-6, recreation or work according to roster. Dinner. Hour reading or lecture. Two hours study. 10.00, Turn in." He says, "Courses would be those that would be furthered by the cruise such as seamanship and navigation. Also biological studies would be made of the various specimens of sea life that were taken while at sea."

In sending a special appeal to Williams men, Major Grant says that the cruise will be one "Wherein the student will learn to fear God, respect law, understand foreign peoples and he understood; wherein he will go to the table hungry and will 'turn in' tired; whence he will come with a balanced mind in a sturdy body after nine months of ordered rigorous life."

COLLEGIANS' MORALS DEFINED AS NEGATIVE

Presidents of Harvard and Brown
Find Same Fault in Modern
Higher Education

Simultaneous criticisms of the negativity of student morals as developed by the modern expensive American educational system were forthcoming recently from President A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard and President W. H. P. Faunce of Brown University, both of whom thus identify their names even more strongly than previously with the growing movement for constructive reform of so-called "advanced" learning prevalent among educators of the day. President Lowell laid bare his views in an article published in the Harvard Alumni Bulletin, while President Faunce declared himself in an address on "The Education of the Twentieth Century Pioneers" delivered in New York.

Harvard's chief executive based his criticism of our educational institutions upon "the fact that education has not in itself been a moral purpose in the great body of the undergraduates," stating that to his mind "the permanent value of all we do in the university is based upon moral considerations. Of what good is it to know chemistry if the only object of studying it is to discover more fatal explosives? Of what good is it to learn any control over the powers of nature or of man if we are not to use them for moral purposes?"

"Our colleges have not done for the community what they should have done, because the students have not believed in the parable of the talents, nor felt a moral obligation to improve in the college the talents they possessed. I do not mean," he continued, "that the morals of our students have been positively low, but they have been negative, and the students' conception that they have a duty in college to prepare themselves by developing their minds to the utmost for the future service of the community has been lacking."

President Faunce expressed similar views. "We have in America," he said, "the largest public school system on earth, the most expensive college buildings, the most extensive curriculum. But nowhere else is education so pointless and aimless, so blind to its objectives, so indifferent to any specific outcome as in America." With this premise he went on to state that "the trouble with our education in the past has been its negative character. It has aimed at the repression of faults rather than the creation of virtues. It has corrected blunders in reading and writing and arithmetic instead of showing how through mastery of those tools one may construct a career. In short we need schools and colleges with a purpose and a goal that can give our students some dream of the future and some definite capacity to make that dream come true."

"Ten years ago when our college campus was turned into a military training camp as America entered the world struggle we thought we were doing a good work because we were giving the manual of arms, we were saluting the flag and putting our students through the daily drill. But Washington was not satisfied. Orders came that in every college there should be frequent lectures on the 'Moral Aims of the War.' What, I wonder, are the moral aims of peace?"

HOOVER EASY VICTOR IN 'RECORD' BALLOTING

Polls Great Majority Over Smith
While Dawes Is Third—Total
Vote Cast 549

Herbert Hoover appears to be the first choice of the College body for next President of the United States, with Smith a poor second and Dawes third, according to The Record straw vote concluded last Tuesday. Hoover, with 326 of the 549 votes cast, has an overwhelming majority over his nearest competitor, Governor Smith, who received 95 votes, while Vice-President Dawes, who was the only other candidate who made a creditable showing, polled 68 ballots.

Of the remaining seven candidates Ritchie received 26 votes, Lowden 25, Reed 4, Curtis and Walsh 2 apiece, Donahy 1, while Willis failed to have a single supporter. Hoover's popularity in this particular community is so great that he received 103 more votes than all his rivals combined, and 231 more than his most dangerous opponent, "Al" Smith.

Although 24 1/2% of the ballots were defective it may be taken that the straw vote represents very well the sentiment of the College body because of the heavy vote cast, which shows considerable interest in the coming Presidential campaign. Several of the defective ballots were apparently the result of a misunderstanding as some students voted for a candidate of both parties, but others were clearly the work of would-be humorists. A few wrote Coolidge's name on their ballots, while local celebrities, perhaps "favorite sons", drew a few straggling ballots. Among those was one for Dr. Garfield.

Trials for 1931 Prize Speaking Will Be Held

Trials for the annual Freshman Prize Speaking Contest, for which the trustees of the College offer first and second prizes of 20 dollars and ten dollars respectively, will be held in the Jesup Hall auditorium on Monday, March 26, between five and six p. m. All members of the Freshman class are eligible for participation in this major speaking contest of the year, which is to take place at the last Freshman mass meeting on Tuesday, April 3, at five p. m.

Either a memorized declamation, or an informal speech from notes will be acceptable at the tryouts. However, a memorized selection from some author, or a memorized original speech, will be required for the contest, and no notes will be permitted. The required Freshman course in Public Speaking will end immediately preceding spring vacation, at which time the examinations in Bible Reading will be given.

Professor Wetmore Sees Vast Social and Economic Improvement Throughout Italy in Last Seven Years

Giving an account of the present conditions in Italy and contrasting them with those of seven years ago, Professor Monroe Wetmore of the Latin Department describes the vast social improvement of the whole country in a letter to Mr. E. Herbert Botsford, recently printed in the Williams Alumni Review. Unlike the Italy of 1920 when unemployment, strikes and general unrest were prevalent everywhere, Professor Wetmore now finds universal prosperity in the industrial North and happiness registered on the faces of men, women, and children, all of whom are well-fed and perfectly contented.

Seven years ago living conditions in large cities such as Milan, Turin, and Rome were extremely uncomfortable because of the continual strikes of factory workers, bakery employees, postmen, and other organized groups necessary for the public welfare, whereas today business is carried on with industrial fervor and modern improvements are being installed everywhere. The old Roman roads are now made over into concrete pavement to accommodate the recent and heavy influx of automobiles into the country.

Remer Will Organize a Summer Trip to Russia

Professor Remer will meet in the Jesup Hall reading room after chapel on Sunday or at his house that afternoon any students who would be interested in making a trip to Russia during the coming summer to be sponsored by the "Open Road", an organization formed to give the traveler something more than is gained from the usual tours that are conducted during the summer vacation. It is desired that a group be made up of about eight men from Williams who wish to travel through Russia with the purpose to study not only the people and general geography but also the art and politics of that country.

At the present time Russia is an exceedingly hard country to get into, but a group traveling under the auspices of the "Open Road" would have no difficulty in obtaining entrance as well as permission to go wherever they cared to. The group would be directed by a man who knows a great deal about that field and would be accompanied by an interpreter. Although the exact cost of the trip has not yet been fixed it is expected that it will be comparatively low.

PRES. GARFIELD DINES WITH CHICAGO ALUMNI

Addresses Body on Educational Developments at College
Since 1908

Returning from the annual dinner of the Chicago Association of Williams Alumni held Friday, March 17, in the New Palmer House, President Harry A. Garfield expressed the opinion that the banquet was the most successful yet given. Including representatives from alumni associations in Columbus, Detroit, Indianapolis, Minneapolis, St. Louis, and St. Paul, over 100 Williams graduates were present at the mid-western reunion.

The success of the dinner was attributed to Mr. E. H. Botsford '82, Alumni Secretary, and to the Committee of Alumni in Chicago. During the past two winters, Mr. Botsford has visited Chicago with the purpose of promoting a more active interest in the College and in its welfare among the alumni.

Mr. Henry A. Rumsey '98 was the toastmaster of the dinner, while his brother, Wallace D. Rumsey '03, president of the Chicago Alumni Association, was a principal speaker. Representatives from Amherst and Wesleyan spoke briefly, emphasizing their pleasure in attending as members of the "Little Three".

Marvin A. Chapman '05, President of the Williams Club of New York, brought greetings from the Club, and Linsley V. Dodge '24, a member of the Athletic Council, spoke upon the athletic situation at Williams, describing the Association, its organization, and its relation to the College. Mr. Botsford told of the changes which have taken place upon the campus, such as the new improvements on the Linsell Gymnasium and the restoration of the old buildings to their former red brick. ## ANNUAL LEHMAN CUP COMPETITION STARTS

Skinner Leads Field After Three Events with 14 Points; To Continue Today

Scoring five points by taking first place in the 60-yd. low hurdles, and adding nine more in the high jump, Skinner '30 is ahead in the Twenty-ninth annual Lehman Cup competition for all-around track ability, with 14 points, while, due to his victory in the high jump, Mason '31 is second with 10. On Wednesday Beals '29 won the 50 yd. dash, the third event that has been completed, and Lane '29, Moore '29, Skinner '30, Strother '30, Eynon '31, and Tru-

On the first day, Anderson '28, Beals, Gailer, Lane '29, and Straw '30 met in the finals of the 50-yd. dash which Beals won by five feet. Anderson and Straw finished almost together, the former gaining the decision, with Gailer and Lane fourth and fifth. In the 60-yd. low hurdles Nichols '29 beat Skinner in one of the semi-final heats, while the other went to Dougherty '31. Skinner turned the tables in the (Continued on Sixth Page)

SCHOTT WILL ENTER CHAMPIONSHIP MEET

Williams Captain-Elect Will Face
Rickman, Wallace in Breast Stroke Event

Friday, March 23—Walter R. Schott '29, of Evanston, Ill., will be the only representative of the Purple in the Intercollegiate Swimming Association championships to be held at the University of Pennsylvania tonight and tomorrow. The captain-elect of the Williams team, who holds the intercollegiate record in the breast stroke event established in the championships last year, will enter only the 200-yard breast stroke race, in hopes of gaining the title he so nearly won last year.

In the breast stroke race Schott will have two worthy opponents to press him, Wallace of Princeton, and Rickman of Yale. Both of these men have covered the 200-yards in competition in about 2:42 this year, while Schott's best time in competition is 2:41.8, so there is little basis for predicting the winner. But, nevertheless, the Williams star must be conceded a good chance to capture first honors in his specialty.

In the intercollegiate held last year in New York Schott won his heat easily in the preliminary round, setting his record mark in doing so. The following night, however, he was just barely nosed out by Allen of the Navy team. This placed him in the peculiar position of record holder but not champion.

Amherst and Wesleyan Start Baseball Practice

Inclement weather at both Amherst and Middletown has prevented baseball practice on the part of the other two members of the "Little Three" from being carried on outdoors, but the workouts, which to date have been held in the cages, will be shifted as soon as playing conditions permit. Although the squads of the two colleges are not very far along in their development, they expect to be in satisfactory condition for the openings of their seasons two weeks hence.

At Amherst the pitching staff is progressing rapidly, and Coach "Hank" Gowdy expects an excellent season, relying especially upon Nichols, whom he considers "better than many major-league pitchers." Coach Gowdy came to Amherst this year direct from the National League, where he played for over a decade with the Boston Braves and New York Giants. He has been putting the Sabrina squad through a series of practice games to determine, largely, the infield positions, and is laying stress upon specialized plays.

The preliminary conditioning of the Wesleyan squad is finished, and the pitchers make up "the best squad in recent years." They have been concentrating so far on control and speed, but will finish their training next week with practice in curves. Both squads have many players from last year back, and are building up their teams with these as a nucleus.

NO-DEAL COMMITTEE APPOINTS MANAGERS

R. H. Marshall Is Appointed Football Manager After Majority
Fails To Vote

Robert Howard Marshall, of New York City, and Jerome Chester Groskin, of Wyncwood, Pa., were chosen respectively for the positions of Second Assistant Manager of Football and Second Assistant Manager of Soccer after the College election last week, in which, as less than one-half the student body voted, the men were appointed by the No-Deal Committee in order of their recommendations, according to the College rules. At the same time, Lewis Thomson Rice, of Schroom Lake, N. Y., was elected Second Assistant Manager of Cross Country; Charles Van Inwagen Cuddeback, of Port Jervis, N. Y., Assistant Intramural Manager; Harold Bancroft Gross, of Providence, R. I., Assistant Manager of Freshman Football; and Franklin Knibloe Hoyt, of West Newton, Assistant Manager of Freshman Soccer.

Marshall prepared at Trinity and since coming to Williams, has been active in extra-curricular activities, playing on his class baseball and basketball teams last year, and being Assistant Treasurer of the W. C. A. this year. Groskin graduated from Episcopal Academy, of Philadelphia, Pa., and was elected to the Honor System Committee last year. Rice came to Williams after graduating from Pawling and (Continued on Sixth Page)

DR. WILL DURANT WILL MAKE 'FORUM' ADDRESS

Author of 'Story of Philosophy' To Discuss the Question 'Is Progress Real'

Undergraduates and Faculty are fortunate in being offered through the Forum the opportunity of hearing Dr. Will Durant, author of the popular Story of Philosophy, deliver a lecture in Chapin Hall next Sunday evening at 7.30 on the subject "Is Progress Real?" Prior to the lecture Mr. C. M. Safford will give a 20-minute organ recital. Dr. Durant was born in North Adams, and it is as a special favor because of his close association with the Berkshires that he has consented to visit Williamstown at this time.

Dr. Durant first became prominent for his work when teaching at Columbia University. Those who studied under him at that institution still tell of the exhilarating influence of his enthusiasm and scholarship, saying that they had never suspected that philosophy could be so intelligible, so absorbing, and so fruitfully related to the actual problems of life.

Among the many lectures which Dr. Durant was asked to give outside the University during his residence there was one on "Spinoza", at the great community center, Labor Temple, maintained by the Presbyterian Church, New York. This address led to the formation of two classes under Dr. Durant, which met at Labor Temple every week during ten months of the year, with an approximate attendance of 1000 per week for eight years. (Continued on Sixth Page)

The Rev. E. A. McMaster to Discuss Hebrew Race

"Hebrew Origins—A Study of the Mental Characteristics and Peculiar Social Habits of this Race before the Time of Moses", will be subject of a lecture Sunday afternoon by the Reverend Edward A. McMaster of the Congregational Church of Williamstown. The address will be given in the lecture room of the Church.

After having made a detailed study of the subject, the Reverend Mr. McMaster has given a number of talks on it to small groups on Sunday morning after the Church service. In order that more people may avail themselves of the opportunity of being present at these informal discussions, he has consented to give them in the form of lectures every Sunday afternoon. No charge for admission will be made, and the public is cordially invited to attend.

Rifle Team Defeated

With high scores of 182 and 176 out of a possible 200 made by Saunders '28, and Chapman '29, the Williams Rifle team lost to the North Adams Revolver Club by a score of 881-844 in a two-position meet held in Jesup Hall last Wednesday evening. The next and concluding meet of the season will be held on March 31 against the Oklahoma Mechanical and Agricultural College.

'Democracy Stumbles Along,' Declares Counsel for Scopes, Sacco-Vanzetti, and the American Mercury

"Bootlegging of a new and thriving sort has grown up between Cambridge and Boston, which bids fair to establish a favorable balance of trade as against liquid exports from the Hub to the University," a Record reporter learned recently from Mr. Arthur Garfield Hays, nationally known as counsel for the defendants in the Sacco-Vanzetti, Scopes, and Countess Cathart cases, and in the attempted suppression of H. L. Mencken's American Mercury.

"There is a special exhibition of the illicit goods on display in the Cambridge Public Library, and Cambridge book stores are enlarging their quarters on the strength of monopoly profits gained by the sale of such proscribed books as Elmer Gantry, Helen of Troy, Oil, Power, and The American Tragedy to Back Bay intelligentsia. The failure of the attack on Mencken's publication dealt a heavy blow to the famous "Watch and Ward Society", but the Boston police are more than filling the shoes of that rather defunct organization.

That such suppression is by no means a thing of the past is indicated by the fact that Mr. Hays will this week defend the publishers, Boni and Liverwright, against action to keep Maxwell Bodenheim's new book, Replenishing Jessica, out of the bookstores. In connection with this case Mr. Hays said, "We fear the word 'censorship', but I always fear a jury still more. By weakening censorship we have only replaced a group of more or less intelligent though puritanical readers by an almost illiterate jury as the final judge of American literature."

Mention of another case on Mr. Hays' docket for the coming week turned the attention to liberty of opinion in matters of government. The All American Anti-Imperialist League of New York has been issuing letters bearing stamps protesting against the intervention of the United States in Nicaragua. The Post Office Department barred the League from the use of the U. S. mail, and the present case is an action for injunction against the Post Office.

"Purely a frame-up to trap holders of unpopular political opinions," was Mr. Hays' description of the case in which he and Clarence Darrow defended two anarchists who were charged with the murder of two American Fascists on last Memorial Day. In this connection he offered (Continued on Sixth Page)

WILL DURANT

Will Durant may count on a well-filled house when he comes here tomorrow to speak at the Forum meeting, for he is not the kind that needs advance poster advertising to attract a crowd. Some will go to hear him with the idea of getting some free and easy culture; some to see a best-seller in the flesh; and perhaps a few to frown good-naturedly at the man who has written a pony for philosophy.

It is probably not without reason that the less spectacular members of the "profession" are inclined to regard Dr. Durant as something of a quack, for to the disrespectful masses, at least, he has made their life work appear absurdly simple and unnecessary. With one casual story he has stripped philosophy of its academic austerity, and implied that, like the French language, it is a thing to be mastered in your spare time. Has he not shown—thousands will say he has—that the real meat of philosophy can be scooped up in a few well turned epigrams, and that the rest is mere redundancy, scholarly confusion, intellectual hot air?

It is not difficult to explain the popularity of this painless philosophy. For one thing it fitted in neatly with a desperate movement on the part of half the nation to get culture by the back door method. Philosophy, along with the other liberal arts, soon became a sort of game, a parlor pastime like the cross-word puzzle. Not to have read the "Story" was considered a sign of dullness. And so thousands of men and women, ever after something for nothing, pounced upon this breezy work of a genuine Ph.D., and greet it as the official endorsement of a common notion that philosophy and literature and science are better off when pruned and pared of all academic verbiage. What remains, of course, is the pithy gist, dressed, flavored, and served up to the public in best-sellers. If this fails to give a very clear conception of philosophic speculation it at least provides fertile matter for small-talk.

Perhaps we should not blame the professors too much for shuddering at this jazzing of the classics. It is certainly not very edifying to behold thousands of adults rushing like sheep through what they imagine to be a short-cut to knowledge. The pre-examination cramming of college students is higher education by comparison. Here, at any rate, the outlines and trots are in some degree the topping off of more solid study. Obviously, books like the "Story of Philosophy" should not be taken too seriously. But as supplement to deadly text-books and profound source material they have considerable value. It cannot be denied that Dr. Durant has stimulated interest in philosophy, and this, we feel, is justification enough for what he has written. We rather resent hearing him called a quack. A man who sets out to make a serious and important subject more attractive to the book-shy, and succeeds so well, is deserving of more flattering predicates.

If he has fooled some of us into thinking that philosophy is one snappy catch-phrase after another, perhaps there is no great harm done. And if only to a few he has opened new possibilities for intellectual enjoyment, the good is immeasurable. Dr. Durant does not need to apologize for his "Story"—it is everything a story should be, and we look forward to another fascinating tale tomorrow night.

A CALL FOR BIG BROTHERS

Next Tuesday evening the Boys' Work Committee will hold its annual Big Brother Banquet—provided the big brothers can be found. The idea of this banquet, which is fast becoming an established institution at Williams, is a thoroughly sound one, and its success in former years has seemed to warrant its continuance.

This year, however, the College has been slow in showing interest in the affair: response to the invitations sent out a few days ago has been almost frigid. Although this is regrettable, it is not altogether surprising. Most of us probably feel that all obligations to the Boys' Work Committee were honorably discharged by our Chest Fund contributions, paid or pledged, and that this should have marked both the beginning and the end of our hune charity work.

As a matter of fact, the Big Brother Banquet is not intended to be a charity meal conducted by undergraduate Mr. Zeros; and those who have attended it in the past know that it is not one of those vicious affairs where the food courses alternate with solicitations for money. Its object is to give a group of young boys a good time; and if it also succeeds in straightening out false conceptions of college life which they may have received from collegiate movies and literature, it will be excuse enough for the get-together.

Banquets are usually rather useless affairs—either stiff with strained speeches of congratulations or loud with the raucous familiarity of forced fellowship. The Big Brother Banquet should be quite different. There will be little speech-making this year, and the awkward moments, if there are any, will be well filled with the cordial music of the Purple Pirates. The boys, we are told, have been looking forward to this event for no less than a year. The College should not need prodding to prevent any disastrous disappointments. Incidentally, it would be a fitting way to show our appreciation of a little appreciated organization by spending a couple of hours with the boys of the Boys' Work Committee.

1912 COLLEGE BODY ELECTED PRESIDENT

Following Conventions and Rallies
Hughes, Republican, Defeated
Wilson, Democrat

(The following is taken from the March and April, 1912 issues of THE RECORD).

Preceded by rallies and campaigns, the members of Williams College in March and April, 1912, following the fashion of their seniors, entered into the presidential nominating campaign in earnest. With Jesup Hall as the headquarters for both parties, the Republicans in their zeal to see Taft or Roosevelt elected, and the Democrats, equally desirous to procure the honor for Wilson or Clark, presented a scene which tended to rival the real party campaigns.

According to the usual custom the Republican campaign was waged first. James R. Garfield, '85, spoke before the Roosevelt-for-President rally and not only bitterly flayed the Taft administration (then in office) but proceeded to show that Roosevelt was the only logical contender. The rally was attended by most of the faculty and College body. Not to be outdone Professor Doughty assembled the Hughes enthusiasts and conducted a similar rally. Townsend, '12, and Utley and Nightingale, '13 composed a student committee for the Hughes movement. The Taft regime held a very quiet rally which foretold of a later explosion. The College was then divided into states and Republican National Committeemen and State chairmen were elected. Hedden, '12, chairman of the committee, promised the College that he would strike a very remarkable keynote for the meeting.

Meanwhile the Democrats under the noisy, but nevertheless capable leadership of Fay, Hawkins, McCredie and Rand, '12 Hotchkiss and Troy and Ely, Mason and McCook, '14 were not idle. Not only were arrangements made for bands, bunting, etc. from North Adams, but stunts and songs were prepared by the enthusiasts. Rallies were held for Wilson and Clark and plans were laid to carry the College by storm. The Democratic ranks seemed to be somewhat smaller than those of their rivals, but they planned boisterous rallies and parades to make up for small numbers.

When it came time for the Jesup Hall Convention, the Republicans, unable to forget their natural tendencies even in the heat of the battle, calmly proceeded to charge all College Democrats one dime to view the spectacle, while townspeople were forced to pay 25 cents. Representatives from the leading papers of the East, The New York Tribune, The Boston Herald, The Boston Journal, and The Boston Transcript, and The Record were established in the press box as the delegates entered following a parade around the campus. Hedden, '12 opened the convention and struck his keynote as promised. Following loud and noisy minor business matters the important matters were brought to light. The group advocated a Postal Savings Bank at Azherdian's (now Nelson Domin's) a federal supervision of Dr. Barret's Soap Trust; permanent endowment of Tiberius and the recall of all warnings just issued. Kellogg, '12, made a short speech nominating Taft and peace was restored only after a group of conspicuous urchins had been dispelled for their vociferous cheering. Roosevelt and Hughes were nominated and a ballot was taken; Taft 150, Roosevelt 123, and Hughes 50. Van Deusen, '12 and Utley, '13 made vigorous speeches which showed their effect on the second ballot when Hughes received 160 votes, Taft, 151, and Roosevelt 12. On the third ballot, after four hours of hot, wordy discussion led by Wickes, '12, and in spite of the fact that stuffing of the ballot box was suspected and petty jealousies threatened to ruin the organization, Hughes was nominated.

The Democrats, having become disgusted with their opponents deemed it wise to make their Jesup Convention as short as possible. When they convened on the following Tuesday the unit rule of voting as a state was followed. In spite of intentions it took six ballots to nominate the Democratic choice for the presidential chair. Wilson was leading Bryan (William Jennings), Clark, and Harmon on the first ballot. Here Alabama entered the excitement by casting 24 votes for Underwood. The second and third ballots showed Underwood to be leading the field with Wilson a close second. A deadlock occurred for the two ensuing ballots, but a shifting of votes gave Wilson the nomination. Professor Garrett Droppers was the unanimous choice for the vice-presidency.

Following the two conventions, campaigns were waged for the election and every precaution was taken to prevent bribery, stuffing of the ballot box or buying

FRESHMAN DEBATERS LOSE TO TAFT SCHOOL

Negative Team Is Vanquished at Taft, While Visitors Take Contest Here

Maintaining that the United States had no moral or legal right to intervene in Nicaragua a debating team from Taft School, composed of Cowper, R. Whittemore, F. Whittemore and Jump (alternate), successfully upheld by a 2-1 decision of the judges in Jesup Hall last Tuesday evening the proposition "Resolved: That this house should support the policy of the United States in Nicaragua." Meanwhile the Williams 1931 negative team was also meeting defeat at the hands of the Taft debaters, Lucia, Wagner, and McGuire, in a match held at the Taft School. The freshmen speakers for the Williams affirmative team, Sommer, East, and Manning with Kelly as alternate, failed to show sufficiently that the Roosevelt corollary to the Monroe Doctrine justified our intervention.

Gaskill '28, presiding chairman, welcomed the debaters from Taft and expressed his pleasure in introducing the first visiting team ever to argue against Williams Freshmen. The speeches were of 10 minutes duration with the exception of Sommer's, who spoke for seven, and returned to the floor for a three minute rebuttal after the final negative speech. The negative maintained that the United States had no moral or legal right of intervention, that the policy of the United States was doing Nicaragua more harm than good, and that our present policy was harmful to our prestige; and in conclusion offered an alternative program of Latin American supervision. The affirmative emphasized the importance of the Monroe Doctrine and especially of the Roosevelt corollary, and they pointed out that if we refuse to let other nations intervene in Latin America, we must protect all nations. The decision rested with Professor Comer, Mr. Bushnell, and Harris '29.

Dougherty '30 Awarded Basketball Competition

As a result of the spring basketball competition terminated recently the following sophomores have been recommended in order for the positions of Assistant Manager of Basketball, Assistant Manager of Wrestling, and Manager of Freshman Basketball: J. L. Dougherty of Glen Ridge, New Jersey; H. DeW. Whittlesey of Cleveland; G. W. Fitch of Albany; W. Keep of Lockport, N. Y.

Cap and Bells has also recommended W. B. Tippy and F. W. Corwin, both of Jackson, Mich., for the offices of Assistant Stage Manager and Assistant Electrician, respectively.

'Record' Competition Starts

Starting this issue, the 20 members of the Freshman Class who have entered the second competition for the editorial board of THE RECORD will strive for the two or possibly three open positions. This competition, which is the second of the three to be held, will last for a period of nine weeks. The following have entered: Bancroft, Birnie, Dorrance, Emerson, Grow, Kleibacker, Lavino, Manning, Meier, J. L. Miller, L. K. Miller, Oxtoby, Pagensteher, Pendleton, Pulsifer, Reynolds, Rogers, Sabin, Vipond, and F. C. Welles '31.

Bowker Meet To Start Soon

Starting on March 26 and continuing throughout the week, the annual swimming meet for the Bowker trophy, open to all except varsity letter men and those who have won a "W" before, will be held in the Lasell Pool. The program of events will include the 50-yd. dash, 100-yd. dash, 150-yd. back stroke, 200-yd. breast stroke, 300-yd. individual medley, 440-yd. swim, and the dives. Entries can be made with Mr. Graham at the Athletic office in the Lasell Gymnasium.

Foul Shooting Contest

Following the completion of the Lehman Cup Meet, the Interfraternity Foul Shooting Contest, the final event of the winter intramural season, will begin next Wednesday afternoon in Lasell Gymnasium. The number of entrants is not limited, but each man will shoot 25 fouls and the five highest scorers from each house will be considered the representatives of that house. The points will be scored toward the Intramural Trophy of Trophies in the usual manner, the team with the highest percentage receiving 16 points.

Preacher

The Reverend William P. Merrill, D.D., of the Brick Presbyterian Church in New York City, will preach at the regular Sunday morning service in Thompson Memorial Chapel.

SCHOTT WILL CAPTAIN SWIMMERS NEXT YEAR

Holder of Intercollegiate 200-yd. Breast Stroke Title Elected By Lettermen

Walter R. Schott '29, of Evanston, Ill., was elected captain of next year's swimming team at a meeting of the lettermen in Jesup Hall last Tuesday noon. Holding the national intercollegiate record for the 200-yd. breaststroke and the New England intercollegiate championship in this event and in the 300-yd. medley, Schott has performed on the Williams varsity for the past three years, being a consistent point winner both in the backstroke and in the individual medley, as well as in his specialty, the breast stroke.

Coming from Evanston High School, where he swam on the team for three years, Schott performed with the freshmen until February, when he became eligible for the varsity. In the New England intercollegiate of that year, he took the championship in the 200-yd. breast stroke which he has held ever since. He was also winner of the Prince Cup and the Bowker Trophy in his Freshman year.

Being sent to the 1927 national intercollegiate, he made a record of two minutes and 41 seconds for the 200-yd. breast stroke in the preliminaries which was not broken throughout the meet, but took second place in the finals the next night. This year he is entered in the 200-yd. breast stroke event in the intercollegiate and the national collegiate, both being held in Philadelphia, the former over this week-end and the latter on March 30 and 31. In addition to his swimming activities, Schott is assistant manager of tennis.

G. B. BARLOW '28

Business Manager of THE RECORD who will be succeeded next week by T. W. Seeley '29

Amherst and Wesleyan Choose Court Captains

Lettermen on the Amherst basketball team recently elected Joseph Michael Navin, of Waterbury, Conn. to lead the 1929 squad. Navin has played three years as forward on the Amherst team. At the same time, Wesley K. Sanders, of Brooklyn, was chosen captain of next year's Wesleyan five. Sanders played at guard for Wesleyan last season, and was placed on the mythical "Little Three" team.

Unusual Play To Be Presented

With characters and costumes that have long been familiar, the coming presentation of 'Oliver Twist' on Friday evening, March 30, in Chapin Hall, promises to be of unusual interest in many ways. This will be a benefit performance to increase the endowment fund for Olivet College, for which a campaign is now being conducted throughout the country. It is expected that in the midst of the many modern, clever plays this revival of Dickens will be welcomed by many.

'Phi Beta Kappa' Initiates

The members of the recently elected 1928 delegation of Phi Beta Kappa were initiated into the society last Thursday at the home of Professor Wild. At the meeting it was decided to hold the annual chapter banquet on April 27. The speakers at the occasion will include President McConaughy of Wesleyan and F. S. Miller '28, the undergraduate secretary of the Williams chapter.

Infirmary

The following students are at present confined to the Thompson Infirmary: Howard '28, Davidson '29, Cross, Gardner, and K. S. Wilson '30. If an undergraduate is seriously ill, his parents are immediately notified by College authorities.

Purple Meets Williams in Last Debate at Home

Mussolini will occupy the attention of the Williams and Wesleyan debaters when they meet in Jesup Auditorium at 7.30 this evening for the first of this year's Little Three forensic contests and one of the last debates of the Eastern Intercollegiate League schedule. The Williams team, in their last home debate, composed of Harris '29, McKean '29, and Heaton '30, will attempt to defend Il Duce and his governmental policies against the objections of R. L. Travis, J. T. Legg, and T. E. Dudley, who will speak for Wesleyan.

Middletown debaters have recently secured victories by unanimous decisions over Yale and Dartmouth on the question of Governor Smith as a presidential candidate, with the result that they come to Williamstown with a strong standing in the League ranking. Legg '30 was a member of the team which defeated Dartmouth and Dudley '28 is a speaker of varied experience. Williams, on the other hand, has lost only to Harvard, and if she should succeed in her Little Three encounters there is a chance for a tie for the League championship.

Dean Howes to Lecture to Classical Association

Dean Howes will deliver an address on "Classical Studies on the University Cruise" to approximately 700 members of the Classical Association of New England, which is holding its twenty-third annual meeting at Deerfield Academy on March 30 and 31. The organization includes all of the colleges and schools in New England and is one of the most important bodies of classical scholars in the country.

The program for the coming meeting has been sent out through Assistant Professor John Galbraith, who is acting secretary of the association. According to the announcement, other speakers on the program will include: Frank L. Boyden, Headmaster of Deerfield; Professor Lester M. Prindle, University of Vermont; Dr. J. Edmund Barss, the Loomis School; Professor George M. Chase, Bates College; Professor Russel M. Geer, Brown University; Professor F. Warren Wright, Smith College; Professor Karl P. Harrington, Wesleyan University; Miss Edna White, President of the New York Classical Club; Professor John W. Spaeth, Jr., Brown University; Professor Cornelia C. Coulter, Mount Holyoke College; Professor Philip Whitehead, University of Vermont.

Prominent Theologian Will Lecture in April

Dr. William Adams Brown, Professor of Systematic Theology at the Union Theological Seminary, who has written many books on religion, and is regarded abroad as the greatest American Theologian living today, will deliver two lectures under the auspices of the W. C. A. on April 19 and 20. Dr. Brown will speak the first night on "Can Christianity Change Civilization?", and the second evening on "Living Issues in Contemporary Religion."

Besides having written eight authoritative religious works, such as "The Essence of Christianity", Dr. Brown has served many times on committees for national and international church organizations. He was in charge of the groups which organized and held the three greatest Church Conferences of modern times, at Stockholm, Lausanne, and Jerusalem. At the present time Dr. Brown is a member of the Yale Corporation and chairman of the Committee on Educational Policy at Yale. He has been awarded degrees of Ph.D. and D.D. from Yale, and that of D.D. from Saint Andrews University in Scotland. Dr. Brown has had a many sided career and represents three aspects of religion, the intellectual, the practical, and the devotional.

DR. SCHLESINGER GIVES TALK ON GREEK DRAMA

'Messengers and Offstage Scenes in Greek Tragedy' Is Topic of Tuesday Talk

Discussing the frequent occurrence in Greek tragedy of off-stage action which was described by a character included for this particular duty and called a messenger, Prof. A. C. Schlesinger lectured last Tuesday afternoon in the Thompson Physical Laboratory upon the subject of "Messengers and Off-Stage Scenes in Greek Tragedy". Professor Schlesinger pointed out that the reasons that many vital scenes, particularly ambushes and suicides, did not happen on the stage itself were not religious or aesthetic taboos, but first, the physical limitations of the Greek stage and second, the tradition of the chorus.

The Greek amphitheatre, he showed, impressed serious physical limitations upon the plays of the time. Being out-of-doors, it did not permit indoor scenes, and these, though often important, could not be presented upon the stage itself. Thus, it became the function of the messenger to report these occurrences to the audience.

The tradition of the chorus also necessitated much off-stage action. It was customary in Greek plays for a chorus, composed of 15 or 20 members, to appear in every scene. The movement of this large group was so difficult to motivate that Greek tragedies finally came to occupy only one scene throughout the whole play. As a result, all happenings outside this scene had to be related by the messenger.

In conclusion, Professor Schlesinger summarized as follows: "Greek tragedy may be defined as that form of drama where one son says to another, 'If you don't kill Mother by sunset, I will.' For the reasons I have mentioned, however, Mother is usually dragged laboriously away and killed off-stage. It then becomes the duty of the messenger to portray Mother's death to the audience."

LISLE '29 RE-ELECTED

High Point Winner of 1928 Again Chosen To Lead Matmen

Richard Waterman Lisle '29 of Providence, R. I., was elected to continue next year in his position as captain of the wrestling team. In the seven meets held this year Captain Lisle, wrestling in the 135-lb. and 145-lb. classes, was high scorer for the season, having won three of his matches by falls and three by decision, while his only defeat was in the meet with Harvard.

Lisle came to Williams from Taft where he had his first experience in wrestling on the school team. In addition to captaining the matmen here this year he has acted as manager of cross-country and has been a member of the Honor System Committee, the Gulielmian, and Purple Cow boards.

Little Is Named Captain of Winter Sports Team

Electing captain and manager at the same meeting, the lettermen of the winter sports team chose Dwight R. Little '29, of Brooklyn, N. Y., as next year's captain, and Terris Moore '29, of Haddonfield, N. J., for the position of manager. Both men have performed on the winter sports team for the past two years, the former as a ski-man and the latter as a snowshoer.

Coming to Williams from Exeter, Little is a member of the varsity track team, as well as a cross-country and proficiency ski-man on the winter sports squad. Moore is captain of this year's rifle team and captain of the cross-country team. As yet, no definite dates for next season's schedule have been arranged.

Council Abolishes Elections

Because college elections have been, in recent years, poorly attended and because the Student Council was incurring unnecessary expense in the printing of ballots, it was voted at the Council's meeting last Monday evening to abolish these elections unless a petition, signed by twenty students, should request one. The rule, as framed by the Council, follows:

Managers shall be declared elected in order of recommendation by the Athletic Council ten days after the announcement of recommendations by that body, unless a petition for a college election, signed by twenty names, be presented to the Student Council, in which case such an election shall be held under the auspices of the Student Council. These recommendations shall be subject to the rules of eligibility regarding competitions.

No answer.

"I say, Tom!"

Still no answer.

"Tom, if you don't come out from behind that newspaper, I'll—I'll—"

"You'll what?"

"Oh nothing. I was just wondering why you spent so much of your time reading the newspaper. Seems sort of dull for a man of your talents."

"Dull nothing! Why, this is the Herald Tribune! Some of the best writers in the country write for it."

"Who, for instance?"

"Ever hear of Grantland Rice?"

"Why yes, I read his stuff in the magazines."

"He writes for the Herald Tribune. Ever hear of Briggs, the cartoonist?"

"Yes."

"He is in the Tribune too. Then there's Mark Sullivan in politics. And Lawrence Gilman on music. And Percy Hammond on the theatre. And a lot of others."

"Quite a collection of stars."

"Yes, indeed. But that's only half. The reporting and regular news writing is awfully good too—full of life and interest. I'm told that a lot of it is done by college trained men."

"Sounds interesting."

"It's more than interesting. Why man, it's history—history in the making. By the way, didn't you get a B plus in History?"

"Guilty."

"Well, you didn't deserve it."

"All right. Stop preaching. I'll try your Herald Tribune tomorrow morning."

"You won't be sorry. You'll find it an unusual paper—quite different from any of the others."

SWIMMERS END HARD SCHEDULE CREDITABLY

Team Wins Five and Loses Three Meets; Takes Third Place in New Englands

Gradually developing throughout the season to win the "Little Three" championship for the third consecutive year, the Varsity swimming team went through a hard schedule with a record of five victories, three defeats, and third place in the annual N. E. I. C. S. A. meet. The team was marked by individual strength with Capt. Butcher, Healy, Putney, and Schott, but the scarcity of good men for second and third places was responsible for the defeats. During the season Putney set new records in the 50 and 100-yd. dashes, Capt. Butcher in the 440, while the relay quartet also hung up a new mark. The climax of the schedule was in the Amherst meet, when the team made better times than ever before to swamp the Sabrinas, 55-15.

In their eight dual meets, the team scored 288 points to their opponents 249. Putney and Schott tallied 66 points apiece to lead the individual scorers; Captain Butcher made 38; Dawes 30; and Healy 25. In addition to this, Williams scored 24 points in the New Englands to bring their total to 312. In the sprints, Putney developed greatly this year to be a consistent performer in his events, while Schott showed his customary championship form in the breast stroke, beside improving in the back and free style to easily win the 300-yd. medley relay in the N. E. I. C. S. A. Butcher was strong in the 440, and Healy showed up well in the breast stroke, also taking second to Schott in the individual medley.

Union fell before the home team in the first meet of the season by a 37-34 score, the better-balanced strength of Williams being the deciding factor. Going to Springfield, they lost, 49-19, to a stronger team, but overwhelmed B. U. the next Saturday, 47-15.

During the midyear recess both N. Y. U. and Columbia conquered the Purple, 40-22 and 37-35 respectively. The relay decided the Blue and White meet, while against N. Y. U. the team did not show its usual power. A week after, displaying marked superiority in every event except the medley relay and the backstroke, Williams had no trouble in beating R. P. I., 49-22.

In the first "Little Three" meet, Wesleyan was nosed out, 37-34, after being disqualified in the relay. Against Amherst, Williams reached the peak of their power, routing their opponents without allowing them a single first place, in addition to lowering four pool records. On March 10 Springfield won the first N. E. I. C. S. A. meet held at Williams, scoring 35 points to Brown's 30 and the home team's 24. The most exciting race on the program was the 300-yd. individual medley, which Schott won easily. After trailing his man for half the distance, Healy passed him to take second place by a touch. Schott also won the breast stroke, with Healy third, and Boynton fourth. Butcher lost the 440-yd. swim by a narrow margin to Littlefield of the winners. Putney placed in both the dashes, and the medley and free style relay teams each took a fourth.

The 300-yd. medley relay was added to the program this year, and, although it presented a problem in finding the right combination, Coach Graham had a good team. The N. E. I. C. S. A. is now considering the addition of the 300-yd. individual medley to next year's meets. Four strong men, Captain Butcher, Boynton, Dawes, and Putney, will be lost for next season, but the prospects for a well-rounded team are fairly good, because of the development of Healy, Schott, and some of the sophomores. There is a lack of capable sprint men, especially in the 100-yd. dash.

Commons Club Five Wins Intramural Championship

In a hotly contested game last Wednesday afternoon in Lasell Gymnasium the Commons Club basketball quintet took the 1928 all-campus championship from Delta Phi by the score of 21-17. The winning team acquired its right to enter the finals by an 11-8 defeat of Delta Kappa Epsilon on Tuesday, while Delta Phi also downed the Chi Psi five on that day, 18-9.

On Monday Beta Theta Pi lost to Chi Psi, 12-6, and Phi Gamma Delta took the measure of Phi Sigma Kappa, 15-6, only to fall before Kappa Alpha later in the same afternoon by a 12-7 margin. In the championship game on Thursday the ultimate victors got off to a bad start, and the powerful combination of Cavanagh and Page rapidly ran up an 11-6 advantage. Two baskets by Beavers almost evened the score by the half, and thereafter the issue lay in the balance until the last few

New Worlds for Old

LIKE Galileo, every pioneer seeks new worlds. In the telephone industry this has led to discoveries of ways and means to better service.

Telephone pioneers of yesterday hewed a way through intricacies of science, finance and business management to establish the era of "distance speech."

Telephone pioneers of our own day imagined a 'cross-ocean service—and then made it.

Telephone pioneers of tomorrow will face the challenge of new and greater problems sure to arise.

New Exhibition To Be Presented in Library

There will be displayed in the Chapin Library beginning March 28, and extending through May 21, a new exhibition of "association books beginning with capitals." They are so-called because they have been in the possession of some noted person or have belonged to the authors themselves, in which case the books contain marginal notes or even inserted manuscripts.

French literature is represented by such items as a presentation copy to Emil Zola of a novel by Anatole France, and a Napoleonic document with his signature. Among the Americana there are several volumes from the library of George Washington which bear his signature. Notable among these are "The first Laws of the United States 1789-90," and a book on tactics constantly used by him in camp. The exhibit also includes books belonging to Swinburne, Horace, Walpole, Coleridge and Kipling.

Life Saving Practice Held

Under the direction of Coach Graham, practice and instruction in life-saving is being held in the Lasell pool, in preparation for the American National Red Cross examination, which begins today and will be concluded about the end of next week. Twenty-eight men have reported for the tests, which are recognized as the standard of proficiency in life-saving work, and include the four standard carries, releases from seven positions, approaches, resuscitation, and surface diving.

The head examiner will be Middendorf '28. He will be assisted by nine undergraduates who have passed the tests and finals, ending with a spurt to take the event. Skinner also took the opening preliminary heat of the 440, followed by Lane and Eynon. In the second heat Lane passed Strother on the last lap to win. Truman being third.

Mason '31 won the high jump, which was held in the Lasell Gymnasium on Thursday afternoon. Skinner and Meier '31 tied for second, while Taylor '28 finished third. Fourth and fifth places were tied between Little '29 and Eynon, and Gailer and Strother. Taylor's points also give him third place in the individual standing. Gailer is the only contestant to score in every event to date, being fourth in the 50, fifth in the hurdles, and fifth in the high jump. Today the 60-yd. high hurdles, the 880-yd. run, and the shot put will be held on the board track.

The summary to date is as follows:

50-yd. dash—Won by Beals '29; Anderson '28, second; Straw '30, third; Gailer '29, fourth; Lane '29, fifth.

60-yd. low hurdles—Won by Skinner '30 Nicolls '29, second; Dougherty '31, third; Little '29, fourth; Gailer '29, fifth.

Qualifiers for 440-yd. dash finals: Lane '29, Moore '29, Skinner '30, Strother '30, Eynon '31, Truman '31.

High jump—Won by Mason '31; Skinner '30 and Meier '31, second; Taylor '28, third; Little '29 and Eynon '30, fourth; Gailer '29 and Strother '30, fifth.

The attractiveness of Will Durant's lectures may be judged from the fact that his Story of Philosophy, mentioned above, was accepted at once by all critics as the most important book of the year upon its publication in May, 1926. Within three weeks two large printings were sold out; a third was taken up in one day; and one book-store sold 200 copies in one hour, thus breaking every record of that store. One month after publication it was still heading the list of best-selling non-fictional books.

He also spoke of the establishment and reorganization of Alumni associations, and of the interest taken in the College by these associations.

Frederick C. Ferry '92, President of Hamilton College and former dean at Williams, spoke upon the notable changes in education in recent years. Concerning this development, he praised the adherence of Williams to the cultural courses and to the study of the humanities, pointing out how fine the intellect becomes which possesses a thorough understanding and appreciation of the classics.

President Harry A. Garfield '85 followed up President Ferry's remarks with an account of the specific developments in education at Williams. He traced the development during the past 20 years, and emphasized his approval of the evolution of the pro-seminars and honors work. President Garfield also paid tribute to the increasing interest of the undergraduates in the intellectual life of the College. As proof of this interest, he stated that last year 20% of the Juniors and 22% of the Seniors had qualified for honors work.

'Democracy Stumbles Along'

the opinion that "Fascism is tyranny; and though tyranny may be efficient, efficiency is not the test of life." When asked if Italy was ready for more liberal government, he replied, "Democracy would stumble along in Italy as well as anywhere else."

As if noticing a glance of surprise at so cynical a declaration from so ardent an advocate of civil liberties, he explained that serious curtailments of political freedom are not limited to Italy. "No liberty, no freedom exists in the majority of the coal mining towns of Pennsylvania and West Virginia. There the companies own all the homes, appoint the police, and have complete control over the government. When we visited one of these towns a few weeks ago to hold a meeting of the American Civil Liberties Union (of which Mr. Hays is director) we were thrown out with bodily violence. We returned with warrants, but when I entered the office of the company where the local Justice of the Peace chose to hold his hearings, I was arrested and thrown into jail for trespassing. Since then the group responsible has been indicted and convicted of assault."

"But the authority of these local despots is seldom so questioned. The local bar owes its existence to the companies. Uprisings are put down by injunctions. There is at present in effect in one district in Pennsylvania an injunction prohibiting the use of union dues for the support of workers, which is so worded that one becomes subject to imprisonment for the gift of a pair of shoes to a miner's child."

The principle behind Mr. Hays' many sided defense of civil liberties is perhaps most clearly indicated in his stand on the question of companionate marriage. "The only trouble with Lindsey is that he doesn't go far enough. Law accomplishes nothing in the social field. The only interest in marriage is to compel the support of the children. From Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, to Reno, Nevada, we have in this country every kind and degree of marital legislation, and little if any difference in marriage practice. The answer is found, and found only, in the social background of the American people."

WESLEYAN IS VICTOR IN MUSSOLINI DEBATE

Purple Debaters Fail To Establish Case Based on Efficiency of Dictatorship

Characterizing the present régime of Mussolini in Italy as one of "high-handed imperial impersonation, bribery, and deceit," and showing that the accomplishments generally accredited to the Italian dictator were started before he came into office in 1922, the Wesleyan debating team, defending the negative of the question "Resolved: That this house favors the governmental policies of Mussolini," defeated an affirmative Williams team composed of Harris and McKean '29 and Heaton '30 last Saturday evening in Jesup Hall. The Wesleyan debaters, T. E. Dudley, J. T. Legg, and R. L. Travis, were awarded a unanimous decision by the judges, Messrs. Boedel and Grant, and the audience's votes were in accord with this result.

Professor W. H. Doughty presided and introduced the speakers. Harris, opening the discussion for Williams, outlined the arguments for his team, and stressed the value of a strong central government, which "has everything at its fingertips and can know quickly whenever any trouble arises." He also showed the post-war reclamation done by Mussolini when Italian prosperity was at its lowest

SCHEDULE IS HEAVY IN GOLF AND TENNIS

Strong Nucleus of Veterans Will Open Season This Spring in Both Sports

In anticipation of the strenuous season indicated by the schedules recently published, members of the golf and tennis teams are making use of the limited means at their disposal for early practice. Graduation has cost the golf squad only the loss of Hargraves '27, but has dealt more heavily with last year's successful tennis team, which will open the season late in April without the services of Marsh, Wright, and Webber.

Nevertheless, Captain Banks, Wolf, Chase, and Sewall have been engaging in light workouts on improvised courts in the Lasell Gymnasium, and aspirants from the sophomore class, led by Adsit, promise to give support to the veterans. The golf team, with the single exception mentioned, will consist of men of at least one year's experience, including Captain Blaney, Fall, Heller, K. Smith '28; Nye and J. G. Williams '29, and, according to the schedule, will meet Brown, Harvard, Dartmouth, Princeton, Pennsylvania, Wesleyan, Yale, and Amherst.

The tennis schedule is as follows: April 27, M. I. T. Home; May 5, Union at Schenectady; May 10, Bowdoin, home; May 11, Wesleyan at Middletown; May 12, Yale at New Haven; May 17, Princeton at Princeton; May 18, Columbia at New York; May 22, Harvard at Cambridge; May 24, Colgate, home; May 26, New England Intercollegiate; May 30, Amherst, home.

The Rev. E. A. McMaster Talks on Hebrew Origins

"The Bedouin Arabs, desert marauders who had no large scope of mentality, no strength of will, little creative ability or imagination, and with morals that today seem incredibly negative, were the direct progenitors of the Jewish race," said the Reverend Edward A. McMaster of the Williamstown Congregational Church in an address given in the lecture room of the Church last Sunday. The subject of the lecture was "Hebrew Origins—A Study of the Mental Characteristics and Peculiar Social Habits of this Race before the Time of Moses," and it was the first of five Sunday afternoon lectures by the Reverend McMaster on the history of the Jews.

The clan was the only social medium of the Arab of 3000 years ago, the speaker stated, and his genealogy was uppermost in his mind, with the result that today the Bedouin is aristocratically imbued with

BIG BROTHER BANQUET WILL BE HELD TONIGHT

About 150 Boys Will Attend Annual Event in Currier Hall—Purple Pirates To Play

Approximately 150 boys, members of the five Boys' Clubs organized in Williamstown and the neighboring communities, will be entertained tonight at the annual Big Brother Banquet to be held under the auspices of the Williams Christian Association at 6:30 o'clock in the dining room of the Commons Club in Currier Hall. The committee in charge of the event, which is headed by Kepner '28, has decided to omit this year the usual talk by an outside speaker, but has provided entertainment by engaging the Purple Pirates to play, and arranging for two vaudeville acts, as well as speeches by prominent undergraduates and members of the clubs.

The privilege of attending the banquet is one which is granted only to members of the Boys' Clubs who have maintained a good record and have paid all club dues to date. The boys will be the guests of undergraduates of the College, of whom it is hoped at least 100 will attend. During the dinner Sterling '28 will talk to the boys on College organizations, and Kepner '28 will tell of the work of the W. C. A. Two members of the Boys' Clubs will also give short speeches.

During the intervals between addresses, and after the banquet is over, music will be provided by the Purple Pirates. The committee is also arranging for at least two musical or vaudeville acts as the final events on the program. W. J. Curtis, Dunning, Kepner, Lawder and Shepler '28, Fitch, French, Johnson, Rohrbach and Strong '29, and Ely '30 comprise the committee in charge of the arrangements.

Williams Alumni Attend Meeting at Pittsfield

Representatives of 47 American colleges met last Friday evening at the Park Club in Pittsfield for a college smoker and to discuss the possibility of reestablishing the university club which existed there several years ago. Among the 19 Williams graduates present were Harlan B. Ballard '74, who had the honor of being the oldest alumnus at the meeting, and Dr. Henry Colt '78, who delivered a brief talk.

Charles L. Safford, college organist, had the principal place on the entertainment program of the evening, offering both vocal and instrumental selections, while every one sang various college songs. Speakers for the evening included Milton B. Warner, Harvard law graduate, and Joseph E. Peirson, who presided. About 200 men attended this meeting, eight of whom were from Amherst, and eight from Cornell.

Organ Recital

Since he is planning to be out of town Wednesday, Mr. Safford will give his regular weekly organ recital Thursday afternoon at 4:15 in Chapin Hall. The program, which is given over entirely to the works of Beethoven this week, is as follows:

- I. Overture Leonore No. 3
- II. a. Larghetto, 2nd Symphony
b. Allegretto, 8th Symphony
c. Scherzo, 3rd Symphony
- III. Adagio Quartette in F
- IV. Scherzo and Finale, 5th Symphony

SKINNER LEADS FIELD IN LEHMAN CUP MEET

Takes High Hurdles and Finishes after Lane in Half; Gailer Wins Shot Put

Winning first place in the 60-yd. high hurdles and second in the half mile to increase his total point score to 26, Skinner '30 easily maintained his lead in the twenty-ninth annual Lehman Cup meet, which was continued Saturday on the board track. Lane and Gailer '29 were the other victors of the day, finishing first in the 880-yd. run and the shot put respectively. Gailer advanced to second in the individual point score with 19½, with Little '29 only half a point behind.

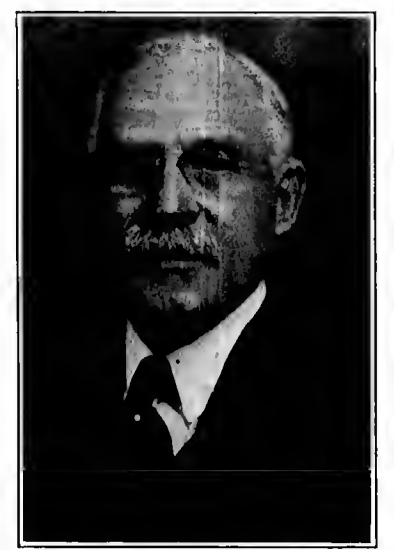

Skinner had little trouble in heating Shoaff '29 and Little in the hurdles, who staged a close race for second, the former going ahead in the final stretch. In a heat for fourth and fifth places Capps '31 beat out Meier '31 by five feet. The 880 was one of the best races of the meet to date. Strother '30 drew the pole and managed to maintain the lead until the third lap, when Moore '29 passed him, but the next time around Lane sprinted on the straightaway to forge ahead and set the pace to the finish. Skinner sprinted at the end to take second, while Strother and MacFarland were fourth and fifth.

Layman '29 Is Elected Editor of 'Purple Cow'

D. W. Layman, Jr., W. G. Hanger, and D. Eisner '29 were elected to the positions of Editor-in-Chief, Managing Editor, and Art Editor respectively of the Purple Cow for the coming year at a recent meeting of the board. The board further announced the appointment of nine undergraduates to the Purple Cow: Bryant and Fitch '30, and Garth, Jones, Kimball, Pearl, Sisley, G. D. Welles, and Woodruff '31.

In addition to cartooning for the Purple Cow during the last two years, Layman has served as the art editor of the 1927 Gul, and is a regular contributor to Judge. He is also a member of Cap and Belts. Hanger has been active in the literary department of the Cow, and played on his Freshman baseball team, while Eisner is a member of the varsity football and winter sports teams. The forthcoming issue of the Purple Cow, it was announced, will be featured as a "Travel Number."

BREAST STROKE TITLE CAPTURED BY SCHOTT

Breaks Intercollegiate Mark With 2:39.2 in 200-yd. Event at Philadelphia

Breaking his own previous record and setting a new national collegiate mark of 2 minutes and 39.2 seconds in the 200-yd. breast stroke, Walter R. Schott '29, representing Williams at the meet of the Intercollegiate Swimming Association in Philadelphia, finished ahead of a field of the best swimmers in the East to win the intercollegiate championship in the finals held last Saturday night. After qualifying in first place Friday night, coming within two tenths of a second of his former record time of 2 minutes and 41 seconds made last year, in the finals the Williams star defeated Rickman of Yale, who also finished next to him last year, and Nisselson of N. Y. U. and Rae of Columbia, both of whom he had beaten earlier in the season.

Schott entered the event in the peculiar position of being recordholder, but not champion. Last year, in the preliminaries, he easily defeated the field, setting the intercollegiate record, but the next night he lost by a scant foot to Allen of the Navy in the finals. In the New England Intercollegiate, however, the captain-elect of the Williams team has held the championship in the breast stroke event for the past three years. He also holds the 300-yd. individual medley championships in this competition.

Eleven colleges qualified men in the meet held last week-end in the pool of the University of Pennsylvania. Swimmers capturing first places are credited with the Eastern intercollegiate championship in each event. Schott is also entered in the national intercollegiate which will be held in the same pool on March 30 and 31, and a win in that competition will give him the national intercollegiate championship.

Hans Holbein Reproductions Praised by Critic For Superb Draughtsmanship and Expressive Penciling

The Chapin Library Exhibition of reproductions of the Windsor Castle series of eighty-four drawings by Hans Holbein the Younger has afforded a rare opportunity to the lover of art, of draughtsmanship, and of history.

The Royal Library values these drawings as one of the most priceless of their many treasures, not only for their artistic merit, but also for their historical associations. These august personages are the people who counted in the times of Henry the Eighth. Holbein arrived in England in 1526 and lived under the patronage of Sir Thomas More and Archbishop Warham, to whom he had been recommended by his friend, the great Erasmus. Although he immediately gained access to the court of Henry the Eighth we have no record of his being in the king's service until 1536. This series must have been done between 1526 and 1543, the year of his death. Somehow the drawings passed out of the royal hands, went to France; returned to Charles the First who, true to his Italian penchant, traded them for a picture by Raphael; thence into the Earl of Arundel's collection, back to Charles the Second. Then Caroline, consort to George

DR. DURANT AFFIRMS REALITY OF PROGRESS

Author of 'Story of Philosophy' Praises Basic Achievements of Human Race

"If there is any validity in history we must say that our civilization too will pass away and that where we have labored for thousands of years savages will roam," said Dr. Will Durant in his lecture, "Is Progress Real?" given under the auspices of the Williams Forum in Chapin Hall last Sunday evening. "But can we believe," Dr. Durant continued, "that progress is real despite this argument? I see a stairway consisting only of those steps which once taken by man always remain; in Whitman's words, I see the undiscourageable pertinacity of the race, and it is this living quality in the achievements of mankind which supplies the answer to our question."

Before discussing his argument for the reality of progress as introduced by this statement Dr. Durant considered the evidence against such a conclusion. "In New York, London, Berlin, Paris, all one sees is cynicism, pessimism, and a spirit of despair. The common cry in New York is that we believe in nothing and hope for

Cuddeback Is 1930 Treasurer

Charles Van I. Cuddeback '30, of Port Jervis, N. Y., was elected treasurer of the class of 1930 at a Sophomore meeting held after chapel last Sunday morning. Coming to Williams from Andover, where he was prominent in athletics, Cuddeback received Freshman numerals in football, basketball and baseball, and in his Sophomore year, has made the varsity basketball team as well as being elected assistant manager of intramurals. The re-election of a 1930 treasurer was necessary at this time as Foster, chosen for that office last fall, has left College.

the Second, found them in a bureau in Kensington Palace and hung them, framed in her apartments. Such was their return to royalty.

The drawings had been reproduced as early as 1792 and had also been photographed, but their true merit had never been revealed. King Edward the Seventh gave authority to two English firms, Charles Whittingham and Griggs, and Emery Walker to make these facsimile reproductions. That they are completely successful is apparent; indeed it is a shock to realize that these are not the originals.

The historical interest of these drawings is more than supplemented by their artistic merit. Their most striking elements are a supreme draughtsmanship and a subtle variation of technique to express a variety of results. Holbein was, like Durer and Cranach, preeminently the draftsman; with the most effortless and concise strokes he reveals bits of character, and with an ever-different use of light and shade he models faces that run the whole gamut from masculine force to feminine delicacy. There is a very moving spontaneity about these works that is all the more apparent by contrast with much of his painted work.

MEDITATION ON SPRING STREET

Early morning robins—fraternity houses spilling onto their front porches—listless groups of students scattered haphazardly about the campus, happy to be released once more from the strained pressure of cold, brisk winter. Half-done topics, sticking out of silent typewriters, are forgotten—or almost, and there is nothing to do but sit and smoke. At night the sky is full of stars and there is a young, reddish moon. It is warm; and you exclaim as it has never been exclaimed before, "Spring is here!"

And then perhaps you go down town and try to cross the street. The mud has been churned into a thick yellow soup. There are bottomless canyons and lakes of mire where you least expect them, and in your frantic efforts to avoid the worst places you skip and dance foolishly. Then a passing car spits a great quid of mud on your only Sunday suit. You probably make a little speech, and finish the journey in a big reckless splash. . . . Without doubt spring is here, but alas! so is Spring Street.

Is it not tragic that young men's fancies must be thus rudely interrupted by prosaic thoughts of muddy water? But better times are in sight, and with Virgil we may sing, "Forsan miseros meliora sequentur." For when the good citizens of Williamstown meet in special conclave on April 11, they will be asked to decide upon the question of paving Spring Street. From Saturday's Transcript come the glad tidings that the situation is "rapidly coming to a head, and it is expected that by the middle of next week land damage releases will have been obtained from all the abutting property owners and that this matter will be ready for presentation at this meeting."

If for any private reason an "abutting property owner" should take it into his head to oppose the project, he might do well to remember that many customers must first cross the street before they can do business with him. And even undergraduates like clean streets. As for sentimental objections, if there are any, there is absolutely nothing attractive about a cow-path when the cows are replaced by trucks and automobiles.

But we are confident that after so many years of deliberation the Town is at last ready to vote itself a brand new street—one with neat curbs, efficient gutters, and a smooth, clean surface. We still look forward to the day when a man may pass safely and dryly from one side of Spring Street to the other without having to wear hip boots.

ALUMNI COLUMN

(The following accounts of Williams activities are taken from various periodicals of the day).

Amherst and Williams met at Pittsfield on July 1, 1859 in the first intercollegiate baseball game of any type played in the world. The contest, which resulted in a victory for Amherst, was of the old fashioned "round ball" kind, and required thirteen men on each team, which were not selected because of any skill or training, but "were chosen by ballot from the students at large."

The "fans" at that first college game were indeed plentiful. All the faculty and every student at Williams were there, and the whole village of Williamstown emptied itself into the ball grounds. There were, moreover several "female seminaries" within easy riding distance, and their interested students were present to put the boys on their mettle. The Amherst team felt a little lonely, as only seventeen students, all players, were in their company, and not a single neighbor or member of the faculty came to cheer them up.

It was indeed doubtful whether the game could ever be finished, for some enemy of law and order started the report that "the Amherst thrower was a professional blacksmith who had been hired for the occasion". Thus the suspicion of professionalism entered college athletics at the very beginning. However, the contest started at 11.00 o'clock, lasted twenty-six rounds, or innings, and closed after four hours of continuous playing. The score was 73 to 32, in favor of Amherst.

March 17, 1882—The freshmen and sophomores have indulged in rushes at Williams College for the last two days, terminating yesterday in a most serious encounter. The freshmen decided Saturday that the time for carrying canes had arrived, and appeared with large canes near West College, where they met the sophomores, who had just left a recitation with Professor Perry. The sophomores rushed at the freshmen and a conflict was in progress when Professor Perry appeared and ended it.

The next morning a freshman smuggled a cane into the chapel, concealed in the leg of his trousers, and, when prayer was over, went about fifty yards from the building, followed by the class, before he showed the objectionable piece of wood. It was not his own cane, but a large one he had selected for the occasion. As soon as it was discovered, the sophomores made a rush and a lively scuffle followed. About eighty freshmen rallied around their eagle, and fifty sophomores attacked them on all sides. The latter party had not, they claim, anticipated any such challenge and were handicapped by overcoats, books, and good clothes. The incumberances were cast on the snow, and the good clothes were forgotten in the tumult. In the midst of the melee five of the faculty appeared and succeeded in securing the cane and quelling the excitement.

On Monday morning the chapel bell tolled its summons to prayers, but a skirmish had already taken place in front of the post office, with twenty-five on each side. Nearly all the students cut chapel, and the freshmen, armed with light canes, were met by their opponents in front of the chapel door. The battle was lively, and the shouts of conflict drowned the prayers of those within.

June 21, 1896—Capt. Lewis of the Williams baseball team pitched his last and, what was in some respects, his best game on Weston Field yesterday afternoon, and, as a result, the Berkshire boys defeated their old-time rivals from Hampton County, 7 to 3. The wonderful game which Lewis pitched against Yale only (Continued on Fourth Page)

CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION CONDUCTS CONFERENCE

Bennington County Convention of Older Boys Entertained in Williamstown

Members of the Williams Christian Association played an important part in the Bennington County Older Boys' Convention, held by the Interchurch Council for Work with Boys, at Bennington on March 23, 24, and 25. Features of the convention included speeches by several undergraduates, a special musical entertainment by the Musical Clubs, and a conducted tour to points of interest about Williams College.

The program commenced last Friday evening in Bennington with a series of discussion groups led by Kepner, '28, Andersen, Phelps, '29, Ely, Park, and Thoms, '30. The general subject of these discussion groups, which were continued on Saturday morning, was "Getting By" as opposed to the policy of striving with all one's might.

Saturday afternoon was spent in a visit to Williams College, and more than 80 boys were shown about the buildings. Following a trip of inspection through the College buildings and museums, the party witnessed the Lehigh Cup Meet and then all enjoyed a swim in the new Lasell Gymnasium Pool.

On their return to Bennington Saturday night the members of the convention were entertained by a special concert of several Musical Club units, under the direction of S. L. Johnson, '29. This program, which was presented in the Second Congregational Church of Bennington, was followed by an organ recital by Mr. Charles L. Safford, Director of Music.

Foul Shooting Contest to Begin on Wednesday

As the final event on the winter program of intramural athletics, the annual basketball free throwing tournament will be held in the Lasell gymnasium, beginning Wednesday, March 28. Although the number of entrants from each house is unlimited, the winner will be determined from the total of the five best individual scores from each group, the scoring being counted on the basis of 25 shots per entrant.

The winner of this contest will receive 16 points toward the Interfraternity Trophy of Trophies. Although the members of the Varsity and the Freshman basketball squads are barred from the tournament, last year's high scorer, Foster '28, is still in college. After the free throwing contest, which was won last year by Theta Delta Chi, there are four spring events on the intramural program: a baseball series, track meet, and golf and tennis tournaments.

Prof. Leigh Talks Before New England Association

Prof. R. D. Leigh, in a speech to be given Friday afternoon at the annual meeting of the New England Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, which will be held this year at Exeter, New Hampshire, will talk on "Some Aspects of the Plans for Bennington College". The subject of this particular session of the conference, to last from March 30 to 31, will be "New Plans and Policies in College Education", and other leaders in the field of experimental education to speak at this time are Miss Marian Coats, president of Sarah Lawrence College for Women, and President Goodknow of Johns Hopkins University. Professor Leigh will also speak during Easter vacation at the National Conference on Education, to be held at the Teachers' College of Columbia University April 10 and 11.

Bowker Meet Starts April 2

Entries for the annual Bowker Trophy Meet, which will begin on Monday, April 2 in the Lasell Pool, must be made this week through Mr. Graham at the athletic office. The contest is open to all undergraduates who have not received their varsity letter in swimming. Following is a list of the events: 50-yard dash, 100-yard dash, 150-yard backstroke, 200-yard breaststroke, 300-yard individual medley, 440-yard swim, and the dives.

What to see in BRITAIN

The first college of Cambridge University was founded in 1284. Seven centuries of history and development have endowed this old-world University with scenes and traditions that are intensely interesting to American students.

When you travel through Britain on the London and North Eastern Railway, you explore some of the most historic and romantic spots in all Europe. Over this historical highway lie the ancient cities of Ely, Lincoln, Norwich, York, Edinburgh and many old-world towns celebrated in romance and legend.

Added to the attractions of natural beauty and climate are literary and historical associations, mighty castles and landmarks famous in American life.

You will understand and be better understood in England and Scotland than anywhere else in Europe. You can play golf on the world famous courses at St. Andrews and North Berwick—in the land of the game.

In addition to the "Flying Scotsman", the famous train between London and Edinburgh, there are fast and frequent trains to all the numerous points of interest.

'OLIVER TWIST' TO BE PRODUCED THIS FRIDAY

Cast of Faculty Wives and College Students Present Play of 'Very Real People'

Of some historical characters we are more or less skeptical: Napoleon, for example, or Columbus, or Alexander,—they never seemed very real. Historians tell us, of course, that they lived, and were often quite commonplace and human, yet they lack that seven-days-in-the-week reality that we see in those whom we meet on Spring Street or in the Post Office.

But all this is different with certain other great ones of the past,—people like Mr. Pickwick, for instance, or David Copperfield, or Captain Cuttle. It doesn't take the assurance of any historian to convince us of the reality of these people. We know that they lived because we lived with them: most of the things that they have done we have seen them do, and most of the things that they have said we have heard them say.

Oliver Twist is one of these real people, and so are Mr. Bumble, and Fagin, and Bill Sikes, and Naney, and the Artful Dodger. We were at the workhouse when Oliver asked for more and we know how Oliver's greediness shocked Mr. Bumble for we heard what he said and saw the horrified expression on his face. We have attended sessions of Fagin's finishing school for young criminals; and we have been present at Bill Sikes's apartment when we should just as soon have been somewhere else.

But this is not a treatise on reality in fiction, and all these generalities are mentioned only as a reminder that these very real people are coming to Chapin Hall on Friday evening, and will give us an opportunity of renewing old acquaintances. And the odd thing is that, although we ourselves may be older than when we first met them, they haven't aged by a day; yet Oliver is now nearly a hundred years old and the Artful Dodger was picking pockets when Victoria had just become Queen.

Dr. Brown to Speak

Twice Under W. C. A.

Dr. Brown was the chairman of the Committee on the War and the Religious Outlook and secretary of the General Wartime Committee of the Churches and is now the chairman of the Committee on Research of the Federal Council of Churches, of one of the commissions of the Stockholm Conference, and of the Commission on the Church at the Lausanne Conference. He is also a member of the committee in charge of preparations for the Jerusalem Conference. These are considered the four greatest church conferences of modern times, all of them dealing primarily with the broad outlook on religion. Dr. Brown, however, is also interested in education, being a member of the Yale Corporation and chairman of the Committee on the Educational Policy of Yale University.

Dr. Brown has had a many-sided career and represents the three following aspects of religion: the intellectual, the practical, and the devotional. On the intellectual side he is recognized as one of the greatest of American theologians. The activities listed above indicate his practical effectiveness, while, on the devotional side, he has had a real experience with religion which he has shared with others in his Life of Prayer in the World of Science. In his first lecture, Dr. Brown will bring out the broad outlook which the churches have on religion. He is an authority on this subject.

Dr. Brown is the author of the following books: Christian Theology in Outline, The Essence of Christianity, The Christian Hope, The Creative Experience, The Life of Prayer in a World of Science, Imperialistic Religion and the Religion of Democracy, The Church in America, Beliefs That Matter, to be published in April. He received his Doctor of Philosophy and Doctor of Divinity degrees from Yale University. St. Andrews University, Scotland, has also awarded him the degree of Doctor of Divinity.

two days before did not affect his good right arm in the least, and he had all sorts of speed and curves to retail to the Amherst batters.

The Amherst men succeeded in making but four hits in as many innings, and no less than eight of them fanned the air in a vain endeavor to hit the ball. Whenever they did locate it, it was to send up easy flies to the outfield or slow grounders to the infield. Gregory, who has been Amherst's pride for fooling Williams so many times before, was given an exceedingly warm reception, and his reputation as a great pitcher was somewhat tarnished by the kindly way in which the home team took to his curves. He succeeded in striking out but one man.

Williams also furnished all the sport in batting. In the fifth inning, after two men were out, Goodrich sent out a hit to left and stole second. It looked as though he would be left there, but Capt. Lewis came to the rescue with one of the longest hits ever seen on Weston Field. The ball went far over the running track and, after circling the bases, he had almost time to take first again.

March 3, 1901—John B. Gale '42, of Williamstown, has begun war on compulsory attendance at church and chapel by students and declares that he will carry the case into court, if the corporation does not abolish such attendance. He distributed last night printed letters among all the fraternity houses and business places in town, and has also written to President Carter on the subject.

Skinner Leads Field

In Lehman Cup Meet

Gailer, who had made his throws the day before, won the shot put, and Whittlesey '30, after trailing Little until his final tries, was second by an inch. Hibbard took fourth place. The uncertainty of the footing, which was slippery, hindered all the contestants. The meet will be finished Wednesday with the finals of the 440 and the 50-yd. dash.

The summary of the events held Saturday follows:

60-yd. high hurdles: Won by Skinner '30; Shoaff '29, second; Little '29, third; Capps '31, fourth; Meier '31, fifth.

880-yd. run: Won by Lane '29; Skinner '30, second; Moore '29, third; Strother '30, fourth; Macfarland '28, fifth.

Shot put: Won by Gailer '29; Whittlesey '30, second; Little '29, third; Hibbard '29, fourth.

his own importance. "Although driven at times in the heat of passion to cruel deeds, ordinarily the Arab lived a life of kindness which is surprising to us." The Reverend McMaster showed the Arabs' mastery of adaptation to the peculiarities of environmental conditions, and pointed out that their culture, although slight, came from contact with neighboring tribes. Concluding, he said "The Arab lacked creative ability, but the poetic element in his immediate descendants is so pronounced that many Biblical passages, especially in Job and Psalms, have never been surpassed."

Holbein Reproductions Praised by Critic

Holbein was rarely at home with colors; for him they never help to suggest a third dimensional depth that gives sturdiness and force. They merely serve to fill in given outlined areas and their sole resultant value is one of decoration, such as is effected by an old map on a bare wall. It thus happens that all the wonder of his crayon and pencil modelling is lost through his inability to carry this out in paint. Thus Holbein's finished works that are the pride and joy of many a great gallery, lack the vital spark that invigorates these preliminary sketches. A very good example of this failing is afforded by the Sir John Galsworthy which is the only completely colored work in the series. A subtle line imparts an expressively sly impression to the eyes, but as we take into account the absence of modelling in the therefore monotonous bronze complexion our delight falls off until we become quite dissatisfied. What slight modelling there is, is done in pencil and with this the color tint has no functional relation. In the nearby Harry Guldeford, who, with his deliciously culinary white hat, looks like a sort of middle aged knave of hearts, a reversal of this is seen, for the modelling is done in colored chalk and thus line and color are combined in one. Sir Thomas More's Father with the merry twinkle in his eye is another example of such a triumph. Sir Thomas himself would be more effective with more space about his great head. In the Sir Thomas Parrie there is the utmost delicacy of pencil modelling, but the absence of any emphasis by a strong line or shadow makes this seem much more the photograph than the work of art.

Holbein is often called the most objective of artists. But to call him an artist at all implies a selective method, an accent here, a shading off there to bring out the general impression rather than to effect an exact reproduction of each detail. And so we turn to the greatest of the series. Archbishop Warham must have thought all his interest repaid an hundredfold when he saw this chalked sketch. The consummate expressiveness of the lines about the mouth and the jowl and the lower lip, and best of all, the eyes, is indeed moving. About this face there is weight, the weight of experience and force and dignity. Lord Fitzwilliam of Southampton is a sort of generalized man of action. In the strong lines and sharp shadows that build up the nose and mouth, and in the four small pencil dashes that impart the eagle's glance to the right eye, this is unmistakable. Bishop John Fisher is also a particularly strong rendition, the forceful play of light about the muscular chin being accentuated by a very heavy ink line. This is but an arbitrary selection from many masterpieces. On the other hand there are a large number in a more or less complete state that have a flatness centering in the eyes that debars expressiveness.

Generally speaking, Holbein is less successful with the ladies. In his attempts at delicate modelling he too often omits all accents and the result is frailty from the artistic standpoint. A strong exception to this is the sinister Anne of Cleves brought out by a dark tonality and a glint in the eyes. Cicely Heron and the Nurse to Edward the Sixth are also great favorites. For a last pleasant taste note how a few deft pen strokes about the mouth and eyes create the coquette in the Dutchess of Suffolk.

An interesting sidelight on Holbein's method is to be obtained in these drawings. As we have said, they were the preliminaries to later painted portraits. And so in the Marquis of Northampton and many others we may see a maze of notations as to later color effects, decoration, and what not.

less. In the last century man was supposed to take progress for granted. The 'wonderfulness' of the nineteenth century became dogmatic. What has caused the change? Perhaps the war, which showed us how a few months training could destroy the progress of thousands of years. But even in the nineteenth century there was a note of cynicism. Ruskin said, 'Is wealth progress if the heart is as it was before?' Balfour said that we progress in knowledge, intellect, and ideas, but behave according to habits, instincts, and emotions, which barely change from age to age. Lucretius gave the shortest answer on record to our question: 'Vadem omnia semper,' and history reports no certainty except decadence.

"But I see certain steps in human history which seem to have been permanent; they are the real record of man," Dr. Durant then considered the fundamental aspects of human progress, saying, "Perhaps the symbol of history does not lie in the Parthenon and its like but in the rise of man from inarticulateness." He went on to discuss the discovery of fire, the conquest of the animal kingdom, the passage of man from hunting to agriculture, social organization, morality. "This generation," Dr. Durant said, "thinks it is the most immoral that has ever been. We used to eat each other, and then our morals or perhaps our tastes, improved, and now we eat prunes and shredded wheat."

Dr. Durant went on to the consideration of invention. "Mechanical power becomes cheaper, while human power grows dearer due to restriction of immigration from abroad and from Heaven. Progress is not a progress towards happiness; we suffer more today than ever before, but we want to go on at whatever cost. Progress is the increase in the ability of men and women to do great things. Greece and Rome are not dead, and America will pass away only in the superficial sense of the word; what she has produced will remain. The young are fortunate," concluded Dr. Durant in the words of Voltaire, "for they will see great things, and it only remains for us older ones to make straight their way."

He was recently elected captain of next season's swimming team, as he still has a year at Williams.

Some call it mellowness . . .

SOME say that Camel is the mellowest cigarette ever made. Some that it's mild and smooth. It's really all good things in one, and that is why it is supreme upon the pinnacle of modern favor. Camel's popularity today is the largest that any cigarette ever had.

And, it costs something to make this kind of a smoke. It costs the choicest tobaccos that money can buy, and a blending that spares neither time nor expense. Each Camel cigarette is as full of value as the world of tobacco can give.

You can be sure of smoking pleasure, serene and full, in these quality cigarettes. Smoke all of them you want; they simply never tire the taste.

ebb. Travis, the first Wesleyan speaker, pointed out that Italy was in better condition before the advent of Fascism in 1922 than it was after Il Duce became dictator; as an example of Mussolini's tyrannic rule he cited the case of Matteotti, who, after speaking publicly against Fascism, was seized on the streets, driven into the country, and murdered, his murderers later being freed after trial by a Fascist jury, Fascist lawyers, and a Fascist judge. He then showed how Mussolini, going on the principle that the state can do no wrong and that the end justified the means, has suppressed all political opposition and now personally elects every member of the grand council.

Heaton, speaking second for the affirmative defended Italy's censorship of the press by saying that all governments do a certain amount of censoring; he stated that Mussolini does not penalize workingmen who strike, emphasized his country-wide reforms, and after pointing out that Fascism grew merely in opposition to industrial disunion, concluded by saying "Mussolini wants a strong, representative government, not democratic, but rooted in the hearts and every-day lives of the Italian people." In reply, Legg, of Wesleyan, maintained that there is more violence in the present régime than there was before, averred that there are many cases, such as the one in which Matteotti was involved, and stated that because of censorship the outside world does not hear of them. "The Fascists by their violence drew forth the opposition of the industrialists and then overwhelmed them; since then the industrialists have kept the Fascists' pockets full on the condition that the latter keep the working classes subdued, which the Fascists have done." Concluding, he deplored the inability of the poor to strike back because they have been stripped of their weapons, and showed Mussolini's unfairness in forcing a nine-hour day upon the laborers.

In refutation of this, McKean, the last regular Williams speaker, pointed out that the dictator's suppression was necessary to prevent civil war, and that such reports of suppression that reach beyond Italy are grossly exaggerated. His chief contentions were that Mussolini has coordinated state and local taxes, established an inheritance tax, abolished a special war tax, established a new budget system, largely through the stabilization of the lira, removed industrial unrest, and reduced all burdensome taxes. Dudley, of Wesleyan, gave the last regular speech, stressing the Italian dictator's policy towards other countries, which the speaker termed as one of "dangerous imperialism and expansion, not one merely of antagonizing people, but one of disregarding treaties." This, coupled with deceit and bribery, makes Italy "the danger-spot of the world, stirs up international hatred, and disrupts national peace." Harris handled the rebuttal for Williams, defending Mussolini's suppression of opposition as necessary. He questioned the negative's assertion concerning Italian prosperity, and concluded the debate by quoting Mussolini: "I am a dictator, but I am temporary, looking for representation. I am trying to get people into order and if I do this, then I will have fulfilled my task."

SCHOTT TO COMPETE IN COLLEGIATE SWIM

Eastern Champion and Holder of Breast Stroke Mark Enters Olympic Try-Outs

Friday, March 30—Fresh from his spectacular record-smashing swim last weekend, Walter R. Schott, '29, captain-elect of the swimming team, will return to Philadelphia today and attempt to secure the National Collegiate title in the 200-yard breast stroke. Last week he took part in the meet of the Eastern Intercollegiate Swimming Association, also held in the pool at the University of Pennsylvania, winning the event and eclipsing the record he established last year by 1.8 seconds.

Besides having to face the best talent of the entire country, rather than of just the East, Schott will encounter many others, including freshmen, who would not ordinarily be eligible except for the fact that this year the meet is in the nature of a preliminary Olympic try-out. The individual winner of each event is automatically given the title of national intercollegiate champion in that particular event. The Williams are in a good chance of securing both the title and the national record, in spite of the fact that he will be pitted against Wagner of Michigan and Catts the California star in addition to the swimmers he defeated last Saturday.

This meet has naturally assumed much greater importance than usual because of the coming Olympic games. Those who acquire the individual championships in it are of course considered the cream of American swimmers, at least as far as the collegiate world is concerned, and have a fair chance of securing a position on the Olympic team. It would be impossible to predict Schott's chances of representing Williams and the United States at Antwerp this summer, but if he succeeds in reproducing his performance of last week he will be a strong candidate for the team.

On the basis of known times it seems that Wagner is the most dangerous opponent of the Purple star. However, as his best time in competition is only slightly better than 2:41, and was made in a short pool at that, Schott should be able to overcome him, always barring, of course, any "breaks".

HILLYER SPEAKS AT BOOKSTORE OPENING

Poet-Professor Says Cadence and Vivid Imagery Are the Goals of Modern Verse

"Splendor, 'magnificence', and 'beauty' are good words, but they don't say much," said Professor Robert Hillyer of Trinity College, who is attaining prominence among the younger poets of this country as indicated by the fact that he has been called to Harvard to carry on his work, by way of preface to his reading of his own impressionistic verse before a group of Faculty and students at the opening of the new Wilton Ratcliffe-Graff bookstore last Wednesday afternoon.

Consequently, Professor Hillyer held up three goals for modern poetic endeavor: the presentation of a series of vivid images to take the place of broad generalities expressed in words alone; the emulation of Emily Dickinson in the use of everyday appearances to interpret "eternal verities"; and the revival of the time element, which has been lost to English verse from Tennyson to Kipling. In contrast with the drumlike measures of Gunga Din, he read some of his own attempts at the introduction of the moods of some of the well known musical classics into the meter of the poetic line, in order to emphasize the possibilities of the cadence verse.

"Modern poets have learned something in the way of simplicity of thought and expression from the Chinese translations, and in the same way they could learn an entirely new metaphorical system from the literature of ancient Egypt," declared the speaker, who continually pointed out that the work of the poet of the present day is to revive the best elements of the traditional forms. His own work varied from rather transcendental impressions of a Welsh castle to the more prosaic reminiscences of an old cow.

The new bookstore, being decorated as it is with its fireplace, bookcases, and beams, more in the fashion of a library than a commercial establishment, offered a singular

Prof. Pratt Addresses Frosh Discussion Group

That Christianity is a living thing and as such will adapt itself to changing conditions was Professor Pratt's reply to a question asked him at a meeting of the Freshman Discussion Group last Tuesday evening in Jesup Hall. He went on to explain that Christianity is neither the teachings of Jesus or the teachings about Jesus nor yet a combination of the two, as some people believe, but a stream of spiritual thought flowing down through the ages.

The discussion being extended into the field of morals he stated that the moral code must not be founded upon either precedent or custom but upon expediency. The modern idea of companionate marriage, if taken in its highest sense is entirely compatible with the Christian religion inasmuch as it will relieve to a considerable degree the suffering caused by the marriage of persons ill-suited for each other.

C. H. GRAY SPEAKS ON CONTEMPORARY VERSE

Tuesday Lecturer Says the Trend Is Now Away from Idealism Toward Irony

"Quality in poetry is based on its ability to satisfy our spiritual nature and not necessarily our craving for truth and philosophy," said C. Harold Gray of Bowdoin College in this week's Tuesday Lecture in the Thompson Memorial Laboratory, in answer to his question, "Has American contemporary poetry any significance?" The speaker illustrated his belief that the modern trend is toward irony and not idealism with representative poems by Stephen Crane, T. S. Eliott, Robinson Jeffers, and Edward Robinson.

Professor Gray first divided all forms of poetry into two classes; those which confirm our old ideas, and those which oppose them, pointing out that the division into classes will be different for different people. The effect of poetry on the individual can never be definitely known, since there are no accurate means of describing the feeling inspired in this way. "Thus it is futile to try to catch the spirit of poetry in the past or to attempt to forecast it in the future, and the question must be decided for the present as a personal matter." The speaker then proceeded to discuss at some length the four poets who express beauty and are significant, according to his standards.

Stephen Crane was described as a modern poet who succeeds principally in demonstrating the weaknesses of man in his struggle for existence, the example offered to confirm this statement being Broke Riders. Edwin Arlington Robinson, "the poet of futility" was the second writer mentioned in this group, and The Poor Relation was cited as an illustration of the thoughtful, frank analysis of life's difficulties typical of him. The other two ironical poets discussed were Robinson Jeffers and T. S. Eliott, famous respectively for Continents End and The Waste Land, who stressed the failure of man to overcome nature and the social conditions created by him.

Professor Gray finds one modern poet, Robert Frost, who relieves our fears of "the awful powers of a vast physical universe and the feebleness of mankind in the face of them". Frost, by his friendliness and neighborliness towards Nature, "satisfies our craving for some arrangement of the confusing details of life."

Olivet College Benefit to Take Place Tonight

Friday, March 30—Oliver Twist, a dramatization of the novel by Charles Dickens, will be presented in Chapin Hall this evening at 8 p. m. The performance, which is being staged under the direction of Assistant Professor Volney H. Wells, will be for the benefit of Olivet College, which is now conducting a nation-wide campaign for the increase of its endowment fund.

Wives of three members of the College Faculty and seven undergraduates are included in the cast of the play, from which a number of minor characters have been eliminated in order to shorten the performance. The part of Oliver Twist will be taken by Miss Muriel Healey.

The following freshmen have entered the competition for Assistant Stage Manager and Assistant Electrician of Cap and Bells: Alheim, Harmon, Hangan, Merrill, Olmstead and Van Zandt '31.

150 ENTERTAINED AT BIG BROTHER BANQUET

Humorous Presentations and Music by 'Pirates' Aid in Making Affair Success

With an attendance of nearly 150 boys the Williamstown Boys' Club held their annual Big Brother banquet last Tuesday night in the Currier Hall dining room which was put at their disposal by the Commons Club. Skipper '28 represented the W. C. A. as chairman, and speeches and entertainments helped to make the affair a success in every way, although there were not as many big brothers as had been expected.

Breaking away from the old custom, only College and club speakers addressed the gathering. Kepner '28 welcomed the big brothers and the boys, and Sterling '28 spoke briefly on the advantages and opportunities open to the college student. "Bud" Rondeau of Blackington talked on behalf of the senior members of the clubs, while "Whip" Perry fulfilled a like office for the younger boys.

Following the usual procedure the Purple Pirates played during dinner. Additional entertainment was provided by Fournier '28 and Van der Bogert '30, the former rendering a humorous skit describing a baseball game in Canuck dialect and costume, and the latter Scotch impersonations, including in his program Sir Harry Lauder's songs, Doughie the Baker, The Weirin' o' the Kilts, and Tobermory. After the last offering the banquet concluded with the singing of The Mountains.

Dr. W. A. Brown Delivers Second Address Tonight

Friday, March 30—Dr. William Adams Brown, Professor of Systematic Theology at the Union Theological Seminary, who lectured last night under the auspices of the Williams Christian Association on the subject "Can Christianity Change Civilization?", will again address the College in Jesup Hall tonight at 7.30 on "Living Issues in Contemporary Religion." Besides delivering these two lectures, Dr. Brown has consented to be "available" for informal conferences which he will conduct until his departure this Saturday noon.

Dr. Brown has probably had as varied a religious career as any theologian of the present day. During the war he was chairman of the Committee on the War and the Religious Outlook and has since served on various foreign church committees. He is at present chairman of the Educational Policy of Yale University, having already received the degrees of Doctor of Philosophy and Doctor of Divinity from that institution. In religion Dr. Brown represents the intellectual, practical, and devotional aspects, and because of his work in these fields is known as one of America's greatest theologians.

COUNT SFORZA WILL TALK ON DEMOCRACY

Famous Italian Statesman, Chief Speaker at Institute, Is To Address 'Forum'

Count Carlo Sforza, the eminent Italian statesman who was the principal speaker at the last session of the Institute of Politics, will lecture in Jesup Hall auditorium on Sunday, April 1, at 3.30 p. m. His lecture, which is given under the auspices of the Forum, will be on the subject of "The Crisis of Democracy", a subject on which Count Sforza is very well qualified to speak.

Last summer Count Sforza gave the principal course of six lectures in Chapin Hall attended by the general public as well as the Institute members on the subject of "Diplomatic Europe since the Treaty of Versailles." He has a reputation as an unusually clear and original thinker, and has had a wide experience in diplomatic circles as well as holding several positions of trust in the Italian government.

During the Giolitti administration in Italy Count Sforza held the portfolio of Foreign Affairs, and in 1922 he was Italian Ambassador to Paris. Before the war he was Minister Plenipotentiary at Peking, High Commissioner at Constantinople, and Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs at Rome.

Although he has at times been the object of hostile Fascist demonstrations, and his Rome residence is reported to be one of the hundreds belonging to oppositionists destroyed by Fascists enraged by Zamboni's attempt on the life of Mussolini, Count Sforza has tried to maintain an attitude of being neither pro nor anti-Mussolini. His opinions on this subject, however, will undoubtedly be both interesting and well thought out.

During his services as Minister to China Count Sforza was instrumental in saving the lives of many Italian and American missionaries when the revolution which overthrew the empire took place. He is famous for the Peace of Rapallo with the Jugo-Slavs which was concluded while he was Minister of Foreign Affairs. Count Sforza, who is a scion of the house which was very powerful during the Middle Ages, is the recipient of numerous honors, among them the collar of the Annunziata which carries with it the title of Count of the King.

Red Cross Tests Nearly Over

Under the supervision of Coach Graham and H. Q. Middendorf '28, senior examiner, a group of nearly twenty men has been taking for the past week and a half, the Senior Red Cross Life Saving Examination. All but two of the tests have already been given. When these tests have been passed, the candidate must write a 200 word essay upon the use of "Resuscitation" in life saving work. Those who pass the examination become senior Red Cross life-savers, and thus are enabled to secure positions as counselors in summer camps or as guards at public beaches.

C. V. Covell '30 has been pledged to the Delphi Phi fraternity.

SKINNER TAKES FIRST IN LEHMAN CUP MEET

Lane Wins 440 To Tie for Second with Gailer; Little Is Third, One Point Behind

Taking first in both the high and low hurdles, second in the half mile, third in the 100-yd. dash, and also tying for second in the high jump, Skinner '30 scored 30 points to win the twenty-ninth annual Lehman Cup meet, which was completed on the board track Wednesday afternoon with the second 50-yd. dash and the finals of the quarter mile. After upsetting predictions to lead the field in the latter event, Lane '29 gained 10 points to tie with Gailer '29 for runner-up with 22½ points apiece, while Little '29 took fourth place, one point behind.

The mile run and the potato race were held on Wednesday afternoon. After trailing Moore '29 for the majority of the distance in the former, Chapman '30 passed him on the last lap to win the mile without being hard pressed. Macfarland '28 came in third, while the last two places went to Memmott '28 and Lane '29. In the potato race there were several falls, which put some of the contestants far behind. Three freshmen, Dougherty, Eynon, and Meier, were the most versatile, and finished the final heat in that order.

In the events held on Wednesday, Beals '29 repeated his performance of the preceding week to win the second 50-yd. dash from Anderson by a comfortable margin. Gailer '29 was third, three feet behind, Lane finishing fourth. Strother '30 drew the pole in the 110 and led the field for the first lap, when Lane moved up, on even terms with him. With these two running practically even on the last

BOWKER MEET WILL START NEXT MONDAY

Annual Swimming Contest Is Open To All Classes; Seven Events Listed in Meet

Beginning with trials in the 50 and 100 yard dashes and possibly the 150-yard backstroke on Monday afternoon, the annual Bowker Swimming Meet will take place in the Lasell gymnasium pool during the first five days of next week. Entrance in this meet is open to all members of the college with the exception of those who have won a letter in swimming or have won the meet in a previous year.

The winner of this meet will have his name inscribed on the Bowker Swimming Trophy besides receiving a medal. Ordinarily this contest is held at the beginning of the swimming season in order to bring out any good all-around swimmers, but the delay in finishing the pool forced a postponement. Entries in the seven events which are the 50-yard dash, 100-yard dash, 440-yard swim, 150-yard backstroke, 200-yard breaststroke, 300-yard medley, and diving, must be in the hands of Mr. Graham this week.

In 1925 and 1926 the meets were won by freshmen, Butcher '28, captain of this year's swimming team, winning it in his Freshman year, and Schott '29, captain-elect of the swimming team winning it in 1926. Last year Dougherty '29 and Healy '29 tied for first place. According to Coach Graham, the foremost possibilities of winners of this year's contest are Burgess '30, Birnie '31, and Goodbody '31.

THE IVORY INDUSTRY

Once more the newspapers are becoming heavy with picturesque baseball slang, as the great army of fans, comprising an incalculable portion of our population, faithfully follows the glamorous movements of the big leaguers down South. Inveterate dopesters, back at their statistical speculations, are laying campaigns in preparation for that momentous day when distinguished arms throughout the land will toss virgin balls from grandstand to diamond to signify that the season is officially opened. And then for about five months Mr. Ruth will pound out his home runs, while the whole universe urges him to break his record. But this is in professional circles; in colleges it is different.

At Williams, for instance, the "Ivory Industry" has been in a sad state of depression for several years, and shows little sign of rising again. Of course the team has been holding regular practice for several days, and soon it will even go South (to New Jersey) to limber up for the opening game. But our general attitude toward the sport, as an intercollegiate pastime, is either scornfully or lazily indifferent. It may please us, however, to know that this attitude is by no means peculiar to Williams. W. O. McGeehan, writing in his "Down the Line" column in the Herald Tribune, assures us that "The collegians' interest in the national pastime has been declining steadily, and in some of the larger colleges intercollegiate baseball has been abandoned and in others serious consideration has been given to the proposal that it be abandoned." Mr. McGeehan explains this distressing decline by the fact that "the youth of today is taking to caddying, golfing, tennis and other means of finding an outlet for superfluous energy." This modern trend in spring athletics is not necessarily deplorable (except, of course, from the viewpoint of the professional baseball magnate, who depends so largely upon collegiate fodder for his nourishment), but if baseball, as an intercollegiate sport, has any value per se, we should be quick to respond to its distress signal.

It was evidently with the conviction that intercollegiate baseball is desirable but that it should be put in a new bottle that Williams and Wesleyan have decided to try the unique experiment of barring the coach from the player's bench when they meet on the diamond this season. This is a radical plan, and already many theoretical arguments have been brought forward to show that it is also a bad one. But we should not allow ourselves to become too excited about it. After all, it is no more than an experiment between friends, and if it fails it will die a natural death. If it succeeds, other sports will probably undergo a similar operation until all our athletics have become thoroughly home-made.

It may be that barring the coach from his own games will eventually develop the initiative of the players, but there will still remain the question of whether it is better to have peppy teams that play raggedly or apathetic teams that play intelligently. We feel that it is rather unfortunate that this experiment had to be made in baseball, and we hardly blame Amherst from declining to participate. It is difficult to see how interest will be made keener in the sport by removing the coach at a time when his services are most necessary. For the beauty of baseball lies just as much in technical maneuvers and expert generalship as in home runs and double plays.

But the experiment deserves a fair trial. It will be watched with interest not only by members of the "Little Three" but by many other colleges that happen to be in search of better sports. In the meantime we wish the baseball team every success in the coming season, and hope that before long some scheme will be evolved whereby the Ivory Industry can recover some of its former popularity without too great a sacrifice of fine points.

ALUMNI TRAPPED IN EUROPE DURING WAR

Mobilization in 1914 Finds Student Vacationists Being Detained As Enemies

(Taken from THE RECORD Sept. 24, 1914)

Caught in Europe at the outbreak of the recent World War, members of Williams College in 1914 met with many interesting and unusual incidents while they were attempting to make their way back to a neutral country and eventually to the United States. Many of them spent more than one night and day without food, some slept in crowded black holes of railway coaches, and some marched like martyrs to prison cells before the hooting mobs of blood-crazed nations.

"Dave" Moffat spent a very uncomfortable afternoon in a German railway station trying to rock a baby to sleep, help two old ladies recover their lost baggage, and at the same time convince the German officers that he was of a neutral nation. He was accompanied by Hale and H. D. Jones '14, and Spring '15, all of whom spoke no German, but knew a little Dutch, and the entire quartet was detained for three days. When they were finally released, it took 40 hours in crowded coaches to make a 12 hour trip to England.

"Hank" Pratt and Jack Johnston, while spending a peaceful afternoon in Germany suddenly awoke to find themselves in the midst of a war. Due to the appearance of Johnston they were suspected of being Russian spies. Guards surrounded them and with cries of "Gehen Sie Langsam" they were marched at the point of bayonets to the nearest station. When asked for an explanation, they were hindered from reaching to their pockets for passports, since the guards feared that they would suddenly produce a bomb and blow the station house to pieces. Only after an officer of the Uhlans had been secured were they searched. The fate of the two students seemed to be settled when a fountain pen owned by Johnston was taken to be a dangerous weapon. After a long conversation carried on by signs the boys were allowed to produce their passports and prove their innocence. In the meantime a mob had assembled and was demanding a hanging, but an official explained matters and Pratt and Johnston were allowed to proceed to London where they boarded a ship for New York.

Ladd and Adriance, in spite of German courses at College, were unable to make themselves understood when arrested at Budapest. With cries of "Paril Paril!" and violent signs they tried to show their desire to reach Paris and take the first boat home. Ernst, who had started a walking tour, apparently was not bothered by the declaration of war and continued to saunter here and there to his heart's content, until Italian officers in Italy "deported" him and even furnished part of the necessary funds. Davis, Rising, and Townsend '14, were cruising along the Rhine when the boat, which had been built to hold only 30, was suddenly swarmed with 200 people seeking to leave the country.

Temple, on returning to College a few weeks late for the fall term, told of seeing

Wellesley Professor to Speak Before 'Phil Union'

Professor Mary Whiton Calkins of the philosophy department of Wellesley College, an authority of national reputation in the field of philosophy and psychology, and the authoress of a number of books on such subjects, is to deliver an address on "The Personal Absolute" next Monday evening at 8.00 in Griffin Hall. Following the address, which is to be given under the auspices of the Philosophical Union, there will be the usual informal discussion.

Some idea of the position occupied by Professor Calkins in the realm of philosophy is gained from the fact that she is the only person ever to have held the presidency of both the American Philosophical Society and the American Psychological Association. Miss Calkins is a graduate of Smith College and has been granted an L.L.D. degree by that institution, but she has done practically all of her teaching and writing as professor of philosophy at Wellesley.

A few of her books are: Introduction to Psychology, The Persistent Problems of Philosophy, A First Book in Psychology, and The Good Man and the Good. In addition to these she is the authoress of valuable monographs and papers on psychological and philosophical subjects.

the Kaiser on his private yacht in Bolholm, Norway, prior to the departure of the yacht for Germany. In attempting to leave the North, Temple was forced to sail from Sweden in a British boat. All the passengers were made to stay below while in the English Channel because the authorities feared that some of them would make a mental map of the system of mines which were laid to form a blockade on Germany.

Booth '14, was reported lost from the party with which he started and no news had been received as to his whereabouts for several weeks. Wellington '13, provided the College as well as the newspapers of the country with a bit of news when he was arrested at Posen and forced to spend two nights living on nothing but bread and water and sleeping in a dungeon of the medieval type. The authorities of Posen arrested him for taking pictures with a camera and accused him of "shooting" the townspeople. All students abroad during the summer of 1914 were forced to undergo delay and crowded conditions on the return passage and many were unable to reach this country in time for the opening of College.

in Cunard Comfort

Go the economical way with adventurers of your own age—people who are determined that they will see,
and get all the advantages of having seen, Europe but who want to save their money to spend while traveling there and who enjoy a trip on the ocean for its own sake.

Do you realize how very inexpensively this can be done on big Cunard ships
such as the CARONIA, CAR-
MANIA, SCYTHIA, LACONIA,
LANCASTRIA, and TUSCANIA?
You are berthed in a comfortable, clean cabin, you have good food, nicely served, with ample deck space and you enjoy the company of your own kind
of people... because they are others like you who feel the adventurous call of traveling Tourist Third Cabin.
You will dance on moonlit
decks to the rhythm of a college orchestra no feet have yet resisted. You will swim in salt water in an improved deck tank. You'll play the delightful deck games that youth-on-a-lark devises. And there'll be bridge,--and conversation;
--and sometimes lost sleep! But of course you have your choice between missing sleep and fun.

NEW 'COW' TO APPEAR

Final Issue of Retiring Board To Be Travel Number

Appearing in the form of a much-labeled suitcase, the Travel Number of the Purple Cow, containing one or two travel diaries and articles on customs and journeys in various countries along with tips to prospective travelers, will be ready for distribution this evening or Monday. The cover for this March number of the Cow, which is the last to be published under the direction of the retiring Senior board, was drawn by Shepler '28, while Heller '28 and Baxter '30 aided him with the rest of the art work. Baxter '30, and R. Dunn, Pearl, and Woodruff '31 were the chief contributors of articles and jokes.

Gargoyle Alumni Meets

The eighth annual dinner of the Gar-goyle Alumni Association was held last Monday evening, March 26, at the Williams Club. Speeches were made by Henry R. Johnston '09, James P. Baxter, 111, '14, assistant professor of History at Harvard University, and George Dykeman Sterling, president of the undergraduate association. William O. Wyckoff, Jr. '14, president of the alumni association presented the mid-winter report of the various activities of the organization.

Shepler Wins Art Prize

Dwight C. Shepler '28, who has served as Art Editor for the Purple Cow during the past year, has been awarded a prize of special equipment for submitting the best drawing in black and white in a recent art contest for undergraduate artists sponsored by College Humor. More than 10,000 drawings were submitted by 1600 artists, and each drawing was criticized by a board of judges composed of such internationally known illustrators as James Montgomery
Flagg, Arthur William Brown, and Garr
Williams.

Six To Speak In Declamation

Six speakers will compete in the finals of the annual Freshman Declamation contest taking place in Chapin Hall on Tuesday afternoon, April 3, at 5 p. m. before the final mass-meeting of Public Speaking I, it was decided after trials held early this week. The speakers adjudged the best of the contestants by Mr. Bushnell, Mc-Kean and Robinson '29, were East, Lucas, Ogden, Pulsifer, H. B. Spencer, and Wheeler '31.

Faculty Association Meets

Professor T. C. Smith, of the History Department, led the Williams College Professors' Association in an informal discussion of the general topic of "Honors Work" last Wednesday evening in Griffin Hall. This discussion was one of a series of similar talks on general educational topics which are being held this spring by the College Faculty.

Erratum

In the issue of March 27 the article on the Bennington County Older Boys' Convention stated that the members of the convention were entertained by a special concert of several Musical Club units.
The statement should have been that the entertainment was given by members of the Deputations Committee of the W. C. A.

Postal Regulation

G. B. Waterman, Postmaster at Wil-

Varsity Practices Outdoors

Varsity baseball practice was held outdoors for the first time last Tuesday, when a five inning game was played on the High School field. With Captain Smith '28 and Singmaster '29 pitching, the regulars defeated the second team, which used Amerling and Sherman '30 on the mound, by the score of 5 to 3. The game was made very slow by the soggy condition of the field, and on Wednesday batting practice was resumed in the Cage.

An all-New England basketball team, selected by letter by 27 coaches, has placed Betham, '29, at forward on the second team, and given Sterling '28, honorable mention. This honor is enhanced by the fact that Betham was the only "little three" player chosen with the single exception of Navia, of Amherst.

Bible Exam Date Announced

Bible examinations for freshmen and sophomores will be held in Hopkins hall for freshmen and Griffin hall for sophomores Thursday, April 5, at 9 o'clock.
The examination will cover the geography of Palestine, the life and teachings of

TALK ON DEMOCRACY DELIVERED BY SFORZA

Democratic Government Said by Forum Lecturer To Excel
All Other Forms

"Democracy sees the future course of events better than a monarchy but often fails in present crises and is for that reason taken to be very bad diplomatically," stated Count Carlo Sforza, eminent Italian statesman and diplomat in his lecture, "The Crises of Democracy", delivered under the auspices of the Williams Forum last Sunday afternoon in Jesup Hall. Count Sforza, who delivered a series of lectures on this subject last summer at the Institute of Politics, in spite of the fact that he has at times been the object of hostile Fascist demonstrations, gave no indication whatever that he was strongly in favor of either a democracy or a dictatorship as far as Italy is concerned.

After being introduced by Gaskill, '28, Count Sforza plunged immediately into the subject at hand and stated that he would attack the problem from a scientific point of view, dealing especially with politics, since "there is nothing in the world which is not political". "Crises" he said, "comes only when a way is prepared for them by a literary movement. Thus we will be able to determine the approximate time of a democratic crisis, if it should come." In dealing with the charge that Russian democracy had failed to establish itself, he said that Russia did not have today nor has ever had a democracy. "It is today a police régime, the same as it has been for many years." "In fact," he said, "if Russia should ever establish a democracy, it would be a blessing for Europe."

In proving his point that a democratic nation generally sees further into the future of affairs, Count Sforza gave as examples the reign of Bismarck in Germany. Apparently the great German statesman thought he had established a lasting empire, but modern democratic Germany is bound to be more permanent in the opinion of the world's best statesmen. "The moral life is all," he said. "A mere material expression of force means nothing. The difference between the diplomat and the statesman is that the diplomat is only looking for immediate success, while the statesman is looking for lasting success." He went on to show that many Germans left their country following the unity made by Bismarck because they preferred their freedom. "Bismarck was a diplomat, not a statesman."

"Many fair-minded people," Count Sforza went on to say, "insist that a demo-

Foul Shooting Contest Will Be Held This Week

Concluding the winter schedule of intramural athletics, the annual basketball free throwing contest will be held this week in Lassell Gymnasium, starting tomorrow and ending Thursday. The number of entrants from each house is unlimited, but the winner of the contest will be determined by taking the combined total of the five best individual scores of each team, the scoring being counted on the basis of 25 shots for every entrant.

According to the interfraternity rules, members of the Varsity and Freshman basketball squads are ineligible to compete, and the winning house will receive 15 points toward the Interfraternity Trophy of Trophies. The contest was won last year by Theta Delta Chi, the high score being Foster '28, who is still in College. Following the free throwing competition, the spring schedule, which consists of a baseball series, a track meet, and golf and tennis tournaments, will begin.

W. A. BROWN LECTURES ON CHRISTIAN RELIGION

Theologian Feels Progress Made in International Unification of Churches

"Progress toward church unity in the last thirty years has been amazing and strengthens our conviction that ultimate union will be possible and will triumph over petty denomination, which now occupies the churches," stated Dr. Williams Adams Brown, Professor of Systematic Theology at the Union Theological Seminary, who addressed the College last Thursday and Friday evenings in Jesup Hall. In his first lecture on "Can Christianity Change Civilization?" Dr. Brown asserted that to divorce religion from secularism would mean disaster, adding that religion should effect a universal attitude of international trust, while in his second address, on "Living Issues in Contemporary Religion," he spoke with decided optimism of the recent efforts to unify the churches and outlined the progress that had been made.

"Today men see that if they are to retain religion, they must organize to make it more effective in social relations, in economic relations, and in international relations," declared Dr. Brown. In regard to this, he pointed out the fact that the existence of many denominations within the Christian religion prevents unity, but that present conditions are much better than those of a few years ago, when there

DICKENS' 'OLIVER TWIST' NOT SUCCESSFUL PLAY

Production for Benefit of Olivet College Reviewed by Critic

(Courtesy of Asst. Prof. J. H. Roberts)

The dramatization of a novel is always a risky business. In most cases the structure that gives the novel breadth and inclusiveness is too tough and unwieldy for the theater, more sharpened medium of the stage. A novel may, indeed, be dramatic, but it is usually so in terms ill suited to the theater. The more diversified the interests in the novel, the more danger there is in attempting to transfer these matters from the arm chair to the footlights. The works of Charles Dickens, in spite of the fact that their author was a devotee of amateur theatricals, demand the leisure of the open fire on a winter's night and chafe against the exactions of unity and coherence. Dickens worked with a prodigious hand; he delighted in a complexity of cross currents, in long lists of characters

PROF. CALKINS WILL ADDRESS PHIL UNION

'The Personal Absolute' Is Subject of Speech To Be Given by Noted Teacher

Monday, April 2.—Choosing as her subject, "The Personal Absolute", Professor Mary Whiton Calkins, of the Department of Philosophy, of Wellesley College, an authority of national and international reputation in the realm of psychology and philosophy, and the authoress of many books, will address the Philosophical Union tonight at 8.00 p. m. in Griffin Hall. Following the address there will be the usual discussion.

Some idea of the position occupied by Professor Calkins is gained from the fact that she is the only person ever to have held the presidency of both the American Philosophical Society and the American Psychological Association. Although Miss Calkins is a graduate of Smith College and has been awarded an LL.D. degree by that institution, she has done practically all of her teaching and writing of philosophy at Wellesley.

A few of her books are: Introduction to Psychology, The Persistent Problems of Philosophy, A First Book in Psychology, and The Good Man and the Good. In addition she is the authoress of valuable monographs and papers on psychological and philosophical subjects.

Executive Council Will Take Charge of W. C. A.

Following the retirement of the senior members of the Williams Christian Association Boys' Work Committee, consisting of Kepner, chairman, Dunning, athletic director, Cornelson, club house director, and Saunders, rifle director, a recently organized executive council will take charge of all the functions of these individual directors after Easter. Van der Bogert, '30, was recently elected vice-chairman of this new executive council, which is composed of French, chairman, Wells, secretary, and Arthur and McNeil, '29; he will automatically hold the leading position next year. Plans are at present being made for the incorporation of two new boys' clubs at Braytonville and Pownall, thus increasing the total number to six.

W. C. A. Nominations Made

Nominations for officers of the Williams Christian Association for the year 1928-29 have been made as follows: President, L. D. Rohrbach '29; Vice-President, D. K. Strong '29; Corresponding Secretary, R. Ely '30; Recording Secretary, F. R. Thoms '30; Treasurer, R. H. Marshall '30; Asst. Treasurer, G. D. Welles '31.

CALENDAR

MONDAY, APRIL 2
8.00 p. m.—Phil Union. Prof. Mary W. Calkins, of Wellesley, will speak on "The Personal Absolute." Griffin Hall.

THURSDAY, APRIL 5
7.30 p. m.—Forum. Howard J. Keith will give a talk illustrated with motion pictures on television. Jesup Hall.

'LITTLE THEATRE' TO PRESENT TWO BILLS

Performances Will Be Given April 20 and May 11—Tryouts Held
This Afternoon

Three plays of a lighter nature than those of its last performance will be presented by the Williams "Little Theatre" at the Williamstown High School on Friday evening, April 20, for the benefit of the Massachusetts Teachers' Association. The recent try-outs revealed that seven freshmen, the greatest number of first year men to be chosen for a "Little Theatre" performance this year, will have parts in the bill, which will include "The Man in the Bowler Hat" by A. A. Milne, "The Eldest" by Edna Ferber, and "The Wonder Hat" by K. S. Goodman and Ben Hecht.

SCHOTT SETS NEW MARK IN 'NATIONAL'

Beats Wagner, of Michigan, by Ten Yards in 200-Yard Breast Stroke Finals

COVERS DISTANCE IN 2:39.7

Purple Star Fails by Half Second
To Equal Own I. C. S. A. Mark
But Gets Title

Leading his nearest opponent by a ten-yard margin, Walter R. Schott triumphed in the 200-yard breast stroke race in the National Collegiate Athletic Association meet at the University of Pennsylvania, at the same time clipping nine-tenths of a second from the N. C. A. A. record. By virtue of this latest victory, the Williams captain-elect now holds the championship and record for this event in the New England Intercollegiate, the Intercollegiate Swimming Association, and the National Collegiate. He failed by exactly half a second to equal his mark of 2:39.2 set in the I. C. S. A. meet last week, his time in the qualifying round being 2:41.6 and in the finals 2:39.7.

Although represented by only one man, Williams placed seventh in the meet which was won by Michigan with 37 points. Northwestern took second with a score of 22, while the other scoring was as follows: Brigham Young and Stanford, 10; Minnesota, 7; Princeton, 6; Williams, 5; Columbia, 3; Pennsylvania, 2; Rutgers, Oregon, and Springfield, 1 point apiece. New records were also set in the 200-yard relay, the 300-yard medley relay, and the 220 and 440-yard free style events.

The preliminary round for the 200-yard breast stroke was swum in three heats. The first heat was won by Wagner of Michigan in 2:46, with Purdy, Minnesota, second and McKenney, third. Schott made the fastest time in the qualifying round, winning the second heat in 2:41.6, with Thompson of Michigan and Uihlein, Princeton, trailing him. The third heat went to Lemox, of Northwestern, whose time was 2:44.9, with Nisselson, N. Y. U., second and Holbrook, Illinois, third. Thus Schott, Lemox, Thompson, Uihlein and Wagner were the qualifiers for the finals.

In the final race held last Saturday evening the Williams star led all the way from the starting gun. By the time he reached the finish he had increased his lead over Wagner, who took second, to ten yards. Third place went to Lemox. Schott's winning time of 2:39.7 shaved nine tenths of a second from the old mark of 2:40.6, which was established in 1925 by J. Farley of Minnesota.

Informal Personal Contact and Free Opportunities for Leadership Mark the League of Nations

"Germany would never have launched the World War if the League of Nations had been in existence in 1914," was the confident declaration made to a Record reporter by Dr. William Adams Brown, whose attendance at four assemblies and conferences of the League has kept him in close touch with the inner functioning of that body throughout its career. "German troops would not have crossed the Belgian border had she known it meant war with England; and, had Bethmann-Hollweg been mingling with the ministers of the Powers as Stressemann is in the League Council today, he would have known."

Thus, Dr. Brown bases his claims for the League not so much on its pacts and decisions as upon personal contacts, a sort of "cooperative education", and upon words passed in informal conversation. In 1914, as throughout all preceding diplomatic history, "the issue of war and peace depended on one man", in this case the opinion of one German ambassador as to whether England would fight. By way of contrast, in Geneva last summer 14 or 15 prime ministers talked together for three weeks.

In a conversation with Dr. Brown last year, Sir Eric Drummond, General Secretary of the League, commented a bit ironically on the failure to appreciate these informal accomplishments when he said that "the worst thing that could happen to the League would be to stop a war. There is no publicity in a war which doesn't come off." In contrast to such brilliant achievements as the stopping of actual fighting between Bulgaria and Greece, he mentioned the smoothing over behind the scenes of the difficulty between Poland and Lithuania, as the result of which the militaristic Pilsudski "went back home singing Te Deum."

This process by which "the mobilized best minds of the world are applied to the problems of peace" has also led to the discovery and recognition of leaders according to their individual abilities regardless of the power behind them. Formerly it took a minister of the Austrian Empire to be a Metetrnich, but now we find outstanding leadership in Benes, foreign minister of Czechoslovakia, and Fridtjof Nansen, envoy from Sweden. "Why?" asked Dr. Brown, "because they have the brains. How? Only because of the position they hold at the head of League committees. Otherwise these brains would be lost to the cause of peace."

This power in the hands of the small nations was thought by many to be the preeminent development of the last Assembly. Though Austen Chamberlain came to Geneva determined that the Protocol should not be revived, "it was soon apparent that the Great Powers were on the defensive against the small states representing public opinion and led by Nansen the Swede, who secured one by one the consideration of many of the Protocol provisions. Perhaps the greatest danger which threatens the League is that, as it grows in power, the larger nations will attempt to replace these natural leaders by their own tools."

Just as in one sense the worst thing that could happen to the League would be to stop a war, so the greatest setbacks to the cause of United States membership are

Mr. Graffin Barry of the 'Open Road' Describes Industrial Conditions Confronting Russia Today

"The ultimate problem in Russia is how the peasant can be induced to sell his grain," said Mr. Graffin Barry of the Open Road, widely experienced investigator of the present Soviet régime, to a Record reporter last Sunday. Mr. Barry went on to describe the conditions leading to the forced industrialization of Russia for the very purpose of developing manufactures which may be bartered with the peasants in exchange for the all-important produce of the "granary of Europe."

"Industrialization is thus the key-point to the success or failure of the Soviet system. The government is employing foreign experts, especially engineers, to direct operations with this end in view, and there are also many industrial training schools in the process of encouraging the native talent which is eventually to supersede the outsiders. Experts receive sometimes as much as 1000 rubles ($500) a month as wages, but a member of the Communist Party is forbidden to accept more than 250 rubles. Therefore, since the Communists are the ruling class, the high wage-earner is a type of social outcast, exactly the reverse of what is true in the United States.

"The methods employed by the Communists to carry out their program are very much analogous to those used by Mussolini, and the principle of laissez faire is overlooked equally in both Russia and Italy, but the Soviet régime has democracy as its ultimate goal, while Mussolini envisages no prospective return to that form of government. Another important difference is that the Russian dictatorship is self-procreating and not concentrated in the hands of one individual whose death may result in anarchy in spite of the frequent declarations made by the Fascists of the permanency of their organization. Both systems stress the subordination of the individual to the state.

"The Russian peasantry is so illiterate and ignorant that its ideas of Communism are completely modeled upon the pronouncements and statements made to it by Soviet leaders. It has only experienced two forms of government, Czarism and the present type; and so its choice is limited of necessity. The peasants are encouraged to work together by propaganda, and every village Soviet attempts to introduce Communist methods among them so far as possible. The village owns communally most of the farm machinery, which is let out to those using it, and thus cooperation among the peasants is practically assured. The Soviets are run by Tammany methods, and the press is rigidly regulated, and so the government is a true dictatorship, although a very involved one."

Upon being questioned as to whether there were any note of military aggressiveness in the Russian government, Mr. Barry said that the tone was rather one of defensive preparedness and fear of foreign powers. He scouted the idea of any attack by Russia on foreign powers in the immediate future, for, as he brought out, the Soviet Republic is very insufficiently supplied with money and munitions. He added that distrust of her immediate neighbors was an added incentive for Russia's growing attempt towards industrial self-sufficiency.

In conclusion Mr. Barry emphasized as the greatest danger facing Russia in the Williams does not turn out Benny Boyntons every year, and we are sometimes smiled at by our contemporaries for referring to his "shade" so often. But it is noteworthy that when the College fails to make history on the gridiron, it usually has something to be proud of in the so-called minor sports. By winning a national intercollegiate swimming title and by holding the record in his specialty, Walter Schott has given us a bona fide excuse to do a little harmless boasting. We congratulate him because of what he has done for the admirable sport of swimming at Williams, and because he has done it so well.

BOOKSTORE OF THE MONTH

Few of us realize that the opening of a new bookstore in the United States is an event which, because of its rarity, is tremendously important. We have become so accustomed to the phenomenal reproduction of tea shoppes, antique attics, and hot dog stands that a new place to buy books means little more to us than another wanton exhibition of some arty Bohemian.

The fact is, that the bookseller of today is still something of a missionary—especially when he ventures into the wilds of the R. F. D.; and it is only recently that his wares are beginning to find a steady market on Main Street. Some idea of the situation may be conveyed by this amazing statement in the March 7 issue of Outlook: "Publishers estimate that in the entire country there are less than 3,000 shops which can be called, even by the most liberal use of the term, bookstores. Of this number only 500 or so carry any appreciable number of current books." Open to contention perhaps, but alarming just the same. And according to recent investigations by the American Library Association we learn that 83 per cent of the rural population is without library facilities.

Of course the corner drug store has always carried its traditional quota of Harold Bell Wright, Zane Grey, Elinor Glynn, and intimate magazines, but the more sophisticated literature of the day, be it good or bad, never made much noise in that vast region commonly called the "rural districts". Here book buying was considered a luxury for the intellectual cities, or it was not considered at all. The market was not taken seriously by booksellers, and no one seemed to care particularly. Mr. McFadden saw to that.

There is evidence, however, that contemporary literature of the more polite sort is beginning to find its way to the crossroads. Crafty organizations like the Book-of-the-Month Club, and the Literary Guild of America, are gradually raising book buying to the enviable status of such well-established sports as the radio and the movie; and someday, perhaps, best-sellers will be consumed with the same relish in Dubuque as they are in New York. Of course Harold Bell Wright will never be ousted from his drug store window, but he may view with alarm the sudden trespassing of his territory by "upstarts" like John Erskine, Rosamond Lehmann, Will Durant, Van Loon, Ludwig, Willa Cather, Tomlinson, Wilder, and the rest. And we wonder how Eddie Guest felt about Edwin Arlington Robinson when the Literary Guild made his narrative poem, "Tristram," a best-seller in the open spaces!

Perhaps Williamstown has never been so far from Boston or New York that it can realize what this literary isolation means; for some reason we are never allowed to forget that under the rustic corduroy we are essentially city products. In spite of this fact, the opening of another bookstore here—making almost three now—may be regarded as another sign that book buying is becoming as matter of fact in the country as it is in the city. And if we are on the verge of a unique literary movement, by all means let the undergraduate find some way of helping it along.

Prominent Names Are on 1927 Obituary List

According to the annual Alumni Obituary Record which will be issued this week by the Graduate Secretary, 54 former students of Williams College have died during the past year, ranging in their class numerals over the period of three-quarters of a century from 1855 to 1930. Of this number 32 completed their work for the A.B. at Williams, and many had attained prominence by their writing or professional activities after graduation.

The list opens with the name of George T. Washburn of the class of 1855, who gave 40 years of his life to missionary work in the far east and was one of the oldest alumni of the College at the time of his death last March. The class of 1865 lost Dr. Francis Cuyler VanDyck, for 12 years the Dean of Rutgers. Charles J. Woodbury '66 was the last surviving personal disciple of Emerson, with whom he formed a close friendship during his days at Williams.

The class of 1884 suffered the heaviest losses, including Elbert F. Baldwin, author, journalist, and for 30 years European editor of The Outlook, and Howard J. Rogers, who had been honored by the governments of France, Italy, Japan, Germany, Sweden, Belgium, and Poland for his work in connection with the Red Cross. John H. Lotz '98, captain of the football team of 1907 and one of the best guards Williams has known, died in March of last year.

future the fact that the peasant class enormously outnumbered the industrial proletariat, a cause for considerable worry to the men in power, with the present intensive educational program for the peasantry in view. The remedy being sought for this is the increasing industrialization of the country, as pointed out above, and especially of the cities, so that a growing proletariat with communistic tendencies may be built up to maintain the status quo.

ALUMNI COLUMN

(The following excerpts were taken from issues of The Record published in 1907 and 1908).

Professor Milham states that the amount of snow that fell on Monday and Tuesday has already broken all records of the past twenty years for the month of April. The total fall during the two days was 11 inches, four inches on the first day and seven inches on the second.

A College record was broken at the gun club shoot last Wednesday, when L. P. Allen '08 registered a string of 27 consecutive "kills". Chapman '07 equalled the previous record of 26 successive kills.

The 1907 class pipes are being distributed at the manager's office in the gymnasium. The pipes are Surlburg's best and have the class numerals carved in the front of the bowl.

In violation of Section 4, Article III, of the rules governing class elections, the class of 1910 illegally elected a class supper committee yesterday afternoon.

At a meeting of the stewards of the various fraternities held in Hopkins Hall Monday evening, the question of a pure milk and cream supply was discussed at length, and plans are under way for the satisfactory solution of the problem, probably through the means of the common use of a model dairy.

A chess tournament with Amherst has been arranged for May 3 and 4. The Williams team is composed of Keith '07, Cady and Gutman '10. Each of the team will play three games with his respective opponent. The last chess tournament with Amherst, held in Williams-town in May 1905, resulted in a tie. This year the match will be played at Amherst.

Paragraph 33 of the College laws has been interpreted by the Faculty to forbid the passing and batting of a ball on the campus around Morgan Hall, Clark Hall, East College, Berkshire Hall, and West College. The space between West College and the laboratories is not included in the restrictions of this interpretation.

The baseball game between 1910 and Troy Academy was cancelled owing to the non-appearance of the Troy nine.

The student band which led the procession down to the field on Thursday was composed of Fowle, Sternberger, Yarnelle '07, Stover '08, Dealy, Merrill '10.

Immediately after the M. A. C. game on Saturday, a flag rush between the lower classes was held on Weston Field. A white flag, on which were the Sophomore numerals, was nailed to the flag-pole nine feet from the ground. The freshmen attacked the sophomores, who defended the flag, and twice a freshman arm touched the flag, and once the wind blew it just out of reach; but the sophomores successfully defended it for the required three and one-half minutes.

At a Faculty meeting held last Monday, the editor-in-chief of the Literary Monthly was granted the privilege of "bunched cuts".

While the canvass of the Freshman class is not yet complete, the Bible Study Committee reports that over 100 freshmen have signified their desire to join the Bible Study classes.

The soliciting of subscriptions for the Purple Cow periodical will be begun this week by the manager of that publication. Subscribers will be taxed $1.50 per year, and unless 200 subscriptions are secured, the Purple Cow board regret to announce that they will find it impracticable to continue the publication of the magazine.

Assistant Professor J. B. Pratt fell from his bicycle on Saturday night and sprained his knee. He will be unable to meet his classes until next Wednesday.

The first hare and hounds run of the season was held Friday afternoon. Cate '09 and Grannis '10 led at the finish and will be hares for the next run.

HOOVER WINS EASILY IN NATION-WIDE VOTE

39 Colleges and Universities Give Secretary Large Plurality;
Smith Second

Herbert Hoover and Gov. Al Smith of New York together polled more than three quarters of the total number of votes in the country-wide university ballot, results of which were announced yesterday by The Independent, a national weekly. The Secretary of Commerce alone, with 22,086 votes, was awarded almost half the undergraduate and faculty total in thirty-nine colleges and universities. Smith came in only a fair second with 13,534. Reed was runner-up to the Democratic leader, with Dawes and Lowden trailing Hoover in that order.

Of the 70 publications invited by The Independent to represent their colleges in conducting the poll, approximately 45 accepted. And of this number 39 have reported final results with the rest delayed because of vacations and examination periods. The ten men, five Democrats and five Republicans, chosen to appear on the ballots received in all 46,879 votes, while the total count for all the choices, including a score or more names not generally listed, approached 60,000. Among these the also runs were Will Rogers, Anne Semple McPherson, "Big Bill" Thompson of Chicago, Lindbergh, Norman Thomas, Senator Heflin of Alabama, President Butler of Columbia, and a college professor. Five women's colleges took part: Wellesley, Mt. Holyoke, Smith, Bryn Mawr, and Connecticut. In all these institutions Hoover was overwhelmingly the winner. A considerable number of votes were recorded for Borah, Hughes, and President Coolidge.

The result of the presidential vote at Williams was as follows: Hoover 326, Smith 95, Dawes 68, Ritchie 26, Lowden 25, Reed 4, Curtis and Walsh 2, and Donahy 1.

Dr. Wise Resigns From Important Zionist Post

Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, who recently spoke at Williams under the auspices of the Forum and the Williams Christian Association, announced his resignation last Thursday from the administrative committee of the Zionist Organization of America. The resignation, which was made without comment and came as a surprise to the officials of the organization, was accepted on Wednesday night by Louis Lipsky, the president.

Although he had not given intimation of his intention of resigning, Rabbi Wise has from time to time expressed his opposition to the Jewish agency represented by Dr. Chaim Weizmann, and criticized the attitude of the British government for lack of cooperation in the work in Palestine. In January, 1926, the organization voted not to accept Dr. Wise's resignation which followed protests of a sermon in which he said Jesus was not a myth but a man, and that Jews must embrace his teachings. Dr. Wise retains the chairmanship of the American Jewish Congress.

Freshman Orators Compete

Memorized declamations from famous writers and orators will feature the speeches of six freshmen who will compete for the Freshman Declamation Awards of $20 and $10 at the final exercises of Public Speaking 1 in Chapin Hall this afternoon at 5 p. m. The orations will take about five minutes each, and will be delivered without notes, in accordance with the rules of the contest. Professor Bushnell will preside at the meeting. The speakers and their topics are as follows: East, "In Defense of His Patriotism"—Demosthenes; Lucas, Dialogue from "Cyrano de Bergerac"—Edmund Rostand; Ogden, "Snobs"—Thackeray; Pulsifer, Mark Antony's Funeral Oration from "Julius Caesar"—Shakespeare; Spencer, "Vindication Speech"—Robert Emmet; Wheeler "Soliloquy in a Spanish Cloister"—Robert Browning.

SKILL

THE twist of the wrist, the "throw" of the arm, the shifting of the weight—these are among the many little points which make the skill that you admire in the javelin thrower as he hurls the shaft two hundred feet or more.

As on the track or the football field, in the gymnasium or on the water, so in industry progress is the result of fine improvements—a thousandth of an inch here—a minute variation in a curve there—slight changes foreseen by engineers and carried out by skilled workmen.

It is this attention to detail that is constantly improving General Electric apparatus and contributing to the electrical industry, which, though still young, is already a dominant force, increasing profit and promoting success in every walk of life.

Whether you find this monogram on an electric refrigerator for the home or on a 200,000-horsepower turbine-generator for a power station, you can be sure that it stands for skilled engineering and high manufacturing quality.

MICHIGAN SUGGESTS JUNIOR UNIVERSITY

Would Be an Effort To Put More System into Present Chaos
In Education

"In an effort to put some system into the educational chaos which too many entering students encounter" the University of Michigan has devised a plan which is outstanding among the attempts of colleges and universities of the country to remedy the patent evils of modern education,—the University College. Briefly the new plan would set the freshmen and sophomores apart from the rest of the college and give them sufficient training from a college viewpoint; so that they would be aided on their final entrance to the University.

The reorganization would differ from the ordinary "Junior" College in that it would be directed from a university standpoint and by university men, instead of from a high school or preparatory school standard. "Every effort would be made to instill a more effective appreciation of the whole field of knowledge before embarking upon more highly specialized subjects" in the third year. Obviously this plan is devised to give the freshmen and sophomores a chance to find out what education is before they determine their major. Close supervision and advice would safeguard the lower classes from indecision and the mis-steps so common in the modern university and college. The first two years, while not completely filled with required courses, are planned so that a general idea of a major may be obtained.

The plan also enables the University to determine what kind of material is fit for its courses. A comprehensive examination at the end of Sophomore year will be given, and the student will be advised then as to whether he shall continue in more specialized fields or discontinue his education. In this way it is planned to rid the universities and colleges of men who are not fit to continue, but are just merely "getting by". The university can then work far more effectively and efficiently with the undergraduate body. Supporters of the plan, both progressive and conservative educators, are agreed that the new system will prove to be a benefit not only to the student, but also to the college.

Annual Current Events Test to Come April 20

Following the precedent established several years ago, the annual Current Events Contest conducted by the New York Times, which was announced early in December in THE RECORD, will be held in Williamstown on Friday, April 20. The members of the local committee, Professors Buffington, Newhall, Remer, and Leigh, Chairman, and Assistant Professor Comer, will decide the winner of the Williams examination, which was won last year by Telford Taylor '28.

The winner of the local contest, which will be of three hours duration, will receive a $150 prize and the New York Times medal; the second best paper will receive a $75 prize and the third best paper in the Williamstown competition will receive a prize of $25. In addition, the winning paper at Williams will be submitted along with the winning papers of the other nineteen colleges and universities to a board of judges in competition for the $500 intercollegiate prize.

Professor Leigh has stated that it is the intention of the Williams committee, if three or more freshmen or sophomores enter the contest, to award one of the prizes to the underclassmen, while, at the same time, the committee reserves the right to withhold any of the local prizes in case the papers submitted are not of sufficiently high quality to merit a reward.

The examination itself will deal with the events of interest occurring in the news of the period beginning with May 1, 1927 and ending approximately at the time of the examination. The winner of last year's intercollegiate contest, the results of which are posted in Griffin Hall, Room 5, was Darragh De Laney, of Princeton, Chairman of the Princeton board.

Organ Recital

Since he was compelled to cancel last week's organ recital, Mr. Safford will present in Chapin Hall at 4.15 p. m., Wednesday afternoon the program originally planned for last week. The program, which is given over entirely to the works of Beethoven, is as follows:

- I. Overture Leonore No. 3
- II. a. Larghetto, 2nd Symphony
b. Allegretto, 8th Symphony
c. Scherzo, 3rd Symphony
- III. Adagio Quartette in F
- IV. Scherzo and Finale, 5th Symphony

TRAVELING IN RUSSIA DESCRIBED BY BARRY

Ex-Aid to American Ambassador Paints Sanguine Picture of Soviet Regime

"Once one gets into Russia it is very much like any other country," said Mr. Grallin Barry, former special aide to the American ambassador during the early days of the first Russian revolution, and at present a representative of the Open Road and leader of the latter's proposed summer expedition to the Soviet republic. Mr. Barry spent almost an hour last Sunday morning in the Jesup Hall reading room outlining to a group of students headed by Professor Remer the particulars of a similar trip last year and discussing with them its chief points of interest.

"Official Russia," Mr. Barry said, "is much more candid and direct than its Washington counterpart, and the population as a whole has an insatiable curiosity about foreigners. One is continually beset with questions as to how much one's clothes cost, how many automobiles one has at home, etc., and the people seem to be particularly intrigued by fountain pens. Silk is at a premium because Russia is practically devoid of it, but linen is remarkably cheap and good, and there is usually no restriction upon what is taken in or out of the country. No pictures are contraband, but it goes without saying that it is not a good idea to get into the habit of 'shooting' bridges and warships.

"Foreigners are permitted to speak freely, but of course it would be unwise to collect a crowd on a street-corner and lecture them on the evils of the Soviet government. Moscow is much more the capital of Russia than Washington of the United States, industrially, socially, and politically. The two cities of Moscow and Leningrad are the whole thing. Moscow is the only place where there is anything like a foreign atmosphere, and hundreds of foreigners collect there in the summer. Leningrad is now chiefly a museum town with gorgeous galleries and the carefully preserved palaces of the Czar. The town is but half populated and is chiefly of historical interest, although there is an increasing number of scientific institutions.

"There are insufficient railroad and other travel facilities in Russia to take care of the traffic, and as a result the provinces lead a life apart from that of the capital. They are tremendously enthusiastic about the growing industrial development, and it is amazing to see the number of factories, hydro-electric plants, etc., which are springing up on all sides." Mr. Barry went on to describe the itinerary undertaken by last year's Open Road parties, explaining the method of admission to the country and the necessity for exit as well as entrance visas. The gathering did not break up until several political and economic questions propounded by his hearers had been discussed by Mr. Barry.

TELEVISION MOVIES WILL BE DISPLAYED

Representatives of New England
Tel. and Tel. Co. Will Show
Recent Films

Harold J. Keith, research engineer of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company, will show two movies "The Magic of Communication" and "Television", in Jesup Hall, Thursday evening at 7.30 p. m., under the auspices of the Forum. These films, which are furnished through the courtesy of the Bell Telephone Company, give an explanation of the workings of a telephone, an outline of the development of the present telephonic system, and a clear, concise, explanation of the sending of pictures over telephone wires.

With the ultimate objective of interesting Williams graduates in the work of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company and similar organizations, Mr. Keith, who has been connected with the recent experiments on television, is presenting these movies, and will probably be on hand to answer any questions at the end of the picture. On April 19 and 20 Mr. Keith will again visit the college, this time to interview any seniors interested in this line of work.

The first of these movies, "The Magic of Communication", is a semi-technical explanation of how a telephone works, illustrating only the elementary principles. The second, "Television", begins with views of Alexander Graham Bell's workshop in Boston, and traces briefly the development of the telephone from 1875 down to 1927. It shows 2000 scientists engaged in telephone research and experimentation and illustrates the television apparatus and how it works, including views of the first public demonstration of Television when President Gifford, of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company in New York, talked with Secretary Hoover in Washington.

and Mrs. Graham are the only members of the cast not of the student body playing in this almost farcical comedy by A. A. Milne. "The Eldest", second on the bill, is a modern comedy of the lower middle class done in Edna Ferber's realistic style. In this, as in the first play, two freshmen have parts, while Mrs. Newhall will impersonate "Rose" and Mrs. Richmond, "Ma", under the direction of R. B. Sewall '29, president of the "Little Theatre". A fantastic harlequinade called "The Wonder Hat" completes the bill. In this presentation Wheeler '31 has the part of "Pierrot", and Miss Robins that of "Columbine".

The plays chosen for a bill to be given May 11 have also been announced, and tryouts will be held today at 4 o'clock and 7:30 p. m. to determine the members of their casts. The bill will include "The Duchess Says Her Prayers" by Mary Cass Canfield, "Playgoers" by Arthur Pinero, and "In the Zone" by Eugene O'Neill. The first of these depicts an episode in the life of Beatrice d'Este, the scene being laid in the Deromo at Milan, and will be directed by Casaday '29. "Playgoers" is a farce dealing with modern home life and the servant problem. Shoemaker '28 will direct O'Neill's drama "In the Zone", which is one of his "S. S. Glencairn" series. The scene is laid on board a ship in the mine zone during the war.

Talk on Democracy Delivered by Sforza

eratic crisis is present, that there will be a return to monarchies. But I cite as a proof against this, that, following the last war, it was the democracies which were the victors. And contrary to the opinion that democracy is not good for a foreign policy as well as a domestic policy, it has been shown, especially in the case of the United States in China, that democracy can be made applicable at home and abroad. In closing he restated the fact that "democracy sees the real truth ensemble and that a crisis is not very probable."

Following the lecture questions were answered, the two most important being, "Will there be a return of Monarchy to Germany?" and "What type of countries are best suited for democracy?" To the former Sforza replied that he did not think it possible, and to the latter he said that an agricultural country is best suited, since a state made up of industry and wealth is more susceptible to a dictator.

revivals of movements in that direction. During the year 1927 the State Department showed more active cooperation with the League than ever before, and anything which brings the matter to public attention necessitates some backing water in order to appear true to party colors. "If President Coolidge would appoint a resident minister to Geneva with power to speak on the floor of the Assembly, the United States would be, to all intents and purposes, a member of the League."

When asked if such an arrangement would be permanently satisfactory, Dr. Brown replied, "It would help us tide over the psychological embarrassment of changing our mind. In time the American people will see the element of the ridiculous in the situation and will be willing to pay their bill along with the rest for benefits received. In the meantime we need not suffer moral and spiritual as well as political loss by remaining outside of that process of cooperative education which is going on at Geneva."

was discord even within the denomination. The speaker was strong in his praise of the community and non-denominational churches which are being established as a remedy for the division of Christianity, and cited the movement as an indication of growing tolerance and understanding.

In an endeavor to obtain nation-wide cooperation in dealing with great moral issues, the Federal Council of Christian Churches has appointed a Home Missions Committee to act as an expert research department to sift facts and present a conclusion to its constituents. In the speaker's opinion, "Christianity, by this means, presents a solid front against destructive forces."

As to a movement for international unity, Dr. Brown said that the work had been commenced within recent years in international religious conferences held at Lucerne and Stockholm, where the world's greatest Christian leaders met to discuss the question "How to deal with tendencies which keep us apart." "It was significant," continued the speaker, "that they could agree on the fundamentals of Christianity, and did not split until such subjects as transubstantiation were discussed." Dr. Brown attributes the slowness of progress to human laziness which prevents men from feeling their responsibility in the matter, human selfishness which causes men to cling intolerantly to their denominations, and thirdly, "a few remnants of real sincere fundamental differences of opinion in the interpretation of Christianity." In closing, Dr. Brown urged that we try to understand our religious differences, and, through cooperation, translate our ideals into fact.

Scenes:
Act I. Scene 1—The Alley. Scene 2—The Royal Canadian Mounted Police Barracks.
Act II. Two weeks later. The House of Cora. Act III. One hour later. The Cellar of Ling.

The action of this play occurs in the small town of Drumheller, Alberta, a coal-mining community on the Canadian National Railroad, seventy miles northeast of Calgary. The story is borrowed intact from the Royal Mounted Records of Drumheller's last coal strike.

IT SEEMED probable for a moment last night that Sergeant Willard Mack, of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, would be out-diced in his conflict with Joseph Sweeney, the slickest dope-vender between Winnipeg and Vancouver. The sergeant, all ablaze in his scarlet tunic, had ventured into Hip Lung's basement laundry in search of murderers; and he was caught there like a brilliant parrot in a cage. Sweeney, a mean devil, had handcuffed the gorgeous fellow and was bossing him around at the point of a gun. Just as we were prepared to go home with the Sergeant's death-words resonant in our ears there was an odd occurrence. From two soiled-clothes baskets there sprang, unexpectedly, an equal number of Royal Canadian Mounted policemen, who took the situation in their own hand.

Until that moment "The Scarlet Fox" had been a play of the law, a law-back, with Mack and his dunties associates in credible controversy with the sins and shames of rural Alberta. In the second act all of us had been intrigued, as they say in Canada, "Gable," by the plot and reproduction of a frontier town, if one may be permitted to call it so. Wild ladies of the night held outrageous wassail with officers of the law, and the wicked stink of beer glasses accompanied the loose music of a brothel piano. Beneath the revelry a vigilant justice brooded; for Sergeant Mack and his men, though drinking and disorderly, were on duty bent. They were present only because it was their function to find out who had shot Tom McGuire, a well known mining boss, depositing his corpse in the alley back of Swede Cora's place.

Mr. Mack, Sergeant Michael Devlin as he is called in the play-bill, was a fussy, bumptious redcoat, though shrewd, daring and romantic withal. He was making love to dope fiend's little sister, the curtain fell after all the villainy was on their way to the "The Scarlet Fox," excepting several ridiculous moments of April-foolery. Is a pretty fair cock-and-bull drama. If you may enjoy some unbecomingly voracious acting by Miss Marie Chambers as the chateleine of a Canadian bachelorette; by Mr. Sam Lee, as a canny Chinaman, and by Mr. Sweeney as Harry Spatz, who combines the business of a village haberdasher with that of a king of the dope-sellers. It is worth a visit to "The Scarlet Fox" to see Mr. Sweeney and Miss Chambers turn the vivid dress of a gaudy melodrama into the real theatrical thing.

Dickens' 'Oliver Twist' Not Successful Play

who lived their own lives but who by chance touched the lives of the other personages involved; he rambled about from country to city, from hovel to palace, introducing his people, dropping them for pages and chapters, and then suddenly becoming interested in them once more. The dramatist, poor wretch, cannot treat his materials so cavalierly. There is a law of the theatre that says to the playwright, "Thou shalt not let thy audience get off the track." That being the case, one can only wonder at the fact that someone is always being tempted to force a Dickens novel onto the stage. Last year saw Pickwick strive in vain for recognition; a few years earlier Bleak House struggled valiantly, aided by no less a person than Margaret Anglin as Lady Deadlock. And last Friday night we watched the agonies of Oliver Twist trying to be what the program called it, "a play".

But it was not a play. It did manage finally to tell its story by dint of many soliloquies and the hard work of Mrs. Bedwin, who stood with one ear at the door and announced to Mr. Brownlow and to the audience certain facts indispensable to the plot and to our comfort. It finally succeeded in giving us the chronicle of Oliver's life from workhouse to mansion, from forced iniquity to joyous respectability; but it did so at the cost of what may yet prove to be brain fever on the part of at least one member of the audience. Episodic structure is not in itself impossible, as Mr. Galsworthy has proved all winter long with Escape, a series of nine episodes. But there must be something to hold the parts together. Perhaps if the Chapin Hall entertainment had been called "Scenes from Oliver Twist", one would not have been so troubled.

For as scenes, some of them were remarkably good. Mr. Bumble's wooing of Mrs. Corney was delightful, with the true Dickens touch in characterization. Several of the scenes involving Nancy and Fagin were good melodrama. In these cases, costume, stage business, and imaginative interpretation combined to make the action real. The beating of Nancy showed perhaps the greatest skill in timing and placement. There was evidence here of good directing. Oliver's lesson in pocket-picking got across. On the other hand, the robbery of Maylie's home did not click, due in large part, no doubt, to the ludicrousness of the situation. Nor did the eavesdropping on London Bridge become at all convincing.

The Dickens portrait gallery, rich in "humours", makes severe test of the actor's ability to depict eccentricity. Mr. Bumble made good use of his pantomime; Mrs. Corney (by this time Mrs. Bumble) handled the frying pan as if she knew what she was about; Nancy had moments of feeling, excellently keyed to the melodramatic mood; and there was a fine bit of work by the paralytic nurse in the first scene. One of the most vital impersonations was Fagin's. Here eyes and nose and chin and neck were really Jewish in the stage tradition. . . and the hands, with their long claw fingers, were particularly expressive. And one cannot omit the smooth villainy of Monks, who wore his clothes smartly but easily as a villain should, who made his eyes express his implacable hatred of the world, and who spoke and moved with an ease of manner that bespeaks either familiarity with the stage or a natural gift for acting that Williamstown, apparently gone drama mad, should not allow to languish.

PURPLE NINE TO TRAIN FOR GAME WITH N. Y. U.

Will Spend Last Part of Vacation at Long Branch—Squad Hit by Ineligibility

Sixteen players, in addition to Coach Fox, Manager Wilson, and Assistant Manager Fowle, will compose the baseball squad which will spend the last three days of Spring vacation in Long Branch, N. J., preparing for the opening game of the season against New York University on April 14 in New York. Practice thus far has consisted of work in the Cage, which began nearly two months ago, and several outdoor practices, but this is scarcely comparable to the advantages enjoyed by the N. Y. U. nine, which has been working out for the last three weeks, and which will have had the benefit of three games by the time it faces Williams on the fourteenth.

Lack of capable pitchers has been the chief source of trouble for Coach Fox, only three being included in the squad which will train in New Jersey, but ineligibility has also proved a handicap, two hard-hitting outfielders, Cavanaugh and Swift, having been declared ineligible for the entire season, and Alexander, promising first-baseman, having been prohibited to play until after the vacation due to his injury during the first half of the semester. Because of these circumstances, Coach Fox will probably use two sophomore players, D. P. Williams and R. H. Williams, to team with Danich in the outfield, thus enabling him to use either Tyson or Tittman, the latter an outfielder, at first-base.

Thompson, Winn, and Putnam will complete the infield, while the pitcher will be chosen from Capt. T. H. Smith, Singmaster, or Wolcott, with C. H. Smith doing the catching. Besides these players, Allen, a catcher, Delano and Inverso, infielders, and Foster, an outfielder, will also be taken with the squad to Long Branch. Practice will commence Wednesday afternoon with a three-hour session and will continue with a four-hour session from 10 a. m. to 2 p. m. daily until Saturday morning, when the squad will entrain for New York, arriving in time for lunch before the game.

Although the N. Y. U. team was hard hit by graduation, another strong team for the University Heights institution seems a certainty, with no less than eleven letter men returning from last year's squad. The Violets had one game thus far, with the Alumni, which resulted in a 7-1 victory for the Varsity, but will have played two games, one with Vermont yesterday, and another with Brown on the tenth, before the Williams contest. Manfredi, one of the best college pitchers in the East, will probably oppose the Purple batters, while Capt. Madison, of North Adams, another outstanding player, will play shortstop. Four members of the starting team are sophomores, who have played together for the last five years, four years in the Evander Childs High School in New York, and one year on the Freshman nine at N. Y. U.

The tentative line-ups are: WILLIAMS—Daniel, rf; Thompson, 2b; Putnam, 3b; R. H. Williams, cf; Tittman or D. P. Williams, lf; Winn, ss; Tyson or Tittman, 1b; C. H. Smith, c; T. H. Smith, Singmaster, or Wolcott, p. N. Y. U.—Manfredi, p; Norton, c; Sackett, 1b; Mayell, 2b; Madison, ss; Roberts, 3b; Strong, lf; Dean, cf; Johnson, rf.

With delegates from the leading colleges of New England and, in addition, the actual representation of thirty-five countries to insure an international atmosphere, a Model Assembly of the League of Nations, in which the students take the part of all the nations represented at Geneva, and organize themselves in a body precisely similar to the world forum at Geneva, will meet today at Amherst to discuss an agenda dealing with disarmament and tariffs. Sir Herbert Brown Ames, Amherst '85, who was for seven years financial director of the Secretariat of the League, will open the sessions, while the principal speaker at the dinner tonight will be Dr. Manley O. ## PROF. CALKINS GIVES PHIL UNION LECTURE

Wellesley Professor Asserts That Human Self Is Unique Part of 'Absolute'

Because of the direct experience of mental phenomena, including speaking, thinking, and perceiving, it has been reasoned that the universe contains mental realities, according to Professor Mary Whiton Calkins, of the Department of Philosophy at Wellesley College, who lectured before the Philosophical Union last Monday night on the subject "The Personal Absolute." After making clear her philosophical creed, in which she stressed the belief of the existence of mental realities, and their personal nature, Professor Calkins asserted that the individual self was a unique part of an all-including self, which was in some way definitely connected with each of its individual components.

The lecturer conceived of self as a complex, unique, changing entity, conscious of, and relating to, its environment. The individual self may be perfectly conscious of itself, because of the powers of feeling and perceiving, but with the individual self all knowledge of existence ceases; no one can definitely know of the existence of anyone else. As to the limitations of a particular being, the speaker stated that "one has the direct experience of being limited, but his direct awareness involves the direct consciousness of something outside."

Professor Calkins went on to describe the Pluralistic Relation Theory, in which the same relation may exist in perhaps two different worlds but, because of their isolation, would have no power to bring both worlds into close relation. Only by having external relations linking together the internal relations could relation between both worlds be brought about. Returning to the absolute self, the lecturer stated that one could hardly attribute emotion to this all-including entity, and that the only way in which this could be brought about was through a sharing of it by one outside, such as the ease of a teacher who shares and transcends the particular difficulty of his pupil. Professor Calkins concluded her lecture by emphasizing the idea of the human self as a unique part of the absolute and the widely spread and accepted theory of the existence of mental realities.

ANNOUNCE SCHEDULES FOR VACATION TRAINS

Four Special Trains Accommodate Men Leaving College Over Spring Recess

Friday, April 6—Four special trains are being run, today and at the end of vacation, to enable students to make the best possible connections to and from college. Leaving North Adams at 12:40 p. m. and arriving in New York at 5:30, a special train will be run Saturday, making stops at Pittsfield, Brewster, White Plains, 125th street, and Grand Central Terminal in New York, and a special trolley will leave Williamstown at 12 and at 12:05 p. m., connecting with the train, at no extra charge to the passengers.

The Boston and Main railroad is running a special train to Troy for the convenience of those who wish to make connections with Western or Southern trains. It will leave Williamstown at 12:30 p. m. Saturday, arriving in Troy at 1:30 p. m. Men returning both via New York and from the West will be accommodated by two specials returning to College in time for Monday morning Chapel. Leaving the Grand Central Terminal in New York at 12:30 a. m., a pullman special train is scheduled for Williamstown Sunday night, April 15.

Cars leaving Cleveland, Erie, Buffalo, Rochester, and Syracuse will be attached to a special train from the West, which will arrive in Williamstown in time for Chapel Monday morning. Those desiring to return in one of these cars are asked to see C. W. Curtis '28 or Dawes '28 as soon as possible. Tickets for the special trains both to and from New York will be on sale in Jesup Hall from 7:30 till 9:00 p. m. tonight. An extra charge of one dollar will be made for tickets bought in the Grand Central Terminal for the train returning from New York Sunday night.

P. T. Water Polo Instituted

Water-polo, a very popular sport in the large colleges of the country, has been entirely disregarded at Williams, but Coach Graham has been making an effort during the past winter to awaken interest in the game. By having the sophomores and freshmen play water-polo in their physical training periods, he has given them all a taste of the game. If an interest develops, Mr. Graham plans to run interclass or group games next fall and possibly this spring. A man does not need to be an expert swimmer to make a good water-polo player; strength and endurance are far more important. If any student is interested in the game or has had any experience at it, Mr. Graham will be glad to discuss with him the possibilities of forming a college team.

MUSICAL CLUBS TO PLAY IN FIVE CITIES

Especially Interesting Program To Be Offered Less Frequently Than Usual

In pursuance of their annual custom the combined Musical Clubs will occupy a part of the Easter recess with a concert tour to Connecticut, New York, and New Jersey. The trip will be less comprehensive this year than usual, comprising visits to only five cities; but the clubs will be fortified by the addition of the Purple Knights ten-piece orchestra to their personnel, and several individual specialty acts are listed among the attractions as printed in the last issue of THE RECORD.

Among the latter are vocal solos by Wilcox '28, selections by the double quartet, and dancing by Pulsifer '31 to the accompaniment of the Purple Knights. Elliott '29 will also perform on the accordion, while Heermance '31 is to render a banjo solo. The concerts are expected to be well attended as the tickets of admission have been selling fast.

The following is the itinerary to be observed by the organizations during the trip:

April 10: Stamford at the Stamford Woman's Club; April 11: East Orange at the Woman's Club of Orange; April 12: Plainfield at the Plainfield Country Club; April 13: New York City at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel; April 14: Montclair at the Woman's Club of Upper Montclair. There will also be a post-season concert given in Troy on April 21. During the Easter trip all concerts are billed for $1.50 p. m. except the one in New York City, which will begin at 8:30.

The members of the combined Musical Clubs are as follows:

Glee Club: First tenors: Sherrill and Straw '30, Francis, Getman, and Sommer '31; second tenors: Buck '28, Ford and Romaine '29, Hales and Sherman '30, Dougherty and Heermance '31; first basses: Fellows and Wilcox '28, Chamberlain, Hoyt, and Webster '30, and Megarath '31; second basses: Bongartz, Dumfries, and Taylor '28, and Clark, Fitcher, and van der Bogert '30.

Mandolin Club: Mandolins: Dougherty '28, Ford and Gregory '29, Dougherty '31; violins: Lees '29 and Fitcher '30; piano: Elliott '29; banjo: Heermance '31; clarinet: Taylor '28; flute: R. Wilson '28; drums: van der Bogert '30.

Purple Knights: Taylor '28, Amerling, Chamberlain, J. S. Chapman, Lapey, Thurston, and Webster '30, and Ahlheim, W. M. Brown, and Pinkett '31. Rushton ex-'31, formerly of the Purple Pirates, is expected to join the orchestra at New York.

Lucas and Wheeler Win 1931 Declamation Awards

John D. Lucas and Russell Wheeler, Jr. '31 were awarded the annual Freshman Declamation Prizes of $20 and $10, respectively, by a committee of judges consisting of Assistant Professors Allen, Bullinton, and Vaccarelli, at the annual contest in Chapin Hall on Tuesday afternoon. Lucas presented an interpretation of the famous dialogue in Rostand's Cyrano de Bergerac between Cyrano and the insulting gentleman who comments on the length of his nose; while Wheeler gave a declamation of Browning's satirical poem, Soliloquy of a Spanish Cloister.

Other speakers were R. A. East, who gave Demosthenes' oration in defense of his patriotism, A. G. Ogden, Jr., who presented Thackeray's essay on "Snobs", H. M. Pulsifer, Jr., who declaimed Mark Antony's funeral oration for Caesar, and H. B. Spencer, Jr., who recited Robert Emmet's speech of vindication prior to his execution. Professor Bushnell presided at the contest, introducing the speakers, and outlining the situation for each speech.

Fencers Hold Practice

Under the direction of Nicoll '31, a group of students interested in fencing has been holding occasional practice sessions with foils in the Lasell Gymnasium. At a recent meeting it was decided that the members would henceforth meet once a week for practice. Beside Nicoll, who is acting as coach, those who are showing interest in this new sport are Demuth and Dillingham '29, McKenna '30, and Burnham, Koblner, Pearl and Sessions '31.

BOWKER MEET EASILY WON BY R. E. BURGESS '30

Victor Scores Total of 31 Points; W. Birnie '31 Takes Second Place With 11

An assing a total of 26 points, came the first tests in four out of the seven events and second places in the two others, Burgess '30 easily outdistanced his nearest rival, Birnie '31, in the competition held this week for the Bowker Swimming Trophy. Burgess' superiority over all other entrants is shown by his versatility in winning the 50 and 100-yard dashes, the 150-yard backstroke event, the 300-yard medley, and the 110-yard swim.

On Monday were held the 50-yard and 150-yard backstroke. Burgess, winning both of these comfortably, with Goodbody '31 second in the dash and Birnie '31 second in the backstroke. Wolcott '29 won the dive event on Tuesday with a score of 55, Burgess being second with 49, and in the other competition of that day, the 110-yard swim, Burgess and Birnie were first and second respectively. Wednesday's events, the 100-yard dash and the 200-yard breast stroke, resulted in victories for Burgess and Gregg '31. Goodbody finished second to Burgess in the dash, while Gregg was pressed by Burgess to win the breast stroke event. Burgess won the 300-yard medley on Thursday from Birnie through his power in the breast stroke.

The summary of events is as follows:

50-yd. dash Won by Burgess '30; Goodbody '31, second; Birnie '31, third. Time: 28.6 sec.

100-yd. dash Won by Burgess '30; Goodbody '31, second; Birnie '31, third. Time: 1 m. 6 sec.

150-yd. backstroke—Won by Burgess '30; Birnie '31 second; Letchworth '31, third. Time: 2 m. 23 sec.

200-yd. breast stroke—Won by Gregg '31; Burgess '30, second. Time: 3 m. 9 sec.

300-yd. medley—Won by Burgess '30; Birnie '31, second. Time: 5 m. 36 sec.

440-yd. swim Won by Burgess '30; Birnie '31, second. Time: 6 m. 6 sec.

Dives Won by Wolcott '29; Burgess '30, second. 55 points.

W. E. KEITH DISPLAYS TELEPHONE PICTURES

Research Expert Explains Method of Sending Photographs by Telephone

Three reels of motion pictures showing in detail the system by which telephones operate and the method of sending pictures by wire were shown in Jesup Hall Thursday evening by Wayne E. Keith, research engineer of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company, in a talk given under the auspices of the Williams Forum. The series of films, which is entitled "The Magic of Communication", and which was furnished through the courtesy of the Bell Telephone Company, depicted, in the words of Mr. Keith, one of the ways in which "our silent partner, electricity, has seeped into every phase of our daily life."

After a brief preliminary speech, in which Mr. Keith emphasized the tremendous developments in the electrical industry which have been brought about during the past few years, the first film was flashed on the screen. Showing that sound is merely a series of waves in the air which set in motion molecules whose energy is transformed by means of the transmitter into a flow of minute electrical charges passing along a wire, the picture showed exactly

1931 Pentathlon To Take Place

Replacing the regular physical training classes during the first two weeks after the spring recess, the annual Freshman Pentathlon will be held in Lasell Gymnasium. The five events, designed to test all-round track ability, will be the same as in the past years, except that new distances will have to be determined for the swim and indoor track run, because of the altered size of the pool and the track in the new gymnasium. Probably the swimming event will be the 100-yard dash, while the other events will be the rope climb, the high jump, a short distance run on the indoor track, and the broad jump. As usual medals will be given to those men having the three highest scores in the meet.

THE CAR AND THE CAMPUS

Easter vacation has a special beauty all its own. For besides affording us a pleasant relief from hour tests, onerous "warnings", and wet weather, it also marks the opening of what is undoubtedly the most popular portion of the entire year. When undergraduates begin heading for the soft days of May and June, the campus, in keeping with other seasonal rejuvenations, stirs with new life; and if intellectual zeal seems to slacken somewhat at this time, there is also a noticeable increase in pure joie de vivre. The student brings back from Easter vacation a different expression on his face, a different pitch to his voice.

He also brings back a car—if he can, for he probably knows that on a warm spring afternoon in Williamstown his one desire will be to expand and relax and move about with the minimum amount of physical effort. In order to do this effectively one must obviously have a car: walking is dull and bicycles are silly. And so the great parade on wheels comes to town, to remain here until the last senior has been handed his diploma in June. A good time is had by all—except, of course, the poor pedestrian.

However the undergraduate may feel about this sort of a finale, there are others who maintain that the Royal Road to Learning, if there be one, should be walked, not ridden. The Trustees are evidently among those who hold this opinion, for they have recently presented us with the suggestion that all undergraduate motoring be abolished as soon as decently possible. The fact that this suggestion was instigated by many nervous parents certainly lends it embarrassing weight. At any rate it can hardly be doubted that our present privileges are in imminent danger of receiving another pruning, if not complete annihilation.

The arguments in favor of abolishing cars on college campuses are famous. From Princeton to Leland Stanford the unhappy results of student driving have been thoroughly rehearsed in a credo that reads something like this:

1. The scholastic standing of students who have cars is always lower than those who prefer to walk.
2. Students who have cars are never seen without them, and so they continually waste their time.
3. Students who have cars are always breaking state or local laws, and their notorious disregard of parking regulations makes for hopeless traffic congestion.
4. Where students are permitted to have cars there are numerous accidents which invariably result in serious injury or death.
5. Students who have cars are moral delinquents who use their cars that they may be more delinquent. Their college careers always end by dismissal.

The refutation of most of these points can usually be reduced to the "paternalism" argument. The undergraduate would like to know if he is still in kindergarten; and when the authorities imply the affirmative, he carries the idea ad absurdum by taking to roller skates. At Williams we also mention our geographical isolation, the railroad facilities, and the biological necessity for relaxation which every normal being should be allowed to satisfy by a ride in the country. Nothing much is ever proved by either side, but the undergraduate usually loses his car.

Whether or not the proposed plan of the Trustees to take away the last remnant of our privileges goes through will probably depend in some measure upon conditions this spring. With more cars in town and more incentive to drive them, we shall be in a tempting position to weaken our case. A few underclassmen at the wheel, a few missing drivers' licenses, a few cars not on the Dean's books, a few indiscrete parties on the highways of Massachusetts, and we may very well expect the end. On the other hand, if we treat our present privileges with some degree of respect and comply with the rules and laws in the approved manner, we should be able to convince the powers that complete abolishment of cars would be unnecessary "paternalism" instead of necessary protection.

THE BOOK ONLY A FEW KNEW

It seems unfortunate that the College's recent experiment in self-education embodied in the Bible examination for sophomores and freshmen which took place last Thursday should have been entered into by numbers of lower-classmen with the feeling that such an innovation was either a joke or an imposition. Those who were under this impression will undoubtedly have cause next year to wish that their judgment had not been quite so rash and that their procrastination in preparing for the examination had spent itself along other lines, while the more farsighted will probably have the realization by that time, if they have not already, that at least a cursory knowledge of the most widely read and quoted masterpiece in any literature is essential for the acquisition of even a superficial education.

Many will be prone to argue that Bible reading is another example of the progressive and valuable idea which has been diverted into wrong channels—, in other words, that the examination has been placed at the wrong time of year, or that students should be given more supervision in their readings; but it is to be remembered that first experiments do not always show the ideal method of materializing a theory. Even though there may be faults in the present application of the innovation, we feel confident that these will be smoothed out in time, and that Bible study will be recognized even by freshmen as an advanced step in education combined with an introduction to a vitally important field which is too often neglected.

'PHI BETA KAPPA' IS UPHELD BY LOEB '27

Alumnus Writes Article in Answer to Editorial in New York 'Herald Tribune'

In answer to an editorial, "Why Marks?" recently published in the New York Herald-Tribune, which spoke disparagingly of Phi Beta Kappa, William Loeb Jr. '27 wrote a defense of that "aristocracy of learning" which appeared on April 1. Loeb did not win a Phi Beta Kappa key himself because of "blush-provoking marks" during his first two years at Williams, but he entertains the highest respect for the key. The article follows:

"Though I have but recently been graduated from my Alma Mater, where I was of the class of students who have been extolled so highly by your editorial, 'Why Marks?' I nevertheless feel it necessary to take issue with the disparagement of Phi Beta Kappa that your editorial contains. I, too, did not gain a Phi Beta Kappa key, because I failed to 'mature', as you say until my junior year, so that my faculty judges could not reward the excellence of my last two years' record because of the blush-provoking marks of my first two years of what I presume you would call the 'adolescent period'. Thus I was exactly the type of student who should cheer your attack on this Greek letter fraternity, which has so often been called the 'aristocracy of learning.' Notwithstanding, I should like to demonstrate the fallacies in several of your contentions.

"The salient error of your editorial is that it confuses worth with scholarship. One might agree with you that a student's worth is best determined by the opinion of his fellow students but that is not a count against Phi Beta Kappa which in no way attempts to judge the worth of that immeasurable potentiality known as a college student but merely endeavors to reward him for intellectual attainments along strictly scholastic lines.

"There are many and various other rewards for the recognition of students who exhibit unusual intellectual activity along other than purely scholastic lines. It is not, then, entirely unfitting for Phi Beta Kappa to remain as the sole and highest outward reward for real scholarship.

"As one who was for three years a member of the undergraduate curriculum committee in an Eastern college where a liberal president turned an attentive ear to the desires of the student body in forming the curriculum. I should like to point out that in many colleges, in fact, almost universally there is a trend to provide methods by which those adventurous minds, with which you have such sympathy in your editorial, can find adequate expression among the courses of the curriculum. One device that has conduced to this end has been the honor courses which allow students to investigate with freedom from the necessity of class attendance and other routine engagements, certain fields of knowledge on their own responsibility and at the direction of their own desires with very little faculty supervision. This offers an incentive to minds which do not take an interest in what are sometimes the too confined and restricted fields of the regular class work and also brings these same minds into a position where they can be fully measured in judgments that take the form of marks which in turn form the basis of selection for Phi Beta Kappa. Thus this fraternity in ever increasing certainty does not now include necessarily only what your editorial terms 'gradgrinds,' but which incidentally are often the initial indications of future scholars and savants."

What to see in BRITAIN

The first college of Cambridge University was founded in 1284. Seven centuries of history and development have endowed this old-world University with scenes and traditions that are intensely interesting to American students.

When you travel through Britain on the London and North Eastern Railway, you explore some of the most historic and romantic spots in all Europe. Over this historical highway lie the ancient cities of Ely, Lincoln, Norwich, York, Edinburgh and many old-world towns celebrated in romance and legend.

Added to the attractions of natural beauty and climate are literary and historical associations, mighty castles and landmarks famous in American life.

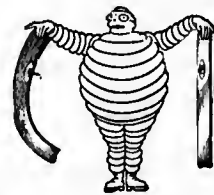

You will understand and be better understood in England and Scotland than anywhere else in Europe. You can play golf on the world famous courses at St. Andrews and North Berwick—in the land of the game.

In addition to the "Flying Scotsman", the famous train between London and Edinburgh, there are fast and frequent trains to all the numerous points of interest.

ROBERTS LECTURES ON MODERN NOVELS

Tuesday Lecture Speaker Insists
That Unpleasantness Is Not
Of Importance

"A good book makes the world more intelligible" was the thesis developed by Assistant Professor John Hawley Roberts, of the English Department, in the last lecture of the Tuesday Lecture Course in the Physics Laboratory last Tuesday afternoon. Taking "These Unpleasant Modern Novels" as his subject, Dr. Roberts considered numerous recent works and pointed out why they must be admitted to be good although they may be very unpleasant to some people.

At the outset Professor Roberts made it clear that he was not attempting to set up any dogmatic standard of criticism. He pointed out carefully the great distinction between the criticism of the professional book reviewer and the expression of taste made by the ordinary reader over the teacups. "The reviewer classes books as good, bad, or indifferent and gives his reasons for doing so, while the reader merely says that he likes or does not like a certain book on grounds of personal prejudice."

Declaring that taste is often merely a matter of prejudice, he then proceeded to attack the old saying "de gustibus non disputandum est", insisting that a book is not good or bad because we like it or do not like it. "Taste should not be an authority in art." He then laid down his principles that a novel need not please, but it should make the reader's mind more complete, and that a good book is one in which the writer does what he sets out to do.

Turning then to an application of his theory to recent works, Dr. Roberts said that Elmer Gantry was not a good book because the author failed through overstatement to make a real exposure of hypocrisy although the idea is good. Citing several other recent books, he mentioned Dusty Answer and The Silver Cord (not a novel but a play) as examples of books which are unpleasant but still must be admitted to be good. Carrying out his point that literature requires truth, he remarked in conclusion that "truth may be found at the bottom of a well, but sometimes it may also be at the bottom of a drain."

Prof. Maxcy Addresses Commons Club Gathering

Stating that "Williams is the only college in the United States founded by a soldier," Prof. C. L. Maxcy, chairman of the English department, opened his recent talk on "Williams Traditions". The address was given last Sunday night in the Commons Club reading room in Currier Hall before an audience composed of members of the club.

Professor Maxcy's speech was based partly on the song Eph Williams, which was sung by the members before he began to speak. In discussing the first stanza, he proceeded to destroy a common belief, by saying that "Amherst College has no connection whatsoever with 'Lord Jeffrey'." By the will of Colonel Williams," he continued, "this college was established in 1790." In 1919 a movement was instituted, the object of which was to have the remains of Colonel Williams brought here from their resting place, a grave near Lake George, already marked with a monument. A committee was chosen to undertake this, and later that year the remains were interred in the chapel with a "most impressive ceremony." State and federal troops accompanied the flag-draped casket down Main Street to the chapel, where the memorial service was held.

Bill Pratt, the "sawbuck philosopher", was next described by Professor Maxcy. Bill, though unhinged mentally, was the most unusual character ever to exist here. His principal occupations were cleaning stoves and sawing wood. His clothes were gaudy, though not rich, and he always wore about seven complete outfits of clothing. The speaker closed by telling of Bill's aptitude for declamation. He never paused for words, though he used many which do not exist. As an orator, he would have shamed Daniel Webster. The meeting terminated with the singing of The Mountains.

Erratum

In the April 3, issue of THE RECORD there appeared a preliminary article on the Forum lecture of last Thursday night which erroneously stated the speaker's name as Harold J. Keith instead of Wayne E. Keith, the correct form.

"There was a sound of revelry by night." —LORD BYRON

ONCE upon a time an undergraduate came back from his summer vacation, bought a case of "Canada Dry" and to his friends said, "Come around to my rooms, this evening. . . ."

"There was a sound of revelry by night," as Lord Byron put it. And if you don't believe me, look it up in some canto or other of Childe Harold.

This is not a story of flaming youth. Or anything devilish.

But just this: "Canada Dry" is the smoothest, mellowest, most palatable ginger ale you've ever tasted. It quenches your thirst. It has a distinctive flavor. It mixes well with other beverages. It contains no capsicum (red pepper). And it is really good for you.

CURRENT EVENTS TEST OF 'TIMES' TO BE HELD

Students Entering Contest Held April 20 Are Requested To Submit Names

Continuing the precedent established a few years ago, the annual Current Events Test conducted by the New York Times will take place again this year at Williams, the exam being held on April 20, at 4.00 p. m. in Room 5 Griffin Hall. All those who intend to take the test are urgently requested to send in their names immediately to Professor Leigh, so that the proper number of examination papers may be sent to Williamstown.

The first part of the test will take one hour and will consist of questions of the short-answer type, while the second part will last two hours and will consist of two one-hour essays upon topics dealing with the important events of the year. The exact period of history to be covered in the examination is from May 1, 1927 to April 1, 1928. It is recommended that students prepare for the contest by a careful review of the monthly or weekly periodicals which deal with current events.

The winner of this particular contest will receive a $150 prize and the New York Times medal; the second best paper will receive a $75 award, and third place will be rewarded by $25. The best paper submitted at Williams will be sent together with the winners of the other nineteen colleges and universities to a board of judges which decides the winner of the $500 intercollegiate prize.

Plans of New 'Handbook' Announced by Reeves '29

Completing plans for the 1928-29 Freshman Handbook, Reeves '29, Editor-in-Chief of the Board, recently announced that there would be no radical changes in the arrangement of the book this year, although an attempt would be made to bring it as nearly up to date as possible and to eliminate all obsolete material. In connection with this reorganization, Reeves requested that organizations wishing to have their write-ups changed, should get in touch with him immediately after the recess.

Work on the Handbook is to begin shortly after the Easter vacation when assignments will be made to the Sophomore members of the Record, who constitute the Handbook Board with Seeley '29 as Business Manager. The Board is planning to make the book a real help to the freshmen next year by removing all misleading material and the write-ups of defunct clubs and organizations.

Fair Weather Speeds Work on Golf Course

Piles of sand and dirt, tiles and turf, are beginning to take shape as bunkers and fairways on the tract of land extending from the eastern limits of the present course to Water Street, which was given to the College just a year ago by Dr. John Dennison of the class of 1890, and which, by the fall of this year, will be in use as the second nine of the Taconic links. In the meantime Wednesday's fair weather set rollers and green keepers to work on the present nine, which, if conditions are favorable, will be ready for play after the spring recess.

Though there will be no official tournaments on the spring program, the course will be available for regular physical training sections as in the past, as well as for those who secure individually the club privileges for the remaining two months of the college year. There has been a decrease in the green fees for this period from $13 to $11, which may offer an additional stimulus to the usual busy season.

Houseparty Dates

As a result of its recent meeting the Student Council announces that the dates open for spring houseparties are May 5, 12, and 19.

WILLIAMS COURTESY

April 1, 1928

To the Editor of THE RECORD:

Dear Sir,

Williams College is an institution of which we, as students, are justifiably proud. We are proud of the reputation and good name which she enjoys, not only with those who know her well, but among that far larger group who base their opinion upon but scant and casual acquaintance. It is, I am sure, the desire of every one connected with Williams that she may continue to be well thought of by all. At the present time one of the most definite ways by which Williams may be judged by the outside world is her treatment of visitors and especially of those visitors who come here as speakers and who are, in a sense, our guests of honor while they are here.

Today there appeared very strongly two evidences of discourteous treatment of such guests and unfortunately the same faults might be noted on practically every occasion that a visiting preacher presides in Chapel or the Forum presents a speaker.

Coughing in Chapel when the minister speaks a minute or so longer than is customary is a form of discourtesy which one might view with tolerance in a prep school but it is not in accordance with the standard of conduct generally representative of Williams men. A small minority of students, mostly recruited from the freshman and sophomore classes, manage by this childish inability to restrain themselves, to create a distinctly unfavorable impression of the entire service. It is not fair to the college as a whole that such an impression should be made because the vast majority of Williams men are of a more thoughtful and courteous type. It is unfortunate that conditions are such that it is possible for a few to give our visitors a false and derogatory idea, but since this is true it is up to the vast majority to crystallize public sentiment and frown upon our more immature members. Perhaps if those men who are regularly possessed of colds on Sunday morning, and only on Sunday morning, were made to realize that the rest of the College considered their coughing neither necessary nor funny, we would have a desirable decrease in unrestrained manifestations of sickness.

The second form of discourtesy which the ordinary speaker at Williams is generally confronted with is the habit of arriving late at lectures. This habit is by no means confined to students, but nevertheless it is an annoying fact that it reflects on the College. There is nothing more irritating to a speaker and to the audience which he is addressing than to have the first fifteen minutes of his talk interrupted by the entrance of late comers. Especially is this true when the meeting is being held in Jesup where it is impossible to move without the loud creaking of the floor. Count Sforza was visibly bothered by this situation on Sunday afternoon and at one time the noise occasioned by people coming in was so great that it was almost impossible to hear what he was saying. Such a condition is totally unnecessary since every one is able to acquaint themselves with the time of the speech. I would like to suggest to the Forum the possibility of closing the doors when the address is begun and allowing no one to enter late. If such a policy were followed it is my opinion that every one would manage to arrive on time.

Sincerely,

Stanley B. Newhall '30

FRENCH CRITICIZE!

Editor of RECORD,
Williamstown, Mass.

Dear Sir:

By the time a man has reached college, he should be capable of choosing the type of education he desires. He should know along what lines he wishes to specialize, and he should not have a lot of uninteresting and useless information forced down his throat. Yet that is precisely what happens in some of our college courses.

Suppose, for instance, that a man wishes to specialize in literature. Among other things, he selects a course in French 7-8. Upon opening the catalogue, he discovers that "the object of this course is to develop the critical faculties of the student, as well as to insure increased familiarity with the literary language." Very good! This is exactly what he wants. But does he get it? Is he tested and graded on his critical ability or his knowledge of French literature? He is not! He is asked, "How many acts are there in all the plays we have read this semester? Give the date of presentation together with the dates of the

"I'm reading the Herald Tribune this year."

"What made you change from your regular paper?"

"Just a matter of time. Last year my first class was a ten o'clock and I had plenty of time to browse through my paper."

"And so..."

"Well, this year I did my best to get out of nine o'clocks but couldn't do it. I heard some one say that the Herald Tribune was meatier and easier to read."

"Is there really any noticeable difference?"

"Yes. The Herald Tribune is better written and better edited. It's more newsy without being long-winded."

"Well, it may be all right for general news, but I read my paper for the features."

"Features? Do you happen to know just what features the Herald Tribune has to offer?"

"I know that it's a good all around paper, but I don't know just who writes for it. Do they have any good sports writers?"

"I should say they do. McGeehan and Grantland Rice. None better. And Bill Hanna, too. As for dramatic criticism where can you find any one who can equal Percy Hammond? And if you like high-brow stuff, you'll find Lawrence Gilman's articles on music about the best there are."

"I hadn't realized that all those people were regular writers on the Herald Tribune."

"That's just it. All last year I read the same paper and got into more or less of a rut. It never entered my head that I was missing something."

"You've converted me! I'll try one tomorrow."

Collegiate 'League of Nations' Assembly Meets Today

have not yet been heard from, are expected to be represented.

The conference is unique, since this is the first time since the war that students have organized on their own initiative an intercollegiate meeting to discuss international affairs. Added interest is lent to the Assembly through the fact that the cosmopolitan nature of American colleges permits the selection of students who are natives of distant lands to represent their countries. Among the students who are expected as delegates are Anton Lang, the son of Christ in the Oberammergau Passion play, who will speak for Germany; Estu Kitani of Mt. Holyoke, who will represent Japan; Gustav von Schmoller of Amherst, the grandson of the famous German economist, who will be chairman of the German delegation; and C. P. Ladas of M. A. C., whose father has been the delegate of Greece to League of Nations Assemblies.

The conference itself is to take place in historic old Johnson Chapel at Amherst, one of the first three buildings erected at that college. The hall will be decorated with the flags of the 55 countries, members of the League, which have been loaned to the Assembly by the Detroit High School. The delegations will be seated in Alphabetical order according to the French names of the countries and will speak, as at Geneva, from the tribune at the front of the hall. The actual procedure of the League will be applied as far as possible at Amherst. The chairman of each country will speak first, while the voting will be by delegations as well as individually on the resolutions.

The officials of the meeting will be seated on a raised platform at the front of the hall, and the non-English speeches will be announced by interpreters. The first session will begin at 1.45 today when Sir Herbert Ames will open the meeting as honorary president during the election of the student president. After he has been elected, the student president will preside at the second session, which will be on the disarmament question. A dinner for the delegates will be held tonight at the Lord Jeffery Inn, at which Professor Hudson will speak. After this, Sir Herbert Ames is to give an illustrated lecture on work at Geneva and the activities of the League of Nations. At the evening session, the tariff discussion will be held, and be based on the research of the economic conference at Geneva, in which the United States participated last May. At the close, Professor Hudson will sum up the discussions and act as general critic of the assembly.

The World Peace foundation in Boston has given aid in documentary material and will have an exhibit of League documents and unofficial publications about the League. The Carnegie endowment for international peace has similarly cooperated as has the League of Nations Nonpartisan Association. All of these organizations as well as the Federal Council of Churches are sending representatives to Amherst for the assembly. A conference of the experts on foreign relations is expected to be held Sunday afternoon before the lecture of Sir Herbert Ames in "The Knights of St. John."

Other assemblies of a like nature are being planned for the spring. At Cornell, May 4 and 5, colleges of New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania will have delegations. Plans for another similar meeting have been set forth by the Michigan State college at East Lansing, which has obtained the permission of the governor and the secretary of the state to hold the sessions in the legislative chamber of the State House. Hon. George W. Wickensham, formerly Attorney General of the United States and now president of the League of Nations Nonpartisan Association, will be the principal speaker at Michigan.

The list of assigned speeches for the Amherst Assembly is as follows:

Speakers on League Disarmament Resolution:

1. Greece—C. P. Ladas, M. A. C., Chairman First Committee.
  2. Czechoslovakia—Joseph First, Springfield.
  3. France—Barbara Troeme, Mount Holyoke.
  4. Belgium—Helen Raymond, Smith.
  5. Denmark—Henry Jensen, M. A. C.
  6. Germany—Gustav von Schmoller, Amherst
- Speakers on Alternate Disarmament Resolution:
7. Russia—Stella Eskin, Smith.
  8. Spain—Elizabeth Steinbugler, M. A. C.
  9. Persia—Nancy Griffiths, Smith.
  10. Roumania—Hunt '28.

11. Australia—James Stratton, Springfield.
  12. India—John Clark, Amherst.
- Speakers on League Tariff Resolution:
1. Germany—Elizabeth Adams, Smith, Chairman Second Committee.
  2. Italy—Paul Albartini, M. A. C.
  3. Austria—Anton Long, Jr., Holy Cross.
  4. Poland—Edith Clark, Mount Holyoke.
  5. Sweden—H. S. Trilling, Tufts.
- Speakers in Alternate Tariff Resolution:
6. Netherlands—Elsa Barnouw, Mount Holyoke.
  7. South Africa—Jessie Guernsey, Mount Holyoke.
  8. British Empire—Alex Davidson, Springfield.
  9. New Zealand—Robert Adams, Bowdoin.
  10. Panama—Tilford Dudley, Wesleyan.

W. E. Keith Displays Telephone Pictures

how telephones are able to send messages. The inner structure of transmitters and receivers was pictured and explained, and also that of repeating coils, which are necessary to strengthen the current at intervening points during long distance calls. After the film, Mr. Keith said that it was necessary that all the transmitters and receivers in a country should be standardized, as otherwise no communication would be possible.

The second reel dealt with the function of electric current in sending telephone messages. "Electric current" was portrayed by a cartoon of a small man dressed in a messenger's uniform. His hurried trips back and forth along the wires and through two telephone exchanges during a conversation between the artist who drew him and the city editor of a newspaper who wished a telephone picture by that artist to be sent to him immediately, showed graphically the complicated system of electrical apparatus through which a current must pass before words spoken into the transmitter are conveyed to the receiver.

Contrary to expectation, the final section of the film showed the mechanics of telephotography, not of television. Among the many uses of this new development in the electrical field, the sending of pictures by telephone, are the transmission of pictures of fingerprints of those suspected of committing crimes, pictures of new styles, and diagnoses of doctors. A picture which is to be sent by wire is photographed and developed into what is called a "positive transparency". It is then dried and prepared for its transmission, which is carried out by means of a very delicate photo electric cell. At the receiving end a blank film is placed in a cylindrical container which revolves continually. During the process of transmission a tiny finger of light plays upon this revolving film making streaks across it, which are so close together that there are about 100 of them to an inch. The entire film is exposed in the course of about seven minutes, and it is then ready to be developed and printed.

author's birth and death. Outline the story of such-and-such a play, act by act and in detail."

On mechanical, uninteresting details like these the poor student must stand or fall. Is this "familiarity with French literature"? Is this developing "the critical faculties of the student"? We are out of grammar school now, and we are supposed to be through with "police" questions. What business is it of the instructor whether his pupil can remember the exact number of acts in a play and what happened in each? He is there to teach the appreciation of literature, not memory. Either the methods of the instructor should be changed, or the wording of the catalogue should be altered to tell the truth.

W. C. A. Elections To Be Held

Following a decision of the Student Council, the officers of the 1928-29 W. C. A. Cabinet will be elected by the College at large this year, although the rule recently adopted concerning the approval of nominations by the Student Council will hold hereafter. The elections will probably take place immediately after the Easter vacation. The nominations are as follows: President, L. D. Rohrbach '29; Vice-President, D. K. Strong '29; Corresponding Secretary, R. Ely '30; Recording Secretary, F. R. Thoms '30; Treasurer, R. H. Marshall '30; Ass't Treasurer, G. D. Welles '31.

Telephone men are continually scouting along the frontier of better methods.

Who will scout this electrical frontier?

WHETHER in the Bell Telephone Laboratories, in the Western Electric workshop, in the various operating companies or in the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, telephone executives are scouts on the frontier of new and better methods.

It is significant that your true telephone man never speaks of having "perfected the art of communication." And this in spite of the fact that America, in fifty years, has telephones everywhere and talks beyond its borders.

Work in the Bell System demands the bold curiosity of pioneers and the infinite pains of pioneers who, like Columbus, Lincoln and Lindbergh, prepared "and when their chance came they were ready."

Tennis Team Soon to Start Indoor Practice

Following the preparation of indoor tennis facilities in Lasell gymnasium, a squad including four veterans, Banks and Sewall '28 and Chase and Wolf '29, will start organized practice during the latter part of Easter vacation. According to present plans, the Sage Hall tennis courts will be in condition shortly after vacation, although on account of changeable weather most of the experience for the first meet of the season, to be held with Massachusetts Institute of Technology April 28, will probably be gained indoors.

Results of squad practice last year, the fall tournament this year, and informal practice which has been held for the past three weeks on the basketball floor in the gymnasium, indicate that the best prospects for this season, aside from letter men, are Calvert, Reilly and Robinson '28; Denison '29, and Adsit, Hoyt and Shoaff '30. Courts outside are being prepared as quickly as possible, while inside, a court will be marked off on the basketball floor to replace the large net which now serves only as a target for drives.

Prof. Leigh To Speak

Prof. R. D. Leigh, recently appointed as the first president of Bennington College, has chosen some of the educational aspects of the plans for that college as the subject of a speech to be given at a conference to be held April 10-11 at Columbia University to discuss modern problems in education. This conference, which is to be held at the Teachers' College of Columbia University, is the fourth educational meeting of national importance to be addressed by Professor Leigh since January 23, when he was selected president of Bennington College.

W. O. C. Election Banquet Will Take Place April 19

Featuring this year an illustrated talk by Russell M. L. Carson, former president of the Adirondacks Mountain Club, and installing the officers for 1928-29, the annual banquet of the Williams Outing Club will be held Thursday, April 19, at the Williams Inn. The topic of the speech has not yet been decided, but will definitely be drawn from some of the experiences of the speaker, who has climbed most of the important mountains in the Adirondacks, and who is the author of the book, "Peaks and Peoples of the Adirondacks."

Although elections for officers will not be held until the Tuesday preceding the banquet, nominations have been made, and are as follows: for president and vice-president: Beach, Chapman, Hales and Heton '29; for secretary and treasurer: Covell, Seacord and Travers '30. Tickets for the banquet, which is to be visited by delegates from Amherst and Dartmouth Outing Clubs, and is open to all members of the Williams club, may be obtained either from officers or council members.

Direct and Frank

TRANSITION. By Will Durant. New York, (Simon & Schuster,) $3.50.

MARK HARRIS

Formal philosophers have never been fully reconciled to Mr. Durant's maiden publication, "The Story of Philosophy." The general public has liked it very much. Quite enough to warrant the author in producing something more of the same sort, if he should see fit. He has, and wisely. The public liked a story of other men's philosophy, why not of his? Moreover people will read a good story even about philosophy which of itself is not widely interesting. When Mr. Durant wrote about it, he succeeded in entirely obscuring the fact that its essential is stern dialectic and not biography; not even biography of dialectic itself, let alone of the men who have thrust it upon the world. Accordingly, for philosophers, Mr. Durant has been guilty of an initial misrepresentation, no matter how you look at it. But for the layman of any intelligence, he seemed to have written a delightful and profitable book.

He has done so again. If there has been any misrepresentation this time, he must pacify his friends, or look in upon his own soul. He seems to have been reasonably indulgent with both. The people of his story are not allowed many failings. One or two are not allowed any. He has dedicated his book to "a tender mother and a perfect father." By proxy he has paid tribute for many of us, lacking in grace or opportunity. Obviously this is no book for the anti-sentimentalist. But that makes it one for almost everybody in the United States. This suitability has been extensively realized.

The essential value of this book lies in the fact that it deals with an interesting life in a fashion that is even more so. Things have happened to the author, things in a large measure common to youth. The young reader can live them. His elders can dream them. They offer a share of inspiration for some, retrospection for others, and for both a chance for participation, which is at once both romance and entertainment. The content is so sympathetic, that it needs nothing more than clarity to insure its effectiveness and significance. But the author has done better than this. He has added humor, perspective, and a most decided and contagious vitality. He faced his problems squarely and vigorously. It was a good thing that he did. Because the power of his intellect carried him fast and far on paths often enough, but not far enough explored by the average young person to make any real difference in the balance of his mind, or the integrity of his character. As regards religion and politics, the author's experience has been turbulent and dramatic, in the matter of sex, unusually fortunate. God was thrust upon him. Socialism got him. But as a more or less direct result of this, he was spared the futility and allowed the happiness and the productivity of love. In fact it was precisely this factor which seems to have restored him from premature decadence in the form of a rather unwarranted racial and cosmic pessimism.

His treatment of all these problems is uniformly direct and frank. This need not be a virtue. It can lead to offence and brutality. But this book is so delightfully sentimental that such a thing is quite impossible. As a matter of fact, the presentation of the inevitable and always inter-

Realistic Background and Romantic Feeling

DEATH COMES FOR THE ARCHBISHOP. By Willa Cather, New York. (Alfred A. Knopf,) $2.50.

DYKEMAN STEERLING

Miss Cather more than fulfilled the hopes of her followers in her last novel Death Comes for the Archbishop, as is indicated by the ten large printings it has had since its first publication six months ago. And here, for the first time, we see Miss Cather definitely breaking away from the tradition of O Pioneers, My Antonia, and One of Ours where she used her materials to evoke sympathy, to the present work, where her aim is clearly to depict the pattern of beauty in a life of service—with all apologies for the term, whose current connotations are far from fortunate.

For the background of her new novel Miss Cather has left her familiar Nebraska and Iowa, with fields buried in wheat and corn, in favor of New Mexico, whose red sand-hills, enchanted mesas, and adobe towns open brilliant new vistas to an eye so sensitive to nature's most striking and most subtle beauties. The story deals with the missionary struggles of a young French priest, Jean Marie Latour, who came there from Canada in 1851 as Vicar Apostolic with jurisdiction over a country larger than Central and Western Europe, barring Russia, and whose first task on reaching Santa Fé, his destination, was to go for his credentials to the See of Bishop Durango in Old Mexico—a journey of a full three thousand miles, alone, on horseback. After his return to Santa Fé there is a frankly episodic account of the hardships of Bishop Latour and his assistant, Father Joseph Vaillant, to spread the faith: stern physical hardships in the constant peril of thirst and starvation in the unknown mountain ranges and pathless deserts, and in frequent Indian massacres; and spiritual ones in the determined resistance of native priests, whose power had rested secure in a territory which had been drifting in religious diffidence since it was first evangelized by the Franciscan Fathers in fifteen hundred.

Throughout the whole of the novel Miss Cather preserves a sort of eighteenth century easy familiarity with her reader. At times the incidents and characters she presents seem to have a definite meaning for the success or failure of the project to which Father Latour has consecrated his life, but equally often the author says "one story related to a long-forgotten friar at Acoma, and was somewhat as follows"—and then the story. Or else, in effect, "here is an interesting fellow, let me stop and tell you about him"—and you are glad to stop; it is charming.

For example, there is the legend of the founding of the shrine at Guadalupe, or the one about Fray Baltazar, that tyrannous old priest who ruled the pueblo at Acoma with an iron hand, until one day he threw a mug at his Indian serving-boy spilling the gravy. The blow killed him, and later in the day Fray Baltazar was dropped unresisting over a three hundred foot cliff. Or the portrait of Doña Isabella who, after considerable hysteria, made the sacrifice to her vanity of admitting in court that she was fifty-two years of age (ten more than her usual count) for the due inheritance of four hundred thousand

'What Became of Teitjens'

THE LAST POST. By Ford Madox Ford. New York. The Literary Guild of America. $2.50

MARK HARRIS

As Mr. Ford says very gracefully and courteously in his dedication, this book tells "what became of Teitjens", the central figure of the three preceding novels to which The Last Post is a masterly conclusion. This means more than you may think, unless indeed, you have read Some Do Not, No More Parades, and A Man Could Stand Up. In that case, by the way, you may not be thinking at all, because there is a sense of overwhelming scope and penetration liable to come over the sensitive reader which leaves him admiring, but inarticulate.

The method by which we are informed of "what became of Teitjens" is, I think, rare. The more so because it is justifiable in the light of experience of life. Often enough, we gather a chapter of life-history entirely through indirect channels, without a glimpse of the man himself, or without coming nearer than once removed from his sphere of existence. So it is with Christopher Teitjens. From a multitude of sources, all of them as trustworthy as human sources can be, and let it be said in praise of Mr. Ford's penetration of humanity, never more than that, we follow Christopher until we see him safely restored to an equilibrium which had been disturbed before the great war, and remained so until somewhat after it.

At the opening of The Last Post the reader becomes aware of what is to be the final struggle between Christopher and his wife, Sylvia, who wants to keep her husband, though hating him, that she may torture him through her diabolical understanding of the soft places in his shell of rigid self-control and Tory code of behavior. Christopher has left London to live quietly upon the family estate in the country to which he has been more or less banished by the results of shell-shock and the weight of the scandal which his wife, mostly by her own actions, has thrust upon him and which his Tory code will not let him lift by explanation at his wife's expense. Both of them being Roman Catholics, divorce is impossible even had it been desired. But Christopher will not, because of his code, seek an annulment, and Sylvia does not want her husband to get beyond her reach. Also she does not mean to surrender him to his mistress, who, by getting his love, has deprived Sylvia of a large portion of her power to torture her husband.

Always indirectly, through Christopher's brother, Mark, or Mark's wife, and finally through Christopher's mistress, who is with child, we are prepared for Sylvia's descent upon the country estate, armed with intense hate, great intellectual resourcefulness, and the immense cumulative power of the situation, to strike at her husband through the woman he now loves with all his nature. But Sylvia, though she does reach the estate, though she faces a sullen retainer aroused to defense in Christopher's absence, though she confronts her rival in what is the most dramatic moment of the book, she cannot, for

Life Itself

THE BRIDGE OF SAN LUIS REY. By Thornton Wilder, New York. (A. & C. Boni Co.) $2.50.

S. L. FAISON, JR.

In these days of haste and machines and generally ambiguous ado, when so much of current literature takes the form of self-consciously heavy Nordic epics and oppressively serious grapplings with the day's problems, a bit of whimsical delicacy forms as agreeable a contrast as a week of French cooking after two months in the woods.

This is what is offered by The Bridge of San Luis Rey.

This novel is essentially romantic, in the best of many significances suggested by that academical arch-demon. For it is an escape from the political problems of the particular world to the sunny azure of mountainous Peru in the time of the Spanish ascendancy. And with that atmosphere, so subtly conducive to imaginative meditation, we are led to a fanciful wondering about the fundamental nature of that sole community between what we have left behind us in our flight and what we now find before us—Life itself.

And so, the peacefulness of this mountain elime is interrupted by the crash of the old bridge of Louis, the king-saint. And into the depths of the chasm below plunge five persons. The rest of the book concerns itself with a character sketch of these people—sketches that are admirable somewhat in the manner of an etching—a subtle stroke here and there that is just complete enough to let the imagination fill in the rest. It so happens that each of these persons is the pessimistic toy of a hostile environment, with the implied conclusion that perhaps the catastrophe were the best outcome for each of them.

This is what the pious Father Juniper had tried to show—a case of virtue rewarded and vice punished. Unfortunately we look in vain for either vice or virtue beyond a certain predilection in the characters to refrain from taking the initiative against the hostile environment. This indeed is framed in a higher category, "beyond good and evil", the all-inclusive classification which is Life itself.

Another obstacle to so easy an explanation as that attempted by Father Juniper is the fact that each one of the characters has just entered upon a new avenue of experience that promises to lead in the direction of happiness—and therefore the accident is to be classed as a tragedy in the strongest sense of the word. And then, too, the Perichole, plaything of fate more than the rest, is not one of the victims, but remains to find a new and integrating interest.

Thus it is that Mr. Wilder in his sparkling and refreshing manner leads us beyond the moral issue by his delicate treatment of the symbolic element, into some thing far deeper. What is the moral aspect in importance when considered with the question of what is, after all, worth while? And to this we have an answer, both implied in the whole book and definitely stated at the close. It is those human relationships that are inspired by love—"There is a land of the living and a land of the dead and the bridge is love, the only survival, the only meaning."

G WARDEN TO K BEFORE FORUM

as Will Lecture Sunday
"Crime and Capital Punishment"

awes, warden of Sing Sing
York, will deliver a lecture pieces of the Williams Forum this Sunday evening at 7.30 for his subject "Crime and diment." Having been enon work for the past twenty wes has now become one of most criminologists, and in ere he will talk about some nces and observations made que career.
wes has written extensively and among other publica-thor of the book on capital ntitled "Man's Judgment of a result of his experiences he is opposed to the death sentence, and will give the reason for his stand, discussing also the alarming increase in crime, a matter that is becoming ever more important to society. In this connection he analyzes its causes and answers the question "What shall society do with the criminal?"

The lecturer is known as one of the leading critics of prison conditions and crime problems, and the material for his address will come largely from personal experience and contact with prison life.
At a recent mass meeting in New York he was appointed chairman of the National League for the Abolition of Capital Punishment, with which many prominent men and women are associated.

the Connecticut Valley in 1929. Hunt '28 represented Williams and spoke for Rou-mania.

Since the language of the meeting was in French and each country's delegates spoke in their own languages, the Model Assembly had an international appearance with actual representatives from 35 different countries. Sir Herbert Ames, who has been actively connected with League affairs, opened the afternoon session and reviewed the achievements of the Geneva Assembly. In the evening a dinner for the delegates was held at the Lord Jeffrey Inn, with Dr. Ray Stannard Baker of Amherst presiding.

lines, so that the proposal for disarmament was adopted, 50-5.

In the evening the question of tariff reduction was laid before the assembly, the reports of the International Economic Conference of the League being used in the discussion. The speakers stressed the need for international cooperation and the abolition of trade restrictions. The Conference resolved that, due to the fact that world cooperation is necessary for improvement in economic conditions, "the Conference declares that the time has come to put an end to the increase in tariffs and to move in the opposite direction."

The other contemplated improvements are the re-surfacing of the northstruction of a new road between the Greylock Hotel and Greylock Garage, with the probability that all three pro-damages to their property arising from construction.

have not yet been heard from to be represented.

The conference is unique, the first time since the war to have organized on their own intercollegiate meeting to discuss international affairs. Added interest is given by the fact that the political nature of American politics is the selection of student delegates from distant lands to represent their countries. Among the student delegates expected are Ambassador of Christ in the Oberlin play, who will speak for Germany; Kitani of Mt. Holyoke, who represents Japan; Gustav von Schmoller, the grandson of the famous German nationalist, who will be chair of German delegation; and C. M. A. C., whose father has been of Greece to League of assemblies.

The conference itself is to be held in the historic old Johnson Chapel, one of the first three buildings that college. The hall will be with the flags of the 55 countries of the League, which loaned to the Assembly by High School. The delegates seated in Alphabetical order of the French names of the countries, as at Geneva, from the front of the hall. The duration of the League will be as long as possible at Amherst. The each country will speak first, with the delegations as virtually on the resolutions.

The officials of the meeting seated on a raised platform at the hall, and the non-English be announced by interpretation session will begin at 1:45 and Herbert Ames will open the honorary president during the student president. After elected, the student president at the second session, which is disarmament question. A discussion will be held tonight at Jeffery Inn, at which Prof. Ames will speak. After this, Sir H. is to give an illustrated lecture on Geneva and the activities of the Nations. At the evening session a discussion will be held, on the research of the economy at Geneva, in which the University participated last May. At Professor Hudson will sum up the sessions and act as general critic.

The World Peace foundation has given aid in documentary and will have an exhibit of League and unofficial publications. The Carnegie endowment international peace has similar as has the League of Nations. All of the organizations as well as the Federal Churches are sending representatives to the assembly. A number of the experts on foreign relations are expected to be held Sunday after the lecture of Sir Herbert Ames, Knights of St. John.

Other assemblies of a like kind have been planned for the spring. May 4 and 5, colleges of New Jersey, and Pennsylvania will have similar plans for another session. Plans for another session have been set forth by the State college at East Lansing obtained the permission of the state and the secretary of the state sessions in the legislative chamber. Hon. George Shum, formerly Attorney General of the United States and now president of the League of Nations Nonpartisan League, will be the principal speaker.

The list of assigned speeches for the Assembly is as follows:

Speakers on League Disarmament Resolution:

1. Greece—C. P. Ladas, M. A. C. man First Committee.
  2. Czechoslovakia—Joseph First, Springfield.
  3. France—Barbara Trocme, Mount Holyoke.
  4. Belgium—Helen Raymond, Smith.
  5. Denmark—Henry Jensen, M. A. C.
  6. Germany—Gustav von Schmoller, Amherst.
- Speakers on Alternate Disarmament Resolution:
7. Russia—Stella Eskin, Smith.

Expansion

To an editor, particularly an amateur, perhaps the most entertaining part of occupying such a position is the opportunity to announce a policy, and to expound at length upon the advantages that the new ideas are bound to impart to his publication. Like Count Sforza we hate to be conspicuous, so feeling both pleasure and a desire to retreat into a convention, the Literary Supplement expresses the plan that will in a general way, be followed—at least until better ideas present themselves.

Although it is undoubtedly true that as we have decreased the number of contributions by members of the faculty so have we decreased the importance of our pronouncements, nevertheless, we have done so intentionally, in the belief that a larger proportion of undergraduate contributions was necessary before the paper could be said to have accomplished its purpose. Let us be misunderstood we hasten to add that our intent is not to limit our publication to reviews by students, but merely to increase the number of undergraduate contributors.

In the articles on Strange Interlude and Henry V will be observed another departure from the custom of our predecessor. We intend that dramatic criticism will maintain a permanent position in the columns of the Literary Supplement. But this proposal to enlarge, permanently, the field of our endeavor as well as the plan of making an addition to the number of undergraduates who are producing literary criticism must be submitted to the pragmatic test, and we can but sit in our office and mutter original soliloquies, if the undergraduate body produces fewer aspiring critics than we hope for.

esting sex theme is so honestly, and at the right points so humorously handled, that not a shade of dangerous precedent, and yet no small amount of encouragement, is manifested. It compliments youth and may very well rebuke age. It administers neither pap nor venom, but is enviably healthy amid otherwise slightly hysterical tendencies.

And then Mr. Durant writes successfully. He has a very useful understanding of the psychology of the common emotions, his composition being dramatic, coherent and of an admirable clarity. This latter quality of his writing strikes the reader at once and remains consistently evident. The narration is swift, and the whole book is obviously compact and organic, the work of a highly trained mind. If one is to regret anything in the style, it is the somewhat insensitive hardness of the vocabulary and phrasing during some of the more emotional passages. But in general the simplicity of the diction tends to overcome its monotony and austerity.

Such considerations are entirely overshadowed by the very real value of what this book has to say. It bears an extremely effective witness to an encouraging fact. Even for the most extensive and iconoclastic wanderer, who may have pierced every defence of faith which the human race has set up for itself against the stark profundity and pitiless detachment of the universe, the everlasting scheme of things affords a measure of happiness and peace at last.

'What Became of Teitjens'

the sake of the unborn child, force the situation as she had intended by flaying its mother to perhaps fatal hysterics by the concentrated venom of her hatred and bitter jealousy. In this failure we see perhaps the only admirable episode of her married life, or previous to it, so far as the author lets us know it.

As a matter of fact, and in this connection, it is only fair to say that The Last Post, taken alone, may seem turgid, a bit obscure, and decidedly lacking in plot development. It may very well be that the Literary Guild, in selecting this fragment, endorsed the complete saga in realizing the organic unity which exists therein. It is certainly true that an understanding of this last novel is greatly expanded by reading any of the previous ones, particularly the first, Some Do Not, in which the framework of the characters and the general drift of the plot is set forth. To say framework of the characters, though it is reasonable enough if all the volumes are considered as a unit, in the light of the one book is most ironic, since the character-drawing is extremely subtle and of very great extent. One is tempted to use many modifiers in talking about Mr. Ford's work because it seems but fair to allow as little underestimation as possible. Yet the reader will be feeling that the reviewer is badly out of hand.

From what has been given of the plot, and what can be inferred about the characters beyond what has been said, it is clear that this book is not essentially pleasant. A person of normal taste may not like a single character because there is a stark and relentless development of them all which precludes the possibility of setting up any mediating haze of sentiment about the personality or actions of any of the rather repellent characters. And if one is looking for spirituality and high-mindedness, together with innocence and freshness, he will find none. One could hardly conceive of a group of characters and events more remote from the tradition of sweetness and light. Mr. Ford's writing in this instance is about thoroughly disillusioned men and women seeking quite mundane salvations, or none at all, as in the case of Sylvia, who is a very bad woman indeed. But she is real, she has the capacity for doing unexpected things with the consistency and completeness of motivation which is to be found in individuality, and she has a fascination for the reader which more than justifies its hold upon the other characters.

But regardless of what individual taste may dictate about the content of the novel, the technical excellence and stylistic flexibility of the execution is highly distinguished. The narration is identified almost entirely with the mental life of now one character, now another. The final and highly dramatic clash between Mrs. Christopher Tietjens and her husband's mistress, as a matter of mere situation is nothing more than rather awkward. But as projected from the agonized consciousness of the young woman, the situation is legitimately raised to a high pitch of emotional tone. The scene is tragic, and it has the irreproachable dignity of genuine yet complex feeling, to which the virtuosity of the handling adds the balance of intellectual mastery. Clearly we are dealing with the work of a very fine artist.

In this portion and often elsewhere the reader loses all sense of the medium of words. He seems to be a partaker, without any interpreter, of the thoughts and feelings of the characters. Yet if he becomes for a moment critical of the diction, he will be satisfied to the limit of fastidiousness, as long as he is not led to wish away the vigor and inevitable tang of that speech which is conveying mature passion. The style is not ornamental, nor as it may at first seem, verbose. It follows with the obedience of a voice the demand of the ideas, though in sum they are not less than life itself.

Views on Current Drama

Strange Interlude

GORDON B. WASHBURN

Nowadays, in our flamboyant western land, so malodorous by reason of commercial deceptions, one uses superlatives with exaggerated discrimination, and never without loathing. Even when their application, coolly chosen, seems thoroughly justified, we feel a kind of guilt, verging on self-ahorrence, when we are forced into expressions such as "great", "stupendous", "most significant" et cetera. Fortunately or unfortunately, therefore, (one's feelings are mingled!) Eugene O'Neill's latest production on the New York stage, calls for all of these lump-evaluations, and a host of less vague ones.

The adequacy of Philip Moeller's direction, Meikiner's scenery and Fontanne's acting, (her fellow players, nearly as good), have helped make Strange Interlude a milestone and a monument to mark the beginning of a new age in dramatic art. In this, a Theatre Guild production, both the new thought-drama, of the "Sincerity School", and the new aesthetic movement, of Gordon Craig, have cooperated to produce a work of great persuasion. O'Neill's desire to communicate by sight and sound, a new perception of the whole nature of Reality, a perception yet but vaguely perceived by most of our foremost artists or patrons of art, is partly realized. If this be not a complete realization of the dream, (of course it is not), it is at least a convincing prelude to new understandings. O'Neill conceives of life, always, as an "evasive mess", (to use Nina's words), and human beings as entangled in their own complex webs of consciousness and unconsciousness, which are self-destructive because fear prevents any revelation or resolution. No one dares to squint at the sun without smoked glasses, no one dares stare truth in the face. They cannot bring themselves to repeat the naked stare, even when they have once done so, because what they see does not reconcile itself with their mal-conceptions. Let them look long enough, and bravely enough, and their inevitable disintegration may not take place. "Seek ye the truth, and the truth shall set ye free". Though the Greek dramatists saw the inevitable disintegration of personalities through weakness, they rarely suggested, as O'Neill does, that it is not the nature of all men to find destruction through fear,—which is to say that weakness need not be tolerated, and that discipline, courage, and control, though surrendered, may be reacquired. Otherwise Life will be as for Nina—"just a long-drawn-out lie with a sniffling sigh at the end."

The story hardly matters, except as a good pattern to concretely communicate the difference between what people say, what people know, and what people don't know as to their basic motivations. The latter two factors are communicated through expressionistic, suggestive, or symbolic asides which "freeze" the surface into momentary immobility. It is one of O'Neill's successful conveniences which will doubtless become an ordinary convention within the decade. Freud is freely used, but unobtrusively. A repressed sex-impulse, turning into a martyrdom complex, drags Nina and all of her companions into a gulf of self-destructive love. One new life is born in the deceptive orgy, and escapes, perhaps to new deceptions, one isn't told.

It is a pitiless spectacle. O'Neill no longer bends to sentimentalities. His breath burns hot on the neck of Truth. He is overtaking her, and he holds a bit of her garment in his hand. It is Strange Interlude. To read it is to accept it, but to see it is to know it. Moreover, believe few of the attitudinists, the critics. Most of them say what should have been wrong with the play, as though the failure actu-

Hampden as Henry V

From the Sabatinesque hero of "Cypriote" and the environmentally despised extremist of "An Enemy of the People", emerges Walter Hampden to play the role of perfection in Henry the Fifth. With an exceptionally able corps of assistants Mr. Hampden has put on his most effective production since Cyano.

Although it is to have but a short run, its apparent unpopularity can more definitely be blamed on William Shakespeare than on Walter Hampden. It is trite to say that the theatre-going public likes excitement in the plays it condenses to see, but like other trite statements this is true. Excitement, of course, implies an element of conflict, and Henry the Fifth is conspicuous among Shakespeare's works for a lack of it. Rather, it is a steady progression of episodes of perfection exhibiting itself. So it is that large audiences are not to be inveigled into Mr. Hampden's den.

In this somewhat limiting field, it is all to Mr. Hampden's credit that he makes of it an altogether delightful performance. It is hard to imagine a play that would be more effectively annihilated by bad acting than Henry the Fifth. Hampden's Henry is infused with a convincingly kingly dignity that never borders on arrogance or stiffness, but radiates the charm of personal magnetism, which is only to say that Hampden successfully embodies Shakespeare's ideal king. One of the severest tests is the final wooing scene when the warrior becomes the clever gallant while still retaining his natural poise and force. Hampden does not fail us here, for in his own perfect poise and personal charm he expresses that of King Henry.

To Cecil Yapp much praise is due for his rendition of Fluellen, the amusing little Welshman, and to Marie Adels for her ability to create the delicate piquancy of the coquette in Katharine.

ally occurred. The last three acts did not interest O'Neill as much as the first six. That is the only criticism from the journals that one can agree with. The rest is unintelligent carping, based on the fact that O'Neill's success has made him unpopular. We want proteges to patronize, not brave men to laud. Well, thank God he is out of their hands! He would rather be kicked than stroked—Eugene O'Neill.

W. C. A. Elections To Be Held

Following a decision of the Student Council, the officers of the 1928-29 W.C.A. Cabinet will be elected by the College at large this year, although the rule recently adopted concerning the approval of nominations by the Student Council will hold hereafter. The elections will probably take place immediately after the Easter vacation. The nominations are as follows: President, L. D. Rohrbach '29; Vice-President, D. K. Strong '29; Corresponding Secretary, R. Ely '30; Recording Secretary, F. R. Thoms '30; Treasurer, R. H. Marshall '30; Ass't Treasurer, G. D. Welles '31.

Prof. Leigh To Speak

Prof. R. D. Leigh, recently appointed as the first president of Bennington College, has chosen some of the educational aspects of the plans for that college as the subject of a speech to be given at a conference to be held April 10-11 at Columbia University to discuss modern problems in education. This conference, which is to be held at the Teachers' College of Columbia University, is the fourth educational meeting of national importance to be addressed by Professor Leigh since January 23, when he was selected president of Bennington College.

Realistic Background and Romantic Feeling

pesos and later declared "I never shall forgive you, Father Joseph, nor you either, Bishop Latour, for that awful lie you made me tell in court about my age!"

There are other incidents of more dashing and organic nature. Such a one is the escape of Bishop Latour and Father Joseph from death at the hands of an American degenerate who had the nice custom of hospitably murdering wayfarers who took shelter in his house, the only one on the lonely road to Mora. And her picture of the weird scene of Bishop Latour and his Indian guide, Jacinto, finding shelter in a cave sacred to some secret Indian ritual from a storm which would have killed them. Through the night the Bishop is sleeping, huddled by the piñon fire, conscious in half-waking moments of the sound of a great underground flood, moving with majesty and power, and the figure of the Indian outlined by the rich glow of the embers, arms outstretched—ever watching and listening. In contrast to this there is the amusing episode of Father Joseph and his abstraction from a rich rancho (showing his marvelous blending of temporal and spiritual qualities) of a priceless pair of pearl-colored mules—no doubt, as he said, for the glory of God and the Bishop.

In the novel as a whole we find a curious mingling of realistic background and method with romantic feeling. There is realism in the picture, historically correct, of the West in the early fifties: Kit Carson appears before us, the Gadsden Purchase is mentioned, and we see a bit of Pike's Peak in the famous gold rush. And there is constant realism of description, like that of Trinidad Lucero—"His face was irritatingly stupid, and had the grey oily look of soft cheese. The corners of his mouth were deep folds in plumpness, like the creases in a baby's legs, and the steel rim of his spectacles, where it crossed his nose, was imbedded in soft flesh."

The beauty and the romance of Death Comes for the Archbishop lie in its rambling pattern, in which it resembles The Bridge of San Luis Rey, and in the sheer charm and strange out-of-the-world beauty of the incidents and characters which Miss Cather selects. Add to this the style, at once vivid and poetic, and always surpassing in nature descriptions of the country, for the sake of which the Archbishop had come back to die in exile. Just before he died he had thought of it as "something soft and wild and free, something that whispered to the ear on the pillow, lightened the heart, softly, softly picked the lock, slid the bolts, and released the prisoned spirit of man into the wind, into the blue and gold, into the morning, into the morning!"

And, through it all, treads the gentle figure of the Archbishop. Somehow, his own phrase to Father Joseph suits him so well—"where there is great love there are always miracles." The beautiful spiritual quality of his life is shown in that statement of Father Joseph, "To fulfill the dreams of one's youth; that is the best that can happen to a man"—and fulfill his dreams he did—and when he had completed his cathedral, he had finished, and he drifted quietly on to the God he had served, perhaps with the silvery note of Father Joseph's Angelus, sounding softly in his ears.

Short Reviews

WINGS OF SONG. By Dorothy Caruso and Torrance Goddard. New York. (Minton, Balch and Co.) $3.50.

J. F. M.

Although Mrs. Caruso had the assistance of her sister Torrance Goddard, in writing her book, she has managed to maintain the illusion of telling the story herself, and presents just such an intimate and eulogistic picture of the great singer as we might expect from the pen of his wife. For the reader who is devoted to the modern biographies of the iconoclastic category there will be little of interest in this book. But for the person who reads biographies in order to have an insight into the private life of a celebrity—his personality and daily occupation—Mrs. Caruso has presented a picture, sufficiently lacking in realism to be pleasant.

REEDS AND MUD. By Vicente Blasco Ibanez. New York. (E. P. Dutton and Co.) $2.50.

Against a background of mud, poverty, and crime Ibanez has projected a simple plot adorned by several characters that are at once colorful and sturdy. The scene is laid in the little village of Palmar on the inland marshes of Valencia. It is by the portrayal of the character of old Tio Paloma and that of his son, Tono, that the author draws our interest. Perhaps the plot is weak, and we may accuse the author of dwelling too long upon the details of his unpleasant setting, yet we are forced to admit that the characterization is powerfully done.

BLACK MAJESTY. The Life of Christophe, King of Haiti. By John W. Vandercook. New York. (Harper and Bros.)

"I have added nothing to the sparse records of old books and the fading memories that linger in the minds of men in his own country," said Mr. Vandercook, yet he tells such a highly colored and dramatic story of Christophe's life that we wonder if it would not have been more accurately called a "dramatic portrait" rather than "The Life" of Christophe. Be that as it may, it is an interesting story and perhaps, after all, the author accomplished his real purpose.

Interested Outsider

COLUMBUS UNDERGRADUATE. By John A. Benn, Philadelphia. (J. P. Lippincott.) $2.00.

CURTIS M. HUTCHINS

American college life of late years has provided material for countless novels, short-stories, scenarios, and magazine articles. The atmosphere and surroundings of our educational institutions have been, on the one hand, all too frequently maligned and distorted; witness the lurid, theatrical performances of Percy Marks and Harold Lloyd, which, unfortunately are but two of many. On the other hand there has been consistent misunderstanding and lack of appreciation on the part of scores of critics and out-of-date bewailers of by-gone days. Thus, it is with a feeling of refreshment and relief that one finds on a modern book-shelf a sane and sympathetic representation of the aims, ideals, and point of view of a typical American college.

Mr. Benn, it must be pointed out at once, is an Englishman, who spent a year at Princeton immediately upon leaving Harrow, returning to Cambridge to complete his collegiate education. Writing about an American institution from the standpoint of a personally interested outsider, Mr. Benn fulfills two distinct purposes. In the first place, he is enabled by a marked lack of bias and prejudice to proceed to accurate and sound judgments; and by his sympathetic understanding of the American youth he clears up for England certain misconceptions about our mental and moral make-up.

Having been personally and intimately connected with both Princeton and Cambridge, and blessed with a sound analytical mind, the author with amazing accuracy dissects into its relative component parts the American college. He has to a high degree the welcome faculty of establishing a proper emphasis. He puts his finger squarely upon the essence of the various phases of our collegiate community, and, with a pleasing sense of values, relegates highly press-agented, but intrinsically minor, matters to a lower place in the scale of things. Striving to represent us as we really are, he refuses to embellish or exaggerate for the sake of the sensational, and at the same time does not overlook factors which might alienate a reader who does not wish to face the facts.

Our cousins across the water have long looked askance at the typically American. The overwhelming "will-to-win", the all-importance of money and business, the slighting of what they deem the finer things of life, have caused the Britons to mock and speak disparagingly of "the American Mind." Mr. Benn, points out that the traits and attitudes of the adult American are natural procedures, evolving with smooth transitions from a definite starting point. He discusses in a sane and common-sense manner our various ideals and characteristics, and finds that the misunderstanding on the part of the English is due rather to lack of knowledge, than to uncultured barbarisms of America. Regretting that any antipathy should arise between the two sister nations, he silently pleads for greater friendship and coincidence of points of view.

As students of an American college, it is with interest that we read his comments upon our institutions—football games, athletic organization, systems of study, hazing, secret societies. Coming to Princeton direct from an English school, our customs and time-honored conventions are new and strange to him, and the effect produced by immediate and abrupt contact with the realities of American college life is both revealing and intensely humorous. His analyses and remarks are frank, essentially spontaneous, and often quite naive. The book, which is really a collection of short essays, is valuable both as a piece of documentary history of a collegiate sort, and as a delightfully intimate sketch of American life.

In the evening the question of tariff reduction was laid before the assembly, the reports of the International Economic Conference of the League being used in the discussion. The speakers stressed the need for international cooperation and the abolition of trade restrictions. The Conference resolved that, due to the fact that world cooperation is necessary for improvement in economic conditions, "the Conference declares that the time has come to put an end to the increase in tariffs and to move in the opposite direction."

VARSITY NINE WILL MEET ARMY TODAY

West Point Sends Strong Baseball Team to Williamstown For Opening Game

Following a week of outdoor practice on Weston Field, the Varsity baseball team will play its first game of the season at home this afternoon when they meet the strong end nine from the U. S. Military Academy at West Point. Although the cadets have lost their first two games, they were handicapped by lack of practice and a true account of their real strength can only be had from their 5-3 defeat of Lehigh Wednesday.

Although Coach Fox's men were unable to play the N. Y. U. game due to rain, the squad had the advantage of a week's practice and will be able to present their full strength this afternoon. Captain Smith will probably draw the pitching assignment with Singmaster ready to do the relief work, if any is needed. Smith, '30, will do the receiving and Tittman, Thompson, Wynn, and Putnam will comprise the remainder of the infield. R. and D. Williams will hold down two of the outfield jobs with Danielli making a strong bid for the other position. To date the squad is hitting and fielding much better than last year's aggregation.

The Army, after finishing a successful season last year returned this year with a strong list of veterans and, after very little practice, made an excellent showing against the Giants. Vermont University, however, unexpectedly defeated the cadets 9-6. Coach Harry McCormick has gathered a strong hitting club and a line group of fielders together for his first nine. If the weather is warm and permits the pitchers to do their best, the cadets promise a very close game.

The probable lineups are as follows:

WILLIAMS	WEST POINT
Danielli	r.f. McNamara
Williams	l.f. Lindquist
R. Williams	c.f. Zimmerman
Putnam	3b. Schepps
Thompson	2b. Beynon
Wynn	s.s. Browning
Tittman	1b. Flood
Smith, T.	p. Beauchamp

Frosh Pentathlon Starts

With prizes consisting of three medals offered by the Department of Physical Education, the entire Freshman class has been competing in a pentathlon during the past week in the Lassell Gymnasium. As the events are being run in the regular physical training periods, the men are competing by sections at various times, which may necessitate another week to conclude the contest. As yet no definite scores have been announced. The events are as follows: 440-yd. run, 100-yd. swim, triple standing broad jump, high jump, and 20-foot rope climb.

Amherst Model Assembly Votes for Universal Disarmament and Gradually Decreasing Tariffs

Characterized by Professor Manley Hudson of Harvard, one of the critics of the meeting as having "all the attributes of the Geneva League of Nations, both good and bad," the Model League of Nations, which met in Johnson Chapel at Amherst on April 7, voted by a great majority to abolish war and have enforced arbitration in its place. At the evening session, the tariff question was discussed, and a resolution calling for gradually diminishing rates was passed, 48-7, by the countries represented. Approximately 20 New England colleges had representatives at the meeting, and voted, in view of the success of this venture, to hold a similar gathering in the Connecticut Valley in 1929. Hunt '28 represented Williams and spoke for Roumania.

Since the language of the meeting was in French and each country's delegates spoke in their own languages, the Model Assembly had an international appearance with actual representatives from 35 different countries. Sir Herbert Ames, who has been actively connected with League affairs, opened the afternoon session and reviewed the achievements of the Geneva Assembly. In the evening a dinner for the delegates was held at the Lord Jeffrey Inn, with Dr. Ray Stannard Baker of Amherst presiding.

Musical Clubs Hold Final Concert in Troy Tonight

Rounding out their successful spring trip, the Williams Musical Clubs will give a concert and dance tonight at the Hendrick Hudson Hotel in Troy under the auspices of the Troy Alumni Association. In the afternoon the wives of the Williams men in Troy will entertain the members of the clubs and any other students who wish to attend at a tea dance to be held at the Troy Country Club.

After the tea dance, at which a selected group of Troy debutantes will be provided as partners, a buffet supper will be served which will allow those present time to dress for the concert at 8.15. The same program which was given at the various concerts during the Easter recess will be rendered this evening with a wide variety of selections by both the glee and mandolin clubs and, at the conclusion of this program, Hartigan's Orchestra will furnish music for the dancing. H. M. Grout, Jr., '26 is the alumnus in charge of the local arrangements, and tickets for both entertainments may be obtained at the door.

B. W. HALES ELECTED PRESIDENT OF W. O. C.

Officers Installed and R. M. Carson Speaks on "The Adirondacks" At Banquet

Holding the office for the second time, Barton W. Hales '29, of Oak Park, Illinois, was elected President of the Williams Outing Club at the elections in Jesup last Tuesday, while A. N. Chapman '29 was chosen vice-president at the same time with C. B. Covell '30 as secretary and C. F. Travers '30 as treasurer. Announcement of these elections was made at the 15th Anniversary Banquet of the W. O. C., held at the Williams Inn Thursday evening, at which time the new officers were installed.

Hales has been a member of the Winter Sports team and the Outing Club since entering college. As President of the 1927-28 Council of the W. O. C., he has been active in all the club work throughout the year, although his duties as Business Manager of the God have limited his time this winter. Chapman, a member of the 1927-28 Executive Council, has done trail work over most of the mountains in this part of the country. He is also a member of the Rifle team. Covell and Travers were both members of the Outing Club last year.

Eleven Try For Cheer Leaders

Dunlop, Field, Husted, S. L. Johnson, A. L. Johnston, Lynam, J. F. McKean, Palmer, Stratton, J. Williams, and Wolf '29 are at present competing for cheerleader positions next year. It is probable that seven men will be chosen from this group.

DEBATING TEAM TO ARGUE AT CORNELL

Merits of Governor "AP" Smith and Secretary Hoover Will Be Topics Discussed

Debating will be resumed tonight when the Williams team composed of Overton '29, and Erskine and Gilbert '30 will argue the question, "Resolved: That Governor Smith would be preferable to Secretary Hoover as President," against a Cornell team at Ithaca. The Williams debaters will uphold the negative side of the question, while the Cornell speakers will defend "AP" Smith's candidacy.

Composed of (l. to r.) Overton, Gilbert, and Erskine, which will face Cornell at Ithaca this evening.

The prominence of this question which is the subject of so much political discussion at present will probably make this debate more interesting than usual, and a good-sized audience may be expected. This same subject has been debated before in some of the larger colleges, with varying outcomes, so there is no possibility of predicting the result.

This debate with Cornell is not a regular League debate but an outside one. The next League encounter will come next Saturday, April 28, when Amherst will be the Purple's opponent. Of the three members of the Williams team, Gilbert '30 is the only one who has not had previous experience in intercollegiate debating. Overton and Erskine having represented the Purple before in this activity.

Second Annual Dunbar Prizes To Be Awarded

Award of the annual James R. Dunbar Student Life Prizes, founded by 25 Williams alumni a little more than a year ago, will be made just before the class singing on Memorial Day. The prizes of $100 and $50 are offered for the two best essays written by Williams undergraduates which either have appeared in one of the College publications during the year or have been submitted by the author directly to the Secretary of the Foundation, Philip R. Dunbar, 84 State Street, Boston, Mass.

The essays will be judged according to the extent to which "such matter tends to lead College student life in its social, political, educational, or religious aspect to express itself well". First prize was won last year by H. A. Hihner '28 for an independent essay, while second place went to T. M. Banks Jr. '28 for an editorial which appeared in The Record. Further information may be secured from Professor Carroll L. Saxey.

Tennis Team to Practice Today for Coming Match

Weather permitting, the tennis team will hold its first outdoor practice today on the Sage Hall courts which have been under repair during the past week. The first match of the year will be played here with the Massachusetts Institute of Technology next Saturday afternoon. For the past two years this institution has had a reputable tennis team but has not been able to play Williams in either of these years because of inclement weather.

Through the courtesy of Amherst an invitation has been issued to the team to use the indoor court of that college. Banks, captain, and R. Schoaff recently availed themselves of this invitation when they went to Amherst to play the coach and captain of the Subrina team. The latter were decisively defeated. For the past week the team has been practicing on the court that has been marked out on the floor of the new gymnasium. Adsit, ranked No. 5, recently sprained his ankle while playing on an indoor court during the vacation, but is expected to be in the line-up for the M. I. T. match. To date the ranking of the first six men is: No. 1: Banks; 2: Wolf; 3: Sewall; 4: Chase; 5: Adsit; 6: R. Schoaff.

'LITTLE THEATRE' TO OFFER BILL TONIGHT

Program of Three Comedies Will Be Presented in High School Auditorium

Friday, April 20.—Three plays of a lighter nature than those of its last performance will be presented by the Williams "Little Theatre" this evening at 8.10 in the auditorium of the Walter G. Mitchell High School at School and Southworth Streets, Williamstown, for the benefit of the Massachusetts Teachers' Association and the Riverbank Lodge Endowment Fund. The bill which has been chosen for the occasion includes "The Man in the Bowler Hat" by A. A. Milne, "The Eldest", by Edna Ferber, and "The Wonder Hat" by Kenneth Sawyer Goodman and Ben Hecht.

In the first of the two plays intimately concerned with hats, Shoemaker '28 will wear the bowler, while Mrs. L. H. Bloedel and Mrs. Graham are the only members of the cast not of the student body playing in this almost farcical comedy by A. A. Milne. "The Eldest", second on the bill, is a modern comedy of the lower middle class done in Edna Ferber's realistic style. In this, as in the first play, two freshmen have parts, while Mrs. Newhall will impersonate "Rose" and Mrs. Richmond, "Ma", under the direction of R. B. Sewall '29, president of the "Little Theatre". A fantastic harlequinade called "The Wonder Hat" completes the bill. R. Wheeler '31 has the part of "Pierrot" and Miss Robins that of "Columbine".

The complete casts are as follows:

The Man in the Bowler Hat		The Eldest
Mary John	Mrs. Graham	Mrs. Brown '31	Mrs. Brown '31
The Hero	Baxter '30	Baxter '30	Baxter '30

Town to Pave Spring St.

Appropriations amounting to $68,000 for the purpose of re-surfacing three Williamstown roadways were voted at last meeting of the Town Council on April 11, the major sum of $25,000 being set aside to construct a concrete pavement on Spring St. early in the fall. The other contemplated improvements are the re-surfacing of the northwestern end of Main St. and the construction of a new road between the Greylock Hotel and Greylock Garage, with the probability that all three projects will be assigned under a single contract about the first of July. The paving of Spring St., a long-needed and long-desired improvement, was made possible only recently, when all the property owners abutting on Spring St. consented to waive any claims for damages to their property arising from construction.

CLUBS EARN NEW LAURELS ON ROAD

Light Selections and Instrumental Specialties Prove Popular on Spring Trip

TROUP OF 50 GIVES FIVE PERFORMANCES

Alumni and Patronesses Entertain Members of Three Clubs in Eastern States

With perhaps the lightest and most popular program which the organization has as yet offered, interspersed with feature numbers such as banjo and accordion solos, dancing, and orchestral novelties, the combined Musical Clubs scored a new success on their recent spring tour through five eastern cities. Dances followed each presentation of the program, for which music was provided by the Purple Knights, and the members of the Clubs were hospitably entertained individually by the alumni and patronesses in Stamford, East Orange, Plainfield, New York, and Montclair.

The program opened, according to Musical Club tradition, with the singing of Come Fill Your Glasses Up and Farl by Yarl, accompanied by the Mandolin Club. On one or two occasions The Song My Mother Taught Me by Antonin Dvorak was offered as an encore to the College songs and served as a transition to the second number, The Old Road, sung by the Glee Club alone. After a negro spiritual, Little David, which was invariably called forth as an encore, the Mandolin Club again took the limelight and executed Lion du Bal by E. Gillet, followed on demand by When Day Is Done. Two vocal solos, Hills of Home and Dreams, by D. A. Wilcox '28 were well received contributions to the repertoire. Dreams in particular, in which the soloist had no instrumental accompaniment, except for the shifting background offered vocally by the Glee Club, received favorable comment.

"Jazz Novelty", a Purple Knights production, was a creditable and popular performance when the Knights were not errant. At this stage H. M. Pulsifer '31 with his clogging gave the audience something to look at quite in keeping with the efforts of the orchestra. Alternating with this number on one or two evenings, Heermance '31 and Fitehen '30, with banjo and violin respectively, presented specialties which met with obvious approval. At Plainfield, perhaps the high tide of the trip, this first section of the

SING SING WARDEN TO SPEAK BEFORE FORUM

Lewis Lawes Will Lecture Sunday Night on "Crime and Capital Punishment"

Lewis E. Lawes, warden of Sing Sing Prison, New York, will deliver a lecture under the auspices of the Williams Forum in Jesup Hall this Sunday evening at 7.30 p. m., taking for his subject "Crime and Capital Punishment." Having been engaged in prison work for the past twenty years, Mr. Lawes has now become one of the world's foremost criminologists, and in his address here he will talk about some of the experiences and observations made during his unique career.

Warden Lawes has written extensively about crime, and among other publications, he is author of the book on capital punishment entitled "Man's Judgment of Death." As a result of his experiences he is opposed to the death sentence, and will give the reason for his stand, discussing also the alarming increase in crime, a matter that is becoming ever more important to society. In this connection he analyzes its causes and answers the question "What shall society do with the criminal?"

The lecturer is known as one of the leading critics of prison conditions and crime problems, and the material for his address will come largely from personal experience and contact with prison life. At a recent mass meeting in New York he was appointed chairman of the National League for the Abolition of Capital Punishment, with which many prominent men and women are associated.

THE UNDERGRADUATE ABOLISHES WAR

A short while ago many colleges throughout the United States became interested enough in national politics to register their presidential preferences in straw ballots. We mentioned it at the time as evidence of awakening interest which the American undergraduate is taking in things that happen outside his little sphere. And now two events have recently taken place in New England which seem to indicate that this interest is being extended over the seas into the realm of international or world affairs. Last month Wesleyan held a "parley on war", attended not only by many prominent authorities on the subject but also by representatives from about seventy other colleges. Amherst followed suit a few days later with a "Model Assembly of the League of Nations", and some twenty colleges took part in the proceedings.

It is difficult if not impossible to evaluate the concrete accomplishments of round table discussions, but both these conferences were eminently successful in certain respects. For one thing they showed that the American college student has emerged still further from his campus cocoon; and they also showed that the problem of world peace, which today occupies such a prominent position in international relations, is one which, if not insoluble, is so gigantic that it will be with us for many more years. As one of the speakers at the Wesleyan parley pointed out, "the Golden Age is somewhere in the future," but it is not in the immediate future.

It is noteworthy, but not surprising, that both conferences were almost unreservedly opposed to war. At Wesleyan not one speaker discussed the possible good in international conflict, and at Amherst the Model Assembly "by an almost unanimous vote resolved to abolish war and to substitute for it enforced arbitration." But when it came to the question of means there were some sharp and even belligerent differences of opinion. For even in the tranquil realm of theory the advocates of peace soon discovered that their goal was a mighty one for human minds. There were arguments for and against armament; and for and against American intervention. At Wesleyan Admiral Plunkett, according to a report of the New Student, "quite lost his head and roared that if I had known they were going to preach internationalism, I would never have come." At Amherst there was a decided split of opinion on the question of disarmament.

War was abolished, but peace not established.

Yet we should not be discouraged by the inability of these collegiate gatherings to arrive at real solutions. They are at least effective reminders that even the destiny of nations is in the hands of our own generation. The fact that some of us have already begun to prepare for the day when the problems of war and peace will challenge us as realities rather than theories should receive prominent public notice—especially in this age of jazz.

Life Saving Tests Finished

As a result of the various tests, including carries, holds, and resuscitation, the following men have successfully completed the requirements for A Senior Life-Saver of the American Red Cross: McKittrick '30; Beattie, Bowden, Clark, J. O., Clark, H. M., Evans, J. G., Fedde, Garth, Gilbert, Hodges, Kimball, Letchworth, Stewart, and Van Zandt, all of the class of '31. Kepner '28, Moser and Thayer '31 have not finished all the requirements to date. Burgess, Davis, Fedde, and Strong, all of the class of '30, and Lobo '31 were appointed examiners, having passed their life saving tests previously to be eligible to take the more advanced test this year.

Fine Kirby on Liquor Charge

Charles Kirby of Adams, whose arrest on charges of transportation of liquor and keeping liquor for sale was brought about by two Junior advisers in the Freshman dormitories, was found guilty, fined $50, and received a suspended sentence of three months in the Pittsfield house of correction. He pleaded guilty to both charges, retracting his previous plea of not guilty. President Garfield and many undergraduates attended court during the hearing.

Infirmary Patients

Graffin, Herberich, and Shoemaker '28, S. L. Johnson '29, Lloyd '30, and Brandegee and Burrows '31 are at present confined to the Thompson Infirmary. If an undergraduate is seriously ill, his parents are immediately notified by the College authorities.

Newhall to Speak at Council

Professor Richard A. Newhall of the History department will be one of the speakers at the third annual meeting of the Philadelphia Peace Council, an organization created for the purpose of promoting better understanding between nations, to be held on Saturday, April 28, at Philadelphia. He will open the morning session of the conference with a talk on the subject "History and the Unbiased Mind". Among the other speakers will be Professor Daniel C. Knowlton of Yale, Professor David C. Muzzey of Columbia, and Miss Margaret Isherwood of Cambridge University.

'Cap and Bells' Has Try-outs

Cap and Bells held the try-outs for the annual spring production last Thursday afternoon and evening. The play to be given has not been announced yet, but Associate Professor O. W. Long has been working with the officers of Cap and Bells in an effort to select a suitable play. The production, which is usually staged around Memorial Day, will be given on Wednesday, May 30. Freshmen as well as upper classmen are eligible for the cast.

Sophomore Notice

There will be a meeting of all sophomores interested in a competition for Circulation Manager of the Purple Cow in the office on the third floor of Jesup Hall at 12.40 on Tuesday. This will be the last chance for sophomores to make the Business Board of the Cow.

HATCHET BURIED AT NIGHTSHIRT PARADE

Classes of '14 and '15 Close Cane Week Hostilities—Mud Adds Zest to Battle

March 21, 1912—Cane week and the attending hostilities were brought to a close Tuesday evening with the burial of the hatchet and the singing of "The Mountains" on the Old Campus. Prior to this, however, came the nightshirt parade with its demolishing results, the eloquent orations of the two upper-class speakers, and the bantering of the representatives from 1914 and 1915. Although the parade was scheduled to begin at 7.15, it was almost 8 o'clock before the file of white-clad freshmen, preceded by Fogg's unquenchable North Adams band and the drag containing the Senior committee and speakers, wound its way from the Opera House up Main Street to the Greylock Hotel. Roman candles and quantities of red fire lighted the procession, but revealed only four semi-ludicrous transparencies borne aloft by the marching freshmen. The sophomores concealed any possible chagrin, however, until the return from Greylock. When a point opposite the President's was reached, the signal was given for the attack. The freshmen defended the transparencies most creditably, but in a few seconds they were crushed and torn in the mud beyond recognition.

Some excitement was caused when it was rumored that the Freshman speaker had been captured. The fifteen men on the Sophomore fighting squad were sent to North Adams Tuesday afternoon, where they encountered Porter '15 returning from Pittsfield, where he had been since Monday night. Since Porter had been given permission to cut from the Dean's office, in the role of the speaker, it was thought that the freshmen were outwitted and an attempt on the part of Porter to destroy a written speech convinced the sophomores beyond further doubt that he intended to deliver the 1915 address. When the time came for the speech, however, it was found that Michler, who had remained in town, was the genuine orator and that Porter had been merely used as decoy for the wary sophomores. MacGruer '14, the sophomore speaker, remained at the home of E. R. Whitaker in North Adams from Monday afternoon until Tuesday evening.

After the destruction of the transparencies, both classes marched to the Old Campus, where two circles were formed around the huge bonfire, the freshmen inside the sophomores. The two concentric circles moved in opposite directions until at a given signal from the Senior officials in the drag, the sophomores grappled with their night-shirt-clad rivals in an attempt to rid them of their cumbersome attire. The results were varied according to the thickness of the underlying mud and the squirming ability of the freshmen, but both classes were glad to cease their struggle at a second signal and group themselves around the drag to successively applaud and hiss the fluent orators.

WEATHER IS HANDICAP ON LONG BRANCH TRIP

Baseball Players Are Hampered By Cold and Rain—N. Y. U. Game Is Cancelled

Cold and rainy weather proved to be a handicap to the baseball squad on its training trip to Long Branch, N. J., during the latter part of the spring vacation, but in spite of adverse weather conditions, it was possible to hold a workout every day of the trip, and from these practices, practically the first ones outdoors, Coach Fox was able to get a fairly accurate estimate of the ability of the players. Following the stay in Long Branch, the squad went to New York Saturday in order to play the opening game of the season against New York University, but because of a heavy rain, which completely soaked the playing field, it was necessary to cancel the contest.

Seventeen men reported to Coach Fox in Long Branch on Wednesday, and, following lunch, the players went through a spirited work-out on the High School field, where all the practices were held, but because of the cold weather, this practice was shorter than had been planned. Cold weather was also prevalent on the following day, and practice was shortened accordingly, but on Friday, the team indulged in two work-outs, one in the morning and the other in the afternoon. On the next morning the squad made the trip to New York, but a heavy rain, which lasted until game time, made the cancellation of the N. Y. U. contest necessary.

Residents of Long Branch, former home of Coach Fox, showed extreme hospitality toward the squad during the stay, providing various sorts of entertainment and offering every commodity possible. Friday noon the players were luncheon guests of the Long Branch Rotary Club, and that night they were guests of honor at a dance at the Garfield-Grant Hotel. On the previous evening they were guests at a theatre party given by the management of the theatre, and as a final demonstration of hospitality, a bus for the trip to New York was loaned by a local transportation company.

Varsity Track Team to Have Time Trials Today

With a squad of approximately 40 practicing daily on Weston Field, the Varsity track team started intensive training Monday in preparation for the first meet, which is with Amherst on April 28. A large number of candidates have been reporting, but the field events are in need of more men. The high jump and hurdle events are also weak. As yet, there is no indication regarding the strength of the team, but, after the time trials, which will be held on Weston Field at 2.30 Saturday, more will be known as to the chances for another undefeated season. Any other candidates who can come out should report on the track any afternoon at 4.00 p. m.

FROSH HOLD INITIAL BASEBALL PRACTICE

30 Candidates Reporting Daily to Coach Graham in Cage—First Game on May 5

Baseball practice for the freshmen began last Tuesday afternoon when 30 candidates reported to Coach Graham in the baseball cage for their initial workout. Although no game is scheduled for the yearlings until May 5, when the team meets Cushing Academy, the squad will hold daily sessions indoors, and if Cole Field, which has been somewhat cleared of the debris left by the flood last fall, can soon be brought into good condition, Mr. Graham will take his charges there for further practice.

At this early date it is hard to estimate the quality of material for the team, but it is already evident that the catching department will be well filled. Fox, Griffin, Hurd, and Lonsdale are prospective pitchers, while the other positions have about an equal number of candidates. The squad is now receiving batting and fielding workouts in the cage, and will limit its outdoor activities to Cole Field except for games with the varsity on Weston Field.

Following is a total list of men on the squad at present:

A. Clark, Ripa, Fox, McGlynn, Fenn, Jones, Booth, Garth, Hoge, Downey, Thomas, Newman, Griffin, Schwartz, Langmaid, Lonsdale, Grosvenor, Wallace, Denne, Leber, Thayer, Burnham, Schlosser, Bancroft, Hurd, Kendall, Trauernicht, Bowden, Field, and Cavanaugh.

Frosh Track Team Will Be Organized This Year

Enforcement of the new rule barring freshmen from competition in varsity track has led to the organization of a Freshman track team at Williams this year for the first time. The first of three meets, which have been arranged but must be approved by the Athletic Council before they may be considered official, is scheduled with Albany High School for May 12.

Candidates for the team have been reporting daily to Coach Seely on Weston Field since the spring recess. Although there has not been enough time to select the best men in each event Dougherty and Eynon have shown good form in the hurdles as have Suffern and Wineberg in the distance runs. Mason showed high jumping ability in the Lehman Cup Meet.

BIBLE READINGS TEST PROVED SATISFACTORY

Dr. Garfield Not Disappointed, But Finds Inadequate Training
In Bible Study

"Judging by the answers to my part of the Bible Readings examination," Dr. Garfield stated to a RECORD reporter "by far the greater part of the freshman and sophomore classes demonstrated clearly that they have had no sufficient training or background in Bible study either at home or in school." Dr. Garfield corrected the first division of the examination, namely the first three questions, dealing with the leadership of Christ, which were to be answered in essay form.

Emphasizing that the grades on his part, which comprised only one sixth of the whole paper and which, being the essay, was probably the most difficult, were very possibly not typical of the whole examination, he said that on his division "the greater majority of both classes received D's or failures, of which between 60 and 70 in each class were D's. On the other hand, there were 39 sophomores and 31 freshmen who received A's or B's."

In spite of the preponderance of low and failing marks, Dr. Garfield was not disappointed in the general results of his section of the examination: "In an examination of this kind where the student prepares himself, poor marks must be expected. In this instance, they go to show that the majority of the students have not had Bible training in their homes or previously in school. The papers of those 70 men who received A's or B's were particularly encouraging, and it was a delight to correct them. In fact, the whole task of correction was interesting and illuminating, as it gave a prospectus of an entire class and a relative notion not only of the kind of former training but also of the student's ability to accomplish work on his own initiative."

The marks on the examinations will not be published for several weeks, as each of the five correctors must complete his division before their grades can be averaged together to give the final mark.

COMMONS CLUB WINS FOUL SHOOTING TITLE

Chi Psi and Theta Delta Chi Share
Second Place—Cox '30 Leads Scorers With 20

Increasing its lead toward the interfraternity Trophy of Trophies, and at the same time producing the individual winner of the meet, the Commons Club won the annual basketball free throwing contest held in the Lasell Gymnasium April 4 and 5, by totalling 87 out of a possible 125. Second place was divided between Chi Psi and Theta Delta Chi, while individual honors went to Cox '30, who scored 20 out of a possible 25; to Husted '29, with 19; Calvert '28, with 18; and Fournier '28, Hart and Shoaff '30, and Emerson '31, each scoring 17.

The three high point men will receive gold, silver, and bronze medals, respectively, and the Commons Club gains 10 points toward the interfraternity Trophy of Trophies. The individual high score does not equal the existing record of 22 made by Foster '28 last year, and is one short of the high mark for the 1926 tournament made by Higginbotham '26, but the high team total is 13 better than that which won the contest two years ago. The Commons Club placed three men among the first seven in amassing its total.

On the first day, the number of contestants from each house was unlimited, and each man was allowed 15 tries. The seven highest scorers from each house took the ten remaining shots on the following day, and from these the five highest individual scores were aggregated to determine the winning team.

A summary of the number of baskets made and the points received toward the Trophy of Trophies by each house follows:

	Baskets made	Points gained
Commons Club	87	10
Chi Psi	73	8½
Theta Delta Chi	73	8½

Prom Plans Announced

Announcement has recently been made by Craflin '28, chairman of the Senior Promenade Committee, that Jan Garber and his stage and recording orchestra will furnish the music at the Senior Promenade, the date of which has been set as Wednesday, June 20. The time of the dance will be from 10 p. m. until 5 a. m. Jan Garber's orchestra, formerly known as the Garber-Davis orchestra, is composed of young musicians who specialize in futuristic music. They are doing recording work for the Victor Talking Machine Company and have recently toured the country playing in vaudeville.

Short Story by Allen '30 to Feature April Graphic

Featuring a short story by J. F. Allen '30, entitled "Romance in a Clearing", the April number of the Graphic and Literary Monthly will appear next week. Of particular interest is the appearance in the current issue of work by several new contributors.

Among the other articles which make up the prose section are "Transplanted", a short story by Cohen '29; "The Debit in the Cockpit", a humorous sketch by Gibson '31; and two sketches by Baxter '30, entitled "The Calculated Motive" and "A Proposal". "Wattau Garden" by Armstrong '30, "Tomorrow" and "Stone" by H. B. Spencer '31, "Definition" by Owe '30, and "Roses" by Prescott '30 are the poetry contributions. The editorial will take up a problem which is at present of considerable interest to a number of undergraduates, "Honors Work".

Dr. Leigh Speaks At Columbia

Professor Robert D. Leigh of the Political Science department was one of the speakers at the National Conference on Education held on April 10 and 11 at Teachers' College, Columbia University, on the occasion of the installation of Dr. William Frederick Russell as Dean of that college. His speech, entitled "Bennington College, an Experiment in Education" was one of three delivered at a special sub-conference dealing with the subject "Newer Problems and Policies in the Education and Guidance of Women and Girls." The National Conference, which was attended by a large number of prominent American educators, was divided into a number of separate discussion groups, dealing with such educational topics as Health Education, Guidance and Personnel, Music Education, Elementary Schools and Natural Science Education.

College Preacher

President Barnard I. Bell of St. Stephens College, Annandale-on-the-Hudson, will conduct the regular Sunday morning service in the Thompson Memorial Chapel at 10.35 a. m.

Notice

The third monthly discussion meeting of the local chapter of the American Association of University Professors will be held Wednesday, April 25, at 8 p. m. in 3 Griffin Hall. The discussion leader will be Professor H. L. Agard.

Bain Water Colors Are on Display in Lawrence

Continuing the series of art exhibits, a group of water colors, the work of Harriet S. Bain, of New York, was placed on exhibition in Lawrence Hall on Friday and will be shown at the regular hours until May 15. The paintings consist for the most part of simple landscapes and still settings done in the modern tone.

Miss Bain studied for several years in Europe and later intended to devote herself to suffrage work, but she has lately been under the tutelage of Professor Webster in Provincetown. Her work has been highly praised in recent exhibitions in Milwaukee and New York.

program was brought to a conclusion by request with a medley of Yale, Cornell, and Princeton songs, one of the outstanding triumphs of the week.

After the intermission Dougherty '28 and his mandolinists resumed the entertainment with Kasimiri Song by Amy Woodford-Finden, followed by a series of popular selections on the accordion by C. A. Elliott '29. Several humorous songs which proved unusually effective by virtue of being understood were presented by the double quartet consisting of Francis '31 and Buck '28 or Sherrill '30, first tenor; Ford '29 and Dougherty '31, second tenor; Fellows and Wilcox '28, first bass and Bongartz and Dunn '28, second bass. Mosquitoes, replete with novel effects as the name suggests, was the most successful number.

The solos which Heermance '31 sang and accompanied on his banjo, especially the two selections which were of his own composition, invariably found an appreciative audience. The last separate performance of the Glee Club under the leadership of Bongartz '28 was Jubberwocky, a parody on Jubberwocky of Cap and Bells fame arranged by Lester Jenks. The words, an inarticulate conglomeration of automobile names, were printed in the back of the programs in order that the effort might not go over the heads of the audience. Sylvia by Oley Speaks was the encore. The final number, as ever in Williams gatherings, was The Mountians, presented by the combined Clubs.

As has been the case for several years past, the Musical Clubs owe a large part of their success to the untiring efforts of Mrs. Charles F. Seeley as coach. From a group of 25 men, only six of whom had had previous experience, she was able to turn out a Glee Club which newspaper comment in general credits with a series of finished performances. Nearly 50 men, including Glee Club, Mandolin Club, Purple Knights and their managers, met in Stamford on April 10 for their first performance under the auspices of the Stamford Women's Club. The Women's Club was also the host on the following night in East Orange, while the Plainfield Country Club was the scene of one of the most successful presentations on April 13. The next night found the troupe at the Ritz-Carlton in New York, while they made their fifth and farewell appearance before an appreciative audience in Montclair last Saturday evening.

RALEIGH'S definition of courtesy was apparently to care for the needs of the other person. Today the same practice is observed by the telephone business; but we call it service.

To men in telephone work, service is a matter of looking ahead and preparing ahead—and when a need arises, to be ready. This point of view inspires the research engineer, the supervisor of production, the director of personnel and the executive responsible for all these activities and more.

With the increasing telephone requirements of the nation, this is a work of increasing complexity.

Through years to come Bell System men will find an even greater opportunity of service.

L. E. LAWES OPPOSES CAPITAL PUNISHMENT

Sing Sing Warden Advocates Life Imprisonment in Preference To Death Penalty

"Crime is a matter of time, place, and circumstance," said Warden Lewis E. Lawes in addressing the Williams Forum in Jesup Hall last Sunday evening on the subject, "Crime and Capital Punishment." "There are no more criminals among the mentally defective and insane than among the normal," Mr. Lawes went on, "and only about 7% of all malefactors are apprehended. Contrary to ordinary belief, 75% of discharged offenders do not return, but it is true that an ex-criminal has a lot of trouble making good due to the terrible prejudice against his class."

"When I started in the prison game about 24 years ago," continued Mr. Lawes, "the prison at Elmira was the most progressive, except that every man was treated alike, regardless of mental and physical defects, and that very severe punishments were administered for infraction of prison rules. If you treat a man like a dog he is going to act like one eventually. When I was in charge of a New York reformatory particularly effective use was made of the guard house, prison within a prison, cooler, meditation chamber, etc., depending on whom you are talking to, where you have a chance to rehash your sins in unpleasant surroundings. It was decided that this reformatory was wrongly located, and during the transport of 580 men to a new site in Orange County where there was an absolute lack of either prison or even living necessities it was found

Wesleyan President Will Address 'Phi Beta Kappa'

James Lukens McConaughy M.A., Ph.D., president of Wesleyan University, will address the Gamma of Massachusetts Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa at the annual dinner to be held at the Delta Upsilon House on Friday evening, April 27. As Toastmaster, Professor Wild, president of the Williams Chapter, will introduce Dr. McConaughy, whose address is to be followed by a speech of F. S. Miller '28, representing the undergraduates.

For years, President McConaughy has been prominent in the educational field. He was Professor of English at Bowdoin and later at Dartmouth College. In 1918, he became Professor of English at Knox College, Galesburg, Illinois, where he was soon appointed president. He had been at Knox only four years when he was called to Wesleyan University as president, where he has remained ever since. He is the author of a book, entitled The School Drama. The subject of Dr. McConaughy's address has not yet been announced.

Infirmary Patients

J. C. Dunn and Herberich '28, S. L. Johnson '29, and Dorrance, Lucas, Meier, and H. S. Stewart '31 are at present confined to the Thompson Infirmary. If an undergraduate is seriously ill, his parents are immediately notified by the College authorities.

'Cap and Bells' Names Cast for Spring Play

After successive afternoon and evening try-outs on Thursday and Friday of last week, Cap and Bells announced the choice of twenty-two undergraduates for the cast of the annual spring production to be presented on Wednesday, May 30. At the same time, Shakespeare's Hamlet was chosen by the officers of the organization, in conjunction with Assistant Professor Long, as the play which Cap and Bells will stage, and a preliminary rehearsal was held on Sunday afternoon.

Tryouts consisted entirely of impromptu reading and acting of parts from Hamlet, and were judged by Mr. Irwin, a professional stage-director from New York. Two days of trials were found necessary to complete a cast from the large number of entrants. The try-outs on Friday constituted the final test. Following is the list of those chosen: Hihner, MacMullan, Reid, Robinson, Rust '28; Elbrick, Layman '29; Baxter, Erskine, Gilbert, Gross, McAneny, Reiff '30; Heermance, Lucas, McGeath, Romaine, Sessions, Spencer H. B., Wheeler '31.

'THEATRE' PRODUCTION IS PRAISED BY CRITIC

'Quizzical Humor, Realism and Fantasy' Characterize Plays on Friday Bill

Jesup Hall and the High School gymnasium are about a tie if convenience is considered. Both are noisy, with Jesup Hall a little more so because of its advantageous balcony. "On strange boards," the plays were admirably presented. The first play, "The Man in the Bowler Hat" by A. A. Milne, was cleverly done. Typical of Milne's quizzical humor, it was played by all the personae with the understanding and sympathy that Milne demands so insistently. Mary and John brought good team play into the production. John Willmott, the Little Theatre stock villain, brought a convincing evil blot on the stage without aid of spot-light or walrus whiskers. Both Hero and Heroine came for too brief a stay. Baxter is an excellent interpreter of anything Leacockian. The heroine's ability is too well known to make much comment. Their love scene was perhaps too platonic. The lively humor of the first part of the play did not prepare us for the climax, which either Milne or the Man in the Bowler Hat might have omitted.

The director of The Eldest, by Edna Ferber, understood exactly what was needed. Every word was heard over the jabber of the audience. It was given a force which the other plays lacked in some degree; the first part was quick, intelligent, then there came exactly that slow beat that was needed to bring out more strongly the tragedy of Rose, the Eldest; there was the proper balance after the previous tumult. Rose, Floss and Al were embarrassingly real. The play itself can be condemned in its realism. It is photographic Main Street with types and little interest in characters, artistically rising to no climax.

The setting of The Wonder Hat deserved all its applause. Constructing it must

CORNELL DEBATERS UPHOLD GOV. SMITH

Convince Hearers He Is Preferable to Hoover Despite Latter's Wide Experience

Although the majority of the audience was in favor of Hoover at the conclusion of the debate, the Cornell speakers persuaded more of those originally undecided to Governor Smith's side than the Williams negative gained for Mr. Hoover, and thereby won. Before an audience of 150 assembled at Ithaca, the Williams debating team of Overton '29, and Erskine and Gilbert '30 discussed, with the Cornell team of H. B. Levy, I. Levy, and J. D. Rich, the question, "Resolved, 'That Governor Smith would be preferable to Secretary Hoover as the next President.'" at 8.15 p. m. Saturday evening.

Prof. L. P. Wilson, who was presiding officer, explained at the beginning of the debate, which was run according to the old system of three main speeches with a three five minute rebuttals, the method of judging, and a novel feature of permitting the audience to ask either debating team any questions on the subject that they wished after the formal debate. The balloting was done by the audience by writing down before the discussion whether the individual was for Smith, for Hoover, or undecided. At the end of the debate the number of those who changed their opinions or were convinced of one side of the question was taken as the indication of the winning team.

The purpose of the affirmative team was to prove that Governor Smith was well enough qualified by experience to be president, although admittedly inferior to Hoover. They went on to point out that the progressive principles of the Democratic Party, which he would represent, made up for any deficiencies in Smith himself. The stress of their entire argument was on the party policies. The negative team, on the other hand, tried to prove that Hoover was more qualified for President than Smith because of personal characteristics and breadth of experience both

PURPLE TO OPPOSE M. I. T. TENNIS TEAM

Latter Team Has Practiced More Than Opponents: Adsit Is Out with Injury

Much depending on weather conditions, the Williams tennis team will begin its 1928 season when they meet Massachusetts Institute of Technology Friday afternoon at 4.00 p. m. on the Sage Hall courts. Considering practice, both indoor and outdoor, and experience gained thus far in the season, the Cambridge team will come to Williamstown with a decided advantage over the Purple; for the former team has not only been fortunate in being able to practice out of doors, but has also had the advantage of playing one match, with Boston University.

Williams, not being able to use the Sage Hall courts last Saturday as expected, was forced to practice indoors. Captain Banks, Dennison, and Shouff journeyed to Amherst where they played the coach and several members of the Sabrina team on their inclosed court. The matches were very even. Inasmuch as Adsit is still incapacitated with a sprained ankle, it is probable that Schoaff, who has been showing up well in the few practices that the team has had, will move up to Adsit's position of number 5, while Dennison will go into sixth place.

At present the only men reasonably certain of positions on Technology's team

Noted Economist Will Lecture This Evening

Doctor Henry Parker Willis, noted economist, and Professor of Banking at Columbia, will lecture this evening at 7.30 under the auspices of the Economics Department in Griffin Hall. Dr. Willis will take as his subject, "Restoring the World's Gold Standard."

Dr. Willis has enjoyed a position of unusual prominence among American economists for more than twenty years. He holds a Ph.D. degree from the University of Chicago, and has extended his studies in economics, law, and banking at the Universities of Leipsig and Vienna. He was appointed secretary of the Federal Reserve Board in 1914, and later, in the capacity of director of research for that organization, became financially prominent in many countries of the world. He is now editor-in-chief of the New York Journal of Commerce, and has been a professor at Columbia for eleven years, writing many well-known books.

VARSITY NINE FACES CONNECTICUT AGGIES

Team Which Succumbed to Cadets Is Drilled in Strategy for Game Tomorrow

"With a little work on strategy, the most noticeable weakness of last Saturday's game, both the infield and outfield should be able to present a more formidable attack for the game Wednesday," stated Coach Fox in discussing prospects for the conflict tomorrow on Weston Field with the Connecticut Aggie baseball team. The next two days will be spent in going over the mistakes made last Saturday, due mainly to the inexperience of the infield, and a thorough study will be made of the more strategic points of baseball.

"Although the hitting has been better so far this year than last," Coach Fox went on to say, "we will continue to hold extensive batting practices in order to avoid a possible slump. The cold weather has not only been hard on the pitchers, but has kept the fielders from playing their best." A collection of former players, the Prindle All-Stars, will meet the Varsity Tuesday in a practice game. Coach Fox intends to use this encounter as a practice for the substitutes, since several of them played very well in last Saturday's game.

It is very probable that Wolcott or Singmaster will do the mound duty for the Aggie game, Captain Smith being saved for the Princeton game. Putnam and Winn are fairly sure to start at third and short stop, but Inverso and Thompson are waging a close fight for the position at second base. Tittman, at first, and Smith, catcher, will complete the infield. Danieli and Foster are working in right field with the former a slight favorite because of greater experience. R. Williams and Alexander will hold down the other two field positions with D. Williams a substitute for both the field and first base. C. E. Smith, Dunlop, and Amerling will be used in the practice game and if any development is shown, may get a chance in the game tomorrow.

Little is known of the Aggies except that they are bringing a veteran club of

WILLIAMS VARSITY IS DEFEATED BY CADETS

Powerful Army Ball Team Causes Purple To Make Numerous Costly Errors

Maintaining a batting average twice as high as that of their opponents, and an unchanged lineup which cooperated well in outfield and battery work during the entire game, an experienced West Point ball team defeated Williams last Saturday afternoon on Weston field by a score of 8-4, in the opening game of the Williams season. Starting slowly, with consecutive failures in the first inning, the Army's batting improved and two big innings were enough to decide the outcome of the encounter.

Power in the Williams battery seemed evident in the first inning when Captain Smith struck out two men and forced the third to ground to Putnam at third, but, rendered ineffective by the cold winds, Smith soon gave way under the powerful hitting of the cadets. Putnam reached first on an error to start the home team's first inning and Alexander walked after Danieli and Thompson had struck out. The third out prevented a score however when R. Williams grounded to first.

The second found both teams playing errorless ball, Alexander furnishing the thrill of the day by robbing Captain Browning of a hit when he nabbed the Army leader's long fly to left field. Although two visitors succeeded in getting on base during the first half of the third frame, they were kept scoreless by the fielding of Smith, who forced the third out. Hits by Thompson and Putnam and two stolen bases gave the Purple the first score of the game. A second tally seemed likely when Alexander walked for the second time, but R. Williams again made the third out. In the fourth inning the Army tied the count after Flood had been given a base on balls and had advanced to third on Thompson's error. He scored on Beynon's hit to center field, but Beynon made

Musical Clubs Present Final Program in Troy

Presenting practically the same program as that offered on their vacation tour, the Combined Musical Clubs made their final appearance of the year in a post-season concert at the Hendrick Hudson Hotel in Troy last Saturday evening. The concert, which was managed by H. M. Grout, Jr., '26, and was preceded by a tea-dance at the Troy Country Club, was probably the most successful one the 1928 Clubs have given.

Arriving in Troy about 4.30 p. m., the members of the Musical Clubs were entertained at a dance at the new Country Club. About 35 girls, including some seniors from the Emma Willard School, were present, and stayed for a buffet supper served at the club, after which the concert was given at the Hendrick Hudson. The program was the same as usual except that the numbers by the Purple Knights and the dancing by Pulsifer '31 were omitted. After the concert, which had an audience of about 500, there was another dance, music for which was furnished by Hartigan's orchestra from Albany.

Prominent Business Executive Shows the Relation Between High Scholarship and Success in Industry

"If studies by others corroborate the results of this study in the Bell System and it becomes clear that the mind well trained in youth has the best chance to succeed in any business it may choose, then scholarship as a measure of mental equipment is of importance both to business and business men," was the answer given to the much asked question, "Does Business Want Scholars?", in an article by that title which was written for a recent issue of Harper's Magazine by Walter S. Gifford, president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company. After commenting upon the shorter working hours and longer leisure periods in the industrial world today, the author also said that an efficiently trained mind may more easily "find success and happiness in that leisure than one untrained."

After describing the attitude of the professions toward men of high standing, who are preferred to students of mediocre cal-

'Oxford University Affords Excellent Opportunities to American Medical Students', Says Rhodes Scholar

(The following is an article written for Harper's Magazine by Wilbur C. Davison, former Rhodes Scholar, now Dean of The Duke University School of Medicine on the opportunities for studying medicine at Oxford University. It is the second of a series of articles being published in THE RECORD on the subject of studies at Oxford.)

The number of pre-medical and medical students who are applying for Rhodes Scholarships is increasing every year. Many more would be candidates if they realized what a great opportunity is offered them. The preparation for medicine which can be obtained by three years' study at the Medical School of Oxford University and one or two years at an American Medical School has many advantages over four years at an American medical school. An American Rhodes Scholar, on entering Oxford, can enroll in the Honor School of Physiology and obtain the B.A. degree in Physiology at the end of two years. This entitles him, without further examination, to the M.A. degree. During this time he can complete the study of Anatomy, Physiology, Biochemistry, Pharmacology, Pathology, Bacteriology and Physical Diagnosis, the subjects usually taught in the first two years in an American medical school. He can then be admitted, if his record is satisfactory, to the third year class of the medical schools of Johns Hopkins, Harvard, Duke, and several other universities, and obtain his M.D. degree in four years from the time he entered Oxford.

It will, however, be wiser for the student to remain at Oxford for a third year so that he may avail himself of the opportunity for independent work in Physiology, Pathology, Bio-Chemistry, etc., and thus obtain the B.Sc. degree at the end of this year. This supplemental training is of inestimable value in his future career as a physician or surgeon. If, in addition to this work, the student has profitably uti-

SCHOLARS IN BUSINESS

For some time it has been an established fact that men who stand high in the law and medical schools usually stand high in their professions later on. And members of Phi Beta Kappa, we know, can be found on almost any page of Who's Who. The statistics have been broadcast so often and so loudly, and debates on the subject have resulted so invariably in favor of the good scholar that most of us are ready to believe that after all A's and B's may some day be converted into something more substantial than even a cum laude.

Apparently this relation between success in school and later life is not confined to the lawyer and the doctor. In the current Harper's Walter S. Gifford, president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company asks, "Does Business Want Scholars?" Before replying, he first informs us that unlike the professions, "Business does not as a rule select men on the basis of their marks in college." The consequence is that the student who plans to enter business after graduation spends much more time on social and extracurricular activities than on academic work. And the reason: "Business believes that a law school teaches a boy law but that a college does not teach a boy business."

In an effort to determine if high scholarship does not have just as direct a relationship to success in business as it has to success in the professions, the Bell System began examining the college records of its employees. Mr. Gifford sets forth the results of this investigation with many impressive diagrams and figures, and finally concludes that at least in his firm "men who were good students had done better than those who were not . . . . On the whole the evidence is very striking that there is a direct relationship between high marks in college and salaries afterward in the Bell System."

Whether or not we are prepared to apply Mr. Gifford's conclusion to college graduates in every line of business, it must be conceded that the Bell System has furnished itself with a rather reliable index of a graduate's future success. The day may come when a college men in search of a job will be able to present no better recommendation than a high scholastic record. But we should not take these discoveries too seriously. After all, Mr. Gifford has spoken of "success" only in terms of cold cash. It may very well be true that there is a "direct relationship" between earning and studying power, but the undergraduate of a liberal arts college should not be too discouraged if his present standing seems to doom him to hopeless failure in business. If, regardless of his scholastic standing, he feels he is making a success of his college career in all its aspects—social or otherwise—he may look forward with a reasonable amount of confidence to a successful life. And his salary, we imagine, will depend as much on luck as on the marks he got in college.

Oxford University Affords Excellent Opportunities

lized his vacations, and there are three of them each year—six weeks each at Christmas and Easter and three months in the summer—by clinical work in London, Edinburgh, Dublin or on the Continent, he can be admitted to the fourth year class at Johns Hopkins or Duke University and obtain his M.D. degree in the same length of time as he would have, had he not gone to Oxford.

There is great liberty of choice of study at Oxford and a medical student can vary his work to suit his own requirements or preferences. Some Rhodes Scholars choose to spend three years in obtaining the B.A. degree in Physiology in order that they may do more extensive work in the pre-clinical subjects; others, especially those who have already had one or two years in an American medical school, study for the D. Phil. (Ph.D.) degree in some medical subject. Although some of these plans may require more than the usual four years for the M.D. degree, the benefits of the additional training and the firmer medical foundation more than compensate for the added time.

The medical faculty at Oxford is one of the best in the world and the opportunities for study are rarely equalled elsewhere. As far as I am aware, all the Rhodes Scholars have graduated in the upper part of the classes in the American medical schools to which they have returned and their subsequent careers have demonstrated the value of their Oxford medical training. Not only can a Rhodes Scholar receive a medical training at least equal to that in this country but he will obtain from his attendance at an English University and from his vacations at continental medical schools and hospitals a critical judgment and perspective which will be of the greatest practical importance to him.

Students between the ages of nineteen and twenty-five years who have reached the sophomore year in college are eligible for Rhodes Scholarships either in the State of their residence or of their education. The stipend is $2,000.00 per year for three years and there is no restriction placed upon the choice of studies at Oxford University. Application forms and information may be obtained by writing to the American Secretary of the Rhodes Trustees, Swarthmore, Pa. There are no examinations; appointments are made by a Committee of Selection in each State annually in December, except that every third year the election is omitted. The completed application forms must be sent to the State Secretary by October 23rd.

Classical Society Meets

Assistant Professor Alfred C. Schlesinger, of the Classical department, was the speaker at a meeting of the Classical Society held last Friday afternoon at the home of Dean Howes. In his talk he told of the ancient ruins at Athens, Corinth and Delos in Greece, which he had visited during his sabbatical last year. The next meeting of the Classical Society will be held during the first week in May. Professor Wild will speak and officers will be elected for the coming year.

INTEREST IS SHOWN IN COMING ELECTION

Open Letters Are Circulated By Alumni To Boost Candidates for Trustee

Evidence of interest in the coming alumni elections has been shown recently in the fact that several form letters, containing many names, have been circulated in behalf of the various candidates, Robert H. Jeffrey '95, of Columbus, O.; Max B. Berking '02, of New York; George F. Hurd '03, of New York; Mark Maclay '09, of New York; and Stuart J. Templeton '10, of Chicago. Of these five men, one will be elected to the board of trustees to serve for the term 1928-1933, all graduates, all non-graduates listed in classes previous to 1904, and all honorary members of the Society of Alumni in classes since that date, being eligible to vote, making a total of approximately 4,100 names.

The campaigning which has come to the attention of this column is the news that open letters have been sent out in the interest of candidates Jeffrey and Berking, each letter containing more than a hundred signatures of members of the classes '80 to '25. In addition to this, still further activity has been shown by the class of 1906, which has sent out a third letter urging the pre-nomination of William Hanford Curtiss '06, of Corning, N. Y., for the ballot of 1929. The campaigning for the other candidates, has consisted of active conversation in their behalf.

ALUMNI NOTES

Henry Baldwin Ward, professor of Zoology at the University of Illinois, has been elected a corresponding member of the Royal Accademia d' Agricoltura di Torino, which was founded in 1785 by Re Vittorio Amedeo III di Savoia. The distinction which is granted in recognition of leadership in research and investigation in parasitology, is one that is seldom conferred on foreigners.

1889

Dr. Frank Jewett Mather, Jr., a professor at Princeton, whose article appeared recently in the Educational Review, advocates the establishment of two colleges in place of the present four-year college, giving the A.B. degree at the end of the Sophomore year and the M.A. at the end of the Senior year.

1892-96

As the result of a recent reorganization, of the Ide Shirt and Collar Company, Herbert S. Ide '92 was elected president and A. Harris Ide '95 was named vice-president.

1907

1914

In a recent number of the Nature Magazine appears a feature article by Arthur N. Park called "Camera Hunting on the Continental Divide". The article is accompanied by a group of remarkable photographs of wild life in the Rockies which the author took great pains in securing.

1915

George Loring Hubbell, of the firm of Greene and Hurd, has accepted the position of chief legal adviser to the Nassau Utilities Corporation Inc., which is a new company formed during the last year to handle the distribution of coal, lumber, gasoline, and oil.

1917

Hubbard Hutchinson has had a book published this month entitled From Rome to Florence.

1920

Stewart Winslow is now employed by the Cina General Electric Company, in the position of accountant, and is living at the American Club in Shanghai, China.

1921

John Piatt has recently been appointed manager of the Braude-Pierce Furniture Company at Warsaw, Ind.

1923

Haven Palmer Perkins, formerly an instructor of Philosophy at Harvard, is now an instructor of Ethics at the General Theological Seminary in New York City.

1924

Lewis Covell Copeland, of Northampton, was awarded the degree of Doctor of Philosophy by Johns Hopkins University at its fifty-second commencement. Dr. Copeland was honored with the Master of Arts degree in Chemistry by Williams in 1925.

Donald C. O'Brien is now associated with the New York Trust Company, 100 Broadway.

You can't beat those Germans for efficiency. They didn't go to Heaven, as it turns out, but they had a Harp with them, just in case.

Governor Smith should not be deceived by the cheers that greeted him on his way to Asheville. They probably had nothing to do with his candidacy, but were tributes to his courage in wearing a brown derby at such a critical time.

The Governor, according to the AP dispatch, was in high spirits "over the prospect of a rest after the strenuous legislative session" during which, if our memory serves us, he might just as well have taken a complete vacation.

It is incautious of Al to identify himself with any kind of spirits at all, what with the perils of the prohibition situation.

Latest reports from Italy have it that the man who threw the bomb at King Victor in Milan had been out of the country for several years, and hadn't heard.

The King ought to paste a piece of the infernal machine in his memory book, so that his descendants may know what an important person he was, even if he didn't get his name in the newspapers.

It is Dr. William Mayo's theory that the purity of the water supply in the United States made prohibition possible; a contention that is borne out by the vast quantities of pure water the bootleggers use in getting their wares ready for the market.

The only weak point in Dr. Mayo's assertion is his major premise that prohibition is possible.

LACROSSE SQUAD NOW PRACTICING REGULARLY

Over 25 Candidates Are Reporting to Coach Bellerose—Several Veterans Out

Lacrosse practice is now well under way, with a squad of over 25 men, including several veterans from last year, reporting regularly to Coach Bellerose for the daily practice sessions on Cole Field. Although the ineligibility of Anderson, Siegal, Strong and Warner has considerably weakened the team's offensive power, a strong defense has been developed, and because of the wealth of promising material on hand, Mr. Bellerose is fairly confident of success in the first game of the season on April 28 at Springfield.

"Considering the material we have on hand, which includes a number of football men following the advice of Coach Caldwell, I think we have good prospects for a fair season," said Coach Bellerose to a Record reporter. "Lacrosse seems to be taking a firm hold on the student body, especially now that it has been officially recognized as a minor sport by the Athletic Council." During the practice sessions, which were held on the High School field until Cole Field could be made fit for use, special stress has been laid on teamwork, which is being developed by holding daily scrimmages. As yet no definite first team has been chosen, nor has a captain been elected.

The following men now constitute the squad: Dunn, Dunning, Howard, Jacobs, Senecal, Manager Thurston, Tierney and Wulff '28; Arndt, Andrews, Brown, E. J. Collins, Christie, Deaning, Hubbard, Lees, Nelson and Willmott '29; and Ashby, Bowman, Rice and Ross '30.

The season's schedule is as follows:

May 5	St. Lawrence Home
May 12	St. Stephens Amundale, N. Y.
May 26	Harvard Home

'Little Theatre' to Enter Tournament at Pittsfield

Selecting "Beauty and the Jacobin" as the play to be given, officers of the Williams Little Theater have announced their entrance in the Berkshire County Little Theater Tournament to be held at 8 o'clock Friday evening May 4, at the Union Parish House at Pittsfield. Thirty tickets are available for Williamstown people and students and may be obtained either from Hartwell '30 or upon application at the Dean's office, the price of admission being one dollar.

The tournament, which is being instituted this year for the first time, is sponsored by the Town Players of Pittsfield who are planning to make it an annual event and are offering a cup for the first organization to be three times winner of the contest. So far three entrants have been accepted: the Williams Little Theater, the Town Players of Pittsfield, and the Great Barrington Players. These organizations will draw for positions on the bill sometime this week. The cast that will present "The Beauty and the Jacobin" will be the same as that which presented it at a Little Theater performance in Jesup Hall sometime ago, with the single exception that Reiff '30 will take the part of Dossonville formerly played by R. Chapman '30.

Begin Van Vechten Speaking

All seniors interested in a competition for the seventy dollar A.V.V. VanVechten prize, awarded annually to a member of the graduating class for excellence in extemporaneous public speaking, will meet with Professor Bushnell in Jesup Hall reading room at 5.30 p. m. this afternoon. At that time, the date for the contest will be determined, and other arrangements completed. The usual procedure for the competition is to have each entrant make two speeches on subjects assigned an hour in advance from a list that covers a wide range, and differs for each speaker. The prize is awarded by a special committee selected from the Faculty.

TRACK SQUAD HOLDS ANNUAL TIME TRIALS

First Four in Each Event To Meet Amherst in Initial Contest This Saturday

In anticipation of the opening of the track season with the Amherst meet next Saturday, Coach Seeley held the annual time trials last Saturday afternoon on the cinder track at Weston Field. Following their completion he announced that the first four men in each event will constitute the team which will meet Amherst this week.

No indication of the strength of this team could be gained from the trials, for Coach Seeley did not wish to announce the times and distances in most of the events. Captain Keep was unable to compete in the trials on account of illness, but it is hoped that he will be able to join the team before the Amherst meet.

The results of the trials were as follows:

100-Yd. Dash: Won by Beals '29; Stayman '30, 2nd; Straw '30, 3rd; Sterling '28, 4th.

220-Yd. Dash: Won by Beals '29; Straw '30, 2nd; Stayman '30, 3rd.

440-Yd. Run: Won by Strother '30; Elbrick '29, 2nd; Eynon '31, 3rd.

880-Yd. Run: Won by J. Dougherty '30; Lane '29, 2nd; Menmott '28, 3rd; Baptiste '29, 4th.

One Mile Run: Tie for first between Macfarland '28, Chapman '30, and Reeves '30; Saunders '28, 4th.

Two Mile Run: Won by Moore '29; Greene '29, 2nd; Herriek '29, 3rd.

120-Yd. High Hurdles: Won by E. Dougherty '31; Boynton '28, 2nd; Shoaff '29, 3rd; Capps '31, 4th.

220-Yd. Low Hurdles: Won by Nicolls '29; Shoaff '29, 2nd.

High Jump: Tie for first between Layman '29 and Shoaff '29; Hoge '29, 3rd; tie for fourth between Davis '28 and Satterthwaite '29.

Pole Vault: Won by Little '29; Winn '30, 2nd; Hoge '29, 3rd; Eisner '28, 4th. Broad Jump: Won by G. Dougherty '28; Rowley '28, 2nd; Davis '28, 3rd; Satterthwaite '29, 4th.

Javelin Throw: Won by Rowley '28; Callaghan '29, 2nd; Higgins '30, 3rd; Travers '30, 4th.

Discus Throw: Won by Rowley '28; Gailer '29, 2nd.

Hammer Throw: Won by Weeks '28; Stuart '30, 2nd.

Boys' Clubs Commence Spring Sport Program

Under the supervision of Kenneth E. Kepner '28, director, Dwight C. Shepler '28, assistant director, and John Cornell, superintendent of the Williamstown Boys' Club, Camp Lyon, maintained by the Williams Christian Association for the boys of Williamstown and the vicinity, will be conducted again this summer. The camp is situated on the property of Miss Mary A. Tappan, at the north end of the Stockbridge Bowl, a lake in Lenox, Massachusetts, and anyone who is interested in a position as counselor should consult K. E. Kepner '28 at the Phi Gamma Delta house.

As a result of a meeting held last Thursday evening, the Boys' Clubs Executive Committee decided to embark upon their usual spring athletic program of baseball and track for the clubs. It was also determined to hold weekly meetings of the committee after Sunday Chapel. Next Friday night the Blackinton Club is to give a play dealing with camp life which is being produced under the direction of Mr. Corneli, the club superintendent, and McNeil '29. The piece is to be presented at the Blackinton School.

WESLEYAN, AMHERST WIN OVER WEEK-END

Amherst Defeats M.A.C. as Nichols Fans Eleven—Wesleyan Wins Easy Victory

While Williams was losing to Army here last Saturday, the other two members of the Little Three were faring better, as Amherst and Wesleyan both turned in victories over their rivals in baseball. At Pratt Field, the Sabrinas won from M. A. C. by a score of 4 to 3, while at Middletown M. I. T. was bowing to Wesleyan by the one-sided score of 13 to 2.

Nichols, the Amherst pitcher whom Coach "Hank" Gowdy has classed as "better than many major league pitchers", struck out 11 Aggie batsmen to turn in a victory that was much easier than the score indicates. Although they won by only one run, Amherst lost two chances to score in the early part of the game when they failed to hit with the bases full. Eight hits by Lord Jeff batters, coupled with two wild throws by the Aggies pitcher accounted for the four Sabrina runs. Nichols allowed but five hits.

Led by third-baseman Rupperecht, who amassed four hits, Wesleyan, behind the excellent pitching of Coons, defeated M. I. T. easily. The Little Three team got eight of their runs in the first three innings, and four more in the fifth. This was Wesleyan's second triumph of the season, but Amherst's first, as Clark University defeated the Sabrinas by a 4 to 2 score last week.

In addition to their victory in baseball, Amherst's tennis team, by winning all doubles matches and taking half of the singles, overcame Springfield College by a score of 6 to 3. Wesleyan, however, lost to Springfield in a track meet, 74½ to 60½, by virtue of their superiority in the running events. With the outcome of the meet depending on the running broad jump, the Springfield jumpers took all three places to give them a 14½-point margin.

RUSHING ARBITER OF 1927 MAKES REPORT

Professor Leigh Proposes Minor Changes and Outlines Work in First Report

With the organization of the 1928-29 Interfraternity Council, which will take place as soon as representatives from the various houses have been elected, the matter of a Rushing Season Arbitrator for next fall and several other proposals will be considered. The following is an outline of proposals with a few excerpts from the report of Professor Robert D. Leigh, 1927 Arbitrator, in which he touches upon nearly every phase of Rushing Season and the Interfraternity Agreement.

Briefly, the report is a complete picture of the activities of the Arbitrator, beginning with the mechanics of explaining the system to the freshmen and continuing through to a discussion of a pre-registration week for rushing such as used at Amherst and Wesleyan. Concerning soliciting, Professor Leigh says: "It would seem to me wise for both Councils (Student and Interfraternity) to agree to place authority in one man's hands to issue licenses to solicit, advertise, or transact business in the Freshman dormitories and to register upper-classmen from other fraternities to accompany such solicitors. About violations: "Five cases of rumors of irregularities came to me during the rushing season. In all of these cases interviews with the persons concerned showed that the irregularity involved no breaking of the rules." Concerning "C" dates and delegation building: "If the freshmen were given two or three more hours or a whole day for decision on their "C" dates, there would be time for reasonable and brief conferences between Freshman groups, for telegrams to and from fathers, and so forth."

Following is a summary of Professor Leigh's proposals: 1, A Jesup Hall Office for the Arbitrator and his Associates with one of the three holding office hours during the entire rushing season. 2, Attendance of Arbitrator (and, possibly, Associates) at successive fraternity Freshman dates. 3, Inclusion of Arbitrator system in the Freshman Handbook. 4, Definite arrangements with or by the Student Council for all solicitation and visiting of dormitories. Joint notice posted in entires as to provisions of Agreement. 5, Permission of Williamstown Alumni (other than faculty members) to entertain freshmen only with upperclassman from another fraternity present. 6, In irregular cases use of the device of accompanying freshmen by representative of another fraternity. 7, Lengthening decision period for answering invitations in period C. 8, Retention of present time for rushing or combination of rushing period with a Freshman Week in the week beginning Monday before registration.

W. C. A. Elections

College elections to choose officers of the Williams Christian Association for the coming year will be held today in Jesup Hall, the polls being open from 12.30 p. m. until one, from four until six, and from 7.30 until 8.30 in the evening. The following men have been nominated and are listed in order of preference: For President—Rohrbach and Strong '29, the man receiving the second highest number of votes becoming Vice-president; for Corresponding Secretary—Ely '30; for Recording Secretary—Thoms '30; for Treasurer—Marshall '30; for Assistant Treasurer—G. D. Welles '31.

the third out when he was caught off second by C. H. Smith's throw from home plate. Spectacular fielding by Schepps, visiting third baseman, held the Varsity scoreless in their half of the inning.

The unlucky fifth marked an improvement in the cadets' stick work and as a result three runs were scored. After Beauchamp had walked for the second time McNamara and Schepps connected for clear hits to account for the tallies. Zimmerman ended the rally by his fly to center field. Captain Smith started the inning with a hit and scored later on Putnam's blow to right field for two bases. Neither team scored during the sixth inning, although the Army threatened. Singmaster, pitching for Smith who had gone to center field, retired the side.

The seventh was a repetition of the fifth. Two errors and two hits allowed the Cadets another trio of tallies and placed them well in the lead. They accounted for their last run in the ninth when Lindquist was granted a base on balls and Browning hit to left field. Although scoreless after the fifth, the Purple entered the last half of the ninth determined to tally. After Winn had been hit by the visiting pitcher and was on first base, C. H. Smith drove a hot liner to left field for three bases, Winn scoring. Smith scored later on a sacrifice fly by T. Smith, but Foster and Inverso fled out to end the game.

What to see in BRITAIN

The first college of Cambridge University was founded in 1284. Seven centuries of history and development have endowed this old-world University with scenes and traditions that are intensely interesting to American students.

When you travel through Britain on the London and North Eastern Railway, you explore some of the most historic and romantic spots in all Europe. Over this historical highway lie the ancient cities of Ely, Lincoln, Norwich, York, Edinburgh and many old-world towns celebrated in romance and legend.

Added to the attractions of natural beauty and climate are literary and historical associations, mighty castles and landmarks famous in American life.

You will understand and be better understood in England and Scotland than anywhere else in Europe. You can play golf on the world famous courses at St. Andrews and North Berwick—in the land of the game.

In addition to the "Flying Scotsman", the famous train between London and Edinburgh, there are fast and frequent trains to all the numerous points of interest.

in national and international affairs. The stress was on the personal side of the candidate.

The first speaker for the affirmative, I. Levy, gave a short outline of Smith's life from its beginning on New York's East Side. He then undertook to prove that the opposition to Governor Smith was based mostly on prejudice, because Smith was a "wet", a Catholic, and connected with Tammany Hall. Gilbert spoke first for Williams, giving an outline of Hoover's life. He dwelt on his outstanding abilities as an organizer of people and his efficiency as an administrator, a man who knew how to deal with people.

J. D. Rich, the second speaker for the affirmative, rehearsed Smith's activities as Governor of New York, showing how his wide spread reform and method of attacking policies gave him his high position. Erskine, the second negative speaker, pointed out the necessity of having a man in the White House who understood foreign relations. He showed how Hoover's foreign experience qualified him in this respect, and presented him well trained in international affairs.

H. B. Levy, third speaker for the affirmative, presented a bitter arraignment of Secretary Hoover, declaring that the negative side would have to defend the Republican policies of the last dozen years to show that Mr. Hoover would be a suitable President. He attacked Hoover's reticence on public questions, comparing this with Smith's outspokenness and the principles of the progressive Democratic Party. The third speaker for the negative, Overton, called attention to Hoover's experience in strictly national affairs and to his work in the Commerce Department. Hoover was presented as eminently qualified as a domestic administrator. Overton maintained that the qualifications for the Presidency did not include a discussion of party politics such as the rights and wrongs of Prohibition or Mr. Coolidge's foreign policy.

In rebuttal the negative replied to the first affirmative speaker that the fact that Smith was a "wet", a Catholic, and connected with Tammany Hall made no difference. Smith was an uncertain quantity, although successful as a state governor, whereas Hoover had shown himself capable of dealing with great problems. In closing the case, the negative summed up their arguments by stating that Hoover was better qualified because of his personal characteristics, as a domestic administrator, and as an international figure. The affirmative rebuttal was chiefly concerned with a continued attack on the policies of Mr. Harding and Mr. Coolidge on the grounds that Mr. Hoover was necessarily in accord with these views and therefore not qualified to be President.

hard hitters. Their season last year, while not remarkable, was better than the average and with most of that club playing again this year, they present a strong aggregation. Inclement weather has hindered their pre-season practice also, but the Nutmeg Aggies have the advantage of having played several games and are rapidly rounding into mid-season form.

He pointed out the appalling difficulties of administration facing the warden in his policy of attempting to treat the prisoners so that the outside world will seem a normal atmosphere to them when they are released. ber who are going out, or help pay for the burials of those who die."

In speaking of capital punishment the warden said: "I was a firm believer in the social necessity of capital punishment for many years. But imagine being in the position of being ordered to put to death a human being. If the continuance of capital punishment would mean that one decent individual would be living who is not, I should be for it. But it does not. Also, it would be all right if all the criminals were caught, but too many get away with it. Only one out of 85 committers of homicides goes to the chair. The man who dies is a hero to his gang, but the man who spends his life aching for freedom has no heroic glamour about him."

Business Executive Discusses Success in Industry

tinguished men as the other three-quarters."

In order to ascertain the relation of scholarship to business success, the American Telephone and Telegraph Company has for the past two years made a study of this subject, which covers the record of 4,125 of the college graduates in the Bell System from 101 colleges. The institutions from which they were graduated were asked to classify each man in one of four groups:

1—Those graduating in the first tenth of their class;

2—Those graduating in the first third but not the first tenth;

3—Those graduating in the middle third of their class;

4—Those graduating in the lower third of their class.

Members of the first group, which numbered 198, began to move ahead of their rivals five years after graduation and kept this up until they were 25 years out of college. Here they began to go forward even more rapidly than before. The second group were lower in earnings than the first but easily excelled the other classes. The third group was ahead of the last in amount of income but behind the others, while the fourth group was last.

These statistics represent the average of the men in their group, and do not illustrate the individual records, which differ widely from the averages. Mr. Gifford says that this report has shown that "on the whole the evidence is very striking that there is a direct relation between high marks in college and salaries afterward in the Bell system." Contrary to the expectations of some, the results, obtained separately for engineering and arts men, were strikingly similar. The measure of success was taken to be salary in this study, and the author explained the reason for so doing by saying, "While I do not believe that success in life can be rated by income, I do believe that as between one man and another working in the same business organization, success and salary while not the same thing will generally, speaking, parallel each other". In conclusion Mr. Gifford said that, if later developments affirmed the results of the Bell study, not only would business have a "surer guide" in the choice of able men, but also would offer an incentive to study while in college, and that conscientious study in college would lead to the "fruitful and happy use" of the leisure during their business career.

are Captain Kuki, of last year's squad, and Kononoff. Backing these men are two sophomores, Cleary and Wigglesworth, who are now playing good tennis. Just as much as the team is always picked from the six top players in the challenging "ladder", the personnel of the rest of the team is indefinite. Captain Kuki can be considered as M. I. T.'s best man. He played excellent tennis last year, and is fully expected to come up to, if not to improve, his game of last season.

The probable line-up of the two teams follows:

Sewall	3	Cleary
Chase	4	Wigglesworth

MEDIOCRE TIGERS TO MEET WILLIAMS NINE

Visiting Team Has Shown Erratic Form, Winning but Two of Seven Contests

Playing seven handi-capped by the cold weather of the past week which prevented practice until Thursday and in the forced cancellation of the Connecticut game, the Varsity Baseball team will meet Princeton at 3:30 this afternoon on Weston Field in the second contest of the season. In its only game played thus far, the Williams nine suffered defeat at the hands of West Point, while Princeton, having played about seven games, has had but mediocre success, registering victory only twice.

Although the Purple team was unable to practice on Weston Field until Thursday, the players have been working on their own in the cage, and with the benefit of strenuous practice sessions on Thursday and Friday for the whole squad. Coach Fox believes that the players are in condition to give Princeton a good battle.

We had hoped to correct the mistakes which were apparent in the West Point game, but the weather has been a severe setback, says Coach Fox's comment on the adverse weather conditions. The line-up for today's game will probably be the same as the one that started last week's contest, but it is possible that Inverse will start in Thompson's place at second base and that Foster will start in R. H.

Dr. Willis of Columbia Visualizes Uncle Sam as Holding the Bag in the Reparations Settlement

"The United States will soon find itself the ultimate claimant for the entire amount of the German reparations," Dr. H. Parker Willis, Federal Reserve authority and Professor of Finance at Columbia, prophesied to a Record reporter. "This situation has apparently been the goal of foreign governments for several years, and as soon as Poincaré is firmly seated in power in France he may be expected to carry the plan to completion. Then Germany can pay us if she can. In fact, a revision of reparations will be required within a year or so."

Dr. Willis explained this proposition by calling attention to the fact that German payments to European governments have been made, directly or indirectly, through the use of borrowed money, the bond issues for which have been floated in this country. In effect, Germany has been borrowing from us to pay the rest, a procedure which cannot be continued indefinitely.

When asked to what extent the adminis-

Saunders '28 Wins Local Current Events Contest

As a result of the test held a week ago Friday, Alexander Saunders '28 of Yonkers, N. Y., has been awarded first place in the local New York Times Current Events Contest and will receive a prize of $125, in addition to having his examination paper submitted to the judges of the national contest with the possibility of winning the intercollegiate prize of $500. The second prize of $100 was won by Robert L. Stern '29 of Rochester, N. Y., while $25 goes to Clinton R. Knox '30 of New Bedford for the third best paper.

The contest was so close between Saunders and Stern that the judges, Professors Bulfinch, Leigh, Newhall, Remer, and Assistant Professor Comer, decided that the original division of the cash awards for the first two places in the Williamsstown test into prizes of $150 and $75 should be altered to the amounts shown above. Saunders is an honor student and is taking the Economics major, while Stern, also an honor student, is majoring in Political Science.

AMHERST DEBATE TO END FORENSIC SEASON

Gaskill, Robinson, and Hunt '28 Will Attack Fascist Policies at Amherst Tonight

As an appropriate conclusion of the debating season, the annual Williams-Amherst forensic encounter with points on the Trophy of Trophies at stake will take place at Amherst Saturday evening when the Williams team, composed of Gaskill, Robinson, and Hunt '28, will attempt to win whatever defense of Mussolini's regime may be made by Mahler, Stauder, and von Rohr for Amherst. Williams is entering the second team, which won the contest in Williamsstown last year, while the opposing Amherst debaters successfully defeated P.D. in a practice debate with Columbia two weeks ago.

The question as stated for the present debate is: "Resolved: That this house favors the governmental policies of Mussolini." It is a truly remarkable triumph to the Amherst team that the proposition which they maintained at Columbia was far more extreme in its wording: "Resolved: That all European governments should adopt the policy put forth by the Fascist party in Italy." Ample competition is indicated for the undefeated Williams trio.

Wesleyan has already won the Little Three championship by defeating both Williams and Amherst on the same question. A Williams team failed to uphold Mussolini against the attacks of the Red and Black in Williamsstown on March 25, and a second group of Wesleyan debaters, this time landing the prosperity brought about by the Fascist regime, won a unanimous decision from Amherst at Middletown last Saturday. Although both Little Three and Eastern Intercollegiate League championships are beyond the reach of either of the contenders in tonight's debate, the combined stimulus of Williams-Amherst rivalry, Fascism, and the well known propensities of the Williams speakers may be counted upon to produce the most animated forensic scene of the year.

MacGREGOR JENKINS TO SPEAK TO 'FORUM'

Williams Graduate, Publisher and Writer Will Talk in Griffin Sunday Evening

MacGregor Jenkins '90, Managing Editor of the Atlantic Monthly, and treasurer of the company which publishes it, will be the speaker at a meeting of the Forum Round Table to be held this Sunday evening at 7:30 in Griffin Hall. Mr. Jenkins, who is credited with having built up his magazine to its present sound financial status, will speak on "The Magazine and Public Opinion", and all those who are interested, whether members of the Round Table or not, are invited to hear his address and take part in the discussion following.

After graduating from Williams, where he was editor-in-chief of the Williams Weekly, Mr. Jenkins took a position with the Houghton Mifflin Company, but was soon made publisher of the Atlantic Monthly, which was at the time a high-priced magazine devoted to serious subjects. The magazine was then edited by Mr. Horace E. Scudder, who handed its direction over to Mr. Walter H. Page and later to Professor Bliss Perry '81. In 1918 he went into partnership with Mr. Elbert S. Sedgwick, bought out the Atlantic Monthly, and by changing its nature so that it would appeal to a greater class of readers, developed it into one of the most prestigious publications in the country.

Mr. Jenkins is the author of several books and articles in the field with which (Continued on Second Page)

POSITIONS ARE OPEN TO UNDERGRUATES

'The Record' Lists Positions Now Offered For All or Part of Summer Months

As an aid to undergraduates who plan to work for all or part of this summer, The Record is establishing a column for the listing of positions open to Williams men. Further information regarding the offers listed in this column, which will appear at regular intervals throughout the spring, may be obtained at the office of the Dean. The Record would appreciate hearing from anyone who is in a position to offer employment to Williams men for the summer. The positions at present open to undergraduates are as follows:

Reckford County Scout Camp, Nyeck, N. Y., wants camp counselors for their season, from the last week in June to September first. Pays from $75 to $250 the season, depending on qualifications and previous experience.

Big Brother Movement, Inc., wants counselors for their camp near Delaware Water Gap. Pays $100 and expenses for a season from July first to September first.

Manhattan Boy Scout Camps want counselors for their camps around New York. Pay $75 for a season of nine weeks, starting July first.

Joint Vocational Service, Inc., of New York offers a number of positions as camp counselors or recreational leaders. Specifications will be sent to those interested.

Harriman National Bank of New York offers three or four positions for the summer in various departments of the bank.

Hales '29 Will Speak at Banquet of Outing Clubs

As the representative of over 25 eastern collegiate outing clubs, Barton W. Hales '29, president of the W. O. C., will speak at the Outing Club Banquet to be held this evening at Dartmouth College, Hanover, N. H. In his answer to the opening address, which is to be made by A. P. Hatch, past president of the D. O. C., Hales will welcome the delegates and outline the work of the conference.

This intercollegiate meeting of outing clubs, held this year for the first time, is the outgrowth of a correspondence last year between the D. O. C. and the W. O. C. These outing clubs, both of which were assisted in their organization by Prof. Albert H. Lockhead, are the oldest and usually considered the best in the country. The conference, under their leadership, is held this year for the purpose of cementing relationships between the various collegiate outing clubs. The other Williams delegate is Charles L. Travers '30, treasurer of the W. O. C.

ROHRBACH ELECTED TO PRESIDENCY OF W. C. A.

Strong '29, Ely, Thoms, Marshall '30 and G. D. Welles '31 Complete 1928-29 Officers

Lloyd D. Rohrbach of Sunbury, Pennsylvania, was chosen President of the Williams Christian Association for 1928-29 at the elections held in Joseph last Tuesday. At the same time, Dexter K. Strong '29 of Portland, Oregon, was chosen for the Vice Presidency, while R. Ely, F. H. Thoms, Jr., and R. H. Marshall '30 were elected to the offices of Recording Secretary, Corresponding Secretary and Treasurer respectively, with G. D. Welles '31 as Assistant Treasurer.

Coming to Williams from the Hill School, Rohrbach has taken an active part in college affairs since his Freshman year when he was captain of the class football team and Chairman of the Freshman W. C. A. Cabinet. In his Sophomore year Rohrbach was elected president of his class, and was re-elected again this year. He has played on varsity teams in football for the last two seasons, and also throws the hammer on the track team. Strong has also taken part in college activities, being manager of swimming for next year besides acting as Corresponding Secretary in the 1927-28 W. C. A. Council.

The three Sophomore members of the 1928-29 Council are all prominent members of their class. Ely has been president of his class for two years, besides playing basketball his Freshman year. Thoms played Freshman soccer, basketball, and baseball, and this year played Varsity basketball until he injured his ankle. Marshall was elected assistant football manager for next fall at the end of the competition this year. All these men have taken some part in the Christian Association work this year, Marshall being Assistant Treasurer. G. D. Welles '31, the Assistant-Treasurer-elect was Secretary of the Freshman Cabinet this year, and is a member of the Purple Car Board.

H. M. Grant is now associated with the Chert-Peabody Collar Company, in Troy, N. Y.

Mr. Harry Irvine Discusses Shakespeare in Modern Dress, and Tells Plans for Next 'Cap and Bells' Play

PIERROT-HAMLET

Written by Mr. Harry Irvine

"The Tragedie of Hamlet, Prince of Denmark," by Master William Shakespeare, Gent., as it hath divers times been enacted," etc., has been chosen by Cap and Bells for their annual Decoration Day presentation.

Nowadays, whenever two or three Shakespeareans are gathered together, the question is certain to be mooted: "What about Shakespeare in modern dress?"

Well, what about it? The idea is not a novelty. Up to the time of Garrick, Shakespeare was invariably treated as a "modern" playwright, and his plays were performed by the actors and actresses in their ordinary clothes, and not in any kind of "costume". The younger Keats gained great publicity by insistence on "historical accuracy", especially in the "histories"; and since then we have all followed his example with ever increasing research into the minutiae of costume, furniture and

AMHERST TO OPPOSE VARSITY TRACK TEAM

Williams Is Not As Strong As The 1927 Team; Closest Meet In Years Predicted

It is a meet which promises to be the closest in many years between the two teams. Williams will inaugurate her 1928 track season on Weston Field this afternoon against Amherst, one of the season's chief opponents. Considerably weakened by the loss of many point-winners from last year's well-balanced team, the Purple does not have such a favorable outlook as usual, while the Sabines appear to be more powerful than a year ago, when they were swamped by the home team. The letter men have all been showing good form in practice, so that the outcome of the meet seems to depend on the number of second and third places which Williams can gain.

The dashes are again all fortified with Beals, Sterling, and Stuyven, who took the first three places in the 100 and first and second in the 220 in the meet a year ago. Captain Keppel will again defend his title in the 100, but Stammer, who was runner-up to him, will be unable to compete. Perry of Amherst is expected to make a good showing, being brushed close behind Skinner. Eastman and Lebl, who pressed Starr '27 for first place in the half, are again scheduled to run, and J. Dougherty and Lane are expected to give them a stiff race.

Lebl was also the runner-up in the mile in 1927, while a year ago Nevin, has been showing improvement and recently won an interclass event by a wide margin. Snyder and Cobb, who finished one-two in the two mile, should repeat their performance. Lessenden, who was the only Williams man to place in this event, has been graduated, but Moon and Greene are now running in good form. Although Captain Zinn, record-holder in the high hurdles, has graduated, Boynton who was second to him, will run in this event Saturday. The Purple is not as strong in the lovs, with only Needles, who was third to Zinn and Stauffer in last season's meet.

In the field events the Williams team has not equaled the performances of the strong 1927 aggregation. Stauffer and Mahler of the visitors won the broad jump last year and will compete again today, while Rowley and G. Dougherty will represent Williams again. The high jump is perhaps the home team's weakest event, owing to the loss of Shumway and Thomas, who jumped for four years, the former setting the present college record. Little, who tied for first and is another college record-holder, has been displaying his former ability and should again win the pole vault. The discus and javelin will be taken care of by Rowley and Callaghan, each of whom took third in these events a year ago. Gailer and Miller will meet properties. Meanwhile, the divergence between modern English and the language of Shakespeare has steadily increased, paralleled by a divergence in usages of all kinds, until today the plays of Shakespeare are in language almost as "foreign" to our younger generation as the plays of Ibsen or Tchekov in the original; and in manners and customs are far more alien and remote. The one thing that is not out of mode is their dramatic value—their exposition of human nature. Hence arises the demand for modern dress. It is not basically a love for mixed periods. No intelligent person can get much real pleasure from seeing a Hamlet in his plus fours talking of "bearing fardels" and asking his friends to swear by his sword rather than by his niblick,—from seeing a King in a cutaway coat, joined by "the imperial janitress of this warlike realm", shaking cocktails and playing bridge, the while he admonishes the court that

As the time approaches when another batch of college-fed young men is to be turned loose in the world, the question of vocations naturally arises. By now most of the seniors must have a pretty definite idea of what they expect to do after the inevitable breathing and drinking spell in Paris. Some will seek a postponement of their careers by marking time in a business school; some will pass into the solemn obscurity of professional study; and some will slide quite easily into father's shoe factory. The wavering residue will wait patiently for the "call" and then start selling bonds. Altogether, the departing senior has many things to think about.

The college graduate in search of a job is always the cue for discussions concerning the significance of a Phi Beta Kappa key. No one seems to know very definitely what it is meant to open, and many regard it as little more than ornamental jewelry. In a previous editorial it was pointed out that at least one business executive has respect for the Phi Beta Kappa society. He had made the startling discovery that there is a direct relationship between high marks in college and success in business later on. But this is startling only because the business man does not usually talk that way. In fact his contempt for high scholastic marks is equalled only by his eagerness to have his son go to college. A strange paradox, and yet one common enough to warrant our attention.

There is some hope, however, that this childish attitude toward intellectual achievement is slowly being replaced by a more sensible one—at least within the colleges themselves. It is significant, for instance, that the majority of the senior class at Yale recently signified its preference of a Phi Beta Kappa key to a major "Y". The fact remains that there is no more certain test of a man's intellectual character than his four years of college work, for it is during these four years that a record is kept of those very qualities which under ordinary circumstances make a man successful in later life. His ability to think, his method of working, his punctuality, and his reliability in the performance of all duties are recorded as accurately by his various instructors as they ever will be. If we are looking for a prophecy of the future we will do well to consult our own scholastic records, and if the picture is a gloomy one, we may console ourselves by the well known fact that there are exceptions to every rule.

Amherst to Oppose Varsity Track Team

once more in the shot put, the latter having won before. Weeks, winner of the hammer throw appears to be the strongest man in his event.

Williams has not had any outside competition to date, but showed promise in the time trials last Saturday, except with regard to aspirants for seconds and thirds. The meet this afternoon will also be Amherst's first, but the Purple and White boasts a much stronger team this year than last. In a class meet held at the beginning of the spring term many of the men who ran last season displayed great improvement in form. The outcome of the meet, which is expected to be one of the closest in many years, counts four points toward the "Trophy of Trophies", and will be instrumental in determining to which college this goes at the end of the year.

The probable entries are:

100-yd. dash—Amherst: Barnard, D. Felt, Mahler, Perry, Prigge, and Scott. Williams: Beals, Stayman, Sterling, and Straw.

220-yd. dash—Amherst: Barnard, Mahler, Neale, Perry, Prigge, and Scott. Williams: Beals, Keep, Stayman, Sterling, and Straw.

440-yd. dash—Amherst: Eastman, G. Felt, D. Felt, Morris, Neale, and Stauffer. Williams: Babize, Elbrick, Keep, Lane, Stayman, and Strother.

880-yd. run—Amherst: Eastman, G. Felt, Lamson, Morris, Navin, and Tracy. Williams: Baptiste, J. Dougherty, Lane, J. McKean, Memmott, and Strother.

One mile run—Amherst: Cobb, G. Felt, Harvey, Merritt, Navin, and Tracy. Williams: J. Chapman, Fitchen, MacFarland, and Reeves.

Two mile run—Amherst: Cobb, Harvey, Navin, Snyder, and Tracy. Williams: Greene, Herrick, Moore, and E. Reynolds.

120-yd. high hurdles—Amherst: Brittain, Buresh, G. Felt, Merritt, and Grant. Williams: Boynton and Shoaff.

220-yd. low hurdles—Amherst: Brittain, Buresh, D. Felt, Merritt, and Stauffer. Williams: Boynton, Nicolls, and Shoaff.

Broad Jump—Amherst: Buresh, Clyne, Mahler, and Stauffer. Williams: Davis, G. Dougherty, Overton, Rowley, and Satterthwaite.

High Jump—Amherst: Bradley, Buresh, Grant, Kleene, and Van Miller. Williams: Davis, Hoge, Layman, Shoaff, and Satterthwaite.

Pole Vault—Amherst: Allison, Bryant, Hull, Kleene, Roundy, and Stauffer. Williams: Eiszner, Hoge, Little, and Winn.

Discus Throw—Amherst: Allison, G. Felt, Heisey, Hubbard, Ketcham, and Mahler. Williams: Gailer, Hibbard, and Rowley.

Javelin Throw—Amherst: Brittain, Clyne, G. Felt, Heisey, Ketcham, and Mahler. Williams: Callaghan, Huggins, Rowley, and Travers.

Shot Put—Amherst: Clyne, G. Felt, Heisey, Ketcham, Mahler, and Van Miller. Williams: Gailer, Hibbard, and Shaw.

Hammer Throw—Amherst: Bradley, Cobb, Harvey, Hubbard, Ketcham, and Snyder. Williams: Rohrbach, Stewart, Tedford, and Weeks.

ALUMNI COLUMN

PLANS ARE BEING LAID FOR REUNIONS IN JUNE

Alumni Will Be Active Every Day
Of Commencement Period,
June 21 to 25

According to a recent announcement, alumni activities for the Commencement period are scheduled to begin on Thursday, June 21 at 2.30 with a baseball game between an alumni team and the Varsity, and they are scheduled to come to a close at 12.30 on Monday, June 25, with an alumni luncheon in Laseil Gymnasium, after a variety of events, entertainments, and meetings scheduled between these two dates. According to the Dix Plan and the Old Plan, 39 classes are due in Williamstown for their reunions, but since two classes, '93 and '13, are included in both groups, the total number of classes scheduled to have their reunions is 37.

Under the Dix Plan the classes to have their reunions this June are, '74, '75, '76, '77, '93, '94, '95, '96, '12, '13, '14, and '15; while under the Old Plan the following classes are included: '53, '58, '63, '68, '73, '78, '83, '88, '93, '98, '03, '08, '13, '18, '23, '25, and '27. Arrangements are being made to take care of the visiting alumni, and a few weeks ago E. Herbert Botsford, Alumni Secretary, and Secretary of Committee on Commencement, assigned the following rooms in the dormitories to the alumni: south and middle entries of Berkshire, first and second floors of Currier, south entry of Fayerweather (which has recently been remodelled), Sage Hall, Williams Hall, and West College.

The tentative Commencement program, which was published in the April 21 issue of The Record, calls for alumni activities of some sort every day of the period. On the first day the Varsity-Alumni baseball game will be played, and this will be followed on Friday, June 22 with a meeting of the Alumni Advisory Council, of the Board of Trustees, of the Directors of the Loyalty Fund Association, and of the Phi Beta Kappa Society, the day concluding with fraternity reunions in the evening. On Saturday, there will be meetings of the Society of Alumni and Loyalty Fund Association, of the Alumni Athletic Association, and of the Gargyle Alumni Association, while a baseball game between Williams and Dartmouth will be played in the afternoon on Weston Field. Baccalaureate Services will be held Sunday morning, and on Monday, the program calls for the Commencement exercises followed by an alumni luncheon, which brings the activities to an end.

George W. Hunter, who has been investigating health work in Southern California for the past two years, has completed a report, which is to be read soon at a meeting of the National Tuberculosis Association.

1902

Lansing Bloom, now travelling in Europe on a fellowship of two years granted him by the School of American Research and the Historical Society of New Mexico, is gathering material to supplement history records held by those organizations in Santa Fé.

1914

Donald S. Mackay has recently been appointed assistant professor of Philosophy at the University of California in Berkeley.

1924

Malcolm C. McMasters, son of Rev. and Mrs. E. A. McMasters of Williamstown, was married last week to Miss Jean Conover Norwood, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Robert Norwood of New York. The ceremony was performed at the Byzantine chapel of St. Bartholomew's church by the bride's father, who was assisted by the father of the groom. Since completing his college course, Mr. McMasters has been in the New York office of Moody Company.

1925

Harry Baldwin Fisher, Jr., of New York, was married last Thursday, at the Church of the Incarnation, New York City, to Miss Gwendolyn Wright Talbot, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Talbot of New York. The best man, Lindsey V. Dodge '25, was a Williams graduate, as were five of the eight ushers, Sherman Jones '23, Richard W. Bourne, George H. Perkins '25, Harvey Humpstone and Harry Watkins '26.

1926

John Leech has recently taken the position of assistant buyer for Ed. Pinaud, Inc.

New 'Purple Cow' Board Will Edit Dairy Number

Concentrating its art and wit upon the more domestic side of bovine life, the Williams Purple Cow will publish as its next issue, the first of the new board, "The Dairy Number", which will be distributed in time for the Spring house-parties on May 5. This number, besides a generous embellishment of the art of Layman '29, the new Editor-in-Chief, will contain several pictures by Shepler '28 and Heller '28, retiring members of the staff, and numerous drawings by Eisner '29, the art editor of the incoming board. In addition to this there will be jokes, inkling of the dairy, contributed by all the members of the Editorial Board, including many contributed by the six freshmen recently elected to positions.

Phi Gamma Delta Leads Interfraternity Handball

Defeating the Commons Club team in a hard-fought match last Thursday afternoon, Phi Gamma Delta won the championship of the National League in the interfraternity handball tournament. Completion of the matches in the American League has been delayed by several postponements, but Phi Delta Theta will face Zeta Psi in the final match, which must be played this week.

The summaries of the second round matches are as follows: Phi Delta Theta won from Chi Psi, 13-21, 21-6, 21-10, and Zeta Psi defeated Beta Theta Pi, 21-12, 21-10, in the American League; while in the National League the Commons Club defeated Delta Kappa Epsilon, 21-12, 21-19, and Phi Gamma Delta won from Phi Sigma Kappa, 21-0, 21-15. In the third round Phi Gamma Delta won from the Commons Club 14-21, 21-0, 21-8, but the other third round match between Phi Delta Theta and Zeta Psi has not yet been played.

Houseparty Dates Granted

Petitions for May houseparties were granted to 13 houses by the Student Council at a meeting held last Tuesday evening, April 24. On May 5, the following organizations will entertain: Delta Upsilon, Phi Gamma Delta, Phi Sigma Kappa, and Psi Upsilon, while on May 12, the Commons Club, Chi Psi, Delta Kappa Epsilon, Delta Phi, Kappa Alpha, and Zeta Psi will hold parties, Chi Psi and Delta Kappa Epsilon entertaining together. The final date, May 19, will be filled by Alpha Delta Phi, Beta Theta Pi, and Delta Psi, of which the first and the last will combine.

Organ Interludes

The program of organ interludes which Mr. C. L. Safford will present during the morning services in Thompson Memorial Chapel this week, is as follows:

Monday	Adagio in A Minor	J. S. Bach
Tuesday	Second Symphony	(Larghetto in A) Beethoven
Wednesday	Chorale	César Franck
Thursday	Pastorale	Wely
Friday	Andante (String Quartette)	Beethoven
Saturday	Intermezzo	Bizet

'Gul' Competition Commences

Hodges, Reynolds, Trauernicht, and Wineberg '31 have entered the competition for the position of assistant circulation manager of the Gulielmian.

Infirmiry

W. J. Curtis, Harper, and Herberich '28, Callaghan, Leshner, and Strong '29, and Dorrance, Meier, Merrill, and Woodruff '31 are at present confined to the Thompson Infirmary. If an undergraduate becomes seriously ill, his parents are immediately notified by the College authorities.

Musical Clubs Competition

As a result of the 1930 managerial competition for the Musical Clubs, the following recommendations have been made by the management: Second Assistant Manager, R. H. Mailey; Second Assistant Transportation Manager, C. B. Niebling; Second Assistant Press Manager, J. B. Thurston; Second Assistant Associate, J. H. Thompson.

DR. WILLIS SPEAKS ON WORLD'S GOLD STANDARD

Restoring Balanced Distribution Of World's Gold Urged by Noted Economist

"Restoration of the world's gold standard is one of the most important and most difficult economic problems, not only of today, but of all time", affirmed Doctor Henry Parker Willis in his lecture on "Restoring the World's Gold Standard" delivered under the auspices of the Economics Department in Griffin Hall last Tuesday evening. Dr. Willis attributed the breakdown of the gold standard as a basis of international trade to the rise in price level caused by the war, and, in a discussion of the possibility and feasibility of a restoration of that standard, emphasized the important role to be played by the United States Federal Reserve Banking system.

Preliminary to taking up in detail the present efforts toward restoration, the speaker referred to the gold standard as "an embodiment of the pre-war system of thought, encouraging freedom of international competition and its resulting natural distribution of wealth." This balanced distribution was entirely upset by the war, so that "when restoration is spoken of, it means a counter-revolution, and a re-establishment of all its accompaniments." Dr. Willis then indicated various objections to such procedure, chief of which was the fact that "the restoration of the gold standard necessitates a return to pre-war price levels, which will inevitably involve great financial stress and business depression. It is a question as to whether we might not better stabilize prices around the present level."

In regard to projects now under way for restoring the natural distribution of the world's gold supply, the speaker pointed with highest praise to the activities of our Federal Reserve Banks, declaring that "the fact that our Federal Reserve System has helped Great Britain and other European and South American countries to maintain their gold supply, is one of the outstanding achievements of that system. Competitive banking between France and England thrusts the problem of the restoration largely upon us", asserted Dr. Willis, "and as we now have no definite policy we are forced to take the back track. Curtailment rather than inflation, restriction of credit, and other things unpleasant to U. S. business are necessary to the re-established gold standard, and whether or not this endeavor is worth while is now under discussion in Washington."

W. H. Collins '29 is Named Head of 'Cercle Francais'

William Howes Collins '29, was chosen by members of the Cercle Francais at a meeting held last Wednesday evening to succeed Samson Lane Faison '29, as President of the organization for the coming year; Faison will occupy the office of Vice-President for 1929. In addition to his work in the Cercle Francais, Collins has represented his class in track, soccer, and debating, was Assistant Manager of the Musical Clubs in Sophomore year, and is prominent in the W. C. A.

The Cercle Francais will be slightly changed this year in an endeavor to make it more inclusive by extending its program, and increasing the membership. The club is especially desirous that all men who have visited France or who have facility in speaking French will attend the next meeting to be held on Monday May 7.

Van Vechten Speakers Meet

Calling a meeting in the Jesup Hall reading room last Tuesday afternoon, Mr. Bushnell of the English department explained the details of the Van Vechten extemporaneous speaking contest to the six seniors who are to compete: Rust, Shoemaker, Robinson, Gaskill, Hodge, and Hunt. Two trials will be held, on May 7 and on May 10, and the winner will receive the prize of $70, established by Mr. A. V. W. Van Vechten '47. Each student will deliver two speeches, which will be judged by two committees of the faculty, the members of which will be announced later.

NUMEROUS POSITIONS ARE OFFERED SENIORS

Agents From Theatrical, Bond, and Banking Businesses To Hold
Interviews Here

Agents from two business corporations have already visited Williamstown for the purpose of offering positions in their respective organizations to the members of the senior class, while three more companies are listed to send agents here for the same purpose. Recently, men have been sent from the General Electric Company at Schenectady and from The New England Telephone and Telegraph, soliciting for both the Bell Telephone and Western Electric Companies. Agencies listed for future visits include the American Laboratory Theatre, Halsey Stuart and Company, and The New York Trust Company.

Miss Elisabeth Bigelow, executive secretary of the American Laboratory Theatre, will hold conferences this Thursday with any men who desire to enter the theatrical field as a profession, either as a playwright, designer, or actor. On Tuesday, May 1, a representative from Halsey Stuart and Company will talk with any seniors interested in the bond business. He has sent ahead a supply of pamphlets entitled "What Is the Bond Business", which students may obtain in the Dean's Office.

Thursday and Friday Donald C. O'Brien '24, representing The New York Trust Company, was in town to interview seniors interested in entering the banking business. The men entering upon employment by this company will start working in the various departments of the bank and will go through a course lasting from one to two years, which is comparable to the average business course in banking. At the same time they will be doing actual work in foreign exchange, corporate and personal trust, credit work, and commercial banking.

Lab Is Given to Amherst

In order to accommodate the rapid increase in the size of the Amherst Chemistry Department, a new chemistry laboratory has been given the college by Mrs. William H. Moore and her two sons in memory of William H. Moore of the class of 1871. The building, which is to be considerably larger than the present establishment, will contain several class rooms, laboratories, study halls, recreation rooms, and a large lecture room. It will be of reinforced concrete and masonry construction with a brick exterior in harmony with the surrounding structures. The W. T. Moore Memorial Laboratory will be placed north of the present chemistry building, facing on College Street, and work will be commenced immediately to insure its completion by the opening of college in 1929.

Commons Club Elects

As a result of elections, held Wednesday evening, April 25, the following men will assume office in the Commons Club for the ensuing year of 1928-29: John G. Haviland '29, President; Howard W. Rymers '29, Vice-President; William F. Hartwell '30, Treasurer; and Thomas E. Jenks '31, Secretary.

Spring Sport Schedules Changed and Augmented

Several changes and additions were made in the schedules of various spring sports at a recent meeting of the Athletic Council, while at the same time a tentative schedule for next year's freshman football team was ratified. Freshman athletics will receive a new stimulus this season as a tennis team has been added to the list of sports with outside competition, the schedule consisting of three games, the last of which is against the Amherst freshmen.

Following is a list of changes and additions made:

Lacrosse

LACROSSE SEASON TO OPEN IN SPRINGFIELD

Springfield Team Has Poor Record
But Is More Experienced
Than Williams

Playing in their first game of the season, the Williams lacrosse team will journey to Springfield this afternoon to meet the Springfield College twelve in what promises to be a hard fought encounter. Although this is the first year of lacrosse at Springfield, they have already played three games, have shown considerable improvement, and are expected to furnish stiff opposition to the green Williams team.

Springfield's record so far is not very impressive, but the extra experience and teamwork may count heavily. In their first game they were defeated by Syracuse, 10-1, and in the second they were white-washed by Colgate, 18-0. In the game with St. Stephen's last Saturday, however, they met defeat by the much more creditable score of 6-2, showing clearly the effect of the extra practice. The Purple team, on the other hand, is almost entirely composed of men who have had no previous lacrosse experience, Thurston, Collins, and Wulff being the only regulars from last year's line-up.

When interviewed by a Record reporter, Coach Bellerose would only say that the team was going to Springfield with determination to win if possible, despite the expected strong opposition. The tentative line-ups are as follows:

WILLIAMS		SPRINGFIELD
Dunning	g.	Lang
Collins	p.	King
Tierney	c.p.	Clogston
Ashby	ld.	Sharkey
Christie	2d.	Bohn
Wulff	3d.	Randall
Thurston	e.	Whiting
Habhard	3a.	Springer
Jacobs	2a.	Cochrane
Brown	1a.	Ready
Arndt	o.h.	Large
Willmott	i.h.	Miller

Dr. Willis' Views on Reparations Settlement

been raised when conditions required. To win the favor of the farmer, pressure has been brought to bear on the farm loan banks to the point where considerable losses have resulted from over extension of agricultural credit. Such influence of the Treasury Department has been too great, and the Secretary should be removed from his ex-officio membership in the Federal Reserve Board."

Dr. Willis unhesitatingly branded the recent proposals for the coordination of discount rates among the Federal Reserve Banks as "illegal, unwise, and disastrous. . . . There is no more diversity of conditions among the states of Europe than among the regions of this country, and therefore there is as sound a basis for diversity of rates here as abroad." To show that cooperation was possible where coordination was unwise, he said that a representative of the Federal Reserve Board was at present establishing a statistical service in connection with the Bank of England, while English advisers have cooperated in similar ways with the Federal Reserve Bank of New York.

"A well-managed banking system would not effect prices at all, for it would not extend credit without a basis of wealth." This involves the central contention of Dr. Willis' proposed Federal Reserve reforms. By restricting credit on collateral and requiring reserve rediscounted, self-liquidating notes, which represent production of wealth proportional to the credit extended, business would be amply financed and the disproportionate sums of cash now available for pure speculation would be checked. It was Dr. Willis' continual plea, however, that for the most part such limitations should be imposed, not by law, but by good banking sense.

Non-Athletic Tax

Nearly 200 men have not yet paid their Non-Athletic Tax for 1927-28. Serious inconvenience is being caused the Non-Athletic Council by the failure of students to pay this tax, and, if it is not paid, non-athletic organizations will have to be abandoned. The following is a statement of the finances:

Quota	$2,559.00
Collected to Date	1,930.28
Outstanding Dues	$628.72
The Council is already in debt $127.69, but the outstanding amount will more than cover this debt. The names of the men who have not paid their tax of $4.15 will be published in one week in THE RECORD.

Mr. Harry Irvine Discusses Shakespeare

"it us befitted

To bear our hearts in grief and our whole kingdom

To be contracted in one brow of woe".

Only novelty-mongers can get any real thrills out of mere incongruities. The demand arises from a revolt against a stereotyped method of presentation in dress, diction, and gesture, which tends to overlay with pedantry and scholasticism the real and surpassingly "modern" humanity of these great plays. We cannot translate them into modern English without destroying their pre-eminent literary value; somehow therefore we must manage to keep them vivid and vital in presentation.

There is no time or space at the present to justify the course on which Cap and Bells has resolved. A bare announcement of the policy must suffice; a later article will expound the "wherefores". As far as in us lies, the diction will aim at externalizing the thought and meaning of the archaic words; the necessary "cuts" will aim at telling the full dramatic story and not at making Hamlet a "star part"; the dresses and mounting will be modelled on the Italian Commedia del Arte. Hamlet will appear in the dress of our good friend Pierrot. We may say that we arrived at the decision in the morning; and that at lunch we were told of an article by Stark Young in which he advocates this treatment of the play of "Hamlet" as well as of the play of "Volpone". "Great minds—"

The cast, so far as it has been chosen, will be:

Cladius, King of Denmark	Baxter '30
Hamlet	Hilmer '28
Gertrude, Queen of Denmark	Heermance '31
Ophelia	Sessions '31
Polonius	Reid '28
Horatio	Robinson '28
Laertes	Lucas '31
Rosencrantz	Spencer '28
Guildestern	Elbrick '29
Oswald	McAneny '30
Pierrot	Hiles '31
Bernardo	Megeath '31
Francisco	Layman '29
Reynaldo	R. Wheeler '31
Fortinbras	Gilbert '30
Ghost of Hamlet's father	Washburn '28
Prologue	Rust '28
Player King	Reiff '30
Player Queen	MacMullan '28
Fourth Actor	Rumsey '31
A Sailor	Gross '30
Messenger	Ashley '30

Costumes and settings designed by Casaday '29.

(Note: Mr. Irvine will continue the description of his plans in an early issue of THE RECORD.)

'LITTLE THEATRE' WILL PRESENT THREE PLAYS

Plays by O'Neill, Pinero and Mrs. Canfield on Bill for May 11 Production

A varied bill made up of three types of drama, and produced by an exceptionally strong cast, will be presented by the Williams Little Theatre in the Jesup Hall auditorium on the evening of Friday, May 11, as a part of the houseparty festivities of that week-end. The plays which have been chosen are In the Zone, by Eugene O'Neill, Playgoers, by Arthur Pinero, and The Duchess Says Her Prayers, by Margaret Cass Canfield; and fraternities desiring blocks of seats at 50 or 75 cents each may arrange for them with Hartwell '30.

In the Zone, directed by Shoemaker '28, is the first O'Neill play which the Little Theatre has produced in over a year, and is typical of the rugged realism of its author's style. It is one of his "S. S. Glencairn" series, the scene being laid on board a ship in the mine zone during the war. R. B. Sewall '29 will direct Playgoers, an almost farcical comedy by Pinero dealing with modern home life and the servant problem. R. Wheeler '31 has the part of the Master, and Mrs. Graham that of the Mistress, and they will be assisted by a cast of six players taking the parts of five species of maids and an odd man. The Duchess Says Her Prayers is a delicately wrought play, made poignant by the wistful charm of the central figure. The action takes place in the Duomo at Milan. Mrs. Newhall, Lucas '31 and Miss Eleanor Lincoln as the Duchess, comprise the cast of this play by Mrs. Canfield.

The complete casts are as follows:

In the Zone Eugene O'Neill
Driscoll	Hall '30
Davis	Ashley '30
Scotty	Cannon '31
Smitty	Heermance '31
Cocky	Manning '31

Mediocre Tigers to Meet Williams Nine

Williams' place in center field. The final choice will not be made until game time.

The Princeton team has proved very erratic in the games thus far, both in hitting and fielding. This can be shown in the fact that only two errors were made on the Southern trip when three games were played, but in last Wednesday's game with Holy Cross the Tigers made six misplays. The hitting has been fair, and what hitting has been done has not come when hits meant runs. The pitching staff, however, led by Heydt, the "nonchalant" pitcher, called thus because of his indifferent air while on the mound, is the strongest part of the team, but because of poor support in the other departments, it has not shown to its best advantage. The visitors have won from Rutgers and Duke University, conquerors of the strong Pennsylvania nine, but have lost to Villanova, Columbia, Virginia, Georgetown, and Holy Cross, while two games have been called off because of rain, one with Lehigh, and the other with Cornell, with Princeton leading 1-0 in the third inning.

The tentative line-ups and batting orders are:

WILLIAMS: Danieli, rf; Thompson or Inverso, 2b; Putnam, 3b; Alexander, lf; Foster or R. H. Williams, cf; Tittman, 1b; Winn, ss; C. H. Smith, c; T. H. Smith, Wolcott, or Singmaster, p.
PRINCETON: Strubling, cf; Lackey, ss; Layton, rf; Vogt, 3b; Hardt, 1b; Newmark, lf; Swift, 2b; Beard, c; Palmer or Bauehens, p.

Bearings and Grinding ~ world efficiency and high speed

THE world's precision machinery and fast-moving vehicles depend for their efficiency and speed on ball and roller bearings. Anti-friction bearings by the millions are being produced in great plants employing thousands.

One of the major production operations—one that has made ball and roller bearing accuracy possible is "grinding." Batteries of Grinding Machines are to be found in every ball and roller bearing plant.

Many of these plants are equipped with Norton Grinding Machines. Many of them use Norton Grinding Wheels and Alundum Polishing Abrasives.

Norton Research Engineers, Chemical Engineers, Mechanical Engineers and Sales Engineers are serving this as well as many other industries, meeting present production needs and studying into ways and means of bringing about greater accomplishment in the days to come.

Five Seniors to Speak in VanVechten Contest

Gaskill, Hodge, Robinson, Rust, and Shoemaker, '28, have entered the contest for the $70 A. V. W. VanVechten prize, awarded annually to that member of the graduating class who is selected as best in extemporaneous public-speaking. Arrangements for the contest are in the hands of Professor Bushnell, and May 7 and 10 are the dates set for the two groups of speeches which will be delivered in Jesup Hall auditorium.

As usual in this competition, each entrant will make two speeches on subjects assigned an hour in advance, and differing for each speaker. A different set of judges, consisting of three members of the Faculty, will act on each occasion, the prize to be presented to the man of their selection.

Life and Organization at Military Academy Is Explained by Major Brunzell, U. S. M. A.

"Because of the high standing of Williams as a college and because of the pleasant relations which West Point has enjoyed with Williams in the past, and in order to promote friendly relations with colleges of its type," were given by Major O. L. Brunzell, Field Artillery, Treasurer U. S. M. A. and officer in charge of baseball, to a Record reporter as reasons why the West Point baseball team came to Williamstown a week ago to play one of the two games away from home it is allowed each season. Besides answering this question, Major Brunzell explained the daily life of the cadets, and compared the activities at the Academy with those at Williams.

In speaking of the daily routine, Major Brunzell explained that reveille is sounded at 6.00 a. m., after which the rooms are put in order and the cadets eat breakfast. A study period comes from 7 to 8 and is followed by six hours of classroom work, which is interrupted by lunch from 12.10 until 1. From 3 until 4.30 the Corps goes through practical work consisting of drill and formations, followed by athletics from 4.30 until 5.30. Retreat is held at 6.15 after which supper is served. The evening is devoted to a study period lasting from 7.00 until 9.30, with taps sounded at 10.00, at which time all lights must be out. This program is followed daily except Saturday, when no work is

'Phi Beta Kappa' Hears President McConaughy

Meeting for the second time this spring, the Williams Chapter of the Phi Beta Kappa Society held its annual banquet, at which over 50 men were present, at the Delta Upsilon House last Friday evening at 7.00 p. m. Professor Henry D. Wild, President of the Williams Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa, presided at the banquet, introducing President J. L. McConaughy of Wesleyan and F. S. Miller '28, who was elected speaker for the undergraduates at the first Phi Beta Kappa meeting at Professor Wild's house in March.

President McConaughy was the principal speaker of the evening. He talked in general of the position and function of Phi Beta Kappa in the educational field of this country. He spoke of the need of individuality as against uniformity in education, not merely in the physical aspects of our colleges and universities, such as buildings and so forth, but also with regard to the types of education and the successful performance on the part of each institution of its own unique task as distinct from that of others. He emphasized the need of uniqueness in connection with student life and work, and the desirability of holding Phi Beta Kappa to its original design and ideals of individuality and high scholarship.

DEERFIELD GLEE CLUB TO SING HERE TONIGHT

Winners of Interscholastic Glee Club Title Will Hold Concert in Chapin Hall

As the climax to its series of winter entertainments, the Thompson Memorial Course has been successful in obtaining the Deerfield Academy Glee Club, which, under the direction of Mr. Ralph H. Oatley, will appear in Chapin Hall this evening at 8.15. The club will offer a varied program of vocal pieces, arranged in groups of three, and the intermissions will be filled by tenor and piano solos and a selection by a string trio, composed of violin, piano, and cello.

This organization, at present comprising 24 members, has devoted considerable attention to its work and has achieved a noteworthy record. The Club recently won first place in the Interpreparatory School Glee Club Contest, which takes place annually in the Town Hall, New York City, where the group had previously acquired fame by gaining the same reward in 1926 and by receiving honorable mention the following year.

The program which the Club will present is as follows:

- I. Briar Rose Ferdinand Debois
- II. Now is the Month of Maying Thomas Morley

'PUBLIC SWAYED BY EMOTIONS'—JENKINS

Eminent Journalist Denies That Magazines and Newspapers
Create Opinion

"I do not believe there is such a thing as defined public opinion in the United States," said Mr. MacGregor Jenkins of the Atlantic Monthly in addressing the Forum Round Table last Sunday evening in Griffin Hall. "If there is," Mr. Jenkins continued, "whose opinion is it? If it exists, it is not created by the journalists or by the intellectual group or by the man in the street. As a race I believe we have no public opinion. We are almost completely controlled by emotions."

"There has never been a case since I can remember when the newspaper had an ounce of influence except as reflecting a powerful personality. We emotionally follow a man like Horace Greeley, but we are not rationally guided by institutions. We act on the spoken word. We are the most omnivorous devourers of oratory in the world. The postprandial oratory per annum in this country would develop more power than Niagara. Due to the radio the spoken word will soon be brought to every home, and I believe this will be highly beneficial, because we are the one nation which responds to that sort of thing."

"Magazines do not create, they crystallize public opinion. Walter H. Page said that their function was to create discussion. The only way a paper affects opinion is by coloring news, because this appeals to the emotions. The optimistic side of all this is that nine times out of ten we are emotionally right. The American public is feminine; it has intuition."

'LITTLE THREE' GAME SCHEDULED FOR FRIDAY

Varsity Journeys to Middletown
To Face an Experienced
Wesleyan Team

Following a week of rest in which the emphasis during practice has been on hitting and baseball strategy, the Williams varsity will meet its first "Little Three" opponent, Wesleyan, Friday afternoon at Middletown. Due to the fact that the Red and Black team is composed of veterans who only last week defeated West Point 3-2 the Purple squad seems to be up against a very difficult group of hard hitting and excellent fielding players.

Not only does Wesleyan's victory over the Army give them the edge on the "dope," but the fact that they were defeated by Colgate by only one run, 5-4, indicates that they are a superior team. Earlier in the season the Lowell Textile team was overcome, 18-7, due mainly to the playing of Thomas, who struck out 8 men and collected four hits. In spite of the fact that this was the opening game only two errors were credited to the Middletown club. The following week Travis held the Army to a few scattered hits and fanned five men. In order to prove that he had a wealth of material, Coach Howard started Coons in the pitching box against M. I. T. and a 13-2 victory was registered. Sufficient practice weather has enabled the Red and Black to reach mid-season form and their heavy hitters

Ten Subjects Picked in 1928 Graves Competition

Preliminary announcement was made last week of the ten subjects that have been chosen for the 1928 Graves Prize competition, and the rules which all contestants must follow have also been given out. Any member of the Senior Class is eligible to enter the competition, as usual, and six prizes of $20 each will be awarded, with an additional prize of $80 to the contestant who delivers his essay most effectively at the public contest in June.

The subjects chosen for this year are: "Liberty and the Undergraduate"; "The United States in Nicaragua"; "Mussolini"; "Ulysses, The Waste Land, and Strange Interlude"; "Pro Vita Monastica"; "Thomas Hardy"; "The Age of Fordism"; "Up-to-Date Iconoclasm"; "The Significance of Scientific Discovery"; "An Ideal College." Since the final prize is based on "effective presentation in public," contestants should shape their essays for oral delivery.

The regulations further stipulate that "it is to be noted that any competitor entering the contest engages thereby to take part in the speaking contest in case he receives one of the preliminary awards." Essays should not exceed 3,000 words in length, and must be handed in to Mr. Bushnell by May 16.

STRONG HOLY CROSS TEAM TO PLAY HERE

Purple Will Try to Break Winning Streak of Crusaders Who Are Undefeated

Facing one of the severest tests of the season, the Varsity baseball team will be called upon to meet the powerful Holy Cross nine, which so far is undefeated, winning most of its games by large scores, tomorrow afternoon at 4.15 on Weston Field. The Worcester school, famed for its baseball players, is represented by a characteristically strong nine, as can be seen from the fact that it has registered seven consecutive victories, most of which have been over strong teams, and the Williams squad, handicapped by lack of practice and experience, will be forced to display unusual power, both at bat and in the field, in order to fight on even terms with the Crusaders.

Coach Fox feels that, due to the cancellation of the game with Princeton on Saturday, the whole squad, particularly the pitching staff, should be in much better physical condition as a result of the extra rest. An epidemic of sore arms had appeared previous to the Princeton game, but it is expected that all the men will be in shape to face the strenuous schedule of this week, which begins with the Holy Cross game tomorrow and continues on Sunday.

AMHERST DEBATERS ARE TROPHY VICTORS

Audience Decides that Prosperity Justifies Fascist Policy by One Vote Margin

Showing that Mussolini has raised Italy, formerly "morally and spiritually sick, the paralyzed gangrene foot of Europe," to a position of political, social, and economic prosperity, the Amherst debating team, defending the affirmative of the question "Resolved: That this house favors the governmental policies of Mussolini," defeated a negative Williams team composed of Gaskill, Hunt, and Robinson '28, at Amherst last Saturday night, and thereby won the annual point for debating on the Trophy of Trophies. The debate, which concludes Williams' forensic schedule, was awarded to Amherst by a 2 to 1 decision, the votes of the two judges being divided and the third vote, that of the audience, favoring Amherst, 15 to 14.

After being introduced by President Pease, Mahler, the first Amherst speaker, depicted Italy in 1920 as "wounded, blind, and helpless," and stated that "Mussolini has risen up as a magician, transforming an Italy that prophets said was hopeless, into a place of respect." This, Mahler pointed out, fulfills neither of Winston Churchill's pessimistic 1920 predictions that Italy would either become a Soviet state or pass out through her own excesses.

Robinson, of Williams, in return characterized Mussolini as the "celestial chambermaid of Italy," and argued that we should

Loss of Debating Point Endangers Trophy Score

Loss of one point on the Trophy of Trophies, suffered when the debaters were defeated at Amherst last Saturday evening, may prove to be a more critical matter than its magnitude would indicate. The score is now 9½-4½, making it necessary to win nine of the remaining 11 points in order to retain the Trophy. Williams must win both baseball and track to secure a tie. Since Purple prospects are quite favorable in tennis and golf, the tie is improbable and the clear responsibility for the losing or winning of the Trophy rests on the major sports.

The present standing, with the points allotted to each event, is as follows:

	Williams	Amherst
Football (4)	0	4
Basketball (3)	1½	1½
Hockey (2)	1	1
Swimming (2)	2	0
Debating (1)	0	1
Track (4)	?	?
Tennis (2)	?	?
Golf (1)	?	?
Baseball (4)	?	?
Total	4½	9½

"Honors work has been elected very largely, and is probably more widely taken here than anywhere else because it does not impose burdens on the students, and because it was created to meet an undergraduate demand," was the way in which Professor Theodore Clarke Smith, Professor of History and Chairman of the Committee on Honors Courses, described this new branch of the Williams curriculum in an interview with a Record reporter. In regard to sophomores and juniors, who are contemplating this kind of work during 1928-1929, he said that the best thing to do was to have an early consultation with a Faculty member and to plan a course of study, even if, at this time, there was a question of eligibility for honors courses.

The plan of the work will be the same as this year, but there are two changes, which are still pending, and waiting for approval by the administration. Professor Smith stated that it is now under consideration to expand the honors work to include two courses in senior year, for those students who have done well in their junior year. The second change is in regard to honors grades. At present, honors are given for all B's in a major, but this eliminates some able students, who perhaps achieve a higher percentage of A's but also get one C. Thus some second rate students get

VACATIONS AND HONORS WORK

There is no need to indite further praises of Honors Work. Fifty men in attendance at last Thursday's meeting for the discussion of enrollment for 1928-29 testify to its popularity. Outlines of work accomplished in the past offered by members of the Faculty on the same occasion bear witness to its efficiency, while their apparent personal enthusiasm disclosed, even to class-broken Sophomores something of the enterprise. The institution itself is fixed. But there is a problem which will always be new whenever the time for application approaches. Who shall be the chosen few, and how shall they be chosen?

Grades have been wisely relegated to their proper degree of importance, neither more nor less, by the system as at present administered. This leaves a wide range of cases demanding judgment of individual fitness. Toward a shrewd basis for this judgment we have a contribution to offer which, if it cannot be taken seriously in letter, has by practical men been found worthy of consideration in spirit.

Honors Work in one-tenth of the student's curricular pursuits during his college days may be new, but a more significant and exacting honors system covering one-fourth of his entire college career is as old as the summer vacation. For three months out of every twelve the student has more freedom for the play of his initiative and intellectual imagination than he will have at any other time in his life. The use he makes of this challenging opportunity to do just as he pleases during summer months is at least interesting.

Modern youth is not to be administered the customary rebuke at this point. The protracted endurance of the summer resort with its tennis, cards, and dancing, is a back number as vacations go. The sight of a Williams gentleman cruising timber, or selling bonds, or wrangling would-be campers, or scouring the decks of a freighter, is more familiar. Then in a pinch there is always Europe. Young Idiot has always run off on such quests of adventure and experience, but formerly such an apostasy from learning and social position was irretrievable. Recognition of the Great Annual Adventure is perhaps the unique educational accomplishment of modern times.

A certain New York business man, according to a recent editorial on this subject in the New York Evening Post, regularly asks applicants how they have spent their summers before he permits any discussion of college records. He is looking, not for previous experience in his line of business, but for what he considers the best evidence of initiative and creative imagination. The Faculty might find a little data on this subject on its council tables a significant supplement to sheaves of reports from the Dean's Office.

To the Editor of THE RECORD,
Sir:

The article appearing in the last issue of THE RECORD (April 28, 1928) on the Outing Clubs Conference misplaced the credit due for the calling of this conference. There was no conference between the D. O. C. and the W. O. C. although such a plan had been a hope of the W. O. C. Hales '29 of the W. O. C. spoke for the guests at the conference, expressing their appreciation for the work of the D. O. cludes with the Wesleyan and Brown games on Friday and Saturday. Capt. Smith has been handicapped with a sore elbow, while Wolcott has had a wrenched back, C. H. Smith and Singmaster sore arms, and Tittman a sore hand, but these injuries have been responding to treatment and Coach Fox will be able to send his strongest line-up against the visitors.

Although Williams has played but one game, which was lost to the Army, it has benefitted from numerous practice contests, among which was one with a strong semi-pro team from North Adams, and, if the weather is at all favorable, it should give a good account of itself in the games of this week. Three contests, with N. Y. U., Connecticut Aggies, and Princeton, have been called off because of rain, and thus the squad has not had much experience in regularly scheduled games. The line-up and batting order for the Purple will probably be the same as that which was scheduled to start the Princeton game, but if a left handed pitcher is on the mound for the Worcester team, Coach Fox will shift his batting accordingly.

The visiting nine seems to have no outstanding weakness, as it possesses a strong pitching staff led by Fons and Nekola, backed up by a steady fielding combination, but its real power lies in its offense, which has proved unusually strong for a college team. Brown was defeated by an 18-7 score and Richmond was downed 17-0, while Princeton lost 12-2. These scores indicate the hitting strength of the team which will oppose the Varsity tomorrow. Vermont, one of the strongest teams in the east, was shut out 4-0, and Spring Hill, a powerful nine from Alabama, lost a no-hit, no-run contest with Fons on the mound, in games which show the pitching strength of the visitors. In addition to this, Fons has also recorded a three-hit game.

The probable line-ups and batting orders for to-morrow's game are:

ALUMNI COLUMN

REPORT SHOWS WIDE ALUMNI DISTRIBUTION

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Is Geographical Center—14.9% of '27 Class Lived in West

That Williams is a New England college in name only is emphasized by a table compiled at the Dean's office showing the geographical distribution of alumni from 1900 to the present time. The geographical center of alumni is at Poughkeepsie, and New York State leads all others in having the largest number of graduates in residence.

A decisive increase in students from the Eastern States has taken place in the last quarter of a century, and this rise has been counterbalanced by a decrease in New England. Of the 1927 graduates, 56.1% came from the Eastern States, while in 1900 that section of the country claimed 10% less than that. The Class of 1900 had practically one third of its members New Englanders, whereas only 21% of the class that graduated last June were from New England states. The Central States, Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, and Illinois claim 14.9% of the members of last year's graduating class. This percentage has varied little in 28 years.

Due perhaps to its later development, the Middle West has possessed a large 3% of the alumni total as its average for the past quarter-century, with a spasmodic rise to 7.4% in 1917. The far-Western States have averaged even less, and are approximately on a par with the Southern States. An interesting sidelight on the distribution is brought out in connection with the statistics of the years just following the World War, particularly of 1919. In that year the New England and Eastern State groups returned suddenly to approximately the 1900 standings, while the Central States total was diminished by half.

Stillman F. Westbrook has recently been elected to the vice-presidency of the Aetna Insurance Company of Hartford.

1913

The SPORTLIGHT

(Copyright, 1928, New York Tribune Inc., Trademark Registered, U. S. Patent Office)

The Professional Game

Is there more sportsmanship among the amateurs than among the professionals? I doubt it quite a little.

For example, take the recent Hornsby-Cohen incident. Cohen was Hornsby's successor at second for New York. Hornsby had been pushed out with little ceremony. He had been sent from a ball club with a pennant-winning chance to a ball club without a pennant-winning chance.

When Cohen played his first game for New York, before an opening-day crowd, it was only natural that he would be nervous. Hornsby might have made it a trifle harder for him. In place of this he gave Cohen all the encouragement he could. "Just think you are still with Buffalo," he said, "and play your natural game. You'll make good. Don't worry."

How many stars on college football teams would extend the same encouragement to some younger player on the rival side?

The amateur, you might say, is keener to win. Does that naturally make him a better sportsman?

Another Incident

A few years ago Walter Hagen apparently had the North and South championship at Pinehurst safely won.

He heard that Freddie McLeod was moving along at a fast clip and might beat him. Hagen wandered out the course and met McLeod at the seventeenth tee. This seventeenth hole was then a one-shooter, about 150 yards in length.

"What club are you using, Freddie?" Hagen asked.

"A No. 4," McLeod answered.

"Don't do it," Hagen said. "I made the same mistake. Take a No. 3 or a No. 2. The wind's stronger than you think."

I've forgotten what happened, but at any rate Hagen's advice was sound, and he called the turn correctly for a rival on the club to use.

A Vote for Risko

Dear Sir: There are many fight fans who believe that Johnny Risko, the Cleveland baker, would give Gene Tunney a harder fight than Tom Heeney, whom the champion prefers for a midsummer opponent. And the same group believes that Mr. Tunney appreciates the fact. Risko's round and tumble style, that is devoid of all science, would give Tunney trouble, and the chances are the baker would be on his feet when was over. With Heeney the champion will have a better clean-cut and clean-cut victory. But mid-Western fans believe rather rough deal, after progressing so far in Mr. Rickard is deserving of a shot at Tunney. But the deservings receive his dues in the boxing racket.

leave, provided that satisfactory conduct has been shown and provided that no exams occur at that time. In addition to this, the first, or senior class, is allowed six week-end leaves each year.

Speaking of organizations and societies, Major Brunzell said that the corps is organized on a military basis, consisting of three battalions of four companies each, all of which are permanent organizations. Each class is organized, and the only society is the Dialectic Society, a musical club, which sponsors the different entertainments. The same society publishes the Harvester, the annual, and the Poinder, a bi-weekly, and stages an annual dramatic production which is known as the Hundredth Night Play, called thus because it is presented 100 nights from graduation. Dances are held in the winter twice a month, but in the summer, they are given three times a week. At certain of these functions the cadets are permitted to smoke, otherwise it is not allowed outside of quarters.

The officers of the corps are chosen on a basis of scholastic work, military deportment and conduct, and general appearance. The scholastic honors are given in the form of a "Gold Star" which is awarded to each cadet attaining an average of 92 per cent in all of his studies. The name of such a cadet is published in the "Directory" as a "Distinguished Cadet". The average number to receive this honor is about five out of every 200. One "Gold Star man", Zimmerman, was on the team that played Williams Saturday, playing center-field.

Professor T. C. Smith on Honors Work Study

honors, while more talented men fail. It is planned to alter the requirements; so that one C in the majors courses will not necessarily keep one from honors work.

In regard to the departments offering honors work, Professor Smith said that every branch of the curriculum was doing so for next year, with the exception of four groups, Art, Astronomy, Geology, and Religion, which do not begin until junior year. In each department, there are several fields for study, arranged specifically to engage the undergraduates' interest. In some courses, the subjects for study are much broader than others, but there is some variety in almost every department. Before, some have thought that this kind of work was too difficult, but Professor Smith refuted this, saying that the object of honors work was not to pile on work, but at the same time, it is supposed to be taken seriously.

One of the strong points of honors work is its adaptability to the individuality of the student. Any initiative on the part of the undergraduate is encouraged, but quite often, after starting work in one field, more ability is discovered in another line of work. Professor Smith went on to say that the system works perfectly well as it is; and, although some have suggested that honors work be substituted for all work in a major, he stated that Williams was not yet ready for that, since the tradition is just being firmly established here. The great advantage of this method of study is its flexibility, for it can be broad or intensive to meet the demand of the individual. The faculty is in favor of men, who desire to take it, doing so, and feel that the work should be kept up in such a way as to meet the favor and increase the well-being of the student.

CONVENTION IS HELD BY 19 OUTING CLUBS

Dartmouth Is the Scene of First Conference; Hales Represents Williams College

Representatives of 19 eastern collegiate outing clubs met at Dartmouth last Friday and Saturday for the first Intercollegiate Outing Club Conference ever held, under the auspices of the Dartmouth organization. In connection with the conference there was an extensive collection of outing club goods and auxiliaries on exhibition.

The purpose of the conference was to establish closer relations among the various outing clubs of eastern colleges, and to compare ideas of club management and organization with the hope of building up greater interest in this work throughout the outing clubs represented. B. W. Hales '29, President of the W. O. C., and R. B. Sanders '29, President of the D. O. C., are working out a plan for an Outing Club Union to carry on this work.

The conference opened Friday afternoon with the showing of five reels of D. O. C. movies touching on the Winter Carnival, ski trips, and cabin trips. A banquet followed at the Hanover Inn, after which Sanders welcomed the 32 delegates representing both men's and women's colleges. Hales responded for the guests and stressed the advisability of an Intercollegiate Outing Club organization being formed to carry on the work begun by the D. O. C. in this conference. President Hopkins of Dartmouth College gave the main address, in which he presented the D. O. C. with a $50,000 Field and Club House, given by the class of 1900. Discussion groups followed on the topics of general organization and policies.

Saturday morning and early afternoon were spent in discussion groups on the topics of membership, winter sports, secretariate, finances, trips, carnival, and cabins and trails. These discussions were opened by papers read by D. O. C. men which traced the development of the various branches of work in the D. O. C., and were supplemented by comments from other clubs, so that all organizations were able to find definite aid in their work.

Later in the afternoon the conference adjourned to Moose Cabin, eight miles from Hanover, for another banquet prepared by D. O. C. men. This trip gave the delegates opportunity for inspection of the typical cabin and equipment. Many of the delegates spent the night at the cabin; others walked back over a trail covered with four inches of snow.

In describing the conference, Hales, one of the Williams delegates, stated, "As President Hopkins stressed in his talk, Outing Club work fills a great need in a college program. Dartmouth capitalizes this more than any other activity, on account of her remoteness, yet there are great possibilities for the growth of such work in all the New England colleges. The spirit that should exist in each club should be along fraternal lines, and thus the club grows. The W. O. C. gained much help for future programs from the conference, and hopes to announce shortly the plans for this spring and early fall."

Plans for Camp Lyon Made

Planning to accommodate the large attendance at Camp Lyon, which has increased materially with each succeeding year since its inception, the executive committee of the Williamstown Boys' Clubs met last Friday and made preliminary plans for the summer camping season in addition to their regular business of determining the spring athletic program. Although the date of opening and the length of the season have not yet been determined, the camp will again be located in Stockbridge Bowl, Lenox, at the north end of the lake where the situation is ideal for all kinds of summer sports. Camp Lyon will be this year under the supervision of Kenneth E. Kepner '28, Chairman of the W. C. A. Boy's Work Committee, while Dwight E. Shepler '28 retiring President of the Williams Christian Association, will hold the position of assistant director and John A. Cornillel will be the superintendent of clubs.

Lacrosse Captain Elected

R. C. Thurston, '28, of Avon, N. Y., was elected captain of the varsity Lacrosse team at a meeting of the squad, last Friday afternoon. Thurston has been manager of the team for the past two years and is both captain and manager this year; his other activities have consisted of class swimming and wrestling, interclass and varsity Lacrosse, and Freshman and varsity football. Last year he was Second Assistant Transportation Manager for the Musical Clubs, and is now Press Manager for the Clubs.

When Dad was a "Modern Youth"

BICYCLES, stereopticon lectures, and the "gilded" youths with their horses and carts; at night the midnight oil burning in student lamps while the gas lights glared and flickered across the campus—the gay nineties when Dad was in college seem primitive to us to-day.

Now it's sport roadsters, the movies, and radios. At night the MAZDA lamp replaces the midnight oil in dormitory rooms, while modern street lighting sheds its friendly glow over the campus.

Without electricity we would have none of these improvements. To-day's marvel of electrical invention becomes to-morrow's accepted utility. In the coming years, by taking advantage of new uses of electricity you will be able to go so much farther that the "tearing twenties" will seem just as primitive as the "gay nineties".

Scientists in the research laboratories of the General Electric Company keep G.E. a leader in the field of electrical progress. Skilled G-E engineers develop each latest invention. The G-E factories carry out the engineers' designs with high-quality material and expert workmanship.

RAIN CAUSES THREE SQUADS TO BE IDLE

Contests With M. I. T., Amherst, and Princeton Are Called Off
Last Week-end

Rain, snow, and general cold weather last week-end caused the cancellation of two Varsity contests, a baseball game with Princeton, scheduled for Saturday on Weston Field and a tennis match with M. I. T., scheduled for Friday on the Sage Hall courts, and the postponement of one, the annual track meet with Amherst, which was scheduled for Saturday on Weston Field, but which will be held today instead. Inclement weather throughout the week made it impossible to put the tennis courts in condition for the M. I. T. match, which was to open the season for Williams, and it was cancelled late Thursday when continuous rains made it certain that the match could not be played, but no action was taken on the baseball game or the track meet until Saturday morning, when word was sent to the respective opponents that weather conditions here were so bad that neither contest could be held.

While there was little hope that the tennis match could be run off because of the rain throughout the week, the fair weather of Thursday and Friday made it seem possible that the contests scheduled for Saturday could be played, but, with the appearance of snow and rain on Saturday morning, this encouragement was abandoned. The Princeton team had left Princeton on Friday and had spent the night in Troy, but after receiving a telephone call from Assistant Manager Fowle, it came no further. Arrangements were made with Amherst by Acting Manager Clark to postpone the track meet between the two "Little Three" rivals until Tuesday, and the Sabrinas did not even leave Amherst.

W. C. A. Men Visit Settlement

who Headed the Recent Deputation to New York

run by Cameron Hall No. 21. The purpose of this deputation, which is always a very interesting one, is to provide an exchange of ideas and to arouse the interest of the younger men there in education.

Lacrosse Game Cancelled

Because of unfavorable weather conditions the lacrosse game with Springfield College scheduled to be played last Saturday was cancelled. The two teams will meet, however, on May 30 when they will play in Williamstown. The next game will be on Saturday when the Purple team will face the St. Lawrence twelve here.

Hockey Recommendations

As a result of the competition which ran throughout the past winter E. D. Reeves '30 has received first recommendation for Assistant Manager of hockey. F. D. Sherman, C. L. Safford, and W. A. Adsit, '30, were at the same time recommended for Assistant Managers of Swimming, freshman hockey, and freshman swimming, respectively.

DEBATERS SPLIT EVEN IN SEASON'S CONTESTS

Loss of the Last Four Decisions Costs Two Titles After Promising Start

Four consecutive victories during the winter months against Hamilton, Dartmouth, Princeton, and Pennsylvania gave promise of one of the most successful debating seasons that Williams has ever seen, but defeat at the hands of the Harvard team in February proved a disastrous turning point, and since that time no Purple debaters have been able to secure a favorable decision. Losses to Wesleyan and Amherst put Williams out of the running for the Eastern Intercollegiate League championship and relegated her to last place in Little Three ranking.

The first debate of the year took place on November 9 when a Hamilton team was defeated by vote of the audience in Williamstown. The Williams representatives, Harris '29, Erskine '30, and Park '30, with Webster '30 as alternate, successfully attacked the resolution that the United States should materially strengthen its military and naval defence.

League competition opened brilliantly with a triangular debate against Dartmouth and Princeton on December 3 on the subject of extra-territoriality in China. Maintaining that such rights should be abandoned by the powers, Gaskill '28 and McKean '29 won a 2-1 decision over Dartmouth in Jesup Hall, while, on the other side of the question, Robinson '28 and Straw '30 were unanimously victorious over Princeton in the out of town debate.

Harvard and Pennsylvania were the opponents in the second League series on February 28; the subject was the abolition of the present jury system. Hunt '28 and Reeves '29, on the affirmative, defeated Pennsylvania by a 2-1 margin at home, but at Cambridge, where the debate for the lead in the League race was held, Harris and Layman '29 lost to the Harvard speakers.

The Little Three contests, which were at the same time the final round of the League season, dealt with the question of Mussolini's policies in Italy. Wesleyan, attacking Il Duce, won a unanimous victory in Williamstown against Harris '29, McKean '29, and Heaton '30 on March 25. Last Saturday at Amherst lost the decision and the Trophy of Trophies point which goes with it by a margin of one vote of the audience.

On April 21 the second non-League debate of the year was held at Cornell. Overton '29, Erskine and Gilbert '30 failed to convince the doubtful members of the audience that Hoover was preferable to Smith as a presidential candidate. This method of decision, by which those members of the audience who enter the hall in uncertainty are the ones to cast the critical votes, is one which has been recommended for use at Williams.

Goldsmith's Play Revived

In an effort to revive interest in the works of eighteenth century dramatists, a production of Goldsmith's "She Stoops to Conquer" will be presented at the Colonial Theatre in Pittsfield by a company under the direction of Mr. Clayton Hamilton. The all-star cast of this play includes such names as Mrs. Leslie Carter, Patricia Collinge, Lawrence Dorsey, O. P. Haggie, Lynn Harding, Glen Hunter who played in "Merton of the Movies" and "Young Woodley", and Pauline Lord, all of whom are well known actors and actresses on the American stage. Tickets for this play are on sale beginning Monday, April 30, and the English Department has recommended this production to all who can possibly attend.

1931 To Have Tennis Team

In preparation for the first match with Williston Academy on May 19 a group of 21 aspirants for the Freshman tennis team will report to Professor Messer for practice as soon as the courts are in shape. This will be the first year in which the freshmen have been officially represented in this sport.

Phil Union To Meet

Assistant Professor James B. Brinsmade of the Physics department will address the Philosophical Union at its meeting next Sunday evening, May 6, at eight o'clock in Griffin Hall. His subject will be "Philosophical Tendencies in Modern Science."

Amherst Track Meet Scheduled for Today

shape, practise was held both Saturday afternoon and Sunday morning in order to put the team in the best shape possible for the meet.

Comparisons on paper point to a close score, owing to Amherst's increased strength over last year and to the graduation of many of Williams' ablest men. This will be the first meet of the season for both teams, so that inexperience will count equally against each aggregation. In practise to date, the Purple letter men have been showing good form, but the chances for many second and third places, which are expected to be instrumental in determining the outcome, are not bright.

Having won the dashes last year, Beals, Stayman, and Sterling are again expected to run these events in good style, while Captain Keep will be the strongest Williams entry in the 440. Lane and J. Dougherty will be in the half this year for the second time. The mile and two-mile were both won by Amherst in 1927, but the distance runners are expected to give a better account of themselves in Tuesday's meet. Boynton will be back in the high hurdles, but the lows are not well fortified this season.

TERRIS MOORE, 1929
Who Will Run in the Two-Mile Event Against Amherst
here Today

The field events are considerably weaker than last year. Rowley and Callaghan are throwing the javelin, and the former will also enter the broad jump with G. Dougherty. Gailer and Weeks, in the shot put and hammer throw, are also expected to make a good showing, as is Little, college record-holder in the pole vault. The high jump is perhaps the home team's weakest event, with no experienced men left. Amherst has been strengthened, owing to the development of many of their new men, who were running for the first time a year ago.

will be in good shape for Friday's encounter.

Coach Fox is undecided yet as to who will draw the pitching assignment, but it is probable that Captain Smith will be the first choice. Should Smith be saved for the Brown game on the following day Singmaster or Wolcott would pitch. C. H. Smith is sure of the receiving job. Tittman, Thompson or Inverso, Winn and Putnam will complete the infield. Alexander, who pitched for the 1930 team, has been getting his arm in shape and it is possible that he will get a chance in the box. At present he is playing in left field. Danich and R. Williams or Foster comprise the outfield.

condemn two Fascist policies, violence and the suppression of labor. He cited the case of Matteotti, who was seized and murdered after an anti-Fascist speech, his killers later being given freedom after trial by a jury, lawyers, and a judge all of whom were Fascists. In regard to suppression of labor, he stated that strikes in Italy were prohibited and were treated as crimes, and that taxes have gone up and wages have gone down since Mussolini's advent. The speaker conceded some of the Italian dictator's advantages, but said his violence and suppression of labor were contrary to the aspirations of the world.

Amherst's next speaker, von Bauer, showed how Mussolini had brought prosperity to Italy in his deletion of the billion-dollar railroad deficit, his raising of the postal, telephone and telegraph departments from the quagmire of debt, and his alleviation of the peasants' situation. His three chief policies of 1921-22, economy, reorganization of taxes that placed the burden where it belonged, and his encouraging of industries, were shown by examples to have succeeded, and von Bauer concluded by asserting that "Mussolini is one of the greatest economists in the world."

In refutation, Hunt of Williams declared that the opposition could explain but not excuse, and charged them with using the fallacious post hoc ergo propter hoc system of argument. He mentioned several decrees and laws connected with the question which brought out Il Duce's unfair rule. "Distrust of democratic government is common to all times. I do not claim that democracy is the only form of government, but for men that love freedom it is the only kind of government."

The last regular speaker for Amherst was Stammer, who stated that Mussolini, with modern efficiency, has overcome the two great problems that confronted him—overpopulation and the lack of food. "The age-long feud of western Europe ended on the day the Pact of Locarno was signed by Mussolini. The Corfu incident, which Gaskill was to condemn in the next speech, was upheld by Stammer as "decidedly unwarlike, but a peaceful gesture."

In closing, he stated that "from a chaos of communism, Mussolini has transformed Italy to a peaceful nation." Gaskill, concluding the argument for Williams, said that Italy's economic and political progress was not unique, and that with any one guiding Italy's destinies, the country would have risen. The Corfu incident, in which Mussolini sent an ultimatum to Greece and then bombed Corfu only because four Italians had been murdered on the Greco-Albanian border, Gaskill considered as typical of the Italian dictator. He spoke of Mussolini's unfair policy in Tripoli and his Tyrolean desecrations, all of which makes Europe afraid of his tyrannical rule. Concluding, he called Mussolini's policy one of "nationalism based on territorial aggression."

Amherst's rebuttal was handled by Mahler. He upheld Mussolini's actions as justifiable because they were needed to impress Italy. "It is an exaggeration to say that the 300 murders every year in Italy show a depraved country. Mussolini succeeded! Disorder was put down, and of this we as Americans must approve."

Professor James Graham Hardy of the Mathematics Department has recently returned to his home on Grace Court from a winter's trip through California and the South.

AN ADDITION TO CAMEL SMOKE-LORE

WE SUBMIT the sad case of the freshman in zoology, who, when asked to describe a camel, said, "A camel is what you wish you were smoking while you try to think of the right answers." He flunked zoology—but he knew his cigarettes. For in time of trial or time of joy, there's no friend like Camels.

The subtle influences of choice tobaccos upon the smoke-spots of mankind have been carefully studied, identified, and blended smoothly into Camels—the finest of cigarettes. And we'll bet an alkafitch on this: Camels have just the taste and aroma to pack your smoke-spot with the "fill-fulment" every experienced smoker seeks. Got an alkafitch you want to lose?

FOUR HOUSES WILL ENTERTAIN TONIGHT

Approximately 100 Girls Will Be in Town; 'Phi Gamma Delta' To Open New House

Four fraternities, Delta Upsilon, Phi Gamma Delta, Phi Sigma Kappa, and Psi Upsilon, will entertain about 100 girls over the week-end in the first group of spring houseparties. Wittstein's orchestra will play for Delta Upsilon, the Bruanians for Phi Sigma Kappa, and Larry Stry's orchestra for Psi Upsilon. The Purple Knights have been hired for the Phi Gamma Delta dances, the occasion for which is the opening of their newly-built house.

The list of girls who will be in Williams-town over the week-end follows:

Volley Ball Tournament Reaches Second Round

Playing the first round of the newly-instituted volley ball tournament on Monday and Tuesday of the past week, seven teams won on straight games, while in the eighth contest Phi Gamma Delta conquered Alpha Delta Phi only after three games. Although the first round of the tennis tournament has been postponed on account of the condition of the courts, the golf and horseshoes contests are scheduled to begin this week, while next Monday Phi Delta Theta meets Phi Gamma Delta for the handball championship and Delta Upsilon begins the baseball series with Sigma Phi.

The scores of the first round games are as follows: Beta Theta Pi defeated Theta Delta Chi 21-15, 21-19; Commons Club defeated Psi Upsilon 21-1, 21-7; Delta Kappa Epsilon defeated Delta Psi 21-6, 21-7; Delta Upsilon defeated Sigma Phi 21-18, 21-8; Phi Delta Theta defeated Chi Psi 21-9, 21-10; Phi Gamma Delta defeated Alpha Delta Phi 22-24, 21-16, 21-8; Phi Sigma Kappa defeated Kappa Alpha 21-12, 21-10; and Zeta Psi defeated Delta Phi 21-18, 21-10. In the second round of the volley ball which was played on Thursday, Beta Theta Pi defeated Delta Upsilon 21-14, 21-8; Commons Club defeated Delta Kappa Epsilon 18-21, 21-18, 21-16; Phi Delta Theta defeated Zeta Psi 8-21, 22-20, 21-18; and Phi Gamma Delta defeated Phi Sigma Kappa 21-19, 21-14.

Musical Clubs Officers for 1928-29 Are Elected

Ford '29 received exceptional honors at the Musical Club elections held last Wednesday and Thursday, when he was chosen leader of both the Mandolin and Glee Clubs. He has been an active member of the Musical Clubs since his Freshman year, and on this year's Easter trip, played in the Mandolin Club and sang second tenor in the Glee Club.

As a result of the recent Musical Clubs managership competition, the leaders of the Clubs announce the following recommendations: second assistant manager, R. H. Malley '30; second assistant transportation manager, C. B. Niebling '30; second assistant press manager, J. B. Thurston '30; second assistant associate manager, J. H. Thompson '30.

ERRORS ARE COSTLY IN HOLY CROSS GAME

Disastrous First Inning Is Enough To Defeat Williams—Final Score Is 14-1

Nervousness and stage-fright on the part of the Williams players, who committed several costly errors, together with heavy hitting by the Holy Cross batters, accounted for 12 runs in the first two innings and gave the Crusaders an overwhelming lead in the Williams-Holy Cross game, which the latter won 14-1, last Wednesday afternoon on Weston Field. Wolcott started on the mound for the Purple, but, after being hit freely, was relieved before the first inning was over by Singmaster, who held the visitors at bay for the rest of the game, except for two occasions, in the second and eighth innings.

The Williams nine plainly showed its lack of experience in the first part of the game, but later, as it became more confident, the fielding was much smoother and the team seemed like a different one than that which started the first inning. As a contrast, the Holy Cross squad entered the contest with confidence and throughout the nine innings showed a precision of fielding and power at bat that is unusual for college teams. Hebert, a sophomore, pitched the entire game for the Worcester nine, and, although it was his first Varsity experience, he held the Williams players to two hits, one of which was of the scratch variety.

Three errors, two walks, and five hits put the Crusaders off to a flying start, and nine runs were scored in that hectic first inning. The second started off in much the same manner when the bases were filled as a result of four hits and a walk, but the side was retired after three runs were registered. At this point Singmaster tightened and held the visiting sluggers to three hits for the next five stanzas, allowing no runs to be scored, but in the eighth two hits were converted into two more runs, while a hit in the ninth went to naught.

Freshman Pentathlon Won by S. A. Davidson

Scoring 445 out of a possible 500 points and winning the high jump with five feet, seven inches, Sydney A. Davidson won first place in the annual Freshman Pentathlon held during the weeks of April 16 and 23 in the Lasell Gymnasium. After re-running the four lap race to break the tie, L. K. Miller was awarded second and R. F. Lobo third place in this meet in which each scored 430 points.

Although the winning score this year was 25 points under that of the 1929 Freshman Pentathlon and 15 points under that of 1930, eight men in the 1931 group scored 400 points or over, whereas only five in each of the other groups made equally high scores. The individual event winners of the 1931 group are as follows: High jump, S. A. Davidson, Height 5 ft. 7 in.; Three standing broad jumps, H. W. Lonsdale, Distance 28 ft. 3 in.; 4 lap run, F. M. Truman, Time 58.2 secs.; 100-yd. swim, J. N. Baneroff, Time 1 min. 8 secs.; 20-foot rope climb, Tie among Stanwood, Acheson, and Camp, Time 5 secs. Gold, silver, and bronze medals were awarded for the first three places in this contest in which the whole Freshman class took part.

COLLEGE BALL TEAM INVADES MIDDLETOWN

Strong Wesleyan Club With Five Victories to Its Credit Awaits Purple

Friday, May 4—Having played but two games this season, and those with disastrous results, the Williams Varsity meets Wesleyan this afternoon at Middletown in the first encounter of the "Little Three" series. The Red and Black have won five games to date and, playing on their home field, are expected to furnish first class opposition for the Purple squad.

Hindered by rain and cold the Varsity has been unable to practice or to play its scheduled games. The weakness in strategy so noticeable in the West Point game has apparently been corrected, but a decided need of better fielding and hitting was apparent after the 14-1 trouncing at the hands of Holy Cross last Wednesday. With Captain Smith in the box the pitching situation should be fairly well taken care of, and in case the Wesleyan batters find Smith easy, either Singmaster or Alexander will be available. Captain Smith may take his turn at either right field or at second base, in case Daniel or Inverso are not up to form. Extensive batting practice has improved the Purple (Continued on Sixth Page)

Amherst Track Meet

The Williams-Amherst track meet, whose postponement has been caused on two occasions by adverse weather conditions, has been definitely scheduled for Tuesday, May 15. As originally planned, the meet will be held in Williamstown.

VARSITY BALL TEAM MEETS BROWN TODAY

Bruins Expected To Offer Strong Resistance to Purple Nine at Providence

Presenting her usual strong baseball team, Brown University will meet the Purple Varsity today at 3.30 at Providence to complete the week-end trip taken by the Williams squad. Having won three games lost two, and tied one, the Bruins are intent on improving their percentage at the expense of the College nine.

Coach Fox has had considerable difficulty throughout the season in correcting all the faults of the squad simultaneously. No sooner had he improved their strategy, lack of which was responsible for errors in the Army game, than they appeared in the Holy Cross game woefully inefficient both in the field and at bat. Lack of suitable practice weather, however, is largely responsible for the fielding, while the hitting can be improved only after playing more games. With the shifting of Captain Smith to the outfield when not on mound duty the defense seems to be materially strengthened and in case Inverso slips up at second base Smith can fill the gap creditably. The addition of Alexander to the pitching staff should also aid the Purple.

With such heavy hitters as Heffernan and Guernsey the Brown club made a good (Continued on Sixth Page)

'Delta Sigma Rho' Elects Harris, Overton Officers

Mark Harris '29, of Ossining, N. Y., was elected to the presidency of Delta Sigma Rho for the succeeding year at a meeting of the present members of the honorary debating society held during the last week. Further elections resulted in the choice of R. C. Overton '29 as Vice-President and W. C. Erskine '30 as Secretary; while five new members were admitted to the organization: McKean, Overton, and Reeves '29, and Erskine and Heaton '30.

Harris has debated for Williams for the past two years, and was admitted to membership in Delta Sigma Rho last year. Overton, in addition to varsity debating, has served as assistant manager of debating, and is at present Managing Editor of the Record, and Editor-in-chief of the 1929 Gulichenian. The former president of Delta Sigma Rho was C. F. Gaskill '28.

DEERFIELD CONCERT IS 'HIGHLY COMMENDABLE'

Academy Singers Present 'Pleasant Variety' of Songs and Solos in Chapin Hall

A concert which was highly commendable from many standpoints was given by the Deerfield Academy Glee Club Tuesday night in Chapin Hall. A pleasant variety characterized the program, which included some selections for piano, string trio, the tenor solo, as well as the numbers for the Glee Club.

The Glee Club gave every evidence of excellent training and extensive practice. Its selections were given with a finish of almost professional nature. The male voice just after changing is extraordinarily difficult to handle, and much credit is due to the skillful coaching which developed a precision of attack and care of phrasing that concealed the lack of strength of the individual voices. The only pieces whose execution left much to be desired were those of the third group, which was composed of old lyrics. Here there seemed to be no intelligent conception of the classic tradition, which demands a very conscientious adherence to strict tempo. Dowland and Praetorius cannot be sentimentalized any more than Mozart or Bach. Particularly well received were the traditional sea-chanteys of the second group, and the Chorus of Peers from Gilbert and Sullivan's Iolanthe.

Between the first and second groups of selections for the Glee Club, two tenor solos of a classic nature were given by Mr. Robert K. Farrand. It was unfortunate that nervousness destroyed the stability of his voice, which was of a pleasant quality and intelligently handled. Mr. Brooks' piano solos later on in the program were accurately and gracefully played.

The concert as a whole was pleasant and adequate. It would have put nine out of ten college club concerts, present company not excepted, to shame. The coaches and members of the Deerfield Clubs are to be congratulated on their excellent performance.

VARSITY TRACK TEAM TO OPPOSE WESLEYAN

Williams To Go to Middletown for First Meet—Purple Appears Better Balanced

In what will be the opening meet of the season due to the postponement of the Amherst meet, a well balanced if not stellar Purple track squad will invade Wesleyan at Middletown this afternoon. The Wesleyan team has had the benefit of two meets, the first lost to Springfield, 74½-60½, and the second a victory over M. A. C. by a 97-38 score, but the strength shown in these engagements has not been evenly distributed, a fact which points to a close score.

The Purple entries will be the same as those who qualified for the Amherst meet in the time trials on April 21. Beals is again the favorite to win the dashes, having done so in the 1927 meet, but Sterling has been troubled all week by a bad leg. In addition to this, Stayman pulled a tendon during practice Wednesday afternoon and is indefinitely laid up. Shaw is the Wesleyan hope in the sprints and has performed creditably this season. Last year he finished third in the 100 and second in the 220. Boynton and Shoaff in the high hurdles, and Nicolls and Shoaff in the lows appear to have a good chance, since no Wesleyan entry placed in these events last season.

Captain Keep is counted on to repeat his 1927 victory in the 440, which he ran in 50.3 seconds. The chances in the half mile are not as bright, for Captain Crowell of Wesleyan beat Starr '27 and Lane to the tape last year. The Williams entries, J. Dougherty, Lane, and Strother, are ex- (Continued on Second Page)

VARSITY NETMEN WILL MEET UNION SATURDAY

Net Team Is Handicapped by Lack of Practice, but Expects To Win Victory

Handicapped greatly by lack of outdoor practice due to adverse weather conditions, the Williams tennis team will journey to Schenectady next Saturday to meet the Union College netmen in the first match of the season for both teams. Although the Garnet players have had more opportunities to practice, and have been able to play one unofficial match, the Purple is expected to win by a large margin, both because of its unusual strength as shown by its record last year, and because of the fact that several of the Union netmen have previously been defeated by their Purple opponents.

Adsit '30, who has been unable to play because of a sprained ankle, will be back in the lineup and will play in fifth position. The others who will play are Wolf '29, Captain Banks '28, Sewall '29, Chase '29, and Shoaff '30, in that order in the singles, while in the doubles Banks will pair with Wolf, Sewall with Chase, and Shoaff with Denison '29. Due to the kindness of the athletic authorities at Amherst, the use of the Sabrina courts has been offered to the (Continued on Sixth Page)

Prof. R. A. Newhall, in Address at Philadelphia Peace Council, Attacks Dogmatism in Teaching of History

of the History Department, Who Addressed the Philadelphia Peace Council Last Week.

Advocating a wider study of world history and emphasizing the need of a better realization of the continuity of history on the part of present-day students, Professor Richard A. Newhall addressed the members of the Philadelphia Peace Council at their spring meeting held last Saturday in Philadelphia. Professor Newhall, whose subject was "History and the Unbiased Mind," was one of four speakers, the others being Miss Margaret Isherwood of Cambridge, Professor David Saville Muzzey of Columbia, and Professor Daniel C. Knowlton of Yale.

In his address, Professor Newhall stressed the methods of teaching history without any prejudice, and the many advantages which resulted from such instruction. "Students," he said, "must learn certain fundamental facts to get a foundation for knowledge which is more advanced. No one can do higher mathematics without first learning the multiplication tables. By teaching history to the students in the right manner, we teach them to judge cur- (Continued on Fifth Page)

Seasoned Cushing Nine Will Oppose Yearlings in First Contest on Weston Field

After three weeks of preliminary practice, during which time the squad was able to play outdoors on only four or five days, the Freshman baseball team will open its season today on Weston Field at 3.00 p. m. with its opponents a strong and seasoned nine from Cushing Academy. Coach Graham feels that the team will be necessarily handicapped at first because of an inexperienced combination and inexperienced players, but he is confident that the squad, composed of hard-working men, will soon round into shape and grow increasingly stronger as the season progresses.

Cushing has already played three or four games this year, and together with a qualified reputation for uniformly good teams, will offer the stiffest opposition to the yearling nine in its opening encounter. Practice has shown the Freshman team to be fairly weak in hitting and bunting, while slow thinking in the field has been a decided drawback. A practice game was held last Tuesday afternoon on Cole Field, the chief feature of which was the ragged playing of both teams. Unfortunately, there are only three seasoned players on the team, so that the other positions have at least two or three prospective candidates. The team as a whole, however, has a decided power, which Coach Graham hopes to develop to form an evenly-rounded combination.

Of the individual players, Wallace, Thomas, and Langmaid have all shown themselves capable, and will hold down the positions of shortstop, third base, and center field, respectively. Schwartz, McGlynn, and Leber are possibilities for first base, the first-named having proven the best hitter and the second, the ablest fielder. Fox and Field each have an equal chance for second base, completing the infield roster. In the outfield, Grosvenor and Booth are playing left, and Kendall, Clark, and Ripa are candidates for the right field position. Lonsdale and Hurd will probably be called upon for the pitching, while Fox is another possibility for the mound. Downey, the most promising catcher, was lost through ineligibility, but Schlosser, Bancroft, and Bowden all have shown up well in practice.

Brown and Harvard Are Golf Opponents

Golf Club at Weston, Mass., today. The men who will make the trip are: Captain Blaney, Fall, and K. Smith '28; Heller and Williams '29, and Wheeler '30.

Brown, who will be the opponent in the morning match, has defeated the New Bedford Country Club team 7-2 and Boston College by a 6-3 score, but was able to take only one match from the Princeton golfers. The record of Captain Partridge in these contests indicates an interesting match between the leaders of the two teams. By coincidence, both Blaney and Partridge captained their respective hockey teams during the past winter. Two matches decided on the 19th hole in the Boston College victory point to no safer margins in the rest of the line-up, which is as follows in tentative order of play: Partridge, Tully, Bosquet, Weaver, Atwood, and Berwald. Roland MacKenzie, ranking American amateur, last year both medalist in the National Amateur Tournament and runner up to Watt Gunn in the Intercollegiate at Gardent City, has been declared ineligible for competition at Brown and has withdrawn from college.

In the afternoon the golfers will face the Harvard team which won a 5-1 victory over M. I. T. last Monday. No single match was lost, the one M. I. T. point being accounted for by a best ball score, but, since only four players took part, no light is thrown on the success with which Harvard, having only three lettermen, may be expected to fill out the remaining two places of the regulation line-up. Last year's varsity men are Captain J. A. Hutchinson, J. Morrill, and J. W. Hutchinson, while Winston and Filoon have had some previous intercollegiate experience, and have been successful in their matches so far this season. Seavor led the playing order against M. I. T.

Essentially the same Williams team opened the 1927 season against the same opponents and split the triumphs of the day by defeating Brown 5-4 in spite of the presence of MacKenzie in the line-up, but lost by a 7-2 score to the Crimson in the afternoon. Since that time both opponents have suffered seriously by graduation.

Supplementing a list of summer positions open primarily to undergraduates which appeared in THE RECORD last Saturday, the following opportunities for men graduating this year are published for the convenience of Seniors. Further information regarding the offers listed in this column, which will appear at regular intervals throughout the spring, may be obtained at the office of the Dean.

Permanent positions open to graduates are as follows:

National Bank of Commerce in New York City has several vacancies for college graduates interested in the banking business.

Hanover National Bank of the City of New York will take men graduating from college for the summer months with the possibility of permanent employment if their work is satisfactory.

Harriman National Bank of New York is looking for two seniors who intend to enter the Trust business.

New York Life Insurance Company has a few positions open to college graduates in the Boston Branch. Men living in Boston are desirable.

Travelers Insurance Company of Hartford, Conn. has opportunities for several men to do actuarial work. Examinations of the Actuarial Society of America must be passed.

Aetna Life Insurance Company is taking on approximately 15 new men in the Hartford, Conn. Group division. A training school will be run at Hartford for about two months, beginning July 1.

Allied Mutuals Liability Insurance Company will employ several new men in the capacity of salesmen, claim adjusters, and clerks, with good opportunities for advancement at a starting salary of $25 a week.

National Association of Book Publishers has opportunities for seniors in bookselling and establishing modern bookshops.

G. Granata and Company, importers of Italian art objects, can take one and possibly two men as travelling representatives, employment starting late in June.

Jitney Players, Inc., a motorized theatre touring New England composed of Harvard and Yale graduates, is looking for two men to act as advance agents.

Dietaphone Sales Corporation has openings for salesmen, beginning at $30 a week from July 1.

S. S. Kresge Company, operator of a chain of Five-and-Ten-Cent stores, has positions open to graduates, starting in the stock-room, working up to store manager, and finally entering the general executive offices.

McCrory Stores Corporation is offering similar positions.

Cambridge Young Men's Christian Association has an opening for a college graduate to act as branch secretary, working with high school boys and taking charge of organization and supervision. Experience in handling older boys is desirable, and a salary of about $2,600 will be paid according to the qualifications of the individual.

Associated Charities at Cleveland, Ohio, are looking for college graduates who want to go into social work, particularly in relation to family cases. A post-graduate course in Social Science at the Western Reserve University is offered to the employee while he is working with the association.

American Optical Company at South-ridge, Mass., has an opening for a graduate from a scientific course who is interested in the profession of a patent engineer.

Mack plant of the International Motors Company offers positions to college graduates interested in automobile designing and experimental work.

F. A. B. Studio Inc., an advertising concern, can use a few college graduates on its staff. They will be under the direction of Mr. Stern, of the class of 1911.

Liberty Mutual Insurance Company has positions open on its sales force for men graduating this spring.

VARSITY TWELVE TO OPPOSE ST. LAWRENCE

Postponed Lacrosse Season Will Open Today With Game on Weston Field

Playing in their first game of the season, the Williams lacrosse team, which appears to have benefitted by the extra week of practice afforded by the cancellation of the game with Springfield scheduled for last Saturday, will encounter the St. Lawrence University twelve on Weston Field at 1.30 p. m. this afternoon. As the St. Lawrence team has not yet played a game, their season opening with Dartmouth on Friday, it is impossible to make any predictions about the visitors' strength or the probable outcome of the contest.

When approached by a RECORD reporter, Coach Bellerose declined to hazard any predictions, but reported that the team had shown improvement in recent practice sessions. During the past week he has made several changes in the tentative line-up he had picked for the Springfield encounter. Arndt has been shifted from outside home to second defense, where he is replacing Christie, and Dunn is to be given a trial in Arndt's former position. Besides this Neilson has replaced
Jacobs at second attack.

The probable line-ups for the game are as follows:

WILLIAMS		ST. LAWRENCE
Dunning	g.	Jacobus
Collins	p.	King
Tierney	c.p.	Morgan (Capt.)
Ashby	l.d.	Finch
Arndt	2d.	Vreeland
Wulff	3d.	MaeAndrews
Thurston (Capt.)	c.	Abramski
Hubbard	3a.	Clark
Neilson	2a.	Garlock
Brown	1a.	Emblidge
Dunn	o.h.	Galvin
Willmott	i.h.	MacClaren

Council Abolishes No-Deal Committee and Elections

Due to the fact that a large majority of the student body has failed to vote at College elections, the Student Council at a recent meeting ruled that all men nominated for office shall be declared elected in the order of recommendation by their respective organizations ten days after the announcement of these recommendations, without a general election. However, if a petition, signed by twenty names, be presented to the Student Council before the end of the ten day period, a general election will be held under the auspices of the Council.

This ruling includes all nominations for managerial positions, the Williams Christian Association, and similar organizations, but not class elections, and stipulates that all recommendations are subject to the rules of eligibility. At the same meeting, the No-Deal Committee was abolished, and its functions taken over by the Student Council, beginning May 1.

To Hold Mock Convention

In the hope of discovering "what forward looking men and women of today expect of the Democratic Party", the Intercollegiate Mock Democratic Convention for Progressives of all Parties will be held at Smith College on Friday and Saturday, May 18 and 19. The Convention will discuss policy toward Russia, Pan-Americanism, and Asiatic problems as well as domestic affairs, including prohibition, taxes, and farm relief. Further information may be secured from Sterling '28.

Gross To Head 1930 Forum

Harold Baneroff Gross, of Providence,
R. I., and Otho T. Beall, Jr. of Washington, D. C., were first and second choices, respectively, in the 1930 competition for officerships of the Forum. Gross will be secretary-treasurer in his junior year, and president his senior year. Beall will act as vice-president during his final year.

Infirmity Patients

Macfarland '28, Hales '30, and Deshler and Gregg '31 are at present confined to the Thompson Infirmary. If an undergraduate is seriously ill, his parents are immediately notified by the College authorities.

Attacks Dogmatism

rent events in a way free from any prejudice, and warn them not to estimate the value of a single man's achievements as more important than the great popular movements that have occurred."

Through the avoidance of dogmatism and by the use of frequent definitions to bring out the significance of the actions, characters, or policies of important men, the speaker stated that history was best taught. "The danger in teaching history," he said, "is that frequently merely one side of a situation is presented." By the instructor's support of a view-point contrary to that generally held by the students, much is gained from the discussion which invariably follows. The original sources, records and documents, should be used more instead of standard textbooks, because students frequently receive the impression that what is in print is "divinely revealed," and therefore must be correct. Then, too, historians are often swayed by the proximity of recent events, or by their prejudice in the case of old documents, and for one reason or other, fail to write down correctly their discoveries. Concluding, Professor Newhall argued that the student should look to the future, and should understand that the present has come out of the past. Also, he pointed out the value of a wider study of world history, with national history as a side issue, which promote "the desire to arrive at honest opinion and a broader viewpoint in intellectual life."

fifth, after he had weakened momentarily, two walks and a sharp blow through the infield by Winn tallied Putnam with the only score for the home team. The other hit made by Williams was a scratch hit which Hebert was too eager to field and Singmaster reached first safely. However, he was cut off a few minutes later by a bullet throw from Dougherty, Holy Cross catcher.

showing against the Providence Greys, a professional team. Their decisive defeat of the University of Maine is but an added indication of their ability. Ford and Lingman have been performing on the mound for the Bruins and both will be in shape for today's encounter. Having lost a number of veteran players by graduation, the Brown club is made up of young inexperienced men. In this respect the two teams are alike and a close battle is predicted.

somewhat and Coach Fox has a group of reliable pinch hitters in case the regulars have difficulty with the Red and Black battery.

To date Wesleyan has won five games and are regarded as the strongest of the "Little Three" teams. Their latest victory, that of last Wednesday over Clark University, gives them an edge over Amherst, who has been defeated by Clark. Amherst having made a better showing against the Army than the Varsity, Coach Fox's squad finds the outlook none too bright. With Travis, Coons, Thomas, and Kennedy, all sterling pitchers, ready to take their turn in the box, Coach Howard seems fairly sure of a victory. The fact that Wesleyan has an average of eight hits per game is significant of the batting power of the club. Also the fact that the Red and Black is a veteran club and has had the advantage of regular practice places it in the position of the leading contender for the championship.

The probable line-up is as follows:

squad, and about half the members of the team have availed themselves of this, their only opportunity to practice outdoors. The board floor of the gymnasium has afforded the only other chance for the team to develop its form, the poor condition of the Sage Hall courts having caused the cancellation of the scheduled contest with M. I. T. last Friday.

On Saturday, April 21, the Union team played a practice match on the courts of the Ridgefield Country Club at Albany, tying the New York Telephone Company team of that city by the score of four all. Peets will play first position for the Garnet, while Wright, a veteran now in his fourth season, and Captain Loucks, who has had two years of varsity experience, are its other mainstays. Johnson, Irwin, and Terry complete the lineup, while Brook and Alexander are available as substitutes.

The Purple Varsity did not meet Union last season, but two years ago the Garnet was decisively defeated by the score of 6 to

Statement of the ownership, management, circulation, etc., required by the act of Congress of August 24, 1912, of The Williams Record published semi-weekly at Pittsfield, Mass. for April 1, 1928.

Before me, a Notary Public, in and for the State of Massachusetts, County of Berkshire, personally appeared Wm. C. Root, who, having been duly sworn according to law, deposes and says that he is the Publisher of the Williams Record and that the following is, to the best of his knowledge and belief, a true statement of the ownership, management (and if a daily paper, the circulation), etc., of the aforesaid publication for the date shown in the above caption, required by the Act of August 24, 1912, embodied in section 443, Postal Laws and Regulations, printed on the reverse of this form, to wit:

2. That the owner is: The Students of Williams College.

3. That the known bondholders, mortgagees, and other security holders owning or holding 1 per cent or more of total amount of bonds, mortgages, or other securities are: none.

4. That the two paragraphs next above, giving the names of the owners, stockholders, and security holders, if any, contain not only the list of stockholders and security holders as they appear upon the books of the company but also, in cases where the stockholder or security holder appears upon the books of the company as trustee or in any other fiduciary relation, the name of the person or corporation for whom such trustee is acting is given; also that the said two paragraphs contain statements embracing affiant's full knowledge and belief as to the circumstances and conditions under which stockholders and security holders who do not appear upon the books of the company as trustees, hold stock and securities in a capacity other than that of a bona fide owner; and that affiant has no reason to believe that any other person, association, or corporation has any interest direct or indirect in the said stock, bonds, or other securities than as so stated by him.

Eagle Printing and Binding Co., William C. Root, President
Sworn to and subscribed before me this 30th day of April 1928, Dennis J. Haydon, Notary Public.
My commission expires, Jan. 21, 1932.

0. In this match Captain Loucks of the present Union team was beaten by Captain Baker '26, playing in second position. Banks defeated Wright, whom he will meet Saturday, in a close match which went to three sets. In the second doubles match played on that occasion Wolf and Banks overwhelmed Loucks and Wright, again their opponents in the match this year, by the score of 6-1, 6-0.

The players will be paired as follows: Singles—Wolf (W) vs. Peets (U); Captain Banks (W) vs. Wright (U); Sewall (W) vs. Captain Loucks (U); Chase (W) vs. Johnson (U); Adsit (W) vs. Irwin (U); Shoaff (W) vs. Terry (U). Doubles—Banks and Wolf vs. Peets and Wright; Sewall and Chase vs. Johnson and Loucks; Shoaff and Denison vs. Irwin and Terry.

Trade followed Commodore Perry's flag into Japan. Today, as Bell System pioneers develop their service, trade follows the telephone.

In advancing the art of telephony, there are still plenty of doors to open, plenty of new steps to take.

What apparatus will meet some newly-arisen condition in serving the subscriber? What are the machines and methods to make it?

How can the value of long distance telephony be best presented to industry, and the great potentialities of this service developed?

These questions and many like them point the way to fields which still leave ample room for the explorer.

ARTISTS ARE BROUGHT BY THOMPSON COURSE

Noted Musicians Are Entertainers at Several Programs Here This Season

With the presentation of this year's seventh entertainment last Tuesday through the medium of the Deerfield Academy Glee Club the Thompson Memorial Course terminated an interesting season, but one which is hardly up to the standard set last year. Nevertheless, the diversity of attractions offered since November, and the outstanding positions in the field of art occupied by several of the musicians whom

PROF. K. E. WESTON
Chairman of the Art Department and Director of the Thompson Course

the College was privileged to hear, justify the designation of the course as one of the most valuable additions to the College year.

An inauspicious opening entertainment was provided on November 4 by the Zimmer Harp Trio, assisted by Francesco Losavio, tenor. Although the few excellent interpretations of Miss Zimmer lightened the perfunctory tone of the rest of the program, the concert was mediocre on the whole. Two weeks later the Yale Puppeters gave an exhibition of their art which, although less aesthetic, was viewed with correspondingly greater approval by the undergraduate body. While not in the same class with their Sicilian relations, the

Dunbar Prize Entries Will Be Due on May 15

Time for submitting contributions for the Dunbar Prize has been extended to May 15, at which time they should be in the hands of Philip R. Dunbar, 89 State Street, Boston, Mass. This prize of $100 was awarded for the first time last year for the best article written by an undergraduate of Williams, which, in the opinion of the judges, "tends to lead College student life in its political, social, educational, or religious aspects to express itself well."

Undergraduate work of this nature is eligible whether or not it has appeared in a College publication. First prize was won last year by Hilmer '28 with an independent article, while a second prize of $50 was awarded to Banks '28 for an editorial published in The Record. Following are the clerical requirements of the competition: "In order to enter the contest, deposit with the Secretary of the Foundation (Philip R. Dunbar), six copies of your contribution, typewritten double-spaced on one side only of paper of standard legal size (8 1/2 x 13). If your entry has been published, furnish the Secretary additionally with six copies of the publication in which it appeared. If your entry has not been published, write the Secretary to that effect, with your consent to effect its publication over your name. Submit nothing anonymously."

Bertrand Russell, British Author, Says Americans Must Stress Development of Individual Initiative

"America is laying somewhat too much stress on social cohesion and somewhat too little upon individual initiative," says Bertrand Russell, distinguished British mathematician, philosopher, and teacher, in an article in the March issue of Nation's Business in which he tells the impressions he received during his recent visit to America. "Everyone in America recognizes that some men are better than others at football," he writes, "because that is regarded as important; but it is thought contrary to the spirit of democracy to recognize superior intellectual ability, except in those who have already succeeded in some obvious fashion."

"I have frequently been told by Americans that the individualism and initiative of the pioneer still survive in the older

BRINSMADE TALKS ON PROGRESS IN PHYSICS

Philosophical Union Hears Of New Fourth Dimensional Theory Of Einstein

Stating that "scientific knowledge is not absolute, but relative", as is evidenced by developments in physics since 1900, Assistant Professor James B. Brinsmade, of the Department of Physics, addressed the Philosophical Union in Griffin Hall Sunday night, on the subject: "Philosophical Tendencies in Modern Science". "Physics at the end of the last century seemed to be founded on great, absolute generalities," Mr. Brinsmade said, "but Einstein and others formed theories that were incompatible with the classic facts and showed any visualization of concepts that we make must be subject to change, this change being an aspect of the evolution of mankind."

The failure of the Meikelson and Moley experiment showed Einstein that "our distinct laws of space and time break down, and we must substitute a weird,

AMHERST GAME MAY DECIDE 'TROPHY' RACE

Veteran Amherst Pitching Staff To Test Improved Eye of Purple Batters

When the hitherto ineffective Varsity nine faces a fairly successful Amherst team Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock on Pratt Field, two points for the "Trophy of Trophies" will be at stake, and the result will determine whether or not Williams will remain in the running for the "Little Three" championship. Many errors, most of them committed at critical times, have characterized the Purple play in its five defeats, but a decided improvement, which was apparent in the Brown game, may be an indication that the squad is about to settle down and play the type of game of which it is capable.

Amherst is represented by an experienced squad, most of the players having played together last season, while the opposite is true of Williams, since inexperience has proved to be the biggest handicap of the Purple nine. Probably the strongest department of the Sabrina squad is the pitching staff, led by Pratt and Nichols, both veterans of last season, and this fact can easily be seen by the record of the Lord Jeffs this year; all the games have either been won or lost by one or two-run margin. In the first game of the year, Clark won by a 4-2 score, and then the powerful Springfield nine gained a 3-2 victory, but the Jeffs hit soon their stride against Bowdoin, M. A. C., and New Hampshire, winning each contest by a small margin.

Errors which have come from nervousness and stage-fright have been committed in alarming numbers by the inexperienced Williams nine, but a decided improvement was shown in the Brown game, when only two misplays were made. West Point, Holy Cross, Wesleyan and Brown have all been victorious over the Purple, while games with N. Y. U., Connecticut Aggies, and Princeton have been cancelled because of rain or cold weather. Injuries have been another factor which has handicapped the squad, with sore arms and bruised hands being the most numerous.

Banks Attends Meetings to Reorganize I. C. L. T. A.

T. M. Banks, Jr. '28, Captain of the tennis team and president of the Intercollegiate Lawn Tennis Association, attended a meeting in New York Tuesday of the Advisory, Finance, and Intercollegiate Committees of the United States National Lawn Tennis Association. At that time it was decided to reorganize the I.C.L.T.A. so that an executive committee of seven, the three undergraduate officers of the I. C. L. T. A. and four graduate members, appointed by the president of the U. S. N. L. T. A., would have the direction of its affairs.

If the plans formulated at present prove feasible, this committee will make arrangements for the National Intercollegiate tournament, determine the individual rankings of college players, and probably assign sectional team championships. Beside Banks, the officers of the I.C.L.T.A. are Captain McCook Reed of Yale, vice-president, and Captain Alan Herrington of Leland Stanford, Jr., University, secretary-treasurer.

GOLFERS SPLIT EVEN IN OPENING MATCHES

Decisive Defeat of Brown Players Balances Loss to Harvard in Close Matches

Williams golfers split the honors of their opening day's competition on the Weston links at Boston last Saturday when they defeated Brown in the morning by a 7-2 score in a series of matches which were seldom in doubt, but lost to Harvard 6-3 in the afternoon after five of the nine matches had been forced to the 18th green or beyond. Captain Blaney, who defeated by a generous margin Captain Partridge of Brown, victor in 11 consecutive intercollegiate duels last year, and won from Captain Hutchinson of Harvard on the 19th green, was the individual star of the day.

Atwood of Brown, by securing a 2 and 1 lead over Wheeler, scored the only singles victory for Brown, while the second Bruin point was accounted for when Fall and Wheeler lost their match in the foursome at the last putt. Smith and Williams were the only Williams victors to be heard

BROWN AND WESLEYAN OVERCOME BALL TEAM

Improved Purple Nine Is Unable To Withstand Powerful Hitting of Opponents

Inability to hit in the pinches combined with the faculty of making errors at the crucial moments caused the Purple Varsity to lose both games of its week end schedule, the first to Wesleyan, 17-2, on Friday, and the second to Brown, 5-0, on Saturday afternoon. The "Little Three" encounter was a hopeless mass of errors for the Purple, everyone of the regulars contributing at least one, but only two were chalked up against the squad in the Brown game.

Battering two Williams pitchers for 17 hits, each hit accounting for a run, the Red and Black completely ran away with the contest. Wesleyan took an early lead when a pass, an error and Funk's single through the pitcher's box scored two runs, and Kupperecht singled scoring Funk in the first inning. Williams accounted for their only runs in the fourth inning when Tittman and Putnam singled, were advanced to second and third and scored on Winn's single over third base. After threatening in both the second and third, Wesleyan came back in their half of the fourth and scored six runs before a single out was made.

Wolcott relieved T. Smith and retired the side without more scores, but three hits and four errors in the fifth gave the home team six more runs. Additional errors allowed the remaining scores in the seventh. In accordance with a previous agreement the coaches were not allowed on the bench, each team being run by its captain. The absence of Coach Fox was especially noticeable in the fourth and fifth frames.

Although making only two errors in the Brown game, the squad was unable to hit. Alexander's long triple being the only redeeming feature of the day. Three other weak hits were all that the Bruin hurler, Ford, allowed. Facing a squad that has been termed by critics "the hardest hitting collegiate ball club of this season," Singmaster made a very creditable showing. Pitching excellent ball all the way, he was

TRACK TEAM LOSES TO WESLEYAN, 71-64

Victors Dominate Middle and Long Distance Runs; Purple Wins Both Dashes

FIRST DEFEAT SINCE 1919

Beals and Mead Are High Scorers with 10 Points; Final Result Always in Doubt

Failing to show strength in the middle and long distance runs, the Purple track team lost to Wesleyan, 71-64, last Saturday afternoon at Middletown and broke a winning streak which had lasted since 1919 the date of the Red and Black's last victory. Although Coach Seeley's squad placed well in the dashes, the field events were divided in such a manner that the home team emerged the leader by seven points after making a clean sweep of the pole vault.

Although no meet or college records were made, the times, on the whole, were consistently good. Gailer made one of his best throws in the shot put, tossing it more than 39 ft., while Callaghan showed his best form of the season with a throw of 168 ft. in the javelin event. Weeks threw the hammer 139 ft. Without being pressed, Beals turned in two good performances in the dashes, and Mead of Wesleyan ran the two distance events in comparatively fast time. Boynton also did the high hurdles in good form. Williams took seven first places and a like number of seconds, beside eight thirds. Wesleyan reversed the figures with eight victories and as many seconds, in addition to seven third places.

Williams made a clean sweep in the 100-yd. dash with Beals, Sterling, and Straw finishing in that order. Shaw, the only Wesleyan man in the finals, went to the starting mark, but jumped the gun. In the 220 Beals again took first, while Shaw afforded more competition in this race and took second from Sterling. Kelley managed to beat Captain Keep in the

German Reparations to Be Subject of Lecture

Professor John H. Williams of the Department of Economics of Harvard, who is in Williamstown today for the purpose of speaking before the Economics Proseminar, will address a meeting open to the public in Jesup Hall at 7.30 this evening on the subject, "Reparations and the Dawes Plan". Professor Williams is a specialist on the German situation and its relations with the question of international trade in general, and he has written books on The Future of Our Foreign Trade and The Balance of International Payments in the United States.

On a fellowship from Harvard, the speaker spent a year observing economic conditions in Argentina, as the result of which he has published a book on Argentina International Trade Under Inconvertible Paper. Since that time he has been a member of the faculties of Brown, Northwestern, Princeton, and Harvard. He will speak before the Proseminar on the theory of international trade, and the evening lecture will be for the special benefit of the students of the Economics Department and of History 6, though the current political importance of the subject should make it of interest to the public in general.

MacGregor Jenkins Sees Limited Opportunities For Obtaining Positions in Publishing Business

"Literature is a delightful avocation, but has few possibilities for money-making," said Mr. MacGregor Jenkins of the Atlantic Monthly when questioned recently by a Record reporter as to the opportunities open to college graduates in the literary and publishing field. "Our business is a very small one," Mr. Jenkins proceeded, "since there are at the most about 25 first class publishing houses in the country, not to consider hundreds of the fly-by-night variety which just manage to make ends meet. Compare such a limited field with that offered by the ordinary collegiate activity of selling bonds, and you will see why such a great number of college graduates wander into that profession."

"If a man has distinctly literary ambitions the opportunities are still more limited. Hardly 15% of a publishing establishment is devoted to that side of the game. Of the group of approximately 200 employees maintained by us there are perhaps 15 in the editorial department. There are vast numbers of people writing in this country, but very few are making money. As Dr. Holmes said, 'literature makes a very good cane, but a very poor crutch.' A book which makes $1000 for its author is an exceptionally good book, for most books sell less than 500 copies per year. At a 15% royalty, which is ordinarily the maximum allowed the author, a $2.00 book would thus bring in only $150 per annum."

"The movie rights have added tremendously to the income of successful authors,

DEBATING FOR DILETTANTES

Far less successful than we had a right to expect has been the season recently brought to a close by the Adelphi Union. To the failure to attract audiences, which was the joy killing comment of this column upon last year's somewhat more creditable record, has been added a more fundamental difficulty in the failure to attract judges.

If the fault lay in a lack of ability, or interest, or leadership, it might be discreet to let the matter rest. On the contrary, an enthusiastic group of more than 25 men offered material of perhaps more abundance and promise than has been available at Williams for some years past. A dual debate was introduced for Freshmen to take care of the overflow of interest in that quarter. Four consecutive victories held out the highest hopes before the collapse. All of which shows that the Adelphi Union under its present management has ground as fine as the old machine can grind, and focuses attention on the mechanism with the impersonal theory behind it.

If one may judge the theory from the traditional procedure in choosing and preparing a team to represent Williams on the platform, one might summarize it as the aim to get as many men to do as little work as possible. The task of intelligent research and organization seems too overwhelming to be faced squarely ten days or two weeks before the day of the debate, when Williams teams, finally announced, casually get to work. Such procrastination has indeed been conducive to our head long imitation of what we suppose to be the English method. To save ourselves the trouble of learning anything at the last moment, we search out a catch in the wording of the question, phrase it impressively, frame it in a nonchalant manner, garnish it with jokes, and excuse it with the plea that the audience doesn't want to learn anything either. Anyway, they must be interested before they can be instructed. Yet it seems that they must be instructed before they can be interested. If after dinner speech amusement is all we have to offer, their preference for the movies bespeaks their good judgment. To both interest and instruct takes time and training. Yet we can not expect an audience for less.

The second unique feature of debating procedure is the avowed purpose of giving to every possible candidate his turn at the rostrum. This altruistic sentiment might be applied to the football team with better reason. The resulting instability of the activity robs it, not only of its opportunity for consistent achievement, but also of the prestige which is not to be ignored as a stimulus to accomplishment. There are men in College, once willing enough to work unrequited for three years for the slightest chance to take part in an intensive debating program as Seniors, who, finding only the prospect of a few uncertain, half-cooked, debates, have looked elsewhere for a more dependable object of their interests, and now, when called to the platform on occasion, can hardly find the time to think up the jokes. The audience is not to be blamed, and the judges need only sympathy.

This is a rare case in which the remedies can be proposed more concisely than the criticisms have been expounded. (1) Let six men, chosen by try-outs where something more is required than a fluent tongue, bear the entire responsibility for the debating season. (2) Let the subjects be announced a month in advance, so that the speakers may be both interesting and instructing without becoming ineligible in the meantime. (3) Let a coach be provided, unless we think there is less to be learned about debating than about football.

An activity close to the intellectual heart of a supposedly intellectual institution might come to deserve its proper dignity through measures such as these. Collegiate debating might not present so dismal a commentary on the future of our courts of law, international conferences, parliaments, and institutes of politics in general, upon which democracy and peace to some degree depend. Audiences would take care of themselves, for people want to know, if it is not too painful.

Amherst Game May Decide Trophy Race

base, wrenched his knee while sliding into second base in the Brown game and will be lost to the squad for about two weeks. This comes as a serious blow, as the infield was just beginning to find itself. In order to plug this gap, Coach Fox will shift Alexander from left field to the first sack, using Thoms or D. P. Williams in Alexander's place in the field. This will necessitate a slight change in the batting order, but, generally speaking, the line-up and batting order for the Amherst game will be the same as in the past. It is likely that Capt. Smith will receive the pitching assignment, but both Singmaster and Wolcott will be ready for duty. If either of the latter two work on the mound, Smith, because of his hitting ability, will be used in the outfield.

Victory in the baseball series is imperative if the "Trophy of Trophies" is to remain in Williamstown, as Amherst already has a five point lead, the score being 9½ to 4½, with 11 points yet to be contested.

The Purple is generally conceded to have an edge in tennis and golf, for which two and one points respectively are at stake, thus leaving the issue resting with the major sports, track and baseball, with four points to be awarded to the winner of each.

The tentative line-ups and batting orders for Thursday's game are:

WILLIAMS VARSITIES WON THREE CONTESTS

Purple Teams Made Clean Sweep Of Contests in Baseball, Track and Tennis

(Taken from the issue of THE RECORD for May 4, 1911)

Making a clean sweep of the week-end, Williams teams defeated Cornell in baseball, Wesleyan in track and Columbia in tennis to continue their winning streak which had lasted throughout the year. The College spirit which was so prevalent at the time is typified by the following editorial, taken from this issue:

"During the last week of February Williams teams defeated Dartmouth and Colgate in basketball, Amherst in a relay race, M. I. T. in hockey and the Springfield Y. M. C. A. College in fencing. As a consequent of this THE RECORD editorial for February 26 closed with the following significant paragraph:

"The most convenient time for amusing live or six more victories is the week-end of May 30."

"Meanwhile the Varsity teams have insisted upon keeping in practice. The past Friday and Saturday witnessed defeats administered to Columbia in Wesleyan in tennis, Cornell in baseball, and Wesleyan in track.

"Memorial Day now looms up, near at hand. A clean sweep at the time of the May 30 week-end is not only a desideratum but a necessity."

The baseball game with Cornell, spoken of as occurring during the May 4 week-end, was a spectacular pitcher's battle, a ninth inning rally deciding the contest. With Siebert on third base as a result of a triple which had enabled Miehler to cross the plate and tie the score, and with the Cornell infield playing in close, Cutler put the finishing touch to a ninth inning rally when he dropped a short Texas-leaguer just back of first base to score the winning run. Cornell's failure to score in her half of the frame was due to the excellent pitching of Cutler, who was easily the individual star of the game. Two runs scored in the first inning lasted the Purple until the closing rally. Cutler, waging a pitcher's battle with Bryant, not only allowed but seven scattered hits to the opposing pitcher's nine, but the hits were all singles, while the Cornellian allowed several extra base blows.

Siebert, playing first base for the Varsity, smashed out three hits, one a double and one a triple, and stopped a threatened rally by making a double play unassisted. In the fourth inning he stole home only to have the batter foolishly swing at the ball and foul it, preventing a score. Although the mechanical play of the infield was marred by five slip-ups, the double plays in the third and sixth made up for the errors.

The score in the first inning were accounted for when Statler opened the game by strolling on four bad balls and advancing to second on Tuolan's sacrifice. Swain's single to right field scored Statler and was advanced to third by Ainslie's blow over first. Swain and Ainslie then executed a double steal, the former scoring and the latter arriving safe on second.

Cornell gained their one run advantage in the eighth when Adair bunted as Cutler was attempting to throw Taber out at the plate. The Purple then staged their spectacular ninth inning rally, Cutler winning his own ball game by retiring the Cornellians in their half of the inning. The following men participated in the contest:

WILLIAMS	CORNELL
Statler c.f.	Gordon
Tuolan s.s.	Bills
Swain 3b.	Adair
Ainslie 2b.	Donavan
Tillotte r.f.	Sutterbee
Miehler c.	Schirick

Class Lacrosse Begins Today

Monday, May 7—On account of the condition of Cole Field, class lacrosse, which was scheduled to begin some time ago, did not begin until today. The class teams, which are under Mr. Bullock, are to be made up, in the case of the two lower classes, from those electing lacrosse as their Physical Training Course. A regular schedule of games has been arranged similar to the basketball tournament, and will be played off as soon as the teams are organized.

TWELVE LOSES INITIAL CONTEST BY 3-1 SCORE

Second Period Rally Unsuccessful in Overcoming Early Lead of St. Lawrence

Although improving markedly in the second half and making a very commendable showing against a more experienced team, the Williams lacrosse teams was nevertheless defeated by a 3-1 score in their opening game with St. Lawrence played on Weston Field last Saturday afternoon. Gaining confidence in the second half, the Purple consistently held the visitors, but was able to secure only one goal to offset the three scored by St. Lawrence in the first period.

Within five minutes after the whistle the visitors had shown their superior passing ability by working the ball down the field to enable Garlock to make a short shot past Senecal for the first score. For several minutes Williams was unable to intercept the St. Lawrence passes and its goal was in constant danger, but Brown, Neilson, and Arndt finally succeeded in passing the ball into the visitors' territory.

The game then seesawed up and down the field for some time before the visitors again threatened, and Clark managed to score from a confused scrimmage in front of the goal. At the start of the second half, Williams passing and co-ordination had decidedly improved, and the St. Lawrence goal was several times threatened by the Purple attacks. Finally Reiff and Brown ran the ball into the visitors' goal zone where Thurston received a pass and score on a short shot. For the remainder of the game the honors were about equally divided, with neither side able to break through for a tally.

Throughout the game Collins' defense work was a big factor in keeping down the St. Lawrence, score, while Brown was strong on attack. Vreeland and MacAndrews were outstanding for the visitors by virtue of their accurate throws. Commenting on the contest Coach Bellerose was favorably impressed by the performance of the team in its initial encounter, and stated that the main weakness was in the use of the body check. The summary is as follows:

WILLIAMS	ST. LAWRENCE
Senecal	g. Jacobus
Collins	p. Finch
Dunning	e.p. Morgan (Capt.)
Ashby	Id. Vreeland
Arndt	2d. King
Wulff	3d. MacAndrews
Thurston (Capt.)	c. Anromoski
Hubbard	3a. Ryan
Neilson	2a. Garlock
Brown	1a. Embledge
Dunn	o.h. Galvin
Jacobus	i.h. MacClaren

Substitutions: WILLIAMS—Christie for Hubbard, Coughlin for Arndt, Reiff for Neilson, Deming for Ashby, Andrews for Jacobs, Neilson for Reiff. ST. LAWRENCE—Clark for MacClaren. Time: Two 25-minute periods.

1931 BASEBALL TEAM LOSES OPENING GAME

Early Lead Fades as Errors Help Cushing Upset Yearlings on Weston Field

Playing a better brand of ball than has previously been shown, but unable to hold out against the powerful and well-seasoned Cushing Academy nine, the Freshman baseball team dropped its opening encounter by a 7-11 score Saturday afternoon, at Weston field. By the close of the fourth inning the score was tied at five all, and at the end of the following inning, the freshmen were ahead 7-5, but during the "hicky seventh" Cushing staged a rally which snatched all hopes of a Purple victory, and the game ended with the visitors four runs in the lead.

Both pitchers, Lonsdale for the freshmen and Parrington for the visitors, allowed two men to get on bases in the opening chapter, but during the second inning, Cushing, by a series of walks and hits, was able to chide up three runs, while the Freshman batters in the latter half of the frame brought in an equal number. By means of good field work both teams crushed threats to score in the third, but in the fourth, Henson of the visitors drove a two bagger deep into left bringing in Parrington and Crawford. With two out, Lonsdale, laid a fast ball down the third base line, making a two bagger, and scoring Bancroft. Thomas, following suit, drove a two bagger in the same direction and scored Lonsdale, thereby tying the score 5-5.

When the Freshman came to bat, in the fifth, Wallace, hit a two bagger over center, Langmaid singled to right field, and both scored on a wild overthrow to third, putting the yearlings ahead, 7-5. In the seventh the Freshman pitcher went to pieces, hitting two men with balls and allowing Henson, Gould, and Adams to cross the homeplate. In the following inning the visitors continued their powerful batting attack, netting three runs, in spite of two substitutions on the mound for the freshmen, Hurd for Lonsdale and Wallace for Hurd. Several Purple batters got on bases in the latter part of this frame, but the air-tight infield of Cushing killed all scoring hopes and left them ahead with 11 runs to seven at the end of the game.

The score by innings follows:

Netmen Win Opener From Garnet, 8 to 1

the other five singles matches and all three doubles contests being two-set victories for the visiting team.

Although frequently suffering from wildness, due to the fact that not until the day before the match were the Sage Hall courts in any condition for play, the team showed considerable power, which promises that it will make a strong bid to repeat its remarkable performance of last season. In the first singles match, the uncanny ability of Peets to return, in some manner or other, everything that came over to his side of the net, coupled with the fact that Wolf had had but one day of practice since last fall, gave the Garnet its only point. Captain Banks played in good form and had no difficulty in disposing of Wright, Union's veteran player, with the loss of but three games.

Sewall won even more decisively over Captain Loucks of the Garnet, but Chase, after blanking Johnson for a love set, adapted the pat-ball style of play of his opponent and the second one went to deuce before the Williams player could win it. Two more points were added to the Purple score when Adsit swamped Brook, 6-1, 6-1, and Shoaff combined effective playing with wildness to win, 6-3, 7-5. The first doubles match, in which Banks and Wolf overcame Peets and Loucks, was well and systematically played, while the victories of Sewall and Chase over Wright and Johnson and of Denison and Shoaff over Irwin and Alexander completed the scoring.

Following is the summary:

Singles: Peets (U) d. Wolf (W), 6-2, 6-3; Captain Banks (W) d. Wright (U), 6-1, 6-2; Sewall (W) d. Captain Loucks (U), 6-1, 6-1; Chase (W) d. Johnson (U), 6-0, 6-5; Adsit (W) d. Brook (U), 6-1, 6-1; Shoaff (W) d. Terry (U), 6-3, 7-5. Doubles: Banks and Wolf (W) d. Peets and Loucks (U), 6-3, 6-4; Sewall and Chase (W) d. but roughly speaking, there isn't a living in writing. The hacks manage to get along by reducing their work to a factory-like science: so many thousands of words to be turned out every day in the year without fail. The average novelist sells at the most a total of 10,000 copies of any single work, and his compensation is very inadequate for the amount of time he spends.

"But as I said before, literature is a charming avocation. The delight of the publishing business is its literary background and variety. Otherwise it is little different from the manufacture and sale of shoes. The whole secret of success in the field is a liking and interest in books. If a man wants to take up this type of work my advice is to snap up any job that is offered, however distasteful; because all departments in a publishing company are so interrelated that he will be shifted around until he lands in the right place for the use of what talent he has."

pushed, for Blaney, Heller, and Fall in the singles and the first two foursomes were decided by the mid-point of the second nine.

The Harvard matches exhibited, if not brilliant golf, due to unfavorable golfing weather, or least some of the closest scores which the game allows. Hutchinson lost to Blaney by the margin of an approach which failed to drop dead on the 19th green.

In the second match, Morrill of Harvard won the 19th hole from J. G. Williams by a par 4. A birdie on the 17th gave Heller a victory over Stover of Harvard. The first foursome went to Harvard when Blaney missed a six-foot putt on the 18th green. Wheeler, shifted to No. 6 in this meet, won his match 1 up, while Fall and Wheeler were 1 down at the end of the final match.

The summaries are as follows:

Brown Meet

Score—Williams 7, Brown 2.

Twosomes—Blaney (W) defeated Partridge (B) 5 and 4; Williams (W) defeated Tulley (B) 2 and 1; Smith (W) defeated Bosquet (B) one up; Heller (W) defeated Weaver (B) 6 and 5; Atwood (B) defeated Wheeler (W) 2 and 1; Fall (W) defeated Berwald (B) 6 and 5.

Foursomes—Blaney and Williams (W) defeated Partridge and Tulley (B) 6 and 5; Heller and Smith (W) defeated Bosquet and Weaver (B) 4 and 3; Atwood and Berwald (B) defeated Fall and Wheeler (W) one up.

Harvard Meet

Score—Harvard 6, Williams 3.

Twosomes—Blaney (W) defeated J. A. Hutchinson (H) on the 19th; Morrill (H) defeated Williams (W) on the 19th; J. W. Hutchinson (H) defeated Smith (W) 3 and 2; Heller (W) defeated Stover (H) 2 and 1; Winston (H) defeated Fall (W) 4 and 2; Wheeler (W) defeated Filoon (H) one up.

Foursomes—J. A. Hutchinson and Morrill (H) defeated Blaney and Williams (W) one up; J. W. Hutchinson and Stover (H) defeated Heller and Smith (W) 3 and 2; Winston and Filoon (H) defeated Fall and Wheeler (W) one up.

'THEATRE' PRESENTS PLAY AT PITTSFIELD

'Beauty and the Jacobin' Produced at Tournament Next Bill To Be on Friday

Booth Tarkington's Beauty and the Jacobin, which was presented by the Little Theatre in Williamstown on March 16, was again played by that organization in the Berkshire County Little Theatre Tournament held at the Unity Parish House in Pittsfield last Friday evening. Although the decision on the basis of points was awarded to the Springfield Players' Guild, presenting The Duchess Says Her Prayers by Mrs. Canfield, the acting of the Williams organization held the audience throat and received the greatest applause of the evening.

The judging of the plays was based on a system of point scoring, each element of the presentation, such as diction, gesture, and staging, being marked individually, and the award being given to the organization with the highest total. The Springfield players, by virtue of their victory, won one leg on a cup which will be in competition until one group wins it three times. The Valiant, by Holworthy Hall and Robert Middelmas, was offered by the Masquers of Greenfield, the other club competing in Friday's tournament. No announcement was made of the winner of second place, but the scores were so close that only a few points separated the contestants.

The next Little Theatre performance this spring will be given in the Jesup Hall auditorium this Friday evening, May 11. The plays which will be produced at that time are In the Zone, by Eugene O'Neill, Playboys, by Arthur Pinero, and The Duchess Says Her Prayers, by Margaret Cass Canfield.

The cast which presented Beauty and the Jacobin in Pittsfield was as follows:
Anne De Laseque Mrs. Prentiss Bloedel
Louis De Laseque Gross '30
Eloise D'Anville Mrs. Lawrence Bloedel

Artists Are Brought by Thompson Course

Puppeteers nevertheless demonstrated sufficient skill to be rewarded with the prolonged plaudits of the audience.

On December 1 Mme. Povla Frijs, the Danish soprano, gave a concert which was probably the high water mark of the season. Her well-chosen program was greeted by an audience which paid ample tribute to that dramatic quality of the artist's voice which has made her a metropolitan drawing card. A month and a half later George Copeland, pianist, past-master of technique, and one of the foremost of his contemporaries in interpretation, gave a recital in Chapin Hall which proved to be by far the most popular of musical events this year, although not heralded as such. Mr. Copeland's final exit from the stage was even followed by a vigorous cheer from the audience, led by Mr. Safford.

A variation from music was supplied on February 16 by F. E. Powell, "Dean of American Magicians." This performance had the distinction of drawing the largest crowd which has tried to get into Chapin Hall for some time, including numberless squadrons of small boys. The tricks performed by Mr. Powell were fully as inexplicable as expected, but those who sat in the rear of the hall were afflicted by a haunting suspicion that they could have fathomed them if near enough the scene of operations to see half of what was going on. Ten days after Mr. Powell's exhibition occurred a reversion to music in its severest and coldest form when Fernando Germani of Rome executed some remarkable physical stunts with the organ. The result was accurate, but mechanical and hardly pleasing, and the artist was criticized for not making use of the immense potentialities of his instrument. However, it was hardly to be denied that he was a virtuoso and a technician of the highest order.

PURPLE WILL OPPOSE THREE TENNIS TEAMS

Bowdoin, Wesleyan, and Yale To Be Opponents; Williams Has a Slight Advantage

Three matches in as many successive days will be played by the Williams tennis team this week, when, after facing Bowdoin on the Sage Hall courts on Thursday afternoon, it will journey to Middletown to meet Wesleyan the following day, and visit New Haven to encounter the Elisnetmen on Saturday. Indications as to the comparative worth of the teams, based on both their results this season and their previous showings against Williams, seem to point to a clean sweep of all three matches for the Purple.

The Williams lineup will probably be the same as that which defeated Union last Saturday, with the exception that Captain Banks may play in first position in place of Wolf, and Adsit will probably replace Denison in the third doubles combination. Although up to last Friday the team had had practically no practice outdoors, the courts are now in shape and the men will have had about a week in which to develop their form, besides the experience gained in the Union encounter, before they meet their first opponents on Thursday.

Inasmuch as Bowdoin has not participated in any matches as yet, no definite information has been obtained concerning their team. Their squad is unusually large, however, and contains three veterans, Soley, Captain Parker, and Jensen. The probable line-up follows: 1, Soley; 2, Parker; 3, Jensen; 4, Abbot; 5, Allenburg; 6, Ramsay.

The Wesleyan team has had about three weeks of outdoor practice, but is greatly handicapped by the loss of all but two of the men who competed against Williams last year. Captain Douglass will probably play first man for the Cardinal and Black, while A. Longacre is the only other player with varsity experience. Wolf easily defeated Douglass in the clean-sweep match last Spring, and will meet him again this Friday in an attempt to repeat that performance. Longacre, as number six, was defeated by Wright '27 in a close contest. The others from whom the Wesleyan team will be chosen are Ryman, Dean, Perry, Shuly, Vogelback, H. Barthen, E. Barthen, Torrey, Strum, and P. Longacre. No matches have as yet been played, the one scheduled with Springfield last Saturday having been called off on account of rain.

Yale has suffered heavily by graduation, losing five of the six on last year's team, including Captain Watson. The only player left is Captain McCook Reed, who playing number four last season, was defeated by Sewall, 7-5, 6-1. The ability of the members of the present squad is evidently well distributed, as evinced by the fact that in the two meets held so far, the line-ups have been completely different, except for the placing of Reed in first position. Amherst was overwhelmed by the Elis last Wednesday, the score being 9-0. In this match the men played in the following order: Reed, Mears, Pitman, Wright, Martin, and Cox, while the doubles teams were Reed and Wright, Mears and Pitman, and Tweedy and Sloan. On Saturday the Blue was badly defeated by Pennsylvania, being able to win but one match. Prior to this contest there was a complete shifting of alignment, the order of play being as follows: Reed, Dickson, Mears, Martin, Pitman, and Wright, and, in the doubles, Tweedy and Martin and Reed and Wright.

Dougherty To Lead 1931 Track

Edwin Archer Dougherty '31, of Glen Ridge, N. J., New Jersey state champion in the 120-yd. high hurdles, was elected captain of the newly formed Freshman track team which will meet Albany High School for its first encounter next Saturday. Dougherty was on his class football and basketball squads and is a member of the Musical Clubs.

Track Team Loses to Wesleyan, 71-64 (Continued from First Page)

quarter by four yards after an exciting race, the time being 53 secs. Although he was set back three yards for a false start, Strother ran a good race to get third place. Captain Crowell won the half-mile for the third consecutive year in 2:02, leading Kelly and J. Dougherty to the tape, who had a tight race for second place, the Wesleyan man finally winning the decision.

Mead of Wesleyan took the mile run in good style, the time being 4:37.2. In this event also there was a hard fight for second, but Casner of Wesleyan forged ahead to beat J. Chapman by a close margin. Williams was handicapped in the two-mile run, for Moore was sick and unable to compete. Mead won his second event of the meet from Greene and a teammate, Pope. The Purple hurdlers showed good form in taking the first two places in both the highs and lows. Boynton was not pressed in the former and beat out Shoaff in 16.6, while Nicolls and Shoaff finished in that order in the latter.

Wesleyan took four first places in the field events to Williams' three. The shot put was easily won by Gailer with a toss of 39 ft. 3 in., which is one of the best performances he has turned in during his college career. Weeks threw the hammer 139 ft. 2 in. to beat Holden of Wesleyan, as was expected, while Rohrbach took third. Harper and Johnson of Wesleyan showed good form and finished first and second in the discus throw, Anderson being the only Williams entry to place. The tables were turned in the javelin event. Callaghan won with a throw of 168 ft. 10 1/4 in., Rowley taking second from Johnson.

Both teams were weak in the high jump, but Bradshaw and Williams managed to clear 5 ft. 4 in. to tie for first place, with Davis and Shoaff of Williams deadlocked for third. G. Dougherty and Shaw had a close duel in the broad jump event, but the Wesleyan man finally won by a narrow margin, Harper placing third. The winner jumped 21 ft. 4 3/8 in. before he could gain the decision. Wesleyan dominated the pole vault, taking all three places. Frederick, Root, and Stephen tied for first at 10 ft. 3 in.

The summary is as follows:

100-yd. dash—Won by Beals (W); Sterling (W), second; Straw (W), third. Time: 10.3 sec.

220-yd. dash—Won by Beals (W); Shaw (Wes.), second; Sterling (W), third. Time: 22.6 secs.

110-yd. dash—Won by Kelly (Wes.); Capt. Keep (W), second; Strother (W), third. Time: 53 secs.

880-yd. run—Won by Capt. Crowell (Wes.); Kelly (Wes.), second; J. Dougherty (W), third. Time: 2 min. 2 secs.

One-mile run—Won by Mead (Wes.); Casner (Wes.), second; J. Chapman (W), third. Time: 4 min. 37.2 secs.

Two-mile run—Won by Mead (Wes.); Greene (W), second; Pope (Wes.), third. Time: 10 min. 10.8 secs.

120-yd. high hurdles—Won by Boynton (W); Shoaff (W), second; Whetwith (Wes.), third. Time: 16.6 secs.

220-yd. low hurdles—Won by Nicolls (W); Shoaff (W), second; Thomas (Wes.), third. Time: 29.2 secs.

Shot put—Won by Gailer (W); Holden (Wes.), second; Bagg (Wes.), third. Dist.: 39 ft. 3 in.

Hammer throw—Won by Weeks (W); Holden (Wes.), second; Rohrbach (W), third. Dist.: 139 ft. 2 in.

Discus throw—Won by Harper (Wes.); Johnson (Wes.), second; S. Anderson (W), third. Dist.: 118 ft. 11 1/4 in.

Javelin throw—Won by Callaghan (W); Rowley (W), second; Johnson (Wes.), third. Dist.: 168 ft. 10 1/4 in.

Broad jump—Won by Shaw (Wes.); G. Dougherty (W), second; Harper (Wes.), third. Dist.: 21 ft. 4 3/8 in.

High jump—Tie for first between Bradshaw and Williams (Wes.); tie for third between Davis and Shoaff (W). Height: 5 ft. 4 in.

Pole vault—Triple tie between Frederick, Root, and Stephen (Wes.). Height: 10 ft. 3 in.

Final score: Wesleyan, 71; Williams, 64.

Brinsmade Talks on Progress in Physics

imaginary system, known as "space-time."

From this hypothesis, he stated that Einstein formed his theory of relativity based on a fourth dimensional scale. In this system, the "event" is the unit of calculation.

"But," continued Mr. Brinsmade, "are we then to throw out all our principles of physics, and is our whole civilization to crash to the ground because the new discoveries are seemingly incompatible with the classic generalities? This is not essential," he said, "because these principles are just as true as they were in the '90's. Our error was merely that we believed that they were absolute. New ranges of experimental phenomena are continually being opened up. Some of the new phenomena are not isolated facts, but fit together, so that we may get newer generalizations. But these based are on different conceptions from the older generalizations."

Mr. Brinsmade then defined more fully the "event", which is considered the unit of the new "time-space" theory, and said that "our concepts are inferred from a complex background of memory of earlier sensations of man. Every one adopts some philosophical attitude on which to live and work. There has always been a belief in absolute substances which make up the world. The shattering of this belief is difficult for physicists to accept. Yet the same laws of nature continue to apply to the ranges for which they were formulated. New ranges are merely being discovered."

Russell Says Americans Must Stress Development

demands some special kind of effort, a whole outlook on life has been developed unconsciously to suit the situation. Persecution, political and theological, is the darker side of the picture. The lighter side is a great stress upon social co-operation, group consciousness, being a good mixer, and so on. In education, so far as I could discover, this is stressed alike by the conventional authorities and by the reformers, the only difference being as to means.

"As regards democracy: There are here two different points; first, that even if all men are equal it does not follow that all men are alike; secondly, that, though all men may be equal in respect to rights, they are not equal in respect to capacity. To take the first point first; it is thought snobbish in America for persons who like literature, or art, or pure mathematics, or Egyptology, or what-not, to wish to associate with other people of like tastes, unless it be formally in a club on the first Wednesday of the month or some such occasion. It is not thought nearly so dreadful for baseball fans to seek each other's society. These do, in fact, feel superior to the vulgar herd, but the others are suspected of this feeling—quite wrongly, since, as a rule, they will only confess to intellectual or artistic tastes in a tête-à-tête, after looking to see that no one is listening outside the door.

"Unusual tastes do not imply any claim to superiority, and should not expose their possessor to persecution, since every community needs a sprinkling of people interested in something beyond money and athletics.

"It is generally recognized in American universities that those who are eminent in football should not be worried by intellectual requirements. I am pleading for the converse, that those who are eminent intellectually should not be worried by football, or by the various social requirements involved in the attempt to make them commonplace.

"Democracy, rightly conceived, does not demand acceptance of the patently untrue proposition that all men are equal in ability. It involves an absence of social, economic, and legal privileges other than those that are demanded that a man may perform his maximum service to the community. It is not inconsistent with democracy so understood that a youth of exceptional ability should have exceptional educational opportunities; nor is it inconsistent that his exceptional abilities should be recognized.

"All this requires, if I am not mistaken, a somewhat greater emphasis upon individual development and a somewhat smaller emphasis upon social cooperation, than has been customary in American education during the present century. But the whole question is one of degree, since both elements are needed; it is only as to the proportions in which they should be mixed that a rational divergence of opinion is possible."

Blindfolded in scientific test of leading Cigarettes, James Montgomery Flagg selects

Old Gold

After this test, Mr. Flagg wrote:

"Most of us smoke names and think we are smoking cigarettes! The blindfold test proved that to me. It proved also that it is difficult to tell one cigarette from another . . . except in the case of OLD GOLD . . . I spotted that . . . it suited me best even blindfolded. In fact, the man who said 'not a cough in a carload' knew whereof he spoke. It's the smoothness that identifies OLD GOLD. It needs no other trade mark."

taken in his studio while test was being made

How Test Was Made

Subject was blindfolded, and, in the presence of two responsible witnesses, was given one each of the four leading cigarettes to smoke. To clear the taste, coffee was served before each cigarette. Mr. Flagg was entirely unaware of the identity of these cigarettes during test. After smoking the four cigarettes, Mr. Flagg was asked to designate by number his choice. He promptly replied, "Number 2," which was OLD GOLD.

VARSITY TRACK TEAM TO OPPOSE B. U. TODAY

Visitors Formidable in Dashes and Runs; Williams Looks Strong in Field Events

With a well balanced aggregation in the track events including two excellent sprinters in Morrill and Eicknell, the Boston University track team will come to Williamstown to meet the Purple on Weston Field this afternoon. Comparisons on paper point to an interesting meet; for, although the visitors are strong on the track, Williams looks more formidable in the field. In the Wesleyan meet the Purple showed an improvement over their early season form, while an even better performance is expected today.

Who Will Compete in the Broad Jump against B. U. Today.

B. U. and Williams last met two years ago when the latter won, 87-48. Morrill, the visitor's star sprinter, took both the dashes in this meet, the 100 in 10.2 secs. and the 220 in 22.8. Another veteran, Garrity, beat out G. Dougherty in the broad jump with a leap of 20 ft. 10 in., while a new college record of 161 ft. 10 in. was set by Rowley in the javelin throw. Captain Keep placed second in the quarter mile, which was won in the exceedingly fast time of 49.2 secs.

To date this season B. U. has won from Worcester, 68 1/2-66 1/2, and has lost to Northeastern by an 81-61 score. In the latter, Morrill did the century in 10 flat. Against Worcester Bicknell won the 220 in 22.1, and Morrill again took the 100 in 10.1 secs. The time for the furlong is very good, since the Worcester 220 course (Continued on Sixth Page)

ECONOMIST LECTURES ON GERMAN FINANCES

Professor J. H. Williams Discusses Country's Ability to Pay Reparations

"At present there is no economic reason why Germany cannot pay the reparations," stated Professor John H. Williams of Harvard in his lecture on "Reparations and the Dawes Plan", which he gave in Jesup Hall last Tuesday evening. Discounting the predictions of many economists that the Dawes Plan will break down this year, Professor Williams discussed the obstacles impeding the completion of the payments, and brought out the ingenious flexibility of the plan which has enabled it to work successfully thus far.

Briefly reviewing the various reparation proposals prior to 1922 by which Germany was to pay varying amounts up to 225 trillion gold marks, the speaker told how the aid of the United States was finally solicited after the French occupation of the Ruhr. ## TENNIS TEAM WINS FROM BOWDOIN, 7-2

Williams Takes All But One of the Singles and Doubles Games; Team Plays Well

With far superior individual and team play, the Williams tennis team overcame Bowdoin Thursday afternoon on the Sage Hall courts by a 7-2 score, the former team winning all but the fifth singles and third doubles matches. The Purple, although never hard-pressed, displayed an excellent brand of tennis for the first of the season, Captain Banks and Wolf showing up particularly well against the somewhat inexperienced Bowdoin aggregation.

Greatly improved since the Union match a week ago, Wolf, playing number one, defeated Soley, of Bowdoin, 6-3, 6-1, the former making good use of his chop strokes. In the second singles, Banks was forced to 6-1 in winning the first set from Parker, but came back in the second to triumph over his opponent 6-1. Both Sewall and Chase had little difficulty in defeating Jensen and Abbott, respectively, by 6-1, 6-3, and 6-1, 6-0 scores. In the fifth match, however, Williams met the first stumbling block, when Adsit was beaten by Altenburg in hard-played sets, 6-4, 6-4. Adsit pressed Altenburg through out the match, but was forced in the end to succumb to his opponent's ability to return all of his shots. Shoaff, in the last of the singles matches, easily disposed of Ramsey, 6-1, 6-1. Shoaff is improving rapidly, and in his matches played good tennis, his volleying being particularly prominent.

170 GUESTS EXPECTED AT WEEK-END PARTIES

Visit To Be Enlivened by Dances at Five Fraternities and Commons Club

One hundred and seventy reasons for staying in Williamstown over this week-end will enliven the stands of Weston Field this afternoon and the dance floors of six houses this evening, as guests at the second of the May houseparties. In the expectancy of perhaps another day of summer, with blossoming foliage instead of bare branches and gay dresses instead of fur coats to brighten the outlook of Williamstown, the six organizations will entertain at informal tea-dances after the athletic events, followed by formal parties until twelve tonight.

Chi Psi, Delta Kappa Epsilon, Delta Phi, Kappa Alpha, Theta Chi, Zeta Psi, and the Commons Club, the first two in combination, will hold dances. Music at these houseparties will be furnished by the following orchestras: Chi Psi and Delta Kappa Epsilon, Vincent O'Beghio's Orchestra; Delta Phi, Dok Eisenburg's Symphonians; Kappa Alpha, Ben Bernie's Juniors; Theta Delta Chi, Pearl's Orchestra; Zeta Psi, Wittstein's Orchestra; the Commons Club, Dehey's Royal Orchestra. The list of guests follows: Chi Psi: The Misses Helen West, Pongkeepsie, Rene Stillman and Chubbie Thompson, New Rochelle, N. Y.; Martha Beery, Denny Underwood, Kate Haskell, Frances Rich, and Betty Proctor, Northampton; Mary Gidvay and Kathleen Hyland, Albany; Katherine Adams, Boston; Charlotte Altman, Hartford; Janet Murray, Troy; Clifford Haneke, Charlottesville, Va.

The Commons Club: The Misses Kathryn Hess, Olive Perrigo, and Catherine Becker, South Hadley; Mary Warren, Peggy Warren, Constance White, and (Continued on Sixth Page)

St. Stephens Team Will Meet Lacrosse Twelve

Playing in their first out-of-town game of the season, the Williams lacrosse team will travel to Amundale today to encounter the reputedly powerful St. Stephens College twelve. Although practically nothing is known about the strength of the St. Stephens team, it may be taken for granted that there will be a hard struggle, for lacrosse is the principal spring sport at that institution and many very successful teams have been turned out there in the past.

Coach Bellerose has made several shifts in the Williams line-up since the St. Lawrence game last Saturday. Arndt is out of the lineup, temporarily at least, with an injured finger, and Deming has won his place at second defense. The entire attack formation has been rearranged, with Dunn, Brown, and Reiff holding the positions of first, second, and third attack respectively. Hubbard has been transferred to outside home, and Neilson is replacing Jacobs at inside home. Several more men have recently joined the squad, and the extra material may prove valuable in the future as the team rounds into form. No predictions can be made about the outcome of the contest, but it may be said that the Purple twelve will have a hard struggle if they are to win. The lineups are as follows:

WILLIAMS—Seacott, g.; Collins, p.; Dunning, c.p.; Ashby, id.; Deming, 2d.; Wilf, 3d.; Thurston, c.; Reiff, 3a.; Brown, 2a.; Dunn, 1a.; Hubbard, o.h.; Neilson, i.h.

AMHERST BALL TEAM TAKES TWO ADDITIONAL POINTS IN 'TROPHY' RACE

Remer Chosen Rushing Arbiter for Next Year

Professor C. F. Remer was appointed Rushing Arbiter for next year at a recent meeting of the 1929 Interfraternity Council called to elect a successor to Professor Leigh, who is resigning to take up his duties as president of Bennington College. At the same time Professor J. W. Miller, who was an associate arbiter with Professor Remer this year, was reappointed, while the remaining associate vacancy has not as yet been filled.

The Interfraternity Council also announced that the week of September 29 to October 5 has been set for rushing season next year. An amendment to the rules governing rushing season given the freshmen until 1.30 p. m. to mail their replies to the third period invitations, instead of requiring them to be mailed by noon, thus allowing more time for making a choice.

'LITTLE THEATRE' TO OFFER BILL TONIGHT

Plays by O'Neill, Pinero and Mrs. Canfield to be Produced in Jesup Hall

Friday, May 11—A varied program, made up of three types of drama and produced by an unusually strong cast, will be presented by the Williams Little Theatre tonight at 8.00 in the Jesup Hall auditorium. The plays which will be given are In the Zoo, by Eugene O'Neill, Playgirls, by Arthur Pinero, and The Duchess Says Her Prayers, by Mary Cass Canfield.

In the Zoo, directed by Shoemaker '28, is the first O'Neill play which the Little Theatre has produced in over a year, and is typical of the rugged realism of its author's style. It is one of his "S. S. Glencairn" series, the scene being laid on board a ship in the mine zone during the war. R. B. Sewall '29 will direct Playgirls, an almost farcical comedy by Pinero dealing with modern home life and the servant problem. R. Wheeler '31 has the part of the Master, and Mrs. Graham that of the Mistress, and they will be assisted by a cast of six players taking the parts of five species of maids and an odd man. The Duchess Says Her Prayers is a delicately wrought play, made poignant by the wistful charm of the central figure. The action takes place in the Duomo at Milan. Mrs. Newhall, Lucas '31 and Miss Eleanor Lincoln as the Duchess, comprise the cast of this play by Mrs. Canfield.

The complete casts are as follows:

Nichols Holds Varsity at Bay While Sabrinas Pound Ball Hard for 8-2 Victory

CAPTAIN SMITH KNOCKS TRIPLE

Seven Costly Errors Are Partially Accountable for Purple Impotence

Bats rendered impotent by the masterful pitching of Nichols and errors committed at critical moments in the field caused another defeat to be added to the seemingly endless string of the Varsity baseball team last Thursday afternoon on Pratt Field in the first game of the annual Williams-Amherst series. A large crowd, celebrating the Amherst Junior Prom week, saw the inexperienced Purple nine submerged by an 8-2 score, chiefly due to its own errors, several of them inexcusable, thus losing two more points toward the "Trophy of Trophies", which seems destined to travel across the Berkshires for the first time in its history.

Unable to emerge from the slump which has been apparent since the season started, the Williams nine was practically helpless against the smooth-working Sabrina combination. For a brief period the Royal Purple held a one-run lead, but this was soon wiped out when the home team's big bats pounded out a fusillade of blows which, together with a walk and an error, accounted for three runs, thus putting Amherst in the lead, 3-1, in the third inning. Singmaster then held his opponents at bay until the seventh, when the Sabrina artillery again got into action, and with the aid of more errors on the part of the Purple players, four more runs were scored. A valiant last-minute attempt by the down-trodden Williams nine to even the score produced but one run, which was accounted for by Capt. Smith's screaming triple, the longest hit of the day.

In the second inning Foster singled, advanced to second on a passed ball and scored on Daniel's single, and in this way Williams drew first blood. The Sabrinas, however, unleashed a powerful attack in the third which put them ahead. A walk to Halligan, a double by Trenchard, an error on L. Parker's long fly, and a single by Wilson did the damage, and the score was then 3-1. Amherst scored again in the next inning on singles by Nichols and Dean. In the meantime Nichols was pitching effectively, keeping his opponents at bay.

The "lucky" seventh produced four runs for Amherst. A walk, three errors, singles by L. Parker and Goodwin were sufficient to push these across, and Williams was left hopelessly in the rear. However, in the eighth one last effort was made by the Purple when Putnam reached first

President Bernard I. Bell Expresses His Opinion on the Undergraduate's Morality and Ideas of Religion

"The current indifference to religion, which indubitably exists on many of our campuses, is largely caused by the fact that the students are entirely too moral," writes The Rev. Bernard I. Bell, president of St. Stephens College and frequent Chapel speaker here, in an article in a recent issue of the Atlantic Monthly entitled "The Church and the Undergraduate." Dr. Bell says that he cannot agree to the current belief that "the college student is both religiously and morally in a parlous state", but states rather that "The college student is an intensely conformist person, a moral young man."

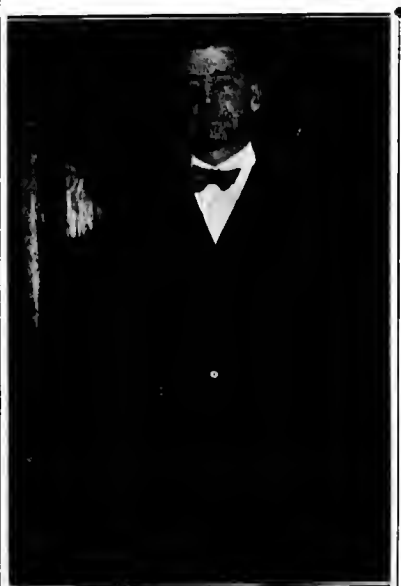

"Colleagues are usually quite ordinary human beings", he writes, "normally between the ages of eighteen and twenty-five, for the most part living away from home, more or less earnestly studying about themselves and the world. The first thing to be noted about them is not the difference between them and others, but their extraordinary likeness to others. Probably seven-eighths of all undergraduates are children of their time, accepting without question current opinions, prejudices, standards. All youths are conservative, college youths not excepted. They are shy, self-conscious, overmodest, fearful of being considered eccentric.

There are, of course, the relatively few exceptions, those who have really questioning minds. They are so rare that the discovery of one is an event in the college professor's year."

After defining morality as "conformity to whatever is considered socially useful in the group to which an individual happens to belong", Dr. Bell continues. "Public opinion all about us presses in upon the colleges with a force which most of the students never think of resisting and which even the few find it difficult to withstand. Does the collegian disregard the 18th Amendment and the Volstead Act? He does it, not because he is in revolt, but because he wishes to conform to current middle class custom. His ideas in regard to purity he derives from the conversation, the books, the magazines, the plays, the motion pictures which are prepared, not for him, but for the world of which he is a part.

"Does he cheat in examinations and defend the practice? He does, and he learned to do it from the worship of success at any price which characterizes our entire age. In short, for better or for worse, he is a moral young man. It is this very morality which interferes in his (Continued on Fifth Page)

'Cap and Bells' Will Produce Shakespeare's 'Hamlet' in the Style of the Italian 'Commedia del Arte'

MR. HARRY IRVINE
Who Is Coaching the Cap and Bells Spring Production of Hamlet
Why a Pierrot-Hamlet?
(Courtesy of Mr. Harry Irvine)
In a recent number of THE RECORD, I announced, on behalf of Cap and Bells, our decision to do Hamlet in the style of the Commedia del Arte with Hamlet garbed as Pierrot. Since then, most of the intelligent followers of the dramatic doings of Williams College must have been asking:—"Why?"

The dilemma of Shakespearean production was stated. On the one hand, the "historically accurate" production with a dramatic method that has become stereotyped. On the other, modern dress and modern customs which clash so painfully with the archaic language and the actions called for by Shakespeare. What is needed is a method of presentation sufficiently removed from the everyday and commonplace to be in harmony with the beautiful but old-fashioned speech; and at the same time free from the conventions which have been built up with the utmost care by the most skilful professionals, but which are apt to be deadening to their amateur followers and admirers.

La Commedia dell'Arte all'Improvvisatore is the name by which we know a method of dramatic presentation of considerable antiquity, which reached a great prominence at the middle of the 16th century and was much practised in Shakespeare's own day. As the name implies, the professional ac. (Continued on Second Page)

THE DEMOCRATIC "D"

Dartmouth found a new way of distributing campus honors this week when its Athletic Council abolished, in almost one fell swoop, all major-minor classification of sports. This means that beginning next fall every member of a varsity team, whether tennis or football, cross-country or baseball, is to be rewarded with a straight and dignified "D". No longer will a "c-c" or a "t-t" cramp the lig green capital and squeeze its proud sides. Sweaters will be stripped of such embarrassing embroidery, and the Dartmouth campus will be made safe for democracy.

But the Dartmouth Athletic Council is evidently aware of the fact that all sports are not created equal and that it cannot make them so by taking away a technical classification and a few superfluous giegaws. Or possibly it feared the wrath of bona fide major men. At any rate it has retained a large enough remnant of the old system so that the gaping freshman will still be able to distinguish the football god from a mere cross-country runner. While all "D's" will look alike from a distance, a close-up will reveal the good news that they vary in size. Thus football letters are entitled to a stature of seven inches; Lacrosse, track and basketball, six inches; and all others sports, five.

By this somewhat sly provision Dartmouth has recognized a well known trait in human nature, but it has also knocked most of the teeth out of its ruling. This sliding scale of letter dimensions not only precludes the complete abolishment of the traditional major-minor classification, but it practically establishes a new "super-major" classification for football. Perhaps we miss the spirit of the thing, but we do not see that the Dartmouth Athletic Council has done much more than indicate its disapproval of the present system by providing a more simplified one. Athletic glory will now be gauged by the height instead of the width of insignia.

The Dartmouth is optimistic enough to believe that this move "ends a disastrous tendency to over-emphasize the major sports," and that "since teams will receive letters differing only in size, there will be more men trying out for the less popular." Without questioning how "disastrous" this tendency really is, we do question the assertion that it is ended. It will require more than letter leveling to put college football and college tennis on the same pedestal. Legal distinctions can be blown away by councils, but as far as undergraduate estimation is concerned, sports will always fall naturally into classifications of major and minor, important and unimportant.

This raises the moot question of what makes a sport major, which seemed to bother some of us at Williams this winter. A mild agitation to elevate basketball to a higher status brought forward varying opinions, and while nothing was definitely decided, the question is bound to come up again next year. Perhaps Dartmouth has shown us the solution. There is no doubt that Williams could save itself a lot of unnecessary worry by doing away with the present elaborate system of making athletic awards, and it is quite possible that the bribe of a straight "W" would lure more men into "minor" activities. But we should first make sure that we need such an inducement at Williams. Certainly we do not seem to be suffering from any "disastrous" over-emphasis of the major sports; and the minor sports cannot complain of a dearth of material. If we still feel that the major-minor classification "smacks of snobishness" and that it throws a false light on our athletes, we might do well to take a hint from Hanover.

'Cap and Bells' Will Produce Shakespeare's 'Hamlet'

tors for the most part relied on improvisation for their speeches; the plot and subject matter of the play being set beforehand. The published "plays" in many cases give little but the sequence of entrances and exists. Their contemporary amateur followers at the Universities, having less confidence in their powers of improvisation and pantomime, made literary scripts of their plays, including the full text. In spite of the word Commedia, the presentations were not confined to comedy; many serious and tragic dramas were portrayed. But always with the serious dramas were combined the fooleries and buffooneries of the "masks"; and it is these who have remained famous. The protagonists of the drama-story proper—for the most part, lovers—were uninteresting shadows, dressed in the costume of the period and uttering flamboyances in a bombastic style. The popular interest centered in the "masks". The boasting soldier; the apothecary; the doctor of letters; the old man robbed of his young wife, his daughter, or his money; above all, the foolish lackey. In the Gelosi troupe (1578-1604) there were three of the latter; named respectively Pedrolino or Piero, Burlattino, and Arlecchino. Ed Wynn would probably have been thoroughly at home in any one of the parts.

Shakespeare was, of course, well aware of the Commedia method. He borrowed from it, as he borrowed from all possible dramatic sources. And, as we might expect, his earlier plays show more indebtedness than his later. The Players are cautioned by Hamlet to avoid both its extremes. The robustious periwig pated fellow who tears a passion to tatters offends him to the soul; on the other hand "let those that play your clowns speak no more than is set down for them". A farcical dramatic commentary is the final sting in Cleopatra's vision of defeat:

"The quick comedians extemporally shall stage us:
Anthony shall be brought drunken forth;
and I shall see

Some squeaking Cleopatra boy my greatness
I' the posture of a whore."

If then we attempt to be "historically accurate" and to use the contemporary Commedia method for our production of Hamlet, we should gain nothing and lose much. The main characters, including of course Hamlet, would appear in Elizabethan dress: Polonius, the Grave-diggers, Osric, and possibly Rosencrantz and Guiltenstern, would be clowned to the limit. We should only exchange one convention for another; and should do a deep wrong to the genius of Shakespeare, which so far transcended any of the existing conventions of his own stage and is so "modern" that we have not caught up to it yet. What then is the proposal?

The Commedia method, like any other dramatic method, inevitably evolved. An actor named Domenico in the time of Molière, "a man of wit, well-read, the friend of letters", changed the lackey-clown Harlequin to a man of sense. The name, Harlequin, frenchifying Arlecchino, first appears in Molière's Don Juan. The famous French pantomimist, Deburau, made a similar change in the character of Pierrot, standardizing his costume as the French blouse and loose trousers and substituting a cap of black velvet for the skull cap and pointed hat. "Pale as the moon, mysterious as silence, supple and mute as the serpent, he could play all the parts of Molière without speaking a word". These two great artists followed Shakespeare in breathing universal humanity into stage "types". In the hands of Deburau, Pierrot ceased to be a comic and cowardly lackey, and became a great human symbol. And that is his legacy to posterity. When we see or think of Pierrot, we see the figure that Deburau created rather than the flour-faced clown of the Italian Commedia.

There is an element of the Shakespearean genius that is often ignored in modern presentation—the element of fantasy. It has been absent from our stage for the three hundred years that lie between The Midsummer Night's Dream and Peter Pan. And just as the fantastic quality informs all Barrie's plays, however serious; so it informs all Shakespeare's plays, however tragic. The very

J. W. BULLOCK '81 DIES

President of Greylock Hotel Was Ardent Williams Alumnus

James W. Bullock, owner of the Greylock Hotel and an active alumnus of Williams since his graduation in 1881, died suddenly in his home in Cincinnati Thursday morning after a short illness. Since his graduation, Mr. Bullock has taken an active interest in the affairs of the College, annually attending the Commencement exercises and serving for many years as the chairman of the College Loyalty Fund Association.

After completing his college course Mr. Bullock opened offices in Cincinnati, but came into possession of the Greylock Hotel on the death of his father and leased it to Henry N. Teague. He established his summer residence on the Cold Springs road. As president of the Williamstown Water Company, Mr. Bullock has always been active in matters pertaining to the general welfare of the town, and he recently presented it with a large tract of land located near Petersburg mountain for a forest reserve.

was a series of compromises which based the amount of reparations to be paid on the prosperity of certain national industries as well as the government. It provided that Germany pay from one to two and one half billion marks during the first five years of its operation and the steady sum of two and one half billions each year thereafter until the full amount has been paid. Regarding problems arising from the execution of the plan, Professor Williams was of the opinion that "the economists have made a bugaboo of the difficulty of transfer, while, in reality, the shifting $625,000,000 from Germany to the Allied countries would not effect world trade in the least."

Professor Williams expressed some alarm at two local conditions, however,—one the rapid inflow of American capital into Germany, and second, the instability of the money market. He pointed out that "the states and communities are borrowing lavishly from foreign sources with the result that the central bank has no effective control over the market. If these present tendencies continue," he concluded, "the financial situation will grow steadily worse, but there is no reason why the plan itself should break down. Reparations do not present an insuperable economic problem, and we have gone far towards its solution."

VAN VECHTEN SPEAKERS FACE MANY QUESTIONS

Religion, Automobiles, Art, Marriage, and Airplanes Are Discussed by Seven Seniors

Subjects ranging from religion to transatlantic flights were treated by Banks, Gaskill, Hodge, Hunt, Robinson, Rust, and Shoemaker in the two rounds of the van Vechten prize speaking contest held in Jessup Hall on Monday and Thursday afternoons of the past week. Not only were the individual speakers required to vary their attention from dramatic revivals to companionate marriage in their two appearances, but they also faced two groups of judges: Dr. Adriance, Mr. Hart, and Mr. Hutchinson on Monday; Assistant Professor Schlesinger, Mr. Chapin, and Mr. Chapman on Thursday.

Gaskill and Robinson both chose as their first subject "The Need for a New Religion". Gaskill considered beauty the new object of religion and said that it could be found in practically everything, such as ethics, science, art, and business. "If we can once realize the value of personality and the omnipresence of beauty we will have a new religion." Robinson declared that the Copernican, Cartesian, and Darwinian theories had resulted in a pan-psychism which was destructive to religion and concluded that "Christianity is invalid, and a new belief in an ultimate value is needed."

The same speakers agreed on the topic "Must Art Have Meaning" on the second day. After quoting the verses of Shelley which depict beauty as something nebulous, intangible, and mysterious, Robinson ran through the categories of artistic achievements, showing that they all catch something that is real in human experience and that this meaning is a significant part of anything that is beautiful. "Meaning is the fruit which is transferred through the unity and harmony that make up the artist's technique," Gaskill pictured the creative artist as a man who organizes the materials of a narrow field just as we all organize the materials of our lives. His creation is greater than any meaning which even the artist himself could assign to it at any one point of time.

"Form and unity, the rules of art, are a rationalization of some pleasing cerebral agitation," was Hodge's outstanding addition to the discussion of the same topic. But he also found that the one common factor in all art is that it must be understood by other people. In his first appearance on Monday Hodge answered the question "What Price Peace?" with the declaration that a strong and indisputable central government is the only hope as long as the peoples of the world are not willing to pay the price of sacrifice of patriotic nationalism and racial antipathy.

College questions received the attention of Banks on both occasions. On Monday he defended the use of automobiles by undergraduates and expressed the opinion that this means of locomotion "has now become so popular that it may be considered as adding to the individuality of the man." On Thursday he contrasted the vista of unlimited opportunities in the outer world which is depicted to Seniors as graduation approaches with the feeling of humbleness at opportunities lost in undergraduate days. He expressed anxiety for the permanence of the values found in college. "Here we live in an atmosphere of idealism and gentlemanly sportsmanship; many have gone out and soon become hardened, dry, and dead."

Hunt also dealt with undergraduate problems when he compared benefits within and without the curriculum, and concluded that outside contacts with professors and students offered a broader and more permanent value. In his first speech Hunt had defended "Al" Smith as a presidential candidate in the hope of a return to Jeffersonian principles.

Rust and Shoemaker faced the marriage problem. After pointing out and in part defending scores for the traditional institutions, Rust found hope for future whole-some generations in the fact that all parties to the controversy plead for the maintenance of the home. Shoemaker found the source of the trouble in the contrast between present day ideas and the age of storks and, passing over companionate marriage, looked for a remedy in birth control and sex education.

Confidence in the future of transatlantic aviation was expressed by Rust in his speech on Monday when he pointed out that no plane with more than one motor had ever failed in the crossing. Shoemaker's opening subject was "Dramatic Revivals", which he regarded as of great value in awakening the American stage from a state of stagnation. On the other hand, "Gesticulation and superficialities of the stage of yesterday have given away to the actor of today, who shows more restraint and reflects the everyday life of the average man."

Freshmen Clash With Pittsfield Team Today

Friday, May 11—A Freshman baseball team vastly improved over that which lost the opening contest to Cushing last Saturday will face the Pittsfield High School nine on Cole Field this afternoon at 4:00 p. m. Practice this week has greatly strengthened the yearlings, who are gradually overcoming the inevitable drawbacks of a new and inexperienced combination, so that Coach Graham feels confident that the team will show its capability in scoring a victory in the match today.

Daily workouts have been held for the squad on Cole Field, which has lately been rolled, and thus greatly improved for baseball. A practice game was held with Williamstown High School, in which the freshmen displayed fine team work to win easily. The whole team showed a more steady, driving power, and has probably discarded the feeling of "stage fright", a factor that proved disastrous against Cushing. The same line-up as previously will probably start today's game, although many others are almost certain to see action sometime during the contest.

COLUMBIA TO INVADE WILLIAMSTOWN TODAY

Comparative Scores and Slump of Williams Give Advantage to New Yorkers

In one of the outstanding features of the houseparty week-end, an improved Williams baseball team will attempt to register its first victory of the season at the expense of a fairly strong Columbia nine this afternoon at 3:00 o'clock on Weston Field. Rigorous practice sessions during the past week have done much to improve the Purple fielding, which at best has been only fair, and, if this department functions satisfactorily, the Varsity will have an even chance to defeat the Lions, who have had the experience of ten games thus far this season.

By comparative scores the New Yorkers seem to have the edge, but if the Purple bats, which have long been dormant, awaken from their lethargy, Williams may upset the dope. Columbia battled 11 innings to a 1-1 tie with Brown, which team defeated the Varsity 5-0, but the Lions were baffled by Beauchamp's offerings in a contest with West Point, which resulted in a 2-0 victory for the cadets. This same pitcher was chiefly responsible for the downfall of Williams, 8-4, in the opening game of the season here. These two games are the only ones which offer any comparison, but besides these, Columbia has played eight others, winning four and losing four. Victories were scored over St. Johns, Upsala, Princeton, and Seton Hall, while the Lions were beaten by Manhattan, Pennsylvania, and twice by Cornell. Two of these contests, one with Cornell and the other with Pennsylvania, went 12 innings before a decision could be reached.

Williams has had poor success in the six games played, losing all of them, mainly because of poor work in the field. Coach Fox, however, has been working on this department during the week and he feels that the squad's chief difficulty has been in its inexperience. He believes that the team is due to find itself and to show a decided improvement. Bad weather and injuries have played their part in handicapping the nine, the former being prevalent during the first part of the season and the latter making their appearance at this time. Titman is out of play for at least another week with water on the knee which resulted from his injury in the Brown game last Saturday, and Putnam is handicapped by a stone bruise on his left hand.

The tentative line-ups and batting orders for the game are:

WILLIAMS—Inverso, 2b; Putnam, 3b; Winn, ss; Alexander, 1b; T. H. Smith or Foster, cf; C. H. Smith, c; Thoms or D. P. Williams, lf; Daniel or R. H. Williams, rf; T. H. ## Golfers to Oppose Great Barrington Players Today

In search of opposition outside inter-collegiate circles, the Williams golf team will engage representatives of the Great Barrington Country Club on the latter's links today. The Purple is expected to run against reasonably stiff competition, especially in the person of Dwight Partridge, leading player for the opponents, who will attempt to mar the excellent record set up by Captain Blaney last week in his defeat of the highly-rated Brown and Harvard captains.

The composition of the team in last Saturday's matches showed enough strength to warrant the continuance of the same line-up in this encounter. Therefore, the team will be composed of the following men, who will probably play in the order shown: Captain Blaney, J. G. Williams, Smith, Heller, Fall, and Wheeler.

Organ Interludes

The program of organ interludes to be presented during the morning Chapel services this week by Mr. C. L. Safford is as follows:

Monday	Adagio in A minor	J. S. Bach
Tuesday	Spring Song	Grieg
Wednesday	Larghetto	Mozart
Thursday	Adagio (Pathétique Sonate)	Beethoven
Friday	Hymn in F	Arcadelt
Saturday	Canzonetta	Mendelssohn

College Preacher

The Reverend Frederick C. Budlong, D.D., of Greenwich, Conn., will conduct the regular Sunday morning service in the Thompson Memorial Chapel at 10:35 a. m.

Go the economical way with adventurers of your own
age—people who are determined that they will see,
and get all the advantages of having seen, Europe but who want to save their money to spend while traveling there
and who enjoy a trip on the ocean for its own sake.

Do you realize how very inexpensively this can be done on big Cunard ships
such as the CARONIA, CAR-
MANIA, SCYTHIA, LACONIA,
LANCASTRIA, and TUSCANIA?
You are berthed in a comfortable, clean cabin, you
have good food, nicely
served, with ample deck
space and you enjoy the company of your own kind
of people... because they are others like you who feel the adventurous call of trav-

You will dance on moonlit
decks to the rhythm of a

have yet resisted. You will swim in salt water in an im-

play the delightful deck

1931 Track Team Meets Albany in Opener Today

After two weeks of daily practise under the tutelage of Coach Seeley, the 1931 track team will inaugurate its spring schedule against Albany High School this afternoon on Weston Field following the varsity meet with Boston University.
The strength of the team is as yet unknown, for there has been no competition, with the exception of the time trials held a week ago.

E. Dougherty was elected captain at a meeting of the squad last week. During practise he has shown up very well, especially in the hurdles. In the varsity time trials on April 21 he ran the highs in excellent form. In the 1931 trials he not only won both the hurdle events, but also the broad jump. Last Saturday most of the times and distances were fair, considering the short practise period that the freshmen have had, and the inexperience of many of the candidates.

As a result of trials held recently, the following will compete against Albany:

100-yard dash—Hood, Jacobs, Evans,
Bartow, and Dixon.

220-yard dash—Hood, Sessions, Jacobs, and Evans.

440-yard run—Sessions, Eynon, Harris, and Arcsott.

1 mile run—Suffern, Guernsey, and Wineberg.

120-yard high hurdles—Dougherty,
Capps, Lewis, and Gregg.

220-yard low hurdles—Dougherty,
Capps, Lewis, and Gregg.

High jump—Davidson, Meier, Cobb, and Miller.

Broad jump—Dougherty, Capps, Meier, and Lobo.

Pole vault—Lobo, Camp, and Turrell.

Hammer throw—Schwartz, and Kelly.

Shot put—Stewart, Lobo, Kipp, and Dougherty.

Discus throw—Dougherty, Lobo, Kipp, and Stewart.

Javelin throw—Kipp, Wurst, Lobo, and Camp.

of the Purple pair. They weakened in the middle of the first act, however, and from then on were outplayed, dropping the two sets, 6-2, 6-1. Sewall and Chase, showing good team work, overwhelmed Jensen and Altenburg, 6-0, 6-1. Bow-doin's second victory came in the third doubles match when Abbott and Ramsey overcame Shoaff and Denison, 6-3, 6-2.

Although the match as a whole lacked vitality, Williams, and Bowdoin, at times nevertheless, played good tennis. The Purple seemed greatly benefited from its first chance to play on outdoor courts.
The team by no means has reached its mid-season form, but in the face of stronger competition, which they will come up against when they play Yale today, should show up well.

The summary of the match follows:

Singles: Wolf (W) defeated Soley (B)
6-3, 6-1; Banks (W) defeated Parker (B)

6-4, 6-1; Sewall (W) defeated Jensen (B)
6-1, 6-3; Chase (W) defeated Abbott (B),
6-1, 6-0; Altenburg (B) defeated Adsit
(W), 6-4, 6-4; Shoaff (W) defeated Ramsey (B), 6-1, 6-1.

Doubles: Wolf and Banks (W) defeated Soley and Parker (B), 6-2, 6-1; Sewall and Chase (W) defeated Jensen and Altenburg (B), 6-0, 6-1; Abbott and Ramsey (B) defeated Shoaff and Denison, (W), 6-3, 6-2.

base safely after Halligan had made a misplay on his bid for a hit. T. H. Smith then brought him home with a long triple.
Nichols tightened at this point and no more scoring was done. The Amherst moundsman exhibited a high class of pitching throughout the game, allowing only four hits, which were well scattered.
Singmaster also pitched well, but was constantly in trouble because of the poor support he received from his mates.

'Cap and Bells' Will Produce Shakespeare's 'Hamlet'

technical points of "tragedy"—the violent deaths—are as fantastic and unreal as the Royal Ball in A Kiss for Cinderella. And, of all the tragedies, Hamlet is most full of fantasy. The Ghost, at one time objective and seen by all present, at another subjective and visible only to Hamlet: the "antic disposition" assumed by Hamlet as a defence: the "play within a play"; the madness of Ophelia that turns "Hell itself to favour and to prettiness: the holocaust of slaughter with which the play ends: all these are "such stuff as dreams are made of." And the play is full of whimsical comedy in which the leading part is taken by Hamlet himself. Much of this is lost in most modern productions; the leading man is so busy being the "philosopher-prince" that he is afraid to be "wild and whirling". The somewhat brutal whimsies of Hamlet about the death of Polonius are usually "cut"; and his deliberate fooleries with Polonius and others are so toned down as to pass unnoticed. Why should anyone ever have imagined that this dignified figure of convention was mad? And yet the chief point of the play is that this assumption of madness is so convincing that it deceives everyone except the suspicious, because guilty, King.

So then we are planning a production designed to bring out this essential whimsicality and fantasy; and to this end we are putting at the disposal of Hamlet the symbol of Pierrot—"pale as the moon, mysterious as silence, supple as the serpent". Many will quarrel with us; many will remain unconvinced; but perhaps, in the event, "a good time will be had by all."

The cast of the production, which will be presented in Chapin Hall on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, May 29 and 30, is as follows:

Claudius, King of Denmark	Baxter '30
Hamlet	Hilmer '28
Gertrude, Queen of Denmark
Ophelia	Heermance '31
Polonius	Sessions '31

President Bernard I. Bell Expresses His Opinion

case, as in that of most other people, with apprehension of what the Christian religion is all about or of what the functions of the Christian Church may possibly be."

Discussing the distorted ideas of the Christian Church which modern undergraduates have acquired, the writer says "To some students the Church means a collection of long-faced persons who anaemically admire one another. To others the Church is such a thing as may indeed function through the Antislavery League. To still a third group it seems to be a loose society of those who are interested in listening semi-occasionally, in an atmosphere of intense respectability, to discussions of the good, the true, the beautiful, phrased with sufficient vagueness to disturb nobody. But to an even larger group the Church is supposed to be a collection of puritanical joy-killers, who have, for some unexplained reason, retained into this age of enlightenment, a considerable group of antiquated and outworn personal inhibitions."

After discussing at some length the true nature and aim of the Church, and its relation to current ideas of morality and ethics held not only by college students but by most Americans, Dr. Bell concludes with a plea that the undergraduate should understand Christianity and apply it in his life. "If you do not desire Christ, if you are satisfied with lesser aims, then conform to the standards of conduct prevalent among you. If you do, the Church will be very sorry, but she cannot then be held responsible for your eventual, or present, happiness or unhappiness."

is around a turn. Captain Hemmer is another of Boston's capable performers, doing the mile between 4.30 and 4.40. In today's meet he is also entered in the 880. The visitors are again well fortified in the broad and high jumps with Garrity. Williams' dashmen will face much stiffer competition today than they did against Wesleyan last Saturday, when they were not hard pressed to take five out of six places in the 100 and 220. The Purple's leading quartet of weight men, Callaghan, Gailer, Rowley, and Weeks, are expected to make a strong showing. Callaghan and Rowley have been displaying their usual good form in the javelin, and finished one-two respectively at Middletown a week ago. In this meet Gailer gave one of the best performances of his career, and has been continuing this in practice throughout the past week. Weeks likewise has been a source of strength in the hammer throw. Captain Keep is counted on to run another good race in the 440.

The probable entries are:
100-yd. dash: Williams—Anderson, Beals, G. Dougherty, Finlay, Sterling, and Straw. B. U.—Bernhart, Bicknell, Ling, Morrill, and Pattee.

220-yd. dash: Williams—Anderson, Beals, Elbrick, Finlay, Sterling, and Straw. B. U.—Bernhart, Bicknell, Ling, Morrill, and Pattee.

440-yd. dash: Williams—Babize, Elbrick, Captain Keep, Lane, and Strother. B. U.—Harmon and Nelson.

880-yd. run: Williams—Baptiste, J. Dougherty, Herriek, W. Keep, Lane, and Memmott. B. U.—Chadwell, Chamberlain, Harmon, and Captain Hemmer.

One mile run: Williams—J. Chapman, Fitcher, MacFarland, and Reeves. B. U.—Goodale and Captain Hemmer.

Two mile run: Williams—Greene, Herriek, Moore, and Reynolds. B. U.—Tarr.
120-yd. high hurdles: Williams—Boyn-ton, Nicolls, and Shoaff. B. U.—Huston and Leeds.

220-yd. low hurdles: Boyn-ton, Nicolls, and Shoaff. B. U.—Chesley, Huston, Leeds, Shea.

Shot put: Williams—Gailer, Hibbard, Shaw, and Whittlesey. B. U.—Barrett and Buckwalter.

Hammer throw: Williams—Gilbert, Rohrbach, Stuart, Tedford, and Weeks. B. U.—Condgon and Cotter.

Javelin throw: Williams—Anderson, Gailer, Hibbard, and Rowley. B. U.—Barrett, Cotter, and Quinn.

High jump: Williams—Davis, Hoge, Captain Keep, Layman, E. Miller, and Shoaff. B. U.—Cormack, Garrity, and Spitzer.

Broad jump: Williams—Davis, G. Dougherty, Overton, and Rowley. B. U.—Buckwalter and Cormack.

ANY way you figure it, P. A. is better tobacco. Take fragrance, for instance. Your well-known olfactory organ will tell you. And taste—who can describe that? And mildness—you couldn't ask for anything milder.

Yes, Sir, P. A. is cool and comfortable and mellow and mild. Long-burning, with a good clean ash. You never tire of P. A. It's always the same old friendly smoke. Get yourself a tidy red tin and check everything I'm telling you!

PURPLE TRACK TEAM CONQUERS B. U., 97-38

Good Times Characterize One-Sided Meet; Williams Captures 13 First Places

9.9 BEATS BEALS IN 100

But Purple Sprinter Wins Furlong Against B. U. Star; Rowley Is High Scorer

Taking thirteen out of a possible fifteen first places, and also scoring eight seconds and thirds, an improved Williams track team overwhelmed Boston University by the one-sided score of 97-38 on Weston Field Saturday afternoon in the first home meet of the season. Although the visitors were expected to afford stiff competition in the track events, the Purple runners were in better condition than in the Wesleyan meet and took first in every event except the 100-yd. dash, which Morrill, the Boston team's star sprinter, won from Beals by a narrow margin. Williams also dominated the field events, losing only the high jump, and scoring a clean sweep in the pole vault, even though Little, the best vaulter in college was unable to compete because of an injured hand.

Although there were no record-breaking performances, the times and distances on the whole were consistently good. Rowley was high scorer of the meet with a total of 11 points, gained through a first in the discus and seconds in the javelin and broad jump. Beals as usual ran a good race in both the 100 and 220, winning the furlong event after a beautiful race with Bicknell, who is one of the best 220 men that has come to Weston Field in some time. Morrill, who last winter tied the indoor record in the 60-yd. dash, was forced to run the 100 in under ten seconds to beat Beals. Shoaff showed the best form that he has yet displayed to win the high hurdles in 15.8 secs., while Weeks, Callaghan, Rowley, and Gailer took four firsts in the weight events.

In the first race of the afternoon Shoaff and Boynton had no trouble in winning the high hurdles from Leeds in extremely good time. Chapman of the home team took the lead at the start of the mile, and, although Captain Hemmer of the visitors pressed him in the home stretch, he maintained his position to win by four yards. The 440 was won by Elbrick after a hard race, while Harmon of B. U. managed to lead Strother to the tape by a narrow margin. Morrill of B. U. got away to a fast start in the 100, and through this he was able to beat Beals by three feet. The latter, after losing to Bicknell in the trial heats, beat him for second in the finals. Boston had only one entry in the two-mile and he dropped out before the race was over. Greene and Moore ran together for the entire distance, and finished hand in hand, while Herrick took third place.

In the 220-yard trials Bicknell beat Straw in the first heat, while Sterling and Beals qualified in the second. The finals were won by the latter, after a close race, in the good time of 22 seconds, this proving to be one of the best events of the afternoon. Duplicating his performance at Wesleyan, Nicolls managed to beat out Chesley in the low hurdles, while Shoaff, running on the outside lane, took third place. The 880 was another stiff race, which was closely contested the whole way. J. Dougherty grabbed the lead at the start and kept it throughout. Near the end, Chamberlain threatened to overtake him, but the Williams runner was stronger and maintained his advantage to win by five yards.

The home team was far superior in the field events with the exception of the high jump, in which Spitzer and Garrity tied for first with Shoaff third. After practicing for only three days, Dudley gave a creditable performance in the pole vault, taking first place, with Winn second and Hoge and Kiszner deadlocked for third. G. Dougherty won the broad jump with a leap of 20 ft. 11 1/2 in., while Rowley took second from Cormack. Throwing over 160 feet, Callaghan and Rowley had things their own way in the javelin. In the hammer Weeks, with Rohrbach taking second. Gailer again threw the shot over 39 ft. On his last throw Congden beat Shaw for second place by the scant margin of three-quarters of an inch. Rowley and Anderson also finished first and second in the discus throw.

Orators Will Try Out for 'Moonlights' Today

Trials for the "Moonlights," the annual rhetorical contest open to members of the Junior and Sophomore classes, will be held this afternoon from 5 to 6 in Jesup Hall, and speakers from the two classes will be chosen at that time for the exhibition orations, which will take place on Friday, June 22, on the steps of Chapin Hall. The speeches today must be of three minute duration on an original subject, and, although technically notes are allowed, it is preferred that the speeches be memorized.

Attention is called to the fact that members of the Class of 1929 who spoke in the exhibition last year are again eligible for participation, and are exempt from the trials this afternoon. Members of the two classes represented by the speakers will be present. The "Moonlights" are made possible by a $2,000 income, largely the gift of Eliazar Smith, Esq., of Lee.

SABRINAS TO MEET WILLIAMS ON TRACK

Visitors End Dual Season Today Amherst-Wesleyan Records Indicate Victory

After two postponements because of inclement weather, the Amherst-Williams track meet will terminate the dual season, as well as the "Little Three" meets, this afternoon on Weston Field, at 4.00 p. m. in what should be a victory for the Purple. Although both teams have been defeated by Wesleyan, the Cardinal and Black were only able to snatch victory in the final event from the home team, while the Sabrinas were conquered, 80-55, last Friday afternoon. Owing to their improved form in the past two weeks, Williams appears to have a better balanced team, and seems especially strong in the sprints.

C. T. S. KEEP, 1928 Quarter-Miler and Captain of the Track Team that Meets Amherst Here Today

Amherst has not won a meet to date, having lost to Springfield, before meeting Wesleyan, while the Purple, although losing one contest has shown steadily increasing strength for the last two weeks. At Middletown, they were able to take five out of six places in the sprints, while Wesleyan in turn made a clean sweep of both the 100 and 220 in the Amherst meet. On these past performances Beals, Sterling, and Straw are expected to win these events in today's meet. Boynton, Nicolls, and Shoaff appear a little stronger in the hurdles than the visiting quartet of Brittain, Felt, Grant, and Stauffer.

The quarter should be one of the closest races of the afternoon, for Felt and Neale of Amherst ran the distance in 52.1 last Friday. Captain Keep, Elbrick, and Strother are expected to fight it out with these two. J. Dougherty and Eastman should furnish another good race in the 880, while the home team seems to have a little more strength in the mile with Chapman, MacFarland and Reeves. Moore and Greene will meet Snyder of the

'PLAYS WELL CHOSEN AND WELL SET'--IRVINE

Shakespearean Actor Laments Lack of Staging Facilities for Productions Here

I have just returned from my second visit to the Williams Little Theatre in a mood of righteous indignation. Is Williams a pauper college, or are its benefactors utterly apathetic to the aesthetic and educational value of dramatic work well and sincerely done? I know of no College that tries to do better work. I know of no College, School, or village community, where that work is so starved by poverty of stage equipment.

Given the appalling inadequacy of Jesup Hall, the first two plays on Friday evening were chosen with much ingenuity. In both of them the fact that actors and scenes alike were "cabin'd, cribb'd, confin'd" was an asset rather than a liability. And I have nothing but the sincerest praise for the skill with which they were set and lighted. The side Chapel in the Cathedral of Milan where The Duchess said Her Prayers was a gem of simple suggestion. It was not the fault of director or players that Mary Cass Canfield does not know when to stop. When once Madonna Cecilia has heard the confession of Beatrice D'Este, the play is over; the more simply and quickly her own dramatically inevitable renunciation can be made, the better. If it could be devised without any words at all, a really artistic effect would be achieved. As it was, Elizabeth Newhall, with great charm, sincerity, and dignity, did her best to keep us interested beyond that point; but it was an impossible task. She felt it; for her diction, otherwise admirable, lost conviction and tended to become inaudible. But hers was an admirable performance. John Lucas, with a very modern head sticking up out of an admirable costume was sincere—perhaps over-sincere—and certainly over-solemn as the powerful but light-hearted Sforza. He holds his head alternately too high and too low; avoiding the natural straight-forward look at the person with whom he is playing, which should go with impassioned speeches. And, from choice or as so directed, he kept his back firmly towards Cecilia through some two-thirds of the play. The "eliches" were badly under-rehearsed; neither party seemed to know where their head ought to go. Those things do not come "right on the night". Eleanor Lincoln was hopelessly overwhelmed with the name part—a part of such extreme difficulty that it would have taxed the resources of a Bernhardt.

The setting of "In the Zone" was utterly different, but equally skillful. The only trifling mistake—the fact that a porthole opening right into a bunk can hardly be opened without the knowledge of the

Links Team Will Face Dartmouth Tomorrow

In their third intercollegiate match of the season, at Appawamis, Rye, New York, the Purple golfers will oppose a Dartmouth team on Friday morning with a record similar to their own, but one whose potentialities cannot accurately be measured, since the teams have not chanced to meet any common opponent thus far. Williams seems to have a slight edge on the Green team, having gained 7-2 and 9-0 victories over Brown and the Wyandemuck Country Club at Great Barrington, respectively, and lost to Harvard, 3-6, while Dartmouth has won over Penn State, Boston University, and Pennsylvania, and bowed to the powerful Yale aggregation by a 9-0 score.

The Purple will probably be represented by the same lineup which played against Great Barrington last Saturday, namely: Captain Blaney, J. C. Williams, Smith, Heller, Fall, and Wheeler. Among those who will certainly compete on the Hanover team are Captain R. C. Rockwell, McLachlan, Barrett, and Cheney.

LION PITCHER SHUTS OUT PURPLE NINE

A. Smith Fans 14 as Varsity Loses Sixth Straight Game—Errors Are Numerous

Two Smiths opposed each other on the mound in the Williams-Columbia baseball game last Saturday afternoon on Weston Field, and A. Smith, the Lion pitcher, had the advantage over T. H. Smith, twirling for the Purple, 5-0, allowing the home team but two hits, and striking out 14 men, at the same time receiving splendid support from his team-mates, as contrasted to the seven errors charged against the Purple. A rejuvenated line-up failed to produce a Williams victory, and the losing streak has now been extended to six straight games, but the nine was up against an unusual brand of pitching, while the visitors were able to bunch their hits and make the most of the errors committed by the Berkshire team.

In an attempt to build a stronger defense, Coach Fox shifted Putnam from third base to short-stop and placed Delano at third, but this change failed to produce the desired effect, although at times the infield played brilliantly. The most notable example of this was a fast double-play, Putnam to Winn, who was playing the last inning at second, to Alexander. Other features of the game were R. H. Williams' fine running catch of Harris' hard hit liner in the sixth and the playing of Delano, who was participating in his first full game of the season. Delano got both of the two hits which were made off the Columbia pitcher, and, in addition, stole second both times he was on base.

Despite the cold weather which was more suitable for football than baseball, a large crowd, consisting of many houseparty guests, was in the stands at the start of the game. The cold weather did not seem to affect A. Smith, as he struck out the first four batters to face him, and held the game well in hand throughout. The Lions got off to an early lead when they pushed a run across in the second by means of a hit, an error, and a sacrifice fly. Two more runs were scored in the fourth by means of three hits, one of them a long triple by

VARSITY TENNIS TEAM IS WINNER OVER YALE

Strong Eli Netmen Lose to Williams in Close Match—Victors Win by One Point

WESLEYAN ALSO DEFEATED

Purple Takes First 'Little Three' Contest from Cardinal and Black, 6 to 3

Adding two more victories to its steadily increasing string, and making a strong bid to retain "Little Three" laurels as well as the intercollegiate championship of the East, the Williams tennis team invaded Connecticut last Friday and Saturday and defeated the Wesleyan and Yale netmen successively on their home courts. The match against the Cardinal and Black was rather uninteresting, Williams winning without difficulty six to three, but at New Haven the team encountered strong opposition, a margin of one point deciding the victory in a contest whose result was considered by many sports writers to be an upset.

The first four men in the line-up, Wolf, Captain Banks, Sewall, and Chase, proved to be the men responsible for both victories, as none of the five men who represented Williams in the fifth and sixth singles matches and the third doubles match were able to take a match, or, in fact, more than one set among them. Wolf, Chase, and Sewall finished the trip without defeat in either singles or doubles but Banks, after winning the first set from Pitman of Yale, dropped the other two by close scores. The team accounted for a total of 24 sets and 11 matches in the two contests, while its opponents captured 14 sets and seven matches.

At Middletown the Varsity was at no time in danger. Except for a slight nervousness exhibited by some of the Wesleyan players, no evidence of excitement or emotion was visible, and the tennis was

Warden Lawes of Sing Sing Describes Activities of Institution's Productive Industrial Organization

"Sing Sing could easily be made self-supporting," said Warden Lewis E. Lawes in giving an explanation of prison life to a Record reporter in a recent interview. The warden went on to explain how the necessity of making over all the income of the institution to the state and the provision for expenses by appropriation made the application of the term "self-supporting" a technical misnomer in spite of its practical truth.

"People have no idea of the problem involved in running a $1,000,000 business every year within the walls of a prison," said Mr. Lawes. "Among other things, we manufacture underwear, socks, gloves, American flags for schools, shoes, brushes, brooms, equipment for the state street-cleaning department, and do printing for the state. The best and most trustworthy workers are those who are in for life; this is universally the case all over the world. These men go far beyond paying for their keep and take great interest in their work. They sometimes develop into indispensable mechanics, electricians, steamfitters, etc. Keys are made in the shops and naturally are sometimes used to escape."

In discussing the possibilities of regaining one's freedom once within the gates, Mr. Lawes said: "There are 30 acres behind the walls, and too many men are working with tools all the time to permit of adequate search for tunneling and bar-bending implements. Most of the inmates are opposed to breaks; they usually have families and hope to get out, whereas infraction of rules usually leads to tightening up of discipline or the lengthening of terms."

Warden Lawes then described some of

KNOWLEDGE BY DICTATION

Whenever theories of education are discussed—whether by the conscientious professor or the disgruntled student—the so-called "lecture system" usually comes in for a few mouthfuls of destructive criticism. Not that all lectures should be abolished, but what seems to be the chief objection to the lecture system is that it stunts the intellectual development of students by encouraging and often requiring the pernicious practice of note-taking.

Of course note-taking in itself is often supposed to be an important part of education, but it is the exceptional student that is able to profit by it. A man may attend his first college lecture with the best intentions, but he soon finds that certain difficulties beset him when he tries to extract the "pith" from an hour of pedagogy. He may find, for example, that his idea of pith is quite different from that of his instructor, with the tragic result that strange and unfamiliar questions begin to appear in the weekly police drill. So a few pithy notes breed prolific notes until finally the process degenerates into a fantastic exercise in dictation. There is nothing scholarly about it. Surely nothing can be more alien to a scholarly atmosphere than the sight of feverish students doubled up over their note-books as they scribble madly to catch verbatim every word of the man on the platform, who, in turn, is slyly reading from his own notes. If the fountain pen runs dry—as it frequently does in the middle of a sentence—it means a temporary surcease of knowledge and a nap for the rest of the hour.

It is a rather well established fact that excessive note-taking can cause loss of memory, or at least extreme feeble mindedness; but the physical disadvantages are almost as great as the mental. Acute cases of writer's cramp are not uncommon; and the awkward posture that writing, like eating, off the arm of a chair necessitates has probably done serious things to our young and impressionable spines. Worse than this, our calligraphy may be crippled for life.

But what can be done about it? Of course the student can always refuse to take notes, but this demands unusual courage, endurance, and ability to bluff. A man without notes is doomed around examination time, so instead of carrying his revolt to a glorious conclusion, the rebellious student usually prefers to fill the gaps in his note-book with the second-hand hieroglyphics of Brother Smith. It is a vicious circle. As long as the instructor quizzes us on piecemeal lecture material, we must take volumes of piecemeal notes. On the other hand, if the instructor begins to minimize the educational importance of lecture notes he is faced with the danger that his valuable words will evaporate in mid-air, unheard and unheeded. Possibly this is the intellectual hazard of a liberal education. We should be willing to take it if it will help in any way to remove that element of servile dependency which characterizes the lecture system in its present form. Less note-taking and more intelligent listening would make the classroom a more interesting and profitable place to spend the hours.

visitors in the two-mile which is expected to be another closely contested event.

Miller and Gailer will have an interesting fight in the shot, both having won from Wesleyan. Weeks is again favored to win the hammer throw, with Rohrbach also getting a place. In the discus Anderson and Rowley will have strong competition from Allison, while Brittain, who has been throwing the javelin around 160 ft. is expected to press Callaghan and Rowley in this event. G. Dougherty should repeat his winning performance of last Saturday in the broad jump. The high jump and pole vault are expected to be close, neither team being especially strong in the former.

The probable entries are:

100-yd. dash—Amherst: Barnard, D. Felt, Mahler, Perry, Prigge, and Scott. Williams: Anderson, Beals, Finlay, Sterling, and Straw.

220-yd. dash—Amherst: Barnard, Mahler, Neale, Perry, Prigge, and Scott. Williams: Anderson, Beals, Finlay, Keep, Sterling, and Straw.

440-yd. dash—Amherst: Eastman, G. Felt, D. Felt, Morris, Neale, and Stauffer. Williams: Babize, Elbrick, C. T. S. Keep Lane, Stayman, and Strother.

880-yd. run—Amherst: Eastman, G. Felt, Lamson, Morris, Navin, and Tracy. Williams: Baptiste, J. Dougherty, Lane, Memmott, and Strother.

One-mile run—Amherst: Cobb, G. Felt,

Harvey, Merritt, Navin, and Tracy. Williams: J. Chapman, Fitcher, MacFarland, and Reeves.

Two-mile run—Amherst: Cobb, Harvey, Navin, Snyder, and Tracy. Williams: Greene, Herriek, Moore, and E. Reynolds.

120-yd. high hurdles—Amherst: Brittain, Buresh, G. Felt, Merritt, and Grant. Williams: Boynton and Shoaff.

220-yd. low hurdles—Amherst: Brittain, Buresh, D. Felt, Merritt, and Stauffer. Williams: Boynton, Nicolls and Shoaff.

Broad Jump—Amherst: Buresh, Clyne, Mahler, and Stauffer. Williams: Davis, G. Dougherty, Rowley, and Satterthwaite.

High Jump—Amherst: Bradley, Buresh, Grant, Kleene, and Van Miller. Williams: Davis, Hoge, Layman, Shoaff, and Satterthwaite.

Pole Vault—Amherst: Allison, Bryant, Hull, Kleene, Roundy, and Stauffer. Williams: Eiszner, Hoge, Little, and Winn.

Discus Throw—Amherst: Allison, G. Felt, Heisey, Hubbard, Ketcham, and Mahler. Williams: Gailer, Hibbard, and Rowley.

Javelin Throw—Amherst: Brittain, Clyne, G. Felt, Heisey, Ketcham, and Mahler. Williams: Callaghan, Cross, Huggins, Rowley, and Travers.

Shot Put—Amherst: Clyne, G. Felt, Heisey, Ketcham, Mahler, and Miller. Williams: Gailer, Hibbard, Shaw, and Whittlesey.

Hammer Throw—Amherst: Bradley, Cobb, Harvey, Hubbard, Ketcham, and Snyder. Williams: Rohrbach, Stewart, Tedford, and Weeks.

ALUMNI COLUMN

ALUMNUS QUESTIONS OUR COLLEGE SPIRIT

J. W. Gillette, Jr. '14 Makes Vivid Comparison Between Sports of 1914 and 1928

To the Editor of The Record,
Dear Sir:

Your issue of May 8th containing an article under the heading of "Alumni Column" brought to my mind a very vivid comparison of the condition of Athletics at Williams the Spring of 1914 with those of today, as follows:

(a) In 1914—Dartmouth and Colgate defeated in basketball, Amherst in a relay race, M. I. T. in hockey, Columbia and Wesleyan in tennis, Cornell and Princeton in baseball, and Wesleyan in track.

(b) In 1928—Track team loses to Wesleyan, Brown and Wesleyan overcome ball team, Lacrosse team defeated by St. Lawrence, Holy Cross 14—Williams 1, Wesleyan 17—Williams 2.

To offset this last, I had as comfort for my sons (who follow Williams matters nearly as closely as their Dad) the victories of the tennis team over Union and the golf team over Brown. When I put my RECORD down, I was occasioned some slight embarrassment by a query propounded by my eldest hopeful as to whether tennis and golf have been made major sports at Williams.

To the discussion of the relative place athletics should occupy in college, there can be only one conclusion—that it is not the primary or even tertiary raison d'être. Still I cannot help feeling that back in 1914 we got as good an education as now and still had time to win our games. College spirit, esprit de corps, morale, team work,—call it what you will—are at the heart of any great institution, whether you call it Williams College, the United States Army, the Fleet, or the General Electric Company. Pride and faith in any institution one is a part of are strengthened by its physical victories as well as its intellectual successes. And part of the courage Brad Turner of my class took to France with him in 1917 was acquired in the struggle for victories on Weston Field.

Possibly Williams Undergraduates of today are getting much out of college that we missed. If this is so, I would like to be able to tell my boys so that they may change their present ways and try to become better Williams men twelve years hence.

Perhaps THE RECORD can enlighten me.

John W. Gillette, Jr. '14

Editor's Note—At first Mr. Gillette's comparative statistics seem to make good his implied contention that as far as athletics are concerned the Williams undergraduate is not what he used to be. It is true the seamy side of sports happens to be up just at present, and the spectacle is not a pretty one. But if Mr. Gillette will recall some of our activities last spring he may find further comfort for his sons. Here is what Williams teams did on Memorial Day, 1927:

Baseball team defeats Amherst, thus retaining the Trophy of Trophies for Williams; tennis team defeats both Amherst and Dartmouth to complete undefeated season and win intercollegiate championship of the East; golf team defeats both Amherst and Wesleyan to win Little Three championship; lacrosse team defeats Springfield.

Perhaps this does not enlighten our correspondent, but we hope that at least it convinces him that sometimes even we find time to win our games and that before long the pendulum will swing back to better times.

STRONG YALE NINE TO FACE PURPLE VARSITY

Blue Team Has Proved Invincible
Since Early Encounters of Season

Extensive changes in the line-up mark the major preparations made by Coach Fox in readiness for the Yale-Williams baseball game Wednesday afternoon at New Haven. Erratic playing of the regulars, who have failed to turn in a victory this year, has caused the substitutes to be given every chance, and it is very likely that they will see most of the game from the field.

The shifting of Putnam from third to short stop, Delano being placed on third, has not aided the team, except in the matter of hitting. The absence of Winn was especially noticeable in the field, but it is probable that he will start the Yale game. Batting practice will take up most of the week's work, Delano being the only man to hit safely in the Columbia game. Alexander will start at first base with Inverso at second. Singmaster and C. Smith will be the Williams battery, although Wolcott or T. Smith may get in the game. The outfielders have long been a source of trouble to Coach Fox, but it is probable that Danieli, R. Williams and Foster will get the assignments, D. Williams and Thoms being the first substitutes.

The Eli team, composed of a hard hitting group of veterans have won most of their games this season and are the favorites to win as far as the dope sheet goes. Caldwell, of football fame, has been knocking home runs consistently and is considered the best batter in collegiate leagues. The 10-7 victory of Yale over Brown is but another evidence of strength. Aldrich has also been hitting well and has several home runs to his credit. In Smith, Lond, and Thompson, Yale has three veteran pitchers who are capable of turning in a good game. Having played through three games with but a single error, the infield is rated as the best in the East. All in all, the outlook for a Purple victory is very dim and can be based only on more effective pitching and better hitting.

The probable line-up is as follows:

WILLIAMS		YALE
Alexander	1b	Schmidt
Inverso	2b	Caldwell
Winn	ss	Vaughn
Putnam	3b	Aldrich
Foster	1b	Hammersley
R. Williams	c.f.	Grove
Danieli	r.f.	Garvey
Singmaster	p.	Lond
C. Smith	c.	Hoben

Freshmen Gain Victory in Game With Pittsfield

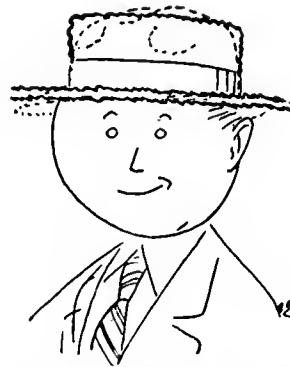

Combining four hits and a base on balls with three errors by the opposition, the Freshman baseball team scored six runs in the "lucky seventh" last Friday afternoon in their game with Pittsfield High School on Cole Field to wipe out a 5-2 lead and win by an 8 to 5 score. Lonsdale, who pitched for the yearlings, had streaks of wildness, but allowed the visitors only seven hits, partly by virtue of reliable support.

Two walks and Foster's single in the first gave the High School nine a one-run lead which they held until the third when Bowden and McGlynn doubled and Lonsdale singled, giving Williams two runs. Pittsfield took the lead in the fifth on singles by Guidi, Menin, and Culverhouse, and errors by Fox and Schwartz, making a total of three runs. Menin also scored Froio, who had walked and stolen, with another single in the sixth.

Bowden got a clean hit into right field to start the Freshman seventh, and McGlynn and Lonsdale followed suit. After Thomas had fled to left, Wallace got a single, Schwartz was safe on a fielder's choice, and Langmaid was passed. Fox, the next man up, fled to right but Foster dropped a third strike on Grosvenor and the latter was safe at first. Bowden, up for the second time, walked, and McGlynn ended the rally by fanning. Guidi, the Pittsfield hurler, was replaced by Vaccaro in this inning. The 1931 team made a total of nine hits, but mixed them beneficially with walks and errors.

The score by innings follows:
Pittsfield... 1 0 0 0 3 1 0 0 0—5 7 4
Williams 31 0 0 2 0 0 0 6 0 x—8 9 3
Batteries: Williams: Lonsdale and Bowden; Pittsfield: Guidi, Vaccaro, and Foster.

Which Will You Choose in Business—

Guesswork or Knowledge?

Will you take the first job that is offered you—guessing that it is the best one for you and that you have the qualifications to succeed?

Or will you enter business with a thorough knowledge of business fundamentals and a knowledge of your own ability that will enable you to select the position for which you are better qualified?

The business training at Babson Institute serves as an excellent means of transition from college to the business world. Here you would be taught the fundamental laws of Finance, Production and Distribution, and would be shown how these laws are applied in actual business life. You would be in a small conference group, working in a business environment, and under the personal direction of business men.

You may enter at the beginning of any quarter term and complete the work in 9 consecutive months.

Lion Pitcher Shuts Out Purple Nine

Tys, which rolled to the cement stands in left field. In the meantime, Williams was able to do practically nothing with Smith's offerings, the only threat being made in the third when Delano singled sharply into left and stole second, where he was left stranded.

An error, a hit, and two sacrifices sent A. Smith across with Columbia's fourth run in the sixth inning, and the final scoring was done two innings later when another run was tallied by means of a hit, a walk, and an error. Williams had an excellent opportunity to score in the sixth when the bases were loaded, but Alexander was unable to straighten out one of Smith's curves. Delano opened the inning with his second hit, stole second. Putnam received a base on balls after C. H. Smith and Woleott, who was batting for Inverso, were called out, and an error put T. H. Smith on first, thus filling the bases. A. Smith tightened at this point and forced Alexander to send a weak roller to the pitcher's box.

In the ninth the Purple infield cut a rally short by a well-executed double play, thus ending the game. Besides this fielding feature Putnam made a good play in the seventh when he nipped Morrison at the plate with Winn's throw, and Alexander provided a thrill with his barehand catch of Winn's throw to first, which was meant to catch the fast-flying Furey. Morrison made the best play for Columbia when he made a snap throw to first on Foster's bid for a hit, which glanced off of A. Smith's glove.

FOUR SPORTS ARE ON INTRAMURAL SCHEDULE

Volley Ball Tourney Yet Unfinished But Baseball, Horseshoes, And Golf Start

In spite of a crowded spring program and heretofore unfavorable weather conditions, the interfraternity schedule for baseball, golf, and horseshoes has progressed to the second round, although the intramural tennis tournament has not yet started. The league and tournament finals in volleyball, the only gymnasium sport left on the schedule, have not been played off on the dates assigned, but the second round matches in the spring events, so far as played, show Kappa Alpha and Phi Sigma Kappa in the lead in the golf tournament, and the Commons Club, Phi Gamma Delta and Psi Upsilon leading the horseshoe contest.

Last week, all but one of the first round games on the baseball schedule were played. A summary of the contests and the scores is as follows: In the American League, Delta Upsilon defeated Sigma Phi, 32-0; Beta Theta Pi defeated Theta Delta Chi, 9-6; Delta Phi defeated Zeta Psi, 2-1; and the Chi Psi-Phi Delta Theta contest was unplayed. In the National League, Kappa Alpha defeated Phi Sigma Kappa, 9-4; Phi Gamma Delta defeated Alpha Delta Phi, 5-1; the Commons Club defeated Psi Upsilon, 8-0; and Delta Psi defeated Delta Kappa Epsilon, 17-1. A round-robin tournament between the winners of the second round will take place from May 14 to 18.

With the exception of one match, the first round of the golf tournament has been completed. In the American League, Sigma Phi and Zeta Psi have not played, but Delta Phi defeated Beta Theta Pi, 3-0; Theta Delta Chi defeated Phi Delta Theta, 3-0; and Chi Psi defeated Delta Upsilon, 3-0. In the National League, Psi Upsilon defeated Phi Sigma Kappa, 3-0; Alpha Delta Phi defeated the Commons Club, 2-1; Phi Gamma Delta defeated Delta Kappa Epsilon, 3-0; and Kappa Alpha defeated Delta Psi, 3-0. Two second round matches have been played, Sigma Phi winning over Delta Phi, 3-0, and Kappa Alpha downing Phi Gamma Delta, 3-0. The tournament must be completed by May 19.

One match also prevents the first round of the horseshoe contest from being finished. In the American League, Theta Delta Chi defeated Chi Psi, 2-1; Delta Upsilon defeated Zeta Psi; and Delta Phi defeated Sigma Phi, 2-0. In the National League, Psi Upsilon defeated Delta Psi, 2-0; Alpha Delta Phi defeated Delta Kappa Epsilon, 2-0; Phi Gamma Delta defeated Kappa Alpha; and Commons Club defeated Phi Sigma Kappa, 2-1. Again, two second round matches have been completed, Psi Upsilon triumphing over Alpha Delta Phi, and the Commons Club winning over Phi Gamma Delta.

1931 Loses Close Track Contest to Albany High

Although winning a large percentage of first places, the Freshman track team went down to defeat at the hands of the Albany High School team at Weston Field last Saturday, by a score of 57-50, mainly due to the fact that 1931 runners were lacking to take a sufficient number of second and third places. Kalica of the visitors was the individual star of the meet, taking three firsts, the century, the 440-yd. run, and the broad jump, although Captain Dougherty of the freshmen won both hurdle events and came second in the broad jump.

A number of events were featured by extremely close finishes, notably the mile-run, in which Goodbody, having led by a wide margin since the start, lost in the last two feet to Ayres, who bent him to the tape by several inches. Kalica of Albany and Hood, ran abreast almost the whole length of the hundred, the former finally winning by a very scant margin, with a time of 10.8 seconds. Hood redeemed himself however, by taking the 220-yd. dash after having been pressed all the way until the last yard by Pearson of Albany. Dougherty easily won both the high and the low hurdles, taking the lead at the start and finishing in each case several yards ahead at the tape. Albany men placed first in every field event with the exception of the high jump which Meier won with a height of five feet four inches.

FOR GRADUATING SENIORS

An Opportunity for College Graduates in the "Best Paid Hard Work in the World"

WHAT are you going to do after graduation? If you have not decided—or if you have made a snap decision—just read over the rest of this. It presents the case for life insurance as a career. It is worth thinking about. The choice of a career is important. Life insurance is most desirable and satisfactory as a permanent calling.

And why?

Money

Reports of college graduates who have entered business indicate that life insurance holds first place as a source of income. One John Hancock agent describes his work as "the best-paid hard work in the world." He is a college graduate and in five years has put himself at the very top of his business.

Advancement

In the second place, advancement depends entirely on your own effort and ability. This is no fairy-tale of success. It is the sober and proved fact. The Vice-President of a great life insurance company who began his career as an agent has this to say to seniors who are about to graduate from college:

"If you love work and desire to pursue an honorable, useful and lucrative mission in life, this is the business for you to take up. Life insurance salesmanship offers a fine field for the energies of the splendid young men in our colleges.

"That this is true is demonstrated by those college men who have taken up life insurance, for they have shown that the college man is fit for this kind of a job and that the job also is fit for the college man.

"The work of the life insurance salesman is distinguished by independence and opportunity for directing his own activities. It gives all possible opportunity for individual initiative and a chance to make an ample income at an age when most fellows are struggling on a wage pittance."

That is the story of one who began at the bottom and reached the top without the help of a college education. The advantages are with you who graduate from college.

Future

And there is so much room for ability and energy.

Life insurance, in volume of business, is one of the three leading businesses in this country, and yet it is only in its youth because the possible application of insurance is expanding all the time.

Satisfaction

But all the pay and all the advancement possible are not going to wholly satisfy the intelligent college graduate. Life insurance offers further satisfaction. It is one of the great factors in the modern world making for security, peace of mind, increase of confidence, and the building up of credit for individuals, businesses and institutions.

The life insurance agent is indispensable to the conduct of modern affairs, and in a particularly satisfactory way. He is an active force in increasing the sum of human happiness, prosperity and security.

Your Company

Now is the time to consider what you are going to do after graduation. If you are ambitious, willing to work hard, and are interested to know about a life insurance career, you owe it to yourself to examine the opportunities afforded by the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company. It is a national institution with a country-wide service, of great financial strength,—one of the large companies of the world.

Ask your questions of us before making final decision.

Williams Golfers Win at Great Barrington

Assisted by the enforced absence of their strongest opponent, Dwight Partridge, the Purple linksmen completely swamped the Wyantemuck Country Club team at Great Barrington last Saturday, scoring a 9-0 shut out. No outstanding brand of golf was shown throughout the match, which was hampered by adverse weather conditions, but the superiority of the Williams players was evident from the first.

Captain Blaney and J. Williams found no difficulty in defeating Stanley and Nesbit of Great Barrington eight up, Blaney's individual score for the 18 holes being 83, and Williams' 81. Heller and Smith also downed DeWindt and Ford easily, while Fall and Wheeler came out with a six and four victory over Eaton and Armstrong.

PURPLE TENNIS TEAM WILL PLAY PRINCETON

Columbia Will Be Encountered the Following Day; Tiger Match To Be Hard One

Having progressed this far in the current season with four victories and no defeats to their credit, the Williams tennis team will face their hardest match when they come up against Princeton University this Thursday, May 17, at Princeton. Directly after this match the team will journey to New York where they will encounter Columbia University on Friday afternoon, May 18.

The Princeton team, built around Van Ryn and Appel, scarcely needs an introduction. Van Ryn has been ranked by the United States Lawn Tennis Association as one of the ten best players in the country, while he and Appel hold the national intercollegiate doubles title and are ranked number six in the national groupings. Van Ryn has been playing excellent tennis this season, and is expected to be at top form when he comes up against Wolf in the first singles match. The team has so far gained victories over Pennsylvania, Lehigh, and Cornell.

Although very little is known about the Columbia team, it is expected that they will send a strong combination against the Purple invaders next Friday. The line-up for Williams will probably remain the same as it has been in previous matches, with a possible readjustment in the last two singles and the last doubles. The team will devote the first part of the week to putting the finishing touches on their game in preparation for the hard Princeton match.

The probable line-ups follow:

WILLIAMS: Singles—1. Wolf; 2. Banks; 3. Sewall; 4. Chase; 5. Adsit; 6. Shoaff. Doubles—1. Wolf and Banks; 2. Sewall and Chase; 3. Adsit and Shoaff, or Shoaff and Demson.

PRINCETON: Singles—1. Van Ryn; 2. Appel; 3. Thurber; 4. Lenz; 5. Reed; 6. Powell. Doubles—1. Van Ryn and Appel; 2. Thurber and Lenz; 3. Reed and Powell.

'Purple Key' Elects '30 Group

Choosing the first 15 men of the 1930 delegation, the Purple Key Society elected the following to its membership: H. F. Adams, Alexander, Cuddeback, Ely, Groskin, Gross, Howse, Hoyt, Lasell, Marshall, Ross, Skinner, D. A. Smith, Wheeler, and D. P. Williams. The remaining five men of the 1930 delegation will be elected next fall to bring the total up to 20. At present there are 20 seniors and 20 juniors in the Society besides the newly-elected sophomores.

Infirmary Patients

R. Dunn '28, P. Williams '30, Booth and Camp '31 are at present confined to the Thompson Infirmary. If a student becomes seriously ill, his parents are immediately notified by the College authorities.

St. Stephens Lacrosse Team Wins 5-1 Victory

Facing in its second game the St. Stephens team which was playing its seventh contest of the season, the Williams twelve found its opponents too experienced and was overcome by a 5-1 score at Annandale last Saturday afternoon. Though defeated, Williams showed better passing than in the St. Lawrence game, the body-checking was pleasing to watch, while the team as a whole began to show the effect of the experience acquired.

The game started at a wild pace, both teams fighting on even terms for the first fifteen minutes. Then St. Stephens scored on a long shot. Williams slumped for a few minutes, and when the team got back on its feet the score stood 4-0 in favor of the home team. Brown opened the second period with some fine stick-handling and made the only Williams goal on a sure shot. Having once found the cage, the Purple threatened several times, but Matherson, the St. Stephens goalie, managed to scoop the tries and saved. St. Stephens scored once more before the game was over. The star performers for the Purple were: Captain Thurston, Brown, Dunning, and Collins, all of whom played a consistently steady game.

The summary of the game is as follows:

WILLIAMS		ST. STEPHENS
Senecal	g.	Matherson
Collins	p.	Burbank
Dunning	c.p.	Brewer
Ashby	ld	Quaternum
Deming	2d.	Keen
Wulff	3d.	Ozian
Thurston	c.	Marheen
Reiff	3a.	Henss
Jacobs	2a.	Townsend
Dunn	1a.	Tibbitts
Hubbard	o.h.	Lenley
Brown	i.h.	Nebis

Substitutes: WILLIAMS—Arndt, Neilson, Christie, Andrews.

Feel the Thickness of this Paper

THE paper on which this is printed is approximately three one-thousandths (.003) of an inch in thickness.

The mechanics of America are grinding in every-day practice within limits of accuracy of twenty-five hundred-thousandths (.00025) of an inch—that is just about one-twelfth the thickness of this paper.

Grinding means accuracy, and mechanical accuracy is essential for speed and dependability.

Grinding in recent years has revolutionized metal-working methods. Grinding Wheels and Grinding Machines are employed in all modern machine shops to obtain extreme accuracy, rapid production and low cost.

"Grinding" and "Norton" are synonymous. Norton precision-grinding machines have made possible fast production with precision. Norton abrasives trade-marked "Alundum" and "Crystolon"—in grinding wheels and as a polishing material—have secured a strong footing in practically every industry. Norton Refractories and Laboratory Ware are fast becoming factors in the power plant, foundry, laboratory, and in research work in general.

Norton Research Engineers, Chemical Engineers, Mechanical Engineers and Sales Engineers not only meet problems of today, but are studying into ways and means of bringing about greater accomplishment in the days to come.

Edwin Hall, James Ashley, and Clayton Heermance, had the best opportunities and made every use of them; but all were good. And the economy of a practised playwright when his point has been made—the awkward pause; the silent freeing of Smitty; and the single line before the curtain—were in masterful and instructive contrast with the long-drawn-out fine-writing finish of the Canfield play.

EIGHTY EIGHT YEARS OF SERVICE

Banks had no trouble with Longacre, while Sewall and Chase also took their matches, losing only five games in four sets. Adsit was troubled with tennis elbow in his singles match, which partially accounted for his defeat by Dean, and Denison was forced to succumb to the better style of play of Shulz.

In the doubles the story repeated itself. The first two Williams doubles teams overcame the Wesleyan players they had defeated as individuals. Adsit and Denison threatened seriously to give Williams a clean sweep in the doubles when they extended Dean and Strum to three sets in the only close contest of the entire meet, but the latter regained the form which had enabled them to take the first set, and captured the third and the match.

A high wind was blowing across the courts at New Haven, throwing dust in the faces of the players and often causing play to halt for several minutes. These frequent gusty blasts made the tennis ragged and poor, and made accurate driving practically impossible and lobbing out of the question. Wolf and Captain Reed of Yale, playing the first singles match, exhibited the best tennis of the day. The contest resolved itself into a competition to see which player could outsteady the other, both men using their chop strokes to good advantage. The play was very even at first, the first set going to Wolf only after the count had been evened at five games all, but in the second Reed weakened and could only capture one game.

Flashes of spectacular playing alternating with frequent errors characterized the struggle of Captain Banks against Pitman of Yale. The latter proved the more erratic at the start, and dropped the first set, but he improved his game, and passing Banks frequently at the net, administered to the Purple captain his first defeat of the season. Sewall met Wright, who had defeated him four years ago, and won, 6-0, 7-5. This match was marked by long, easy rallies, neither player trying to ace his opponent, but merely to land the ball within the lines. Considering the weather conditions, the playing was excellent, the ball often passing over the net fifteen to twenty times before the point was won.

Chase also won from Mears, the play being faster than in the third match, but more ragged. The playing of Shoaff was rendered ineffectual by the wind and by the chop stroking of his opponent, Martin, and he could only take one game. Calvert, playing in his first Varsity meet, put up a very good fight against Cox, and played heady tennis under difficult conditions. He lost, however, 6-2, 7-5. The teams having split the singles matches at three all, the outcome depended on the results of the doubles.

The third doubles match was the first to finish. Calvert and McGregor, both new to Varsity competition, were pitted against Tweedy and Sloan, the former the possessor of an excellent backhand drive, and the latter of an effective forehand. Both had strong serves. The chief weakness of the Williams pair was that their volleying lacked decision; although they could usually return the ball from near the net, they did not place it out of reach of their opponents. The match of Sewall and Chase against Dixon and Wright was very well played. Both teams were hitting the ball hard and volleying well. The match went to three sets before Sewall and Chase could take it and even the score at four points all.

With everything depending on the outcome of their contest, Banks and Wolf faced Mears and Pitman in a match which was played after the others were completed and which drew a large throng of spectators. The playing of Mears proved to be quite weak, while Pitman was tired from his exhausting singles struggle. Reed did not play as he was recovering from a recent illness. Pitman made good use of a terrific first serve, helped by the wind, and not until it could be broken to make the score 5-3 in the first set was Williams able to gain an advantage. Wolf also served well, considering the opposition of the wind, and both Purple players showed ability at returning services. The second set was won more easily by the visiting team, and with it the match. Following is the summary:

Wesleyan Match

Score—Williams 6, Wesleyan 3.
Singles: Wolf (W) d. Captain Douglass (Wes), 6-3, 6-1; Captain Banks (W) d. Longacre (Wes), 6-2, 6-1; Sewall (W) d. Barthen (Wes), 6-1, 6-1; Chase (W) d. Perry (Wes), 6-2, 6-1; Dean (Wes) d. Adsit (W), 6-4, 6-2; Shulz (Wes) d. Denison (W), 6-0 6-2.

Doubles: Wolf and Banks (W) d. Douglass and Longacre (Wes), 6-3, 6-3; Sewall and Chase (W) d. Barthen and Perry (Wes) 6-1, 6-3; Dean and Strum (Wes) d. Adsit and Denison (W), 6-3, 2-6, 6-3.

SOME say that Camel is the mellowest cigarette ever made. Some that it's mild and smooth. It's really all good things in one, and that is why it is supreme upon the pinnacle of modern favor. Camel's popularity today is the largest that any cigarette ever had.

And, it costs something to make this kind of a smoke. It costs the choicest tobaccos that money can buy, and a blending that spares neither time nor expense. Each Camel cigarette is as full of value as the world of tobacco can give.

the more famous attempts to escape from Sing Sing. In one case two men started to tunnel under the walls. They completed their tube, spent the night in it, and slipped into the river the next night, where they spent two hours floating past four sentries who were on particular lookout for them. The warden said that several men had invented tools to break bars which would have a large sale outside the prison if patented. One man who was working in the power house procured some asbestos and other materials, saved all his hair at the barber's, and spent ten months making a model of himself. He then acquired the habit of wearing an eyeshade and reading a wide-spread newspaper every evening with his legs crossed. Night after night he maintained exactly the same position without saying a word, so that the officer who made the evening round would become accustomed to his appearance. As luck would have it, the night he attempted to escape a new man was acting as guard and told the dummy to get up for inspection. Ten minutes later its owner was caught.

Mr. Lawes brought out the fact that "of the 98% who claim innocence on the stand only 15% still hold to their story on admission to the prison. Sometimes they attempt to justify their crimes, maintaining that they got a bad deal, but they hardly ever criticize a policeman or a judge, however strict, if he is fair. On the other hand, they resent injustice very strongly."

PURPLE LOSES CLOSE
CONTEST TO ELIS, 3-2

Team Fields Well, While Singmaster Holds Yale at Bay During Most of Game

OPPOSING CAPTAINS STAR

Smith Accounts For All of Varsity Scoring, While Vaughn Is Brilliant in Field

Williams, presenting unexpected strength, and fighting on even terms with the highly-touted Yale nine for most of the game, was posed out, 3-2, when the Elis pushed a run across in the eighth inning after Singmaster had weakened momentarily, last Wednesday afternoon in New Haven. The Purple nine displayed a complete reversal of the form which it had shown in previous contests, and with Singmaster nearly invincible, particularly in the pinches, it looked as if Yale was about to have its string of eight consecutive victories snapped.

There was a total absence of the nervousness and stage-fright which was largely responsible for the Purple errors in the first games of the season in the Yale contest, and the players behaved like a group of veterans both at bat and in the field. Only one error was committed, and that was a low throw on the part of C. H. Smith when he tried to catch Garvey in the act of stealing second in the third inning. The throwing of the infield was accurate, the fielding of ground balls was sure, and the work of the outfield was deadly. At bat the visitors were a constant threat, from the initial inning when Capt. Smith smashed out a double, until the last, when Alexander, with two out and Williams behind one run, singled sharply through the infield.

Williams got off to an early lead with T. H. Smith doubling over the outfielders' heads and then scoring a few minutes later when Caldwell juggled Alexander's grounder. Singmaster showed some nervousness in the first inning, walking the first man to face him and allowing two others to hit, thus accounting for one run, but he held the Elis scoreless for the next five innings. During this time he got out of several bad holes by good pitching and steady support on the part of his teammates.

Williams scored again, taking the lead, in the sixth inning when D. P. Williams, playing his first full game, crashed a double into right field, advanced to third on Putnam's out, and scored on a long sacrifice fly from the bat of Capt. Smith. Yale tied the score again in the next inning when Aldrich singled, advanced on Brillhardt's sacrifice, and then crossed the plate on a double steal. The game was won in the next stanza when Singmaster had trouble finding the plate and walked two men, after Caldwell had hit a scorching single over second base. Hoben hit to Putnam, too hot for the Purple shortstop to throw home to catch Caldwell, and the latter

Track Team to Oppose
Middlebury Next Spring

Amherst, Wesleyan, and Middlebury will be the opponents of the track team in its dual meets next spring, according to the schedule arranged by Manager Clark and approved by the Athletic Council when it met last Tuesday. At the same time the Council awarded Varsity letters to the six members of the wrestling team who fulfilled the requirements last winter by virtue of having participated in three meets and won a total of at least ten points, as well as to the two managers. Those who will receive the wVt are as follows: Manager Cornelsen, Lumb, Mandell and Richardson '28, and Andersen, Deming, Captain Lisle, and Assistant Manager Stratton '29.

Following is the track schedule for next spring: Saturday, May 4, Wesleyan at Williams; Friday, May 10, Amherst at Amherst; Saturday, May 18, Middlebury at Williams; Friday and Saturday, May 24 and 25, N. E. I. C. A. A. away; and Friday and Saturday, May 31 and June 1, I. C. A. A. A. away.

TRUSTEES ANNOUNCE
FALL APPOINTMENTS

Funds Are Set Aside for Equipping Commons Club and a New Faculty Dwelling

That two of the five new members of the Williams Faculty for the year 1928-29 are members of the present Senior class was announced by the Trustees of the College after their spring meeting in Chapin Hall last Saturday morning when Telford Taylor was appointed instructor in history and political science and Alfred Rohmer received an instructorship in the Chemistry Department. Most of the few days which the Trustees spent in Williamstown were devoted to the inspection of the various building projects on the campus and to the routine business of the College, and only a small part of the proceedings has been made public.

Taylor will take the place of Mr. Moss who is withdrawing from Williams, while Rohmer replaced Curll, who was appointed at the last meeting of the Trustees, but has decided not to accept the position. Robert H. Oster received an appointment as instructor in physics to succeed Mr. Pierce, who will leave to pursue his graduate work.

Annual Church Meeting

Immediately following the Senior singing after Chapel on Sunday morning, the annual meeting of the Church of Christ of Williams College will be held in the west transept of the Chapel. At this meeting three undergraduate deacons will be elected for the coming year. All regular and associate members of the Church are entitled and strongly urged to attend.

Professor Wetmore, Now on Sabbatical Leave,
Writes of Visit in Rome and Ancient Carthage

Professor M. N. Wetmore, of the Latin Department, now travelling in Italy and northern Africa on his sabbatical leave, wrote the following letter to a friend in the United States, who has kindly passed it on to THE RECORD. . . . "Our passage home was long ago engaged on the 'George Washington', sailing from Cherbourg on July 2 and due in New York on July 10.

"Much water has flowed under the Tiber bridges since my previous letter was written, and on December 18 we saw the only snow we have ever seen in Rome. About one-tenth of an inch gathered on the grassy places, none on the pavements. Icicles adorned the 500 Roman fountains for two or three days, and we thought it cold. From the American point of view, of course, we were mistaken. At this same time, the car which brought us from Scotland departed. The driver had to return to America to undergo an operation. Since then we have kept busy just the same. We have 'done' Rome somewhat thoroughly, though no one can ever see all its wonders. We have visited all the cities and towns not too far away, even Naples, Pompeii, etc. We have been to Ostia five times, Tivoli, three times, Albano twice, and so forth. It has been a busy and wonderful year.

"Now we are looking forward to the real climax of the year, when we shall see some wonders which we have never seen before. We are going to Africa next week. On the trip we shall catch a glimpse of Malta, see Tripoli fully, and the great Roman remains at Leptis Magna, many towns on the North Africa coast, Tunis and ancient Carthage, Sardinia and Leghorn which is near Pisa. At Tripoli we are going on three automobile trips, two of which will be into the desert more or less. We are greatly excited.

"On our return to Rome early in May, we expect to loaf around for a week to get rested from our rush into the jungles. Then we shall stay a week or so at Florence. After that our plans are still more vague. I hate to run on a hard-and-fast schedule. One thing is sure, if anything can be sure in this world, that we shall be in Cherbourg on the day named. The weather has been very warm for some time. We wanted to run off the African trip earlier, but we simply could not secure reservations on the three steamers. I might add that this is the first warm weather we have seen since we left America.

With best wishes and regards to all,
Sincerely yours,
M. N. Wetmore

BOOKS and OTHER THINGS

By ISABEL PATERSON

It is peculiarly true of human nature that "the more it changes, the more it's the same thing." Men used to call upon religion to support any system that was to their advantage. They had divine revelations about the place of women in society, the privileges of kings, and upper classes, and so forth. But during the nineteenth century, in the Occident, the prestige of theology waned, while that of science increased. So now all the old prejudices are being refuted with imitation "scientific" bases. Some of them can still be kept up, although they are dangerously wobbly. Some are rather in the nature of museum exhibits.

Blaming It on The Feminists

E. R. Hickey directs our attention to a striking example in "The New Criminology" (Liveright), by Dr. Max Schlapp and Edward H. tiently and slowly, and confining their theorizing to the field of science proper, where theories must stand up to every deivable proof, these great scientists discovered many fundamental laws of physics and chemistry, from which flowed the immense mechanical progress of our own times. Quite incidentally to their pursuit of truth, they enriched the world materially to an immense extent; and even more incidentally, they made it possible for "scientific investigators" to earn a living as such. The various branches of science are no longer a vocation; they are split into a diversity of professions. This was inevitable. A merely ordinary intelligence can use the technique which only a fine scientific mind could have devised. The main difference will be seen in the theorizing and the application.

What Is a Scientific Fact?

Huxley defined a scientific fact as 'something which will invariably occur in given circumstances. I paraphrase the definition, not having the source at hand. Merely to suggest the imposition of a scientific test to the Schlapp-Smith ideas is to show their fan'atic nature.

For instance, the strictest necessity of a scientific method is to hold a theory constant, to prove it to enook Review Department Entitled 'Books of the Day' Begun by M. Harris '29

Featuring the incorporation of a new book review section, the May issue of the Graphic, to be distributed early next week, will include two short stories by Prescott '30, and Kobler '31, as well as an unusual variety of poems. Aside from these two, the principal contributors to this number, which is the next to the last of the year, are Harris '29 and Armstrong, Baxter and Heaton '30, who have written miscellaneous prose, and Foster '28, Faison '29 and Newlin '30, who have written poetry.

A brief review of the contents is as follows: "The Countess Mourns" and "The Tragedy of Jules" are the two short stories by Prescott and Kobler. Newlin is the author of a lyric entitled "Beyond the Mountain", while other poems which have been printed include "Lucifer" and "Sierra" by Armstrong, "An Revoir" by Foster, and "Solitude" by Faison. "The Dark Afternoon" and "Vindication", also by Armstrong, Baxter's "Pride Buf-feted", and "The Enigma" by Heaton complete the prose articles. "Books of the Day" is the title given to a short book review, which has been written for this issue by Harris and which will continue hereafter as a regular feature. Besides the collection of written material, a number of baseball, lacrosse and track pictures have also been printed.

60 GUESTS EXPECTED AT WEEK-END PARTIES

Wesleyan Game and Dances at Two Houses To Furnish Visitors'
Entertainment

Nearly 60 girls will be entertained at the houseparties to be given by three houses over this week-end, which will be the last until the June parties after the final examination period. Alpha Delta Phi and Delta Psi are combining in a party, for which they have engaged the Barbary Coast orchestra, while Sid Reinerz and his orchestra from Boston will furnish the music at the Beta Theta Pi house.

On Friday night there will be a dance at Meadowbrook at which McEnelly's Victor recording orchestra will play. On Saturday afternoon there will be a varied program of athletic events starting at 1 o'clock with the Courtland Normal School lacrosse game and including the Wesleyan baseball game. Following this there will be ten-dances at the Beta Theta Pi and Delta Psi houses, and the evening dances will be at the Alpha Delta Phi and Beta Theta Pi houses.

The following is the list of girls expected:
Beta Theta Pi: The Misses Floise Barrington and Alice Carson, Northampton; Grace Cayles, New York; Janet Comstock, Plainfield, N. J.; Sally Connors Brooklyn, N. Y.; Jane Conzelmann, Boston; Catherine Dawson, Mt. Holyoke; Ruth Joy French, Pine Manor; Elizabeth Hodskins, Longmeadow; Mary Kane, Riverside, Conn.; Polly Langdon and Janet McConnell, Northampton; Dorothy Niles, Boston; Elizabeth Slade, Pine Manor; Jane Thomson, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Jean and Edna Van Cleef, New York; Eleanor Waters and Pat Welsh, New York; Margaret Williams, Scarsdale, N. Y.; and Peggy Wood, Boston.

Delta Psi: The Misses Helen Baldwin, Northampton; Ann Barton and Helen Frost, Chestnut Hill; Alice Fryberger, Northampton; Roberta Galloway, Poughkeepsie; Frances Johnson, New York; Margaret Leonard, Albany, N. Y.; Jean McDowell, Cohoes, N. Y.; Betty Nesbitt, Buffalo, N. Y.; Dorothy Newton, Newton; Evelyn Reilly, Montclair, N. J.; Sally Rodgers, Northampton; Phoebe Vail, Troy; Alice Walsh, Albany; Mabel Wilson, New York.

Adelphic Union Elects

Following the annual elections held last week, at the close of the debating season, Mark Harris and Richard C. Overton '29 assumed the positions of president and vice-president of the Adelphic Union for the coming year. As is customary, but not necessary, the 1929 officers of the Adelphic Union are the same as those of Delta Sigma Rho, the honorary debating fraternity. The Adelphic Union, as an outgrowth of the former Philotechnician Society, is the oldest organization on the campus, and has charge of all debating interests of the College. The 1928 officers were C. F. Gaskill and T. P. Robinson '28.

WILLIAMS ADVANCES IN TROPHY STRUGGLE

Amherst Leads by Three Points
In Race For Plaque; Three Events Remain

Williams' victory over Amherst in track on Saturday gives an additional four points toward the "Trophy of Trophies," although the defeat of the Purple baseball team last week secured two points for Amherst. The scores at present are: Williams, 8½ points; Amherst 11½ points. Five points remain to be contended: two in baseball, one in golf, and two in tennis. In order to retain the coveted prize, the Purple must win all the remaining contests. If this is done, Williams will have a total of 13½ as opposed to Amherst's 11½. However, a defeat either in tennis or in the Memorial Day baseball game would spell sure loss of the Trophy, with the total 13½ to 11½ against the Purple. Should Williams win baseball and tennis, but lose golf, a tie of 12½ to 12½ would result.

The present standing, with the points allotted in each event, is as follows:

	WILLIAMS	AMHERST
Football (4)	0	4
Soccer (2)	0	2
Basketball (3)	1½	1½
Hockey (2)	1	1
Swimming (2)	2	0
Debating (1)	0	1
Track (4)	4	0
Tennis (2)	?	?
Golf (1)	?	?
Baseball (4)	?	2
	8½	11½

INTRAMURAL TEAMS TO HAVE BUSY WEEK

Baseball, Tennis, Golf, Horseshoes, and Volley Ball Contests
Are on Schedule

With the baseball, tennis, and golf series far behind schedule because of the bad weather of the early part of this month the intramural teams in these sports are facing an unusually heavy program this week. The handball finals between Phi Delta Theta and Phi Gamma Delta and the final rounds of the volley ball tournament, in which Beta Theta Pi, Phi Delta Theta, Phi Gamma Delta, and the Commons Club remain, will be played off on the first day that unfavorable weather conditions force the postponement of the outdoor sports.

In the second round of the elimination games in the baseball leagues last Wednesday, Delta Upsilon defeated Beta Theta Pi, Phi Delta Theta won from Delta Phi, Kappa Alpha from Phi Gamma Delta, and the Commons Club from Delta Psi. The feature of the games was the pitching of Poissant, who scored his second successive shutout in the triumph of the Commons Club over Delta Psi. The winners of these four games will now participate in a round-robin tournament, in which each of them will meet the other three once.

Little progress has been made this week in the golf tournament, Alpha Delta Phi defeating Psi Upsilon, 3-0, in the only second round match to be played. Only one more of the second round games of the horseshoe schedule has been completed, Delta Upsilon winning over Delta Phi, while the Beta Theta Pi-Theta Delta Chi match was postponed. Two of the first round tennis matches were played off last Tuesday, Delta Upsilon defeating Sigma Phi, 2-1, and Phi Gamma Delta triumphing over Delta Psi by the same score.

BOOKS and OTHER THINGS

By ISABEL PATERSON

It is peculiarly true of human nature that "the more it changes, the more it's the same thing." Men used to call upon religion to support any system that was to their advantage. They had divine revelations about the place of women in society, the privileges of kings and upper classes, and so forth. But during the nineteenth century, in the Occident, the prestige of theology waned, while that of science increased. So now all the old prejudices are being refuted with imitation "scientific" bases. Some of them can still be kept up, although they are dangerously wobbly. Some are rather in the nature of museum exhibits.

Blaming It on The Feminists

E. R. Hickey directs our attention to a striking example in "The New Criminology" (Liveright), by Dr. Max Schlapp and Edward H. Smith, the authors attribute criminal propensities and acts to a congenitally faulty endocrinal condition that is, to something wrong with the various ductless glands of the body, owing to an unfortunate heredity. And this evil inheritance the writers unhesitatingly trace to the prenatal environment. If women are suffering from grave emotional or physical stresses during the period of expectant motherhood the result is an endocrine disturbance which again results in physically and mentally defective offspring, and so at last in the whole calendar of crime from petty larceny to murder. And the underlying cause is "feminism"! They make the charge explicitly:

"We come again upon feminism and its allied evil, industrialism. The general participation of women in the economic struggle has caused a widespread emotional disturbance of the female organism, a common predisposition to hysteria and nervous explosiveness. The restless pushing into activities for which they are biologically not suited, and the resultant rise in the numbers of congenitally defective, are all fruits of this upstart tree."

It is regrettable that the authority of science should be invoked to obtain a hearing for such dogmatizing, yet it is unavoidable. While science was unremunerative and even hazardous, few but the truly scientific minds were attracted to its pursuit. Working patiently and slowly, and confining their theorizing to the field of science proper, where theories must stand up to every devisable proof, these great scientists discovered many fundamental laws of physics and chemistry, from which flowed the immense mechanical progress of our own times. Quite incidentally to their pursuit of truth, they enriched the world materially to an immense extent; and even more incidentally, they made it possible for "scientific investigators" to earn a living as such. The various branches of science are no longer a vocation; they are split into a diversity of professions. This was inevitable. A merely ordinary intelligence can use the technique which only a fine scientific mind could have devised. The main difference will be seen in the theorizing and the application.

What Is a Scientific Fact?

Huxley defined a scientific fact as "something which will invariably occur in given circumstances. I paraphrase the definition, not having the source at hand. Merely to suggest the imposition of a scientific test to the Schlapp-Smith ideas is to show their fan'atic nature.

For instance, the strictest necessity of a true scientific method is to avoid assuming that a merely coincident factor or condition is a cause. To prove, scientifically that crime is due to endocrinal defects, one would have to show not only that all criminals are defective in that respect, but that all endocrinally defective are criminals! It may be so, but it is not proved.

Further, it may be true that these congenital defectives are doomed because their mothers suffered emotional or physical stress during the prenatal period. It may be also, as a hypothesis, because an hypothesis is allowable when facts are as yet unknown. But unless the number of industrial defectives (and consequently criminals) is enormously large it is not extremely plausible. Few mothers escape grave occasion for worry, and most of them are obliged to perform rather laborious tasks during the critical period. There has been a marked advance in this respect within recent years, still, ideal conditions are anything but general. If worry and hard work on the part of the mother resulted in idleness and criminality in the child, the world would be rather worse off than it now is. In fact, it would.

POST-GRADUATE STUDY DRAWS MANY SENIORS

Greatest Number To Enter Law; Harvard Graduate Schools Are Favored

Regarding their choice of post-graduate activity, this year's Senior class has shown a characteristic diversity of preference; for, with the exception of the ministry, its members are planning to enter nearly every business and professional field. Law, as usual, has attracted more than any other one calling, since there are more than 21 seniors who plan to enter the Bar, but the general trend has been away from the days when three-fourths of every graduating class entered the Law or the ministry, and industry, taken as a whole, far outbids the professional calling this year. As has often been the case, a large part of the class will continue their studies elsewhere before entering the business or professional worlds, and for post-graduate work in both of these lines, Harvard is favored.

The complete list of seniors and their chosen occupations is as follows:

1930-1931 Net Series Starts

Two six-man tennis teams from the Freshman class will oppose representatives of 1930 in the first match of a series between the two classes, the winner being decided by the best two out of three matches. As the ranking on the Freshman squad has not yet been definitely determined, the interclass match, in which the line-ups will be only approximate, will show the relative ability of the players in preparation for a double-header against Hoosac School and Williston on next Saturday, May 26. In Monday's match, however, it is probable that Groehl '31 will play first man on the first team for the freshmen, with Shaw, Elting, Haeffner, and Pinkett also in the line-up.

Where have you been all your life?

.... Europe?

For $193.50 you can sail and return in the modernized CARMANIA and CARONIA to Plymouth, Havre, and London, or in the ci-devant three-class ships SCYTHIA and LACONIA to Liverpool... gateway to picturesque England... Cathedrals, the Lakes, the Dukeries, Oxford, Cambridge, London...

Recognizing the justifiable popularity of tourist travel among those willing to economize on the ocean to have more money to invest in memories of Europe... we have taken two new 20,000 tonners the SCYTHIA and LACONIA from first class service and made them Cabin and Tourist Third to Liverpool... staterooms sold up to a few weeks ago at second cabin rates now available at Tourist Third... one of the world's best steamship bargains.

Dancing to the syncopation of a college orchestra no feet have yet resisted... long-wide decks on which you can do your 'mile'... or work up your back-hand at deck tennis... or start that casual conversation which becomes a tete-a-tete the third day out...

And, of course, that well-considered food... that cheerful attendance—you are traveling Cunard.

Amherst Track Team Falls Before Purple

Reeves of Williams was third in this race. Greene in the two-mile led all the way and was able to stave off a brilliant sprint by Snyder of Amherst in the home stretch.

The 880 was perhaps the most interesting race of the day. Norris for Amherst took the lead from his teammate G. Felt at the end of the first lap but could not hold it as the runners entered the stretch. Felt passing him again to come in first by a large margin. Second and third went to Lane and J. Dougherty of Williams. G. Felt in the 440 slowed down to win with ease, but the Purple gained four points in this, Strother nosing out Captain Keep by a barely perceptible distance. The time for this was 52 seconds. In the low hurdles D. Felt defeated Nicolls and Shoaff in that order in 26 seconds, but Shoaff together with Boynton tied for first in the 120-yd. high hurdles, third going to Grant of the Sabrinas.

Four of the seven field events were won by Williams, although the visitors were predominant in seconds and thirds. G. Dougherty, with a leap of 21 feet, seven inches, took the broad jump, Amherst taking second and third with Grant and Stauffer. The result of the high jump was eight and one-half points for Amherst, and one-half for Williams, Captain Keep and Shoaff tying for third with Bradley and Miller, whose teammates, Buresh and Grant, won the event with the poor height of five feet, four inches. Pole-vaulting honors also went to Amherst, Hall's vault of ten feet, three inches, surpassing Dudley of Williams, who tied for second with Allison of the Lord Jeffers.

In the shot put G. Felt got Amherst's only point. Gailer won this, and Shaw was second. Callaghan of the home team threw the javelin one inch short of 170 feet to win over Miller and Brittain. First and second places in the discus throw went to Allison, whose distance was 117 feet, and Heisey of Amherst, Anderson for Williams being third. The Purple won the hammer throw with Weeks' fling of 142 feet, five inches, while Amherst's entry Hubbard was second, and Rohrbach third.

The summary is as follows:

100-yd. dash—Won by Beals (W); Sterling (W), second; Straw (W), third. Time: 10.2 secs.

220-yd. dash—Won by Beals (W); Straw (W), second; Sterling (W), third. Time: 22.5 secs.

440-yd. dash—Won by G. Felt (A); Strother (W), second; Keep (W), third. Time: 52 secs.

880-yd. run—Won by G. Felt (A); Lane (W), second; J. Dougherty (W), third. Time: 2 min. 4.1 secs.

One-mile run—Won by Chapman (W); Navin (A), second; Reeves (W), third. Time: 4 min. 40.8 secs.

Two-mile run—Won by Greene (W); Snyder (A), second; Cobb (A), third. Time: 10 min. 12.4 secs.

120-yd. high hurdles—Won by Boynton and Shoaff (W); Grant (A), third. Time 16.3 secs.

220-yd. low hurdles—Won by D. Felt (A); Nicolls (W), second; Shoaff (W), third. Time: 26 secs.

Shot put—Won by Gailer (W); Shaw (W), second; G. Felt (A), third. Dist.: 39 ft. 2 in.

Hammer throw—Won by Weeks (W); Hubbard (A), second; Rohrbach (W), third. Dist.: 142 ft. 5 in.

Discus throw—Won by Allison (A); Heisey (A), second; Anderson (W), third. Dist.: 117 ft.

Javelin throw—Won by Callaghan (W); Miller (A), second; Brittain (A), third. Dist.: 169 ft. 11 in.

Broad jump—Won by G. Dougherty (W); Grant (A), second; Stauffer (A), third. Dist.: 21 ft., 7 in.

High jump—Won by Buresh and Grant (A); Bradley (A), Miller (A), Keep (W), and Shoaff (W) tied for third. Height 5 ft., 4 in.

Pole vault—Won by Hall (A); Allison (A) and Dudley (W) tied for second. Height: 10 ft., 3 in.

Seniors Plan Endowment

Insurance was voted down in favor of a loyalty fund when the Class of 1928 convened last Tuesday for the purpose of considering class endowment. Nothing definite was decided as to methods of raising the $15,000-$20,000 requisite, and the matter was entrusted to a committee.

scored the winning run as Hoben was being thrown out at first.

As a dying gasp, Alexander drove a single through the infield after two were out in the ninth, but Delano grounded out to Vaughn. Incidentally, Vaughn, the Yale captain, played a sparkling game in the field, in addition to getting two hits, one of which drove in a run. Capt. Smith starred for Williams, being responsible for both of his team's runs, and covering a lot of territory in the field. Each time he came to bat, after his long double in the first inning, the Eli outfielders backed up to the fence, and each time they did it wisely, as the Williams captain was connecting squarely with the ball throughout the game.

Track Team Enters
New Englands Today

ther will enter the 440, and is counted upon to give a good account of himself. In the half, J. Dougherty will run, having improved greatly since 1927. After two well-earned victories against B. U. and Amherst, J. Chapman will be the Williams entrant in the mile, and Greene, who likewise has won his last two starts, will be in the two-mile event. With a record of 15.4 in the highs, Shoaff will be the only Purple hurdler in the highs, while he and Nicolls will enter the lows. Four members of the varsity squad will go into the field events. Undeclared during the dual season, Gailer, Weeks, and Callaghan will enter the shot put, hammer, and javelin respectively but will face the stiffest competition that they have yet had. G. Dougherty, who has been going well over 21 feet in the broad jump, will also enter the meet.

Every event in the meet is expected to be hard fought, with a number of outstanding men entered in each one. Holy Cross has two exceptional sprinters in Quinn and Daley, who have run around 10 seconds in the 100 and 22 in the 220 throughout the season. Mostrom of Bowdoin is another strong dash man, while Morrill of B. U. is also conceded a good chance in the 100. In addition there is Smith of Middlebury, who conquered Beals in both the century and furloag in last year's dual meet. There are a number of good men in both the quarter and half. Although losing his shoe, Chapman of Bates ran the 880 in 1.59 last week. The same holds true of the mile, and two mile, with many evenly-matched runners in each of these events.

The hurdles should be one of the most interesting races of the two-day meet. Collier of Brown, who holds the world's indoor record, will enter the highs and lows, being one of the few exceptional men in the country in the former. Beside him, there is Lucas of Bowdoin, who won the lows from Collier in the Brown-Bowdoin dual meet. Toolin of New Hampshire State and MacDonald of Holy Cross are two other good hurdlers, who will run at Boston. There are no easy spots in the field events either. Black of Maine has been throwing both the hammer and javelin around 165 feet, and a teammate, Thompson, has been tossing the shot to the 43 foot mark. Another Maine man, Harding, has been hitting 12 feet in the pole vault. Last Saturday in the Eastern Intercollegiate Meet at Worcester, Captain Talbot of Rhode Island State set a new mark of 23 feet, 9¼ inches in the broad jump, and from this showing is considered as a serious contender in this event at Boston.

The University of Maine has shown up well all season, and with men like Black, Harding, and Thompson is figured by the experts to take the title from its sister college, Bowdoin. Last Saturday at Lewiston in the state meet, they scored 65 points, winning the trophy without serious competition. New Hampshire is another strong team, which should make a bid for the plaque. Having Lucas and Mostrom to lead their attack, Bowdoin is also assigned to one of the top places, while Holy Cross is coming up and is expected to be in the running at Cambridge Saturday. M. I. T., a strong team in former years, is weak this season, as is B. U. Although not in the category of mediocre teams, Williams is not expected to score heavily, being strong in dual meets, but not having sufficient individual stars for team meets.

The Williams entries are as follows:

100-yd. dash—Beals and Straw.
220-yd. dash—Beals and Straw.
440-yd. dash—Strother.
880-yd. run—J. Dougherty.
One mile run—J. Chapman.
Two mile run—Greene.
120-yd. hurdles—Shoaff.
220-yd. hurdles—Nicolls and Shoaff.
Shot put—Gailer.
Hammer throw—Weeks.
Javelin throw—Callaghan.
Broad jump—G. Dougherty.

Rejuvenated Varsity
Will Face Wesleyan

trouble defeating the Red and Black, 9-1, last week, but in the Williams contest the Eli sluggers had difficulty in solving the offerings of Singmaster.

The Middletown nine boasts a strong pitching staff with Thomas, Coons, and Travis all prepared to take a regular turn on the mound. In addition to this, the squad has been hitting when hits meant runs, and the fielding has been above complaint for the most part. Travis twirled in the first game between the two "Little Three" rivals and held the Williams batters at bay, but it is not definitely known which of the three stars will start this afternoon.

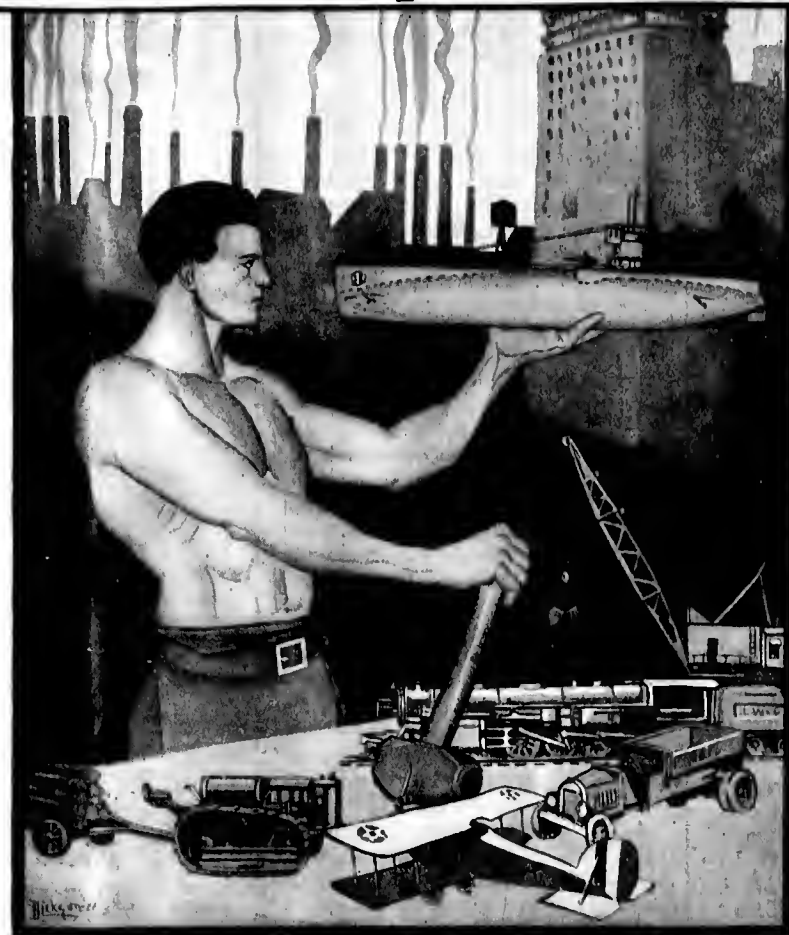

Williams has shown a decided improvement in the last two contests, particularly at New Haven Wednesday, and if the same form is shown today, Wesleyan will have a much different proposition on her hands than in the first game. Coach Fox has found an infield combination which seems to be functioning satisfactorily and the batting has become much more powerful. Winn has been moved from shortstop to second base, with Putnam shifting from third to short. Delano, who made his debut a week ago, is filling the gap at third in fine style. This combination, with Alexander stationed at first, has proved to be practically an airtight fielding aggregation, and besides, Delano has added hitting strength to the club.

Due to his fine showing against the Elis, Singmaster will draw the pitching assignment, and Capt. Smith will cover center field, being ready at any time to do relief duty on the mound. D. P. Williams will be seen in right field, where he played against Yale. This player, a left-handed hitter, who was starting his first game of the season Wednesday, was responsible for one of the Williams runs, when he doubled sharply and later was brought home on a sacrifice fly. Foster will roam in the left garden and C. H. Smith will complete the line-up behind the plate.

The probable line-ups and batting orders are:

TENNIS CHAMPIONSHIP IS LOST TO PRINCETON

Tiger Team Defeats Williams, 7-2, in One-Sided Match; Chase Wins Twice

Williams netmen lost all chances of regaining the eastern intercollegiate tennis championship when they met a strong Princeton team last Thursday afternoon at Princeton and were turned back by the decisive score of 7-2, the Tigers winning all but one singles and one doubles match. The Purple was scheduled to play Columbia the following day in New York, but was forced to cancel the match because of wet weather. The outcome of the match on Thursday will undoubtedly make the Princeton team the champions of the east, since both Williams and Princeton have defeated the most formidable tennis aggregations in this part of the country.

Playing his hardest match of the season, Wolf lost to Van Ryn, a high-ranking player in both the intercollegiate and national lists. Although the score, 6-2, 6-3, indicates a decisive victory, Wolf pressed his man to the limit, many of the games going to deuce. In the second singles Banks put up even a better fight, but was forced to succumb in the end, 6-3, 6-4. Sewall, playing number 3 for the Purple, started off his match by taking the first set from Thurber, 6-2. He weakened in the next two, however, and dropped them, 6-2, 6-2. The only singles victory for Williams came in the fourth match when Chase defeated Lenz, 6-3, 6-2. In the last two singles MacGregor lost to Reed, 6-1, 6-2, while Powell defeated Shoaff, 6-1, 6-3. ## VARSITY FACES M. A. C. HERE THIS AFTERNOON

Purple Nine To Attempt To Score First Victory of Season at Aggies' Expense

Still encouraged by their good showing against Yale, but handicapped by the recent rainy weather, the Varsity baseball team will attempt to break into the winning column this afternoon at 4.15 on Weston Field at the expense of M. A. C. Both Williams and the Aggies were inactive last week-end because of the heavy rains in this section; thus both teams will be able to use their strongest pitchers this afternoon.

Last season the game with the team from Amherst was extremely close, the result being a 1-0 victory for Williams, and this year's contest promises to be equally so. The Aggies have a hard-hitting, fast-fielding squad, and, led by the skillful Hall on the mound, will present formidable opposition for the Purple, who will be (Continued on Fifth Page)

OUTING CLUB PLANS FEATURE NEW CABIN

Best Sites Are Being Surveyed; Excellent Location Found on the Saddle

Extending its policy of trail maintenance, which up to the present time has been its chief interest, the Williams Outing Club is devoting its efforts this spring to surveying possible sites on which to build a cabin next fall that will be completely furnished with accommodations for eight men. The Club has cleared and remarked 75 miles of trail which lies within a ten mile radius of Williamstown, a boast that no other college outing club can make, but it is felt that there is something lacking, namely, a cabin which will be open to all college men, and which will make overnight trips more interesting.

In order to make sure that the best location is obtained for a cabin, anyone having places in mind should speak to Hales '29, President of the W. O. C. Locations which have been found favorable are on the Saddle between Mt. Prospect and Mt. Williams, at the lower end of the Long Trail, and near the Tri-State Corners. The cabin, plans for which include all the desirable features of the Dartmouth cabins, will be equipped with cooking and table-ware, stove, bunks, blankets, and a stone fireplace.

The membership in the W. O. C. has doubled in the last year, and it is felt that the interest in overnight trips warrants the Club in building and maintaining its own cabin. At present there is only a small shelter on the Dome which the W. O. C. can call its own, rented cabins being used for overnight trips.

TWO OPPONENTS BOW TO PURPLE LINKSMEN

Dartmouth and Pennsylvania Are Downed as Princeton Wins; Blaney Undefeated

Rain was the outstanding characteristic of the week-end golf matches in which Williams defeated Dartmouth, 5-4, and Pennsylvania, 6-3, and lost to Princeton, 7-2, at the Appawamis Country Club at Rye, N. Y. By overcoming the three opposing captains, Captain Blaney continued his string of victories begun two weeks ago when he encountered Partridge of Brown and Hutchinson of Harvard, and started well on his way towards establishing a claim for a position in the first rank of eastern collegiate players.

DARTMOUTH MATCH

A persistent rain added additional hazards to the Appawamis course on Friday, and the 5-4 victory over the Green was only secured at the cost of three extra hole matches. In the first of these, Captain Blaney defeated Captain Rockwell of Dartmouth one up in 19 holes, while in their foursome encounter with Rockwell and McLachlan, Blaney and J. G. Williams were driven to 20 holes before they could secure a one up advantage over their Hanover opponents. Cheney and Barrett of Dartmouth then proceeded to turn the tables by a 20 hole defeat of the Purple second foursome, composed of Heller and K. Smith. The remaining matches, with the exception of the third foursome, were taken by Williams, but the scores were close in every instance.

PRINCETON MATCH

Blaney and Smith were the only Purple golfers who were able to take matches from their Princeton opponents when play was resumed Saturday morning still under a cloudy sky and over a course now thoroughly soaked. Blaney's 3 and 1 victory over Ames, the Princeton captain, was perhaps the outstanding exhibition of the week-end. Smith defeated Pond on the (Continued on Second Page)

Kobbe and Clark Go to Newspaper Conference

Editor-in-Chief Kobbe and Asst. Business Manager Clark represented The Record, at the ninth annual convention of the Eastern Intercollegiate Newspaper Association, which took place at Brown University, Providence, R. I., last Friday and Saturday, and was attended by 32 delegates from the various colleges belonging to the association. The convention considered the problems of collegiate journalism, and was addressed by President Faunce, Dean Randall, and Professor Potter on various aspects of the subject. Kobbe was elected a member of the Executive Committee for the ensuing year.

A luncheon in Rockefeller Hall officially opened the convention on Friday, Dean Randall giving the main speech. In his speech he stated that, "if the present over-emphasis of activities as opposed to academic pursuits necessitated administrative curtailment, college papers would be the last to be abolished," and also said that "the important positions of efficient undergraduate publications merit academic credit." Friday afternoon was occupied with committee meetings and a Faculty reception. Kobbe was a member of the Committee on Editorial Policy.

Friday evening there was a banquet at the Biltmore Hotel, at which Professor Potter of the English department was the principal speaker. Saturday morning the delegates adopted the reports drawn up by the several committees on the preceding day, and elected officers for the coming year. The convention was closed with a luncheon Saturday noon, when President Faunce of the University spoke on journalism in the colleges.

STICKMEN CONQUER CORTLAND TEAM

Brown Is High Scorer in Contest Hampered by Muddy State of Cole Field

Playing in an almost continuous drizzle on a field so muddy it was practically impossible to run, the Williams lacrosse team scored its first victory of the season by defeating the Cortland Normal School twelve on Cole Field last Saturday afternoon by a 7-2 tally. This score, one-sided as it is, does not do justice to the superiority of the Purple aggregation, who consistently outplayed their opponents after the first few minutes of play, and never gave them a chance to score in the second half.

Immediately after the face-off, the Cortland team started a furious attack which lasted only until the Williams attack found themselves. Their two points were scored during these minutes. The first tally came by a luke when Jacobs, of Williams, (Continued on Fifth Page)

PURPLE TO BID FOR HIGH TENNIS RANKING

Will Meet Powerful Harvard Team Today; Colgate To Play Here This Thursday

With a victory over Yale to balance defeat at the hands of Princeton, the Williams tennis team will have a chance to come out ahead in its Big Three matches and likewise to gain a rating of second in the East, when it meets the strong Harvard team in Cambridge today. Two days later Colgate, with an unfavorably record, will be engaged on the Sage Hall courts.

So far this season Harvard has an impressive record with four victories and one defeat. The defeat came at the hands of the experienced Norfolk Country Club team, while the victories were gained from matches with Annapolis, Cornell, Lehigh, and M. I. T. In the meet with Lehigh, Harvard won all of its matches except the one Whitbeck dropped to Seligson, one of the highest-ranking of collegiate players.

Colgate, because of unfavorable weather conditions at Hamilton, N. Y., has not a good record. It is expected, however, that a good match will develop when they meet the Purple Thursday. Williams will play with practically the same line-up that has been used in previous matches.

The following are the probable line-ups of Harvard and Colgate:

HARVARD. Singles: Whitbeck, Hill, Ingraham, Ward, Appelton, Hamlen or Ware. Doubles: Hill and Trask, Ward and Whitbeck, Ingraham and Hamlen.

COLGATE. C. Kent, Bald, D. Kent, Hofeins, Maischoss.

'Honesty and Accuracy Are Ideals of Education' States President Coolidge in Address at Andover

"The whole foundation of enlightened civilization, in government, in society, and in business, rests on religion," said President Calvin Coolidge in an address Saturday morning at the 150th anniversary of the founding of Phillips Academy at Andover. President Coolidge's speech was the high light in the program of the celebration at the school, which was attended by such notables as Governor Fuller of Massachusetts, Secretary of Labor Davis, Governor Spaulding of New Hampshire, and the Presidents of Yale, Harvard, Princeton, Cornell, M. I. T., Dartmouth, Amherst, and Williams, and Wellington College, England. Beside Dr. Garfield, who officially represented Williams, about 20 Andover graduates in the undergraduate body here were present.

The ceremonies opened at two o'clock Friday afternoon, May 18, with an address of welcome by Dr. Stearns, Headmaster of the Academy. Responses were delivered by President Angell of Yale, President Hibben of Princeton, and President Hopkins of Dartmouth, who, representing their respective institutions, told of their relations with the school and with its graduates. President Pease of Amherst, an Andover graduate, dealt with the school's history, following which Mr. Walter Pritchard Eaton of Sheffield, Mass., a graduate of the school in 1896 who has since become a well-known dramatic critic and author, read a poem he had written which was appropriate for the occasion.

Class reunion dinners opened the festivities of the evening, and about 1,600 alumni ate with their classmates at the several dining halls and private clubs on and near the campus. As soon as it grew dark, entertainment was provided by a torch-light parade of the undergraduates. Led by the mounted figure of Paul Revere, who was connected historically with Phillips Academy as the designer of its official seal, the parade contained a float built to represent the first school building, two stage coaches of the type used a century ago, and members of the school athletic teams dressed as they were in 1878. Four bands provided music and the undergraduates, carrying torches, and with each class garbed in a distinctive and fantastic costume, were the other marchers. After the parade the alumni and guests joined in group singing.

President Coolidge, with Mrs. Coolidge and several men constituting their party, arrived in the town at nine o'clock, and were escorted to the school by a troop of cavalry. The President spoke at ten from the portico of Samuel Phillips Hall, the main recitation building. After dealing at some length with the early history of the school, and with the character and ideals of the men who founded it, he discussed the need of religion in education. "Unless our people are well instructed in the great truths of religion," he said, "they are not fitted either to understand our institutions (Continued on Sixth Page)

'Not Science, But a Dogmatic Naturalism Insists That Mind Dies With Body,' Says Professor Pratt

PROF. J. B. PRATT

Who Enters the Debate on the Immortality of the Soul.

"Naive and dogmatic" was the brand stamped upon the materialistic view of the mind by Professor J. B. Pratt when, in an interview with a Record reporter following the request of the New York World for his opinion, he entered the debate on the immortality of the soul which became acute in the scientific world two weeks ago when Sir Arthur Keith, President of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, speaking at Manchester University, declared that the mind has a material basis and dies with the body.

"It is not science, but dogmatic naturalism, that insists that the mind is wholly dependent for its existence upon the brain. For all facts of science are at least equally consistent with the view that the brain is an instrument of the mind. This does not prove immortality, but makes it quite thinkable."

In taking this stand, Professor Pratt leans toward the position of Sir Oliver Lodge, who immediately took up the attack on Sir Arthur with the following statement: "The brain manifests the mind, but that is not the same thing as being the mind. A violin manifests Beethoven, but it is not quite the same thing as being Beethoven. If you smash the instrument, of course, the mind can not manifest itself."

"I can't go all the way with Sir Oliver," said Professor Pratt, "although I am impressed by some of the results of psychical research." In contrast, he referred with some evident amusement to the assertion of Keith's that medical men can find "no ground for believing that the brain is a dual organ, a compound of substance and (Continued on Sixth Page)

PICKED MEN

It is not often that prestige can be engrafted upon undergraduate positions by formal decree, but if the proper boost is given from the proper source, the obscure can sometimes be made exceedingly prominent. After several seasons of experimental uncertainty, the Junior Advisor seems at last to be coming into his own. By making this responsible position a matter of discriminating appointment based on personal qualifications, the Student Council has given the advisor a semi-official recognition that he has long deserved. Under this new system the Junior Advisor should feel well compensated for his services, for it is something to know that one's job cannot be had for the mere asking.

Whatever honor the undergraduate body may eventually concede to juniors that live in freshman dormitories will depend not a little upon the conduct of next year's advisors. They are picked men, and something constructive will be expected from them. But the College will give them campus credit if they deserve it, and they can be certain that it will not be solely of the year-book variety.

Q. E. D.

Alumni, local old-timers, yea, even a great number of undergraduates who have been launching caustic criticisms at our unlucky ball team may do well to temper their feelings by turning to page one of the last Record and observing the excellent showing made by the nine against Yale. True, the jinx which has been slinking about the infield all season was on hand to insure to the Elis their ninth consecutive victory, but if the Purple knockers were not overly prejudiced by the past month of diamond history, we should venture to suggest that some of the best college teams in the East have left New Haven without putting up as strong a fight as our maligned Varsity.

Of course this statement has a ready-made answer which praises fighting spirit but prefers it crowned with the laurels of victory, a far from abnormal sentiment. An objection must be registered, however, against the practice of pointing to this year's baseball season as an example of our ebullient sporting spirit, for college athletics have cyclical tendencies of which this spring is an example. Some seven years ago there was a space of two years when the ball team took eight out of 26 games. We are not accustomed to speak of last year as a triumph, but the percentage of games won at that time was .357 as against .263 for 1921, while the average of the following year was .200. Disaster was trailed closely by success, and the best team in ten years was produced in 1923.

As a last word, if the Williams nine were not to win a single game this season its average for the last six years as compared with the previous five would be .301 against .319, a fact which, difficult as it is to believe, seems to show improved conditions. Rather, then, is the present team to be borne with in its losses than hastily scorned as a futureless failure when events like that of last Wednesday may easily repair its recent misfortunes.

PENNSYLVANIA MATCH

Rounding out the week-end with their second victory, the Williams team took four singles and two foursome matches from Pennsylvania in the afternoon. Blaney added the latest victory to his unmarred record by defeating Captain Coltart 2 and 1, and two of the Pennsylvania tallies, scored against Smith and the Heller-Smith combination, were not decided until the 18th-green, but the rest of the matches were not characterized by particularly close competition.

The summaries are as follows:

Dartmouth Meet

Score—Williams 5, Dartmouth 4.

Twosomes—Blaney (W) defeated Rockwell (D) on the 19th; J. G. Williams (W) defeated McLachlan (D) 2 and 1; Heller (W) defeated Cheney (D) one up; Barrett (D) defeated K. Smith (W) one up; Rydstone (D) defeated Wheeler (W) 3 and 2; Nye (W) defeated Stewart (D) 2 and 1.

Foursomes—Blaney and J. G. Williams (W) defeated Rockwell and McLachlan (D) on the 20th; Cheney and Barrett (D) defeated Heller and Smith (W) on the 20th; Rydstone and Stewart (D) defeated Wheeler and Nye (W) 4 and 3.

Princeton Meet

Score—Princeton 7, Williams 2.

Twosomes—Blaney (W) defeated Ames (P) 3 and 1; Grace (P) defeated J. G. Williams (W) 6 and 5; Youngs (P) defeated Heller (W) 6 and 4; K. Smith (W) defeated Pond (P) one up; Jones (P) defeated Wheeler (W) 3 and 2; Stevens (P) defeated Nye (W) 4 and 3.

Foursomes—Ames and Grace (P) defeated Blaney and Williams (W) 5 and 4; Pond and Youngs (P) defeated Heller and Smith (W) 3 and 2; Jones and Stevens (P) defeated Nye and Wheeler (W) 3 and 2.

Pennsylvania Meet

Score—Williams 6, Pennsylvania 3.

Twosomes—Blaney (W) defeated Coltart (P) 2 and 1; Williams (W) defeated Cassel (P) 4 and 3; Heller (W) defeated Liebenthal (P) one up; Dexter (P) defeated Smith (W) one up; Wheeler (W) defeated Parsons (P) 5 and 4; Sagendorf (P) defeated Nye (W) 4 and 3.

Foursomes—Blaney and Williams (W) defeated Cassel and Coltart (P) 2 and 1; Dexter and Liebenthal (P) defeated Heller and Smith (W) one up; Nye and Wheeler (W) defeated Parsons and Sagendorf (P) 2 and 1.

CHEMISTRY BUILDING DESTROYED BY FIRE

Assistant Prof. Mears and Brown
Had Narrow Escape—Loss
Set At $100,000

Fire, probably due to spontaneous combustion, which totally destroyed the Thompson Chemical Laboratory on the morning of Dec. 7, 1915, not only aroused the entire College body as well as the residents of Williamstown and North Adams, but also inspired the then active Record board to issue an "extra" giving the complete details of the conflagration. The alarm was turned in simultaneously by Prof. W. I. Milham from his home on Hoxsey Street and Assistant Professor Brainerd Mears, who ran from the Laboratory where he was sleeping to a nearby telephone, at 1.50 a. m.

According to the "Extra", the Student Fire Brigade had a stream playing on the building in less than fifteen minutes and this original stream was augmented by seven more as two of the town's hose company carts and a group of North Adams fire fighters arrived on the scene. A new cylinder of chlorine gas afforded the firemen some worry for quite a time, because had its 200 pounds exploded the entire vicinity of Williamstown would have been jarred as well as permeated with the undesirable odor.

The Physical Laboratory and the homes of Professor R. L. Taylor and Professor William McElfresh were for a time threatened as a brisk wind arose, but a bucket brigade formed by the more daring students kept the roof of the two faculty buildings wet, while one of the hoses was kept constantly on the Physical Laboratory.

An interview given at the time by C. M. Brown, assistant in the Laboratory, states that he was awakened at 1.50 by Assistant Professor Brainerd Mears, who had smelled smoke. A quick survey of conditions showed the hallway to be full of smoke and flames, so the two men climbed out of a window on to the slate roof and crawled along the light copper gutter to the fire escape. Mears, clad only in a night shirt, ran in his bare feet to a home on Hoxsey Street and turned in the alarm.

Professor Milham, who also turned in the alarm, said that he was awakened by the sound of popping bottles and looked out the window to see the flames rising above the Biology Laboratory. He dressed immediately and proceeded to the Physical Laboratory to empty it of the valuable records and experiments kept in the library. The greatest loss was that suffered in the destruction of the library, many works having been burned which were not able to be replaced. Professor Leverett Mears lost papers, notes and calculations covering a period of forty years, while Brown lost all the work done in preparation for his Master of Arts degree.

ALUMNI NOTES

Clarence Walworth Alvord, former resident of Greenfield and Williamstown, died in Diano Marina, Italy, January 27. Mr. Alvord taught in Milton Academy after his graduation from Williams, and from there went as professor of history to the University of Illinois, and later to the University of Minnesota. In 1918 he won the Loubat Prize at Columbia University with the book The Mississippi Valley in British Politics.

1917

Hubbard Hutchison, author of From Rome to Florence and Far Harbor, is now in Williamstown writing a new novel which circles about life in an army camp.

1927

H. Danforth Starr has been appointed permanent secretary of the class by the president, Paul Wright, to take the place of F. O. Newman, who is now in Switzerland, attached to the League of Nations.

Prof. Smith Lectures

Speaking on May 5 at an informal meeting of old alumni of Williams College in Washington, D. C., Professor Smith of the History Department described the comparatively new system of Honors Work to the audience and also explained the details of the seminar work, for seniors who are interested in original work in different fields of study. Though his talk had no actual subject, yet the topic of "The Modern Williams College" might be considered to fit in very well with his speech. While in Washington, Professor Smith visited the offices of the War Department and other places of interest, and also met many of the alumni, among them being Tyler Bennett '04, who is at present in charge of a most important work, the publications of the War Department on foreign relations.

"Vo-dodeo Dough-dough, Vodeo-dough." —SHAKESPEARE

WHEN all the bright young men and women have passed their final examinations, the fun really begins. Commencement! Solemn robes! Solemn speeches! Solemn parents!

But gaiety afterwards, you bet! Gather all your friends and relatives together. Get out the food! And get out the bottles of "Canada Dry"!

This fine old ginger ale has a joyous sparkle, a rare dry flavor which makes it the choice of college connoisseurs all over the U. S. A. Its subtle gingery taste recommends it to particular palates. Its pleasing carbonation makes it go down with a gurgle of goodness. Because "Canada Dry" is made from pure Jamaica ginger and does not contain capsicum (red pepper), it does not bite the tongue or leave an unpleasant after-effect. Pure, mild, mellow . . . drink "Canada Dry" and see how good a ginger ale can be! It blends well with other beverages.

THREE NEW COURSES PLANNED FOR 1928-29

Several Subjects To Be Changed;
Class and Exam Schedules
Are Re-arranged

Changes in the curriculum for next year have recently been announced, including the alteration of group letters and examination letters in the week's schedule, and the addition of new courses in three departments. One of the chief changes from this year's curriculum will be the resumption of the three courses in astronomy, Professor Millham's absence on sabbatical tour this year having caused suspension of the entire department.

In its revised form, the Astronomy Department presents slightly altered courses. The 1-2 course will be the same as before, but, due to its absence from the curriculum this year, Astronomy 3-1 will be open to Seniors who will have had the mathematics prerequisite and who will be taking Astronomy 4-2. The same will apply to Astronomy 6, the course which heretofore has been known as Astronomy 5, but which next year and thereafter will be offered in the second semester.

Courses which will be entirely new in 1928-29 are Chemistry 9, Philosophy 10, and Economics 12. The first named is a Senior course designated as "A History of Chemical Theories," and having as prerequisites Chemistry 3-4 or 5-6. It will be offered in group letter M, examination letter M. The description of Chemistry 9, which will be taught by Mr. Collins, is as follows: "Contributions of the early Greek philosophers. Alchemy and astro-chemistry. The theories of combustion, Dalton and the atomic theory. The development of the theories of solution.
The chemistry of colloids. The old and the new theories of valence. The rise of physical chemistry. Radio-activity and its influence upon the atomic theory."

Philosophy 10 concerns aesthetics. Its prerequisite is the 3-4 course, and both group letter and examination letter are L. Professor Pratt will teach the new course, which is described as "A study of the general theory of beauty, the aesthetic experience, and the problem of aesthetic norms."

Professor McLaren will teach Economics 12, the prerequisite of which is Economics 3-1 or 5-6, and which comes at group letter and examination letter H.
Its description is: "The railroad problem in the United States; the history and work of the Interstate Commerce Commission, corporations, and the growth and importance of the corporation. Relation of the government to corporations, trusts, combinations, and cartels in the United States and certain European countries.
The work of the Federal Trade Commission, the general problem of the social control of business from a national and international point of view."

In the Biology Department, Biology 9 and Biology 10 will still be two one-semester courses, but a few topics in the 9 course are to be changed to the 10 course, with Biology 9 as a prerequisite to Biology 10. Public Speaking 3-4, which heretofore has been open to Seniors and Juniors, henceforth will be only a first semester course known as Public Speaking 3, and will be open to Seniors only. Italian 5-6 will be resumed, its omission this year happening because there were no applicants for the course.

In addition to these changes, the alterations in group letters and examination letters as indicated below will be made:

Freshman Game Called

Rain washed out the baseball game between the Freshmen and Albany High School last Saturday afternoon on Cole Field, after the latter was leading at the end of the third inning by a 1-0 score.

A steady shower fell throughout the three innings of play, while the field was gradually becoming a sea of mud, rendering further play practically impossible. Although the Freshmen managed to get two men on base in the first and second innings, they were unable to bring in any runs.
The visitors scored in the third, when a runner on third base took advantage of an attempt to nab a man at second to steal home.

Dr. Clark to Speak on Development of Script

Particularly qualified for his discussion by extensive classical studies in Europe,
Dr. Charles Upson Clark will give an illustrated talk at 8.00 p. m. tomorrow evening in Lawrence Hall on "How Our Print and Script Came Down to Us". Dr.
Clark, who is speaking under the auspices of the Faculty Club, is a Fellow of the Royal Historical Society at London and a member of the New England Classical and American Philological Associations, as well as an author noted for "Collected Hispania", "Greater Romania", and numerous magazine articles.

After receiving his degree of Doctor of Philosophy at Yale in 1903, and after completing additional work at the Universities of Munich, Grenoble and Paris, he lectured in the United States from 1908-16 for the New York Board of Education, and later for the Propaganda Bureau of the Italian Government. His most extensive work was done at intervals in the American School of Classical Studies at Rome, where he acted as director for three years. In the United States, he has been known both as editor of the Latin Historian Ammianus Marcellinus in 1910 and 1915, and as the author of many prose articles and verses written on historical subjects.

Intramural Track Starts

Starting today at 4 p. m. and continuing through Thursday afternoon, the annual interfraternity track meet will be held on Weston Field. Each fraternity is allowed two entrants for each event, which include all the standard intercollegiate track and field events. First place counts ten points towards the Intramural Trophy for the winning team, while the next four places score four, three, two, and one respectively. Five points are allowed for entering a team.

TWICHELL COMMENTS ON RESULTS OF TEST

Finds Answers To Second Section
Show 'Religious Illiterates'
Are Numerous

"As an educational move," the Reverend Mr. Twichell stated to a Record reporter, "the freshman and sophomore Bible examinations were justified, since it became evident that there are a great number of men in college who are 'religious illiterates'." Mr. Twichell corrected the second division of the papers, which dealt with the two greatest commandments of Jesus, a parable illustrating one of these, and Jesus' conception of the kingdom of God.

"The ignorance of many in regard to the fundamental teachings of Christianity was exceedingly dismal. A number had no idea of the two great commandments of Christ, some naming 'Honor thy Father and Mother' as one; others, 'Thou shalt not kill', etc. The knowledge of the nature of a parable was also exceedingly obscure, as nearly every event occurring during the life of Jesus was labeled a parable. And Jesus' conception of the kingdom of God was described by many as our idea of heaven."

The number of low and failing grades led Mr. Twichell to believe that a great many students have lacked background in Bible study before coming to college, and that, as a cultural step toward educating these men along that line, the required work and examination are justified. On the other hand, there were more fine papers than he expected: in 1930, there were 16

A's and 48 B's, while in 1931, there were 12
A's and 28 B's.

"In general, I should say that, as a knowledge of the Bible is admittedly essential to every cultured man, the continuance of the Bible study is needed as an educational, if not a religious, development. There were enough excellent papers to make clear that we are not asking too much; every man graduating from Williams College should and must have a background in the teachings of Christ."

Church Elects Deacons

Meeting last Sunday in the west transept of the Thompson Memorial Chapel, members of the Church of Christ of Williams College elected Prof. B. Mears as a faculty deacon to succeed Prof. H. D.
Wild for two years, and Higginbotham and Rohrbach '29, and Park '30, as undergraduate deacons for the coming year.
At the same meeting, the annual report of the Church was read and approved.

Infirmary

Barhite and D. P. Williams '30, and Denne and R. Dunn '31 are at present confined to the Thompson Infirmary. If an undergraduate is seriously ill, his parents are immediately notified by the College authorities.

This Year's 'Gul' to Have a Large Picture Section

According to an announcement recently made by Hales '29, this year's business manager of the Gul, that publication will be returned from the printers before the end of the month and will be made available for sale by June 1. He has urged that all those wishing to subscribe should do so before the date of sale, since the number of copies ordered this year is less than usual, and two-thirds of the edition has already been sold.

Although little definite information concerning the make-up of the annual, and the changes instituted this year, can be revealed until the time of its appearance, three new features have already been announced. The kind of type, and consequently the page make-up throughout the entire book, has been varied to some extent this year, the relative emphasis laid on different departments also being changed. The photogravure section, which formerly comprised only a few pages at the beginning of the book, has now been enlarged to sixteen pages, while a new and distinct Senior section has been formed by grouping together all Senior features into a separate division. All those desiring to buy subscriptions before June 1 may obtain them either from the Freshmen committees, or directly from a member of the business board.

J. W. G. Tenney Receives Annual Greek Fellowship

By a recent decision made at the last meeting of the faculty, John W. G. Tenney '28 was awarded the annual Williams College Greek Fellowship of $800. The award is made each year, on recommendation of the departments of Latin and Greek to the student who shows scholarly promise and who has distinguished himself in the study of Latin and Greek classics, in order that he may further pursue his studies at Athens, at the American School of Classical Studies.

Also at the faculty meeting, the winners of the Clark Prize Scholarships were announced to be Tenney and Benjamin G. Calvert '28. Each of these two scholarships amounts to $500 and they are awarded to the members of the Senior class who are chosen by the faculty on the basis of superior intellectual capacity, general ability, and scholarly research. These scholarships were established under the provisions of the will of Mme. Marie Louise Sourberbeille in honor of her father, Horace F. Clark '53.

Rain Halts Intramural Play

Three days of inclement weather, between Thursday and Sunday, caused the postponement of all outdoor matches in the intramural series, and in the indoor contests only one advance was made, Phi Gamma Delta entering the finals of the volley ball tournament by defeating the Commons Club. With only two weeks remaining in the competition for the Intramural Trophy, a busy schedule is indicated until the close of the term. In the handball tournament, the final match between Phi Gamma Delta and Phi Delta Theta, will be played this week and in the last of the winter sports series, volley ball, Beta Theta Pi and Phi Delta Theta will play for the right of meeting Phi Gamma Delta in the final. A round robin among Delta Upsilon, Phi Delta Theta, Kappa Alpha, and Commons Club will feature the close of the baseball series, while one match remains to complete the second round of both golf and horseshoes. Several first-round matches remain in the final spring sport, tennis, as the courts have only recently been put in playable condition.

THE crews of Columbia, Harvard and Yale stand out prominently among the eight of the Eastern colleges. All three will swing into action again on Saturday, Yale racing Princeton and Cornell on the Housatonic, while Harvard will get a severe test against Navy and Pennsylvania on the Schuylkill. Columbia will have another good tuning-up race against Syracuse on Eastchester Bay.

That Columbia has encouraging reserve power was plainly shown in the Childs Cup victory. The Blue and White crew dispelled the impression that it was not a fast combination at short distances by sprinting the entire mile and a half course at a beat which did not drop below 36. The fact that the crew was a bit short on work when defeated by Yale two weeks ago, was a handicap which is being eliminated through more favorable water and weather conditions at Pelham.

Yale's Chances Bright

Yale rates to win the Carnegie Cup at Derby on its fine showing in the Blackwell Cup victory. After its surprising defeat on Saturday the Princeton crew can hardly reorganize in time to be a dangerous adversary to the Elis, while the third crew in the Derby race, Cornell, bowed to Harvard's superior oarsmanship a week ago. The Cornell eight showed possibilities, and Jim Wray's task in readjusting a disorganized condition at Ithaca is getting results.

However, Cornell and Princeton are not likely during the coming week to develop sufficient improvement to cope with Leader's efficient and spirited crew. Princeton won the Carnegie Cup in a sensational victory over Yale last spring, but the Tigers' inability to settle into a normal swing last week marked a condition which can hardly be rectified by this week's shake-up.

Shake Up at Princeton

Coach Legg has changed Tonetti from the junior varsity boat to No. 7 in the varsity shell, replacing Lawrence. Other changes may be made before the Derby race. Princeton's failure to row with its former rhythm, and the failure of Allison to send up the stroke were notable deficiencies in the Tigers' work a week ago. However, Princeton is a better crew than last week's performance showed. If Princeton can get into its natural swing and turn out its best performance, Yale will also have plenty of competition.

Navy Beats Columbia

Much interest this week will center in the Navy crew, which races Harvard and Pennsylvania at Philadelphia. The Navy crew, which last year won an aid to his son at Columbia, has been working diligently with the Midshipmen and with the Harvard eight showing much of the same power which sent it to victory over Yale last summer. It is difficult to figure. It should give us a battle of the keel sort.

The Navy eight already rates as a better crew than a year ago, and it will go into the race with Harvard a better equipped in oarsmanship than it had under Miller's coaching. There is still much weight and power in the stern of the Crimson shell as there was a year ago, and as in most of the short races of the year, the winner will have to be able to sprint throughout the mile and a half.

The Extraordinary P. S. A. L. Meet

An amazing field of more than 4,000 school athletes will compete in the annual championships of the Public Schools Athletic League on Saturday for the Herald Tribune trophies and medals. From a purely athletic viewpoint, this meet is perhaps the most interesting in the year's long calendar of sport.

Nowhere in the world is there a track meet with the perfect organization of this sport. The discipline displayed by these boys is remarkable. The strict adherence to the rules and the sportsmanship engendered by the stirring competition is one of the astonishing developments of athletic teaching.

New Course at Oxford Offers Philosophical Study of Modern Period--Is Taught by Discussion Groups

As Johns Hopkins is the institution which stands out above the rest in the study of medicine, with Columbia holding the same position in general education, and Chicago in languages, Oxford is pre-eminent among all colleges and universities in the study of philosophy, according to B. Blanshard, an ex-Rhodes scholar, and now Associate Professor of Philosophy at Swarthmore College. The reason for Professor Blanshard's stand is the admirable facilities which Oxford can offer for the teaching of this subject and the method in which it is taught.

In the first place, philosophy holds the central place in the course which, by general consent, shows the Oxford tradition at its best, the course in Literae Humaniores or "greats". This is really an intensive study of Greek and Latin civilization, and it is the kind of work which in Oxford leads to a B.A. degree. The American who wants a typically Oxonian regimen is well advised to take it, but if it seems to be too thick with classics, he has an excellent alternative before him. Oxford has established a "modern greats" which attempts for the modern period what the traditional course does for the ancient. This new course covers history, economics, and politics besides philosophy, but it is philosophy still that carries the greatest prestige; and, at any rate, since these subjects are all philosophically studied, it is the men who are most at home in reflective analysis that finally lead the lists.

If the advanced philosophical student wishes to work at his subject exclusively, he is free to do so. If he is only of moderate advancement, he may work for the degree of B. Litt, but if he can convince his tutors that he is more advanced than the average, he will be allowed to "read for" a D. Phil. These degrees are both taken by thesis, with a public oral examination at the end. The method of teaching at Oxford is one of the factors that makes it philosophically pre-eminent. It is generally conceded that one can not learn philosophy from lectures, from the process that Carlyle described as "sitting like a pitcher and being pumped into". At Oxford one learns philosophy as one learns to run, by trying and being coached. Each student is given a tutor for whom he writes frequent papers, and he must discuss and defend these productions in the privacy of his room.

Again, at Oxford philosophy is actually discussed. The place in term-time seethes with talk, some bad, but much of it is good, and the power to thrust and parry is highly valued. The average English student with less knowledge, perhaps, than ourselves, strikes one as having his wits incomparably in hand, and he maintains his views with more readiness, adroitness, and resource. The meetings, formal and informal, philosophical, political, and literary, at which the "intellectual game" is played, are without number. Most of the tutors and all the professors give series of public lectures, open to the students of every college; and, as about half of this body of lecturers are really distinguished men, who present serious and often original work in their lectures, and defend varying philosophical views, from the pragmatism of Schiller to the realism of Prichard and the absolute idealism of Joachim, the range of intellectual stimulus is extraordinarily broad.

Stickmen Conquer Cortland Team

Williams, attempting to catch a pass from behind the Purple net, accidentally deflected the ball right past Senechal and thus scored for Cortland. Shortly afterward the score was evened when Dunn drove a shot past Captain Reubens, the Cortland goalie. Soon Houlihan made the second and last goal for Cortland, and the Purple twelve really got started, Brown tallying twice to leave the score at half-time standing at 3-2.

Meanwhile, due to the steady rain in the first half, the field was becoming increasingly unplayable, and this was undoubtedly a large factor in keeping the scoring down to four goals in the second half, as the ball was rarely out of the Cortland half of the field. Willmott was the first to tally in the second half, and Hubbard followed his lead. Some time later Brown added another goal to his credit, and Hubbard repeated shortly before the final whistle. The game was replete with amusing spills, many of them due directly to the slippery condition of the field.

The summary of the game is as follows:

Williams (7)	Cortland Normal (2)
Senechal	g. Reubens (Capt.)
Collins	p. Kress
Dunning	c.p. Saeo
Ashby	ld. Butts
Arndt	2d. Williams

Wulff	3d.	F. Crane
Thurston (Capt.)	c.	Pahner
Jacobs	3a.	Aldrich
Reiff	2a.	G. Crane
Dunn	1a.	Houlihan
Hubbard	o.h.	McGrath
Brown	i.h.	Smith

Substitutions: WILLIAMS—Deming for Arndt, Willmott for Hubbard, Howard for Ashby, Christie for Jacobs, Ashby for Howard, Jacobs for Christie, Hubbard for Willmott, Willmott for Wulff. CORTLAND—Metzger for McGrath.

Goals: WILLIAMS—Brown 3, Hubbard 2, Dunn, Willmott. CORTLAND—Houlihan, Jacobs (W).

Umpire—Bullock (Williams). Time: 30-minute halves.

Varsity Faces M. A. C. Here This Afternoon

striving to break the losing streak that started at the opening of the season. Coach Fox will start the same line-up against M. A. C. as the one that played in the Yale contest, and the one that was scheduled to start against Wesleyan last Saturday.

The Purple squad is in fairly good condition, with the exception of Titman, who will be inactive for several days more because of his knee injury. D. P. Williams, who played right field against the Elis, has been in the infirmary for the last few days, and it is doubtful if he will be able to take his place in the line-up. The same infield combination will take the field today as the one that functioned so perfectly at New Haven. Alexander will defend the right side of the diamond with Winn and Putnam at second base and short-stop, respectively, and Delano at third, completing the infield.

The same outfield will appear, with Capt. Smith in center field supported by Foster in left and D. P. Williams in right. If the latter is unable to start, Coach Fox will choose from Thoms, R. H. Williams and Daniel, with the latter having the call. Signmaster or Wolcott will pitch, with the possibility of bringing Smith in from the outfield to take up the mound duties. C. H. Smith will take his usual place behind the bat, thus completing the line-up.

Blindfolded . . . in scientific test of leading Cigarettes, Mrs. Reginald C. Vanderbilt selects OLD GOLD

MRS. REGINALD C. VANDERBILT

"I wonder if one can really tell the difference, when blindfolded," was my first thought when invited to make this test.

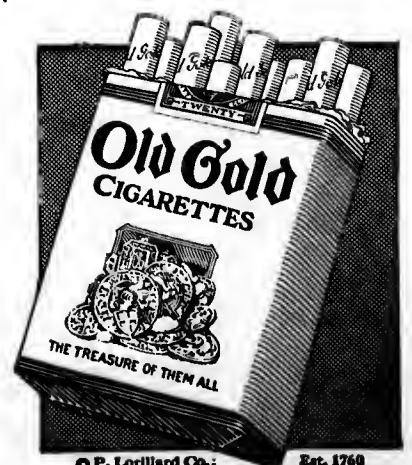

"After smoking the four brands, as they were handed to me one after another, I discovered there was one that was noticeably smoother than the others and richer in taste.

"This proved to be an OLD GOLD. I hope I shall be able to buy them in Paris . . . they are surprisingly free from any trace of throat irritation and have a delightful aroma which to me is very important."

Reginald C. Vanderbilt

How Test Was Made

Mrs. Vanderbilt was blindfolded, and, in the presence of two responsible witnesses, was given one each of the four leading cigarettes to smoke . . . To clear the taste, coffee was served before each cigarette . . . Mrs. Vanderbilt was unaware of the identity of these cigarettes during test . . . After smoking the four cigarettes, Mrs. Vanderbilt was asked to designate by number her choice . . . She immediately replied: "Number 3" . . . which was OLD GOLD.

Why can you pick them in the dark? . . . Because they're made from the heart-leaves of the tobacco plant

Maine Captures New England Track Title

with a total of 2 points, gained by Beals with a third place in the 220-yd. dash. Getting off to a brilliant start with first and second in the 100, Holy Cross was expected to give the Maine team a hard fight for first honors, but their hopes received a decided setback, when their able captain, McDonald, a favorite in the high hurdles and high jump, fell in the finals of the former and was unable to compete during the rest of the afternoon. The Worcester athletes were still able to tally 26 points for second, while third and fourth places went to Bates and Brown with 18 and 17 respectively.

Wretched weather conditions both Friday and Saturday made record-breaking times virtually impossible, but Captain John Collier of Brown gave a remarkable performance in the high hurdles, shaving a fifth of a second off the mark of 15 1/5, set up in 1908 by Shaw of Dartmouth and equalled in 1921 by Earl Thompson of the same college. Quinn of Holy Cross came through a double winner, taking both the dashes in just a shade over even time, which was exceedingly good for the soggy track. The 220 and half mile were two of the best races of the meet. In the former Quinn staved off an almost superhuman final spurt by Bicknell of B. U. to gain the decision by a foot, in what looked like a dead heat from the stands. Beals came in third, while Daley of Holy Cross, who was almost even with the victor as far as the 100 mark, picked up the odd point. In the Williams-B. U. meet Beals nosed out Bicknell for first, but the Hub sprinter turned the tables Saturday. Chapman, a Bates freshman, took the 880 in the fast time of 1:56.3. Daley of Boston College led the pack at the half way mark, but on the back stretch the winner pulled outside to pass the field as if they were walking, in what under good conditions might have been a record-breaking performance.

In the trials on Friday, Holy Cross and Maine each placed 16 men, while Williams succeeded in qualifying six. Beals and Straw got into the semi-finals of both dashes, Shoaff in the high hurdles, Weeks in the hammer throw. Thinking they had not qualified, Weeks and Shoaff did not participate in the finals. Smith of Middlebury beat out Beals in the semi-finals of the 100, while the latter reversed the decision in the furlong. In 1927 Smith won two victories from Beals in the Williams-Middlebury dual meet. It was evident from the start that it would be a battle all the way between Holy Cross and Maine, and it proved so. Holy Cross followers were extremely disappointed at the injury to McDonald, for he might have made the five points, which separated them from the Maine team.

Maine won through strength in the field, coupled with first place by Richardson in the two-mile run. Two teammates, Beckler and Harding, tied for first in the pole vault at the height of 12 feet. Thompson tossed the shot 44 feet, 4 inches to take that event, while Black won the hammer throw and got a second place in the javelin. Gowell threw the discus over 132 feet, and Connor tied for third in the high jump. Holy Cross got 14 of its points in the dashes, 8 in the 100 and 6 in the 220. Bates's strength lay in the middle distance runs, in which they took two firsts, Wakeley in the quarter and Chapman in the half.

Beside the individual winners already mentioned, Captain Sansone of Colby ran a good race in the mile, doing it in 4:23.2, while Richards of Maine and Mead of Wesleyan had an interesting duel in the two mile, the latter winning because Mead could not quite close the big gap between them with a fine last minute spurt. Toolin of New Hampshire lived up to expectations in the low hurdles, taking them from Collier in 24.2. Brown furnished a second individual winner in Russell, who jumped 5 ft. 11 7/8 in., despite the slippery footing. Talbot of Rhode Island was another favorite to win his event, when he covered 22 ft. 8 in., almost a foot better than Hall of M. A. C. could do. Carrington of Holy Cross threw the javelin over 174 feet to take first with ease.

The summary is as follows:

Team Score: Maine 31 3/4; Holy Cross 26; Bates, 18; Brown, 17; Rhode Island 10 3/4; New Hampshire, 10; Northeastern, 7 1/2; Boston College, 7; Colby, 6 3/4; M. I. T., 6 3/4; Bowdoin, 6; Boston University and Worcester Poly, 5; M. A. C. and Wesleyan, 3; and Williams, 2.

120-yard hurdles—Won by Collier, Brown; Lucas, Bowdoin, second; Dooley, Boston College, third; Toolia, New Hampshire, fourth. Time, 0:15.

220-yard hurdles—Won by Toolin, New Hampshire; Collier, Brown, second; French, Worcester, third; Lucas, Bowdoin, fourth. Time, 0:24 3-5.

440-yard run—Won by Wakeley, Bates; Atkins, New Hampshire, second; Earl, Northeastern, third; Woodworth, Boston College, fourth. Time, 0:50 1-5.

220-yard run—Won by Quinn, Holy Cross; Bicknell, Boston University, second; Beals, Williams, third; Dooley, Boston College, fourth. Time, 0:22 1-5.

100-yard dash—Won by Quinn, Holy Cross; Daley, Holy Cross, second; Morrill, Boston University, third; Mostrum, Bowdoin, fourth. Time, 0:10 1-5.

880-yard run—Won by Chapman, Bates; Rogers, Boston College, second; Fay, Massachusetts Tech, third; Daley, Holy Cross, fourth. Time, 1:56 3-5.

Two-mile run—Won by Richardson, Maine; Mead, Wesleyan, second; Wardwell, Tech., third; Fitzpatrick, Holy Cross, fourth. Time, 9:5 4-5.

Shot put—Won by Thompson; Maine; Sweeay, Holy Cross, second; Cornsweet, Brown, third; Brown, Bowdoin, fourth. Distance, 44 feet, 4 inches.

Ruaing high jump—Won by Russell, Brown; S. Morange, Northeastern, second; Seekins, Colby; Lenz, Rhode Island; O'Connor, Maine; Costello, Massachusetts Tech., tied. Height, 5 feet, 11 7/8 inches.

Javelin throw—Won by Carrington, Holy Cross; Black, Maine, second; Partridge, Rhode Island, third; Forsberg, Northeastern, fourth. Distance, 175 feet 9 1/4 inches.

Pole vault—Tie for first between Beckler and Harding, Maine; Jack, Massachusetts Tech., and Martia, Northeastern, tied for third. Height, 12 feet.

Hammer throw—Won by Black, Maine; Bruce, Rhode Island, second; Jenevese, Holy Cross, third; Wood, Bates, fourth. Distance, 162 feet.

Running broad jump—Won by Talbot, Rhode Island; Hall, Massachusetts Aggies, second; Rowe, Bates, third; Daley, Holy Cross, fourth. Distance, 22 feet, 8 inches.

Discus throw—Won by Gowell, Maine; Houle, Bates, second; Gray, Massachusetts Tech., third; Pollard, Colby, fourth. Distance, 132 feet 4 inches.

Mile run—Won by Sansone, Colby; Rice, Worcester Tech., second; Kearns, Brown, third; Eastman, New Hampshire, fourth. Time, 4:23 2-5.

Tennis Championship Is Lost to Princeton

In the first doubles match, Van Ryn and Appel, holders of the National Intercollegiate doubles title, won from Banks and Wolf, 7-5, 6-2. In the face of great opposition the Williams pair showed up well by forcing their opponents to deuce in the first set. They could not withstand the fast pace, however, and lost the second set, 6-2. Sewall and Chase, playing steady and fast tennis, won the second doubles match from Thurber and Powell, 7-5, 9-7. This match, as the score indicates, was the closest of the afternoon, both doubles teams taking every opportunity to score. The third doubles went to the Tiger team, when Reed and Powell defeated MacGregor and Calver, 6-2, 0-6, 6-2. Although the team has probably no chance whatever of regaining their title, they have a good opportunity to finish the season with a second ranking if they defeat the Harvard team today in Cambridge.

The summary of the match follows:
Singles: Van Ryn (P) defeated Wolf (W), 6-2, 6-3; Appel (P) defeated Banks (W) 6-3, 6-4; Thurber (P) defeated Sewall (W), 2-6, 6-2, 6-2; Chase (W) defeated

Lenz (P), 6-3, 6-2; Reed (P) defeated MacGregor (W), 6-4, 6-2; Powell (P) defeated Shoaff (W), 6-1, 6-3.

Doubles: Van Ryn and Appel (P) defeated Wolf and Banks (W), 7-5, 6-2; Sewall and Chase (W) defeated Thurber and Powell (P), 7-5, 9-7; Reed and Lenz (P) defeated MacGregory and Calver (W) 6-2, 0-6, 6-2.

'Honesty and Accuracy' Says President Coolidge

or to provide them with adequate support. For our independent colleges and secondary schools to be neglectful of their responsibilities in this direction is to turn their graduates loose with simply an increased capacity to prey upon each other."

"Two great tests in mental discipline are accuracy and honesty. It is far better to master a few subjects thoroughly than to have a mass of generalizations about many subjects. The world will have little use for those who are right only a part of the time. Whatever may be the standards of the classroom, practical life will require something more than 60 or 70 percent. for a passing mark. The standards of the world are not like those set by the faculty, but more closely resemble those set by the students themselves. They are not content with a member of the musical organizations who can strike only 90 per cent. of the notes."

The President's speech was followed by an alumni luncheon in the large baseball cage, which he and Mrs. Coolidge attended for a short time. Nine men prominent in political and educational fields were the speakers. Governor Fuller brought the greetings of the State of Massachusetts, and together with James J. Davis, Secretary of Labor, who spoke after him, emphasized the need of religious training as part of a boy's education. William Phillips, United States Minister to Canada, Hnatley Spaulding, Andover '87, Governor of New Hampshire, A. Lawrence Lowell, President of Harvard University, Livingston Farrand, President of Cornell University, and Lewis Perry, Williams '98, Principal of the Phillips Exeter Academy also delivered addresses. The public schools of England were represented by Frederic B. Malin, Esquire, Master of Wellington College, England, while Headmaster Stearns outlined the recent history of the Academy and announced that the campaign to raise funds for buildings, salaries, and endowments for the school had been so successful that $6,250,000 had been raised in three years. The last event of the celebration was a track meet in which the Andover track team easily defeated that representing Exeter.

spirit". "No one ever thought it was," Professor Pratt replied. "The brain is just the brain, and we don't expect to find the spirit there."

"To make sense of the materialistic position, one must accept one of two alternatives: either (1) the brain is the mind; or (2) the mind is merely an epiphenomenon of the brain, an inactive product. The first, the mere identification of two words, is a meaningless assertion. The second necessarily implies that mind or consciousness is never efficient. This is so preposterous as to be less credible than many of the fanciful notions of the spiritualists. There is not a single fact of science, so far as I know, which makes the materialistic hypothesis probable."

PURPLE BALL TEAM WINS FIRST VICTORY

Rejuvenated Squad Hit and Field Well to Overcome Lead and Emerge Victors

Indulging in an orgy of heavy hitting and clever fielding, a rejuvenated Williams baseball nine came out of a slump and won their first game of the season last Tuesday afternoon by trouncing M. A. C., 14-6. Not only was the battery effective, Singmaster holding the Aggies under control throughout the encounter, but the infield displayed some brilliant work to cut off hits.

The general all-round work of the team, both in the field and at bat, was far superior to any form shown thus far. The strategy of the Purple players at bat was of the highest order, as can be seen from the fact that squeeze plays and sacrifice hits accounted for more than half of the winning team's runs. Besides the accurate work at the plate, the Berkshire squad played with a precision and dash in the field that left little to be desired, with only one error being made. Individual brilliancy was not lacking, as Capt. Smith and Alexander played remarkably, the former being responsible for six runs, among which was a long homer to the cement stands in center, and the latter, distinguishing himself to the extent of getting three hits, one a triple in three times at bat.

The Aggie led until the fourth inning, 2-0, then the stickwork of T. Smith and Singmaster accounted for four runs. Williams increased the lead in the following inning when Alexander scored on T. Smith's sacrifice, the Aggies remaining scoreless for that frame and the ensuing three innings. Winn scored in the sixth on Singmaster's sacrifice and gave the Purple a lead of 6-2. Alexander's triple was followed by a walk for T. Smith in the seventh and both scored on Foster's bingle to center field. Winn, Williams, and Singmaster ended this frame.

Loosening up momentarily, Singmaster allowed three hits and one walk to give the visitors four counters, but the Williams half of the eighth relieved any doubt on the part of the spectators. In spite of the fact that Hall, left-hander, started the game, the Purple bats drove him to the shower in the fifth, Bowie relieving him. Since but two pitchers were brought on the trip, Bowie had to stay through the disastrous eighth. This big inning was started with a vengeance and before it was over four hits combined with three M. A. C. errors accounted for six runs. In spite of the fact that the Purple was leading at the time, 8-6, the entire squad presented itself at bat at least once during the inning. Putnam started the rally with a clean hit after Singmaster had fled out, and was advanced to second as DeLano walked. A passed ball moved both men up a base and both scored on Alexander's bunt, the hitter being safe on an

POWERFUL WESLEYAN NINE TO FACE VARSITY

Postponed Game To Be Played Off Monday—Williams Has Even Chance To Win

In an attempt to avenge the defeat handed them earlier in the season by the Methodists, the Varsity baseball squad, playing with a reversal of form, will meet Wesleyan Monday afternoon at 4.15 on Weston Field in a game which was postponed from May 19. Having emerged from its slump in amazing fashion against M. A. C. last Tuesday, besides putting up a great battle against Yale the week before, the Purple has risen from its position of the under-dog and has now assumed the status of an aggressive team with the possibility of being victorious.

Monday's contest will offer Williams an opportunity to save her reputation in the "Little Three" race, which so far has taken a decidedly Wesleyan-Amherst trend, since both of these teams have registered rather one-sided victories over the Berkshire squad. The Middletown team has an experienced group of players, which has had more than usual success so far, and with any one of the three stars which make up the pitching staff, Trivis, Coons, or Thomas, on the mound, the vis-

WILLIAMS BALL TEAM TO FACE TUFTS TODAY

Improved Purple Will Meet Strong Nine Which Has Victories Over B. U.-M. A. C.

Having shown a remarkable improvement in hitting and fielding, the Williams baseball team is prepared to meet a strong opponent when they encounter Tufts this afternoon on Weston field. Coach Fox has the squad in shape and with the exception of Alexander, who was injured in the last game, the same men will start, Captain Smith probably drawing the pitching assignment.

Tittman, who was injured at the first of the season may be back at the initial sack, but in case his injury prevents him, Tyson will hold down the position. Tyson is a left hander who has been hitting creditably throughout the season and should fill the gap. Winn and Putnam will continue to play second and shortstop respectively. Both of these men have been fielding in

GOLF TEAM OPPOSES WESLEYAN AND YALE

Purple Slated To Defeat Cardinal and Black—Accorded Even Chance With Elis

In the first of its "Little Three" matches the Purple golf team is scheduled to meet Wesleyan at New Haven this morning, while Yale, 9-0 victor over the Cardinal and Black, will provide stiffer opposition during the afternoon. These season records of the three teams credit Williams with a noticeable margin of superiority over Wesleyan, but the Elis are approximately on a par with Captain Blaney's linksmen, both aggregations having downed Dartmouth and Pennsylvania and lost to Princeton.

Save for the last named reverse, the Blue has been undefeated, as Georgia Tech was overcome in the first meet of the season. Wesleyan can boast but one victory, the 5-4 defeat of Boston College, while Lafayette was tied, 3-3, as was Worcester Tech. Captain Lee, however, has taken each of his individual matches, except that with Lanman of Yale.

It is probable that Williams will use the same line-up as last week-end, and those of the opposing teams will be as follows:

WESLEYAN: Captain Lee, Thompson, Lockwood, Eldredge, Longacre, and Douglas.

YALE: Captain Lanman, Knapp, Parker, Forest, Ryan, and Fisher.

W. C. A. Cabinet Chooses New Committee Heads

In order to organize the administration and outline the work for next year, the 1928-29 Williams Christian Association held its first meeting in Jessup Hall last Wednesday evening. Announcement was made at this meeting of six of the seven committee heads for next year, which are as follows: Deputations—Johnson '29; Education—Healy '29; Boys' Work—W. G. French '29, and G. van der Bogert '30; Charities—W. H. Doughty '29; College Religious Work—R. C. Overton '29; Community Religious Work—W. E. Park '30; and Membership—(undecided.)

The members of these various committees, who are chosen by the committee chairmen, will be published at a later date. Another important matter discussed at this meeting was the Northfield Student Conference, which is to be held at Northfield, Mass. from June 15 to 23. Definite plans concerning this conference will be announced later, and the Cabinet hopes that as many students as possible will attend. Rohrbach, President of the W. C. A. also expressed appreciation of the student support this past year, and earnestly requests the same loyalty next year.

Organ Interludes

Mr. Charles Sanford, College director of music, will offer the following organ interludes in the Thompson Memorial Chapel during the regular morning services for the week May 28 to June 2:

Monday	Reverie	Bonnet
Tuesday	Benediction	Saint Saens
Thursday	Cavatina	Raff
Friday	Pastorale	Handel
Saturday	Allegretto	Beethoven

WILLIAMS DEBATERS GIVEN SIGNAL HONOR

Harris and Overton '29 Appointed to League Officerships by Conference

Williams was accorded especial recognition at the annual conference of the Eastern Intercollegiate Debating League last Friday and Saturday at Princeton when Harris and Overton '29 were chosen to fill the positions of president and secretary of the League respectively during the coming year, while Fairbanks of Harvard was elected vice-president. Approximately 18 delegates, representing the 'Big Three', the 'Little Three', Brown, Dartmouth, and Pennsylvania, took part in the business meeting on Saturday morning, which was presided over by League President Dudley of Wesleyan, and at this time several radical decisions were made in regard to the conduct of next year's debates.

The most important change to be put into effect was arrived at only after a considerable period of discussion. This is the plan to place the judging of debates entirely in the hands of the audience. It is hoped thereby to enliven the arguments, since the dry logic which is necessary to convince an experienced judge will be supplanted by a type of persuasion which has more appeal for the non-technical audience and which is best exemplified by the system in employ at Oxford and Cambridge. It was also agreed that debates should be held on neutral ground insofar as possible.

The Harvard team was awarded charms in token of its undefeated season this year, and the meeting was somewhat surprised by the announcement of the Dartmouth delegates that their team was forced to withdraw from the League, due to lack of interest in debating at Hanover. Applicants for the vacancy thus created have not been considered as yet. Before adjourning, the conference decided to hold its next meeting in Williamstown at approximately the same time next year.

Phi Gamma Delta Wins Volley-Ball Tournament

Scoring a decisive victory over Phi Delta Theta in the final round with game scores of 21-12 and 21-13, Phi Gamma Delta won the intramural volley-ball tournament in the Lasell Gymnasium last Thursday. In the semi-final round of baseball games played last Monday, the strong Commons Club baseball team defeated Kappa Alpha 6-1, while Delta Upsilon piled up 14 runs to 2 for Phi Delta Theta.

The second round of golf has been completed with Alpha Delta Phi, Chi Psi, Kappa Alpha, and Sigma Phi still in the tournament, while in the horse-shoe contest the Commons Club has advanced to the final round, defeating Psi Upsilon, though the second round match between Beta Theta Pi and Theta Delta Chi has not been played off. All second, third, and final round matches are still to be played in the tennis tournament, and the last game in the handball tourney between Phi Delta Theta and Phi Gamma Delta has not taken in place, but they must be completed by the end of next week.

WOLF AND BANKS SWEEP THROUGH NEW ENGLAND TENNIS TOURNAMENT

Frosh Track Team to Oppose Pittsfield High

For its second meet of the 1928 season, the Freshman track team will meet the Pittsfield High School runners on Weston Field tomorrow at 2.30 p. m. Nothing is known of the Pittsfield team, but the freshmen have been holding intensive practices since the Albany meet two weeks ago in an effort to build up a well-balanced squad capable of giving Pittsfield a close race in every event.

The meet tomorrow will be of especial interest, because the same Freshman team will meet the Amherst yearlings at Amherst next Wednesday. Captain Dougherty is being counted on to score heavily for the freshmen as he is entered in the 120-yd. high hurdles, 220-yd. low hurdles, 100-yd. dash, and broad jump. The 1931 combination appears strong in the high jump also with Davidson and Meier, while Truman is favored in the half mile.

TWO MATCHES OPEN FROSH NET SCHEDULE

Hoosac and Williston Encountered Here Today by First 1931 Tennis Team

Freshman tennis will make its debut at Williams when the yearling team, handicapped by lack of practice due to bad weather this week, but with a line-up drawn from an exceptionally strong squad, plays a double-header match with Hoosac School and Williston Academy on the Lynde Lane courts this afternoon at 1 p. m. if the weather permits. Since wet courts have greatly hindered playing for position, Coach Messer has had difficulty in determining a representative line-up for the first match of the season, but it is probable that Grohl will play No. 1, either Shaw or Elting will be in second position, while Crane, Haeffner, Morris, Heine, Ringe, Gibson, and Barber may see action.

Although both Williston and Hoosac have been forced to cancel several matches on account of rain, judging from the matches played the former has the most impressive record. Central High School of Springfield was blanked, 8-0, while the Northampton Club met a similar defeat, 9-0. The Williston line-up is as follows: 1, Clayton; 2, Tubber; 3, Barnaby; 4, Cary (captain); 5, Thayer; 6, Bryant.

Hoosac lost its first match to Deerfield Academy, 2-4, but came back in the next encounter to beat LaSalle School of Troy, 5-1, in the only other match the weather has permitted. The probable line-up of the Hoosac team is as follows: 1, Fletcher (captain); 2, Fulweiler; 3, Marsh; 4, Ryersos; 5, White; 6, Freeborn.

1931 Meets Deerfield Academy Team Today

Despite the inclement weather which has prohibited practice during most of the week, Coach Graham expects his Freshman nine to put up a good fight against Deerfield Academy today at Deerfield. The opposing players have had a fairly successful season thus far, having lost to the powerful Loomis aggregation by a single run, but in the most recent game, that with the Williston Academy team which downed Amherst freshmen, an 8-2 defeat was suffered.

It is probable that either Lonsdale or Schwartz will do the hurling for the Purple, while Sheehan may do mound duty for Deerfield. The Williams line-up will remain the same as that of the dampened attempt at a game with Albany High School last Saturday, and McGlynn will not be back in the game. Deerfield's line-up is as follows: Whitehouse, ss.; Dougherty, 2b.; Warner, 1b.; Catlin, rf.; Sheehan, p.; Abercrombie, cf.; Leighton, 3b.; Webb, lf.; Eggn, c.

Infirmity Patients

Lapey, McAneny, McKittrick, Van der Bogert, and Winn '30, Harvey, Moser, and Pinkett '31 are at present confined to the Thompson Infirmary. If an undergraduate becomes seriously ill, his parents are immediately notified by the College authorities.

Victorious in Both the Singles and Doubles Series Gain Trophy Permanently

HARVARD WINS FROM PURPLE

Chase Continues Two Year Winning Streak as Crimson Takes Match, 6-3

After a week of strenuous tennis, during which period the Williams netmen played their two hardest matches against Princeton and Harvard, Captain Banks and Wolf entered the New England intercollegiate tennis tournament, and by gaining two points through victories in both the singles and doubles tournaments won permanent possession of the eight-point trophy, the other six points having been obtained in the past four years. In the Harvard match last Monday in Cambridge, which directly preceded the New England, the Purple team showed the effects of an over-indulgent schedule and, as a consequence, dropped the match, 6-3.

The New England Tournament

After working his way up to the semi-final round, Wolf decisively defeated Roycroft, of Boston University, 6-0, 6-0, thereby qualifying for the finals. Banks also advanced to the semi-finals, but lost in that round to Martin, of Boston University, 6-2, 6-2. In the first set of this match, Banks played up at the net on many points, Martin passing and lobbing over him with well-executed shots. In the second set Banks stayed in the back court, but even here Martin with steady and accurate volleying outplayed his opponent.

Martin, however, played his best game in the semi-final round, for when he met Wolf in the finals, his service broke down and he consistently drove out of the court. Wolf played a well-judged and -executed match throughout, taking the fore court at the slightest opening and making the best out of his service. When driven to defensive play, he lobbed with accuracy, his shots grazing the beams on the enclosed court of the Longwood Cricket Club. With the beginning of the third set Martin, who had been netting his first service consistently, started serving in his customary good form. He carried the set to three-all. In the seventh game the score went to deuce seven times until Wolf finally won the game. The Purple star then won his service twice to win that set and the match, 6-1, 6-0, 6-4.

In the doubles tourney the Williams pair forced themselves into the finals with little difficulty. In this round they engaged Wigglesworth and Kuki, of M. I. T. In the opening set of this match Wolf and Banks went into an early lead when they broke through Kuki's service. The Technology team then won Banks' serve

PURPLE STICKMEN TO FACE HARVARD TODAY

Strongest Opposition Is Expected Though Visitors Have Lost Nine Games

Facing what will probably be the stiffest opposition of the season, the Williams lacrosse team will face-off with the Harvard twelve on Cole Field this afternoon at 1 o'clock. Although Harvard has won only three games out of twelve so far this year, She has beaten both Brown and Springfield the remaining opponents on the Purple schedule, 8-3 and 6-3 respectively, besides overwhelming Dartmouth 10-3, while the latter defeated St. Lawrence, to whom the Williams team bowed in the first game.

The Crimson met defeat at the hands of L'Hirondell Club, 12-4, St. Johns, 6-0, University of Maryland, 12-2, Mt. Washington Club, 18-2, Boston Lacrosse Club, 5-4, U. of P., 5-3, Union, 8-1, Syracuse, 3-2, and West Point, 15-3. Although this long list of defeats is not impressive, it must be remembered that Harvard has met a much stronger group of opponents than Williams, and also has the advantage of the experience gained in playing such a long schedule. This factor is one that is likely to count heavily against the Purple

PERFECTING THE APPROACH

By this time we should be well schooled in the etiquette of approaching examinations. Ever since we reached the age of reason we have been told what bad form it is to come upon them suddenly and take them by surprise. It is also in poor taste to "eram"—in fact the word should not even be mentioned in the polite society of liberal education where knowledge and culture are taken calmly, respectfully, in a somewhat numb state of mind. And it is exceedingly gauche, so they tell us, to abbreviate Horace with a trot or compress Wordsworth with a naked outline of ready-made catch-phrases. The whole thing should be a gentle, continuous process—one steady march of the intellect that can sweep before it a cause for every effect, an interpretation for every fact. Battles and poems, dates and deaths, paintings and the amoeba, are but parts of something much bigger. In a word, the proper preparation for examinations is correlation, an operation that should begin on the first day of the semester and continue unbrokenly to the bitter end. A brief refreshing of the memory with suggestive notes, and lo! we pass with flying colors—or a D.

That we have not yet fully mastered some of the finer points of this etiquette, this truly educational point of view, must be fairly obvious to anyone that has had the painful experience of observing college students the night before an examination. Certainly more goes on than a mere refreshing of the memory. In those tremendous sessions that take place in the academic small hours the greater portion of the semester's work is often inspected for the first time. And even when the material is fairly familiar the miscellaneous facts seem to whirl about in a most malicious manner. Of course hour tests manage to give some unity to classroom data, but a course is rarely comprehended as a unified whole until a few hours before the examination. Such eleventh hour correlation may be an effective means of answering questions, but it will always strike a discordant note in the company of liberal education.

The fault probably lies partly in the anatomy of examinations themselves. After all, in writing his answers a student must take his cue from the questions asked. Scattered trace questions are probably the most effective for testing comprehensive knowledge, and the fact that they are usually dreaded is by no means an argument against their use. Some students will always prefer the kind that demands the date of the French Revolution or what Shakespeare means when he says "anon", but it will never be claimed that dates and definitions are true characteristics of a liberal education.

Williams may not yet be ready for a "reading period" such as Harvard has just established, but the time must soon come when even the most conservative colleges will be forced to think up new ways of preparing their students for mid-year and final tests. What has long been an apparent stumbling block in the system here is the custom of holding regular class exercises up to the very eve of the first scheduled examination. These last straggling classes of the semester undoubtedly have a certain value, but they also cause considerable difficulties to men that happen to have examinations in the beginning of the period. They crowd in upon the desperate students, distract rather than instruct, and eat up valuable—sometimes vital—time. For those who are trying to eram for an early examination, these hang-over classes are a menace. It is time wasted; it is time spent in a spirit of impatient antagonism on the parts of both student and instructor. If it is at all possible the powers should abolish this intrusion upon the examination period. It would be a step toward better preparation conditions, and if it should eventually lead to an extended reading period so much the better. With these superfluous classes out of the way the student might be able to see things a little more clearly at a time when it is very difficult to see anything at all.

error. T. Smith also reached base on an error and Foster came through with another hit which meant scores. Winn reached first on an error and Thoms scored Smith with a perfect bunt which he beat out. C. H. Smith placed a single over second base to score the above two. Singmaster again flied out, but Putnam reached first on an error. Delano, however grounded out to end the barrage. The Aggies were retired in order in the ninth. The score is as follows:

fine shape and have improved their batting averages. Putnam, especially has been hitting the ball hard, having gained three safe bingles against the M. A. C. hurler. Although Delano at third has weakened a bit with the stick, he has been throwing with remarkable accuracy and is considered a valuable addition. The outfield will probably be composed of Foster in left field, R. Williams in center, and D. Williams in right. Thoms and Danieli are both likely to play part of the game, especially Thoms, who showed up well Tuesday. T. Smith will probably pitch with C. Smith catching, although Wolcott may draw the mound assignment.

The Tufts nine lost the first encounter to Vermont, 3-0, but the game was called in the fifth because of rain and a real test of the Tiger strength could not be obtained. The following week however, B. U. was overcome 4-2 in a comparatively easy fashion. Bowdoin was downed in an orgy of hits by a score of 11-1. The Tufts aggregation is made up of a group of veterans who have been hitting regularly and have been aided by the fine pitching of Bowker and Smith. The probable line-up:

ALUMNI COLUMN

ALUMNI GIVEN HONORS

Two Graduates Named as National Research Scholars

Named as National Research Fellows by the National Research committee in chemistry at a recent meeting held at Princeton University, Robert Niles Washburne of Williamstown and Dr. Lewis C. Copeland of Northampton both of the class of '24 are the recipients of fellowships amounting to $1,800 each. Washburne will continue his studies at Princeton, while Copeland will matriculate at Harvard University.

Doctor Copeland this Spring received his Doctor of Philosophy degree from Johns Hopkins University, where both he and Washburne have been doing graduate work since their graduation. Both men majored in chemistry while at Williams.

That President Garfield's popularity was an established fact during his days as a professor is shown by an article published last Tuesday in the New York Tribune entitled "Twenty Years Ago Today". Princeton seniors on that date compiled their annual statistics, serious and otherwise. Their favorite professor was found to be H. A. Garfield, their sport baseball, and their politics Republican.

Powerful Wesleyan Nine to Face Varsity

itors will be able to offer high class opposition.

According to an agreement made by the athletic authorities of the two institutions, the opposing coaches will not be permitted to direct their teams from the bench, but the strategy will rest on the shoulders of the rival captains, T. H. Smith and Funk. Coach Fox's advice would be extremely desirable in this encounter, if the Purple starting pitcher should get into difficulty, as this contest will be the first of four scheduled for a period of six days. The pitching staff will have to be handled with the utmost care if Wesleyan, Amherst, Middlebury, and Vermont are to be met in such a brief lapse of time with any degree of success.

While the spell, which has been hanging over the Varsity bats since the start of the season, was broken in such a brilliant fashion against M. A. C., the victory was a costly one. Alexander, who has been playing effectively at first base in the absence of Tittman, was injured when he collided with Johnson, Aggie first baseman, and may be unable to participate in any of the games next week. In addition to the fact that the infield will be broken up for the second time this season because of an injury to the first baseman, his hitting prowess will be sorely missed.

The probable line-ups and batting orders are:

WILLIAMS—D. P. Williams, rf; Putnam, ss; T. H. Smith, cf; Alexander or Tyson, 1b; Foster, lf; Delano, 3b; Winn or Inverso, 2b; C. H. Smith, c; Singmaster, p. WESLEYAN—Deitter, cf; Smith, 2b; Funk, ss; Rupprecht, 3b; Guthrie, lf; Manuel, c; Siloway, rf; Cowperthwaite, 1b; Travis, Coons, or Thomas, p.

which has as yet no seasoned veterans to draw upon.

Lane, the Crimson captain, is now playing his third year of varsity lacrosse, and four years ago was captain of the Freshman team. He plays a star game in both attack and defense, taking either third attack or first defense. Dreier and Wallace, at first attack and outside home respectively, are the leading players in the attack, while Markwett is the outstanding defense man, playing cover point. The Williams line-up will probably be the same as that which conquered Cortland Normal last week, with the exception that Willmott will not play.

The tentative starting line-ups are as follows:

WILLIAMS—Seacrest, g.; Collins, p.; Dunning, e.p.; Ashby, 1d.; Arndt, 2d.; Wulff, 3d.; Thurston, c.; Jacobs, 3a.; Reiff, 2a.; Dunn, 1a.; Hubbard, o.h.; Brown, i.h.

HARVARD—Ellison, g.; Pickard, p.; Markwett, e.p.; Hartnett, 1d.; Park, 2d.; Mulliken, 3d.; McQuaid, c.; Lane, 3a.; Glenn, 2a.; Dreier, 1a.; Wallace, o.h.; Murphy, i.h.

Wolf and Banks Sweep Through Tennis Tournament

and thereafter the games went to the server until the Williams pair took Wigglesworth's service and with it the set. The second set went to five-all. Wolf, who did not lose his service in any of his singles or doubles matches, won the eleventh game, and the Purple pair took the twelfth game and set when they broke through Kuki's serve. Despite the decisive score of 6-1, the third set was a hard contest, four of the games going to deuce. In the fifth game, although the Technology team was leading at 40-love, Wolf served brilliantly the rest of the game to win it. The only game won by Kuki and Wigglesworth was the sixth which was gained by the latter's serving. Williams easily won the seventh game and the match, 6-3, 7-5, 6-1.

The Harvard Match

The outstanding factor in the Purple's loss was the fact that the team, which had recently been playing consistently hard matches, was by no means in its best form. It can be said, said that, had the team been granted a respite after the Princeton match and had the Harvard match been played on the Sage Hall courts, Williams would have had a far greater chance of winning. In the first singles, Wolf, who had played two of his preliminary matches in the New England in the morning, was no match for Whitbeck. The latter, who has been playing well all season, was sure and steady, winning the match in straight sets, 6-1, 6-2. Banks' errors were costly in his match with Hill and he lost it, 6-4, 6-3. Sewall was also not up to his usual steady game and finally succumbed to Ingraham's hard, long drives with a score of 6-1, 6-3. In the fourth singles, Chase, who has not lost a match since he has been playing varsity tennis, was more steady than his opponent Ward and won at 6-4, 6-2. In the last two singles matches Appleton defeated MacGregor, 6-3, 4-6, 6-3, while Ware won from Adsit 6-0, 7-5.

The first doubles was undoubtedly the best match of the afternoon. Wolf and Banks displayed better teamwork but their missing many overhead shots proved fatal in their loss to Whitbeck and Hill, 8-6, 6-4. Sewall and Chase, continuing their string of victories, won from Ward and Trask, 1-6, 6-2, 6-3. MacGregor and Calvert defeated Ingraham and Hamlen in the last doubles match, 2-6, 6-4, 6-4. Calvert's overhead play and steadiness were large contributions to the victory.

The summary of the match follows:
Singles: Whitbeck (H) defeated Wolf (W), 6-1, 6-2; Hill (H) defeated Banks (W), 6-3, 6-4; Ingraham (H) defeated Sewall (W), 6-1, 6-3; Chase (W) defeated Ward (H), 6-1, 6-2; Appleton (H) defeated MacGregor (W), 6-3, 4-6, 6-3; Ware (H) defeated Adsit, 6-0, 7-5.

Doubles: Whitbeck and Hill (H) defeated Wolf and Banks (W), 8-6, 6-4; Sewall and Chase (W) defeated Ward and Trask (H), 1-6, 6-2, 6-3; MacGregor and Calvert (W) defeated Ingraham and Hamlen (H), 2-6, 6-4, 6-4.

Baseball Competition Starts

As competitors for the 1929 Baseball Competition, 14 members of the Freshman Class reported on Monday in Jesup Hall to Frank F. Fowle, Jr., assistant-manager of baseball. Fowle explained the nature of the work and the details of the competition which will last approximately one year. The following men are competing: C. W. Bartow, Chapman, Deane, Guenzel, Grow, Holbrook, Kleibacker, Koblner, Letchworth, M. Lewis, Lonsdale, Nicoll, Sholes, and Stanwood '31.

ZETA PSI IS LEADER IN FRATERNITY TRACK

Phi Sigma Kappa is Close Second
After First Day—Mason '31
Is High Scorer

First places in three of the seven events run off in the first day's competition in the interfraternity track meet on Weston Field during the M. A. C. baseball game last Tuesday afternoon put Zeta Psi in the lead with a total of 19 points, while Phi Sigma Kappa, with 14 points, follows too close behind for the final outcome to be judged before the completion of the meet, which was to have taken place Friday afternoon if the weather permitted. The present ranking continues as follows: Alpha Delta Phi, 9; Phi Gamma Delta, 7; Kappa Alpha, 6; Beta Theta Pi, 6; Delta Phi, 4; Delta Psi, 4; Sigma Phi, 3; Theta Delta Chi, 2; Commons Club, 1.

Mason '31 opened the scoring for the leaders by rolling in at the head of the lone heat in the 120-yard hurdles and marked up five more points by winning the high jump, thus earning temporarily the position of high scorer. Froeb '29 took the third victory by a margin of two inches over Grant '28 in the javelin throw. Two and one-half inches was the interval by which Bramley '28 representing Phi Gamma Delta, won the shot put from Langmaid '31 of Alpha Delta Phi. The 220 dash, which had the largest entry list of the meet so far, was not finally completed until Wednesday, when Bartow of Kappa Alpha led the last heat in 24.3.

Child '28 covered the quarter mile in 54 seconds to bolster the score of Phi Sigma Kappa. Though no one seriously threatened the victor, the remaining scoring places were disputed to the tape, when Rohan '30, Keep '30, and Kimball '31 came in in that order. 17 men crowded the post at the start of the mile, but were soon stretched out over a space of 200 yards. Gross '30 was not over-exerted in leading a pace which left the field with but little thought of sprinting at the finish.

TRACK TEAM FINISHES ANOTHER GOOD SEASON

After Loss of Many Stars, Squad Improves Greatly To Down
Amherst Easily

Although handicapped at the start of the season by the loss of many point-winners through graduation, sickness, and ineligibility, the varsity track team gradually developed into another strong aggregation, compiling a total point score of 237½ to their opponents' 167½. After losing to Wesleyan by a close margin in their opening meet, the team came back in good form to submerge Boston University and to gain Williams' eleventh consecutive track victory over Amherst.

The team possessed no individual stars with the exception of Beals, who placed third in the New England 220, but it presented a well-balanced line-up with strength almost evenly distributed on both track and field. Beals was the season's high scorer with a total of 28 points in the three meets, losing only one dual race, the 100 to Morrill of B. U. Shoaff was second with 18¾ points, while the Purple's star trio of weight men, Callaghan, Gailer, and Weeks, were tied with 15 points apiece, gained through a first in their respective events in each meet.

With a wealth of material from last season, the dashes seemed to be well fortified, but the loss of Stayman before the Wesleyan meet proved a handicap, although Williams made a clean sweep in the century and furlong against Amherst and allowed Wesleyan only a second, in the 220. The quarter also appeared strong with two seasoned veterans in Captain Keep and Skinner. The latter was lost at the start of the season, while Keep was hampered by ill health, although he ran in every meet. Strother and Elbrick showed great improvement and gave promise for next season. J. Dougherty proved himself the best of the half-milers. In the mile Chapman ably took the place of Adams '27 and Greene and Moore performed consistently well in the two-mile.

The graduation of Captain Zinn left a big gap to fill in the hurdle events, which Boynton, Nicolls, and Shoaff, did in fine style. The last named improved throughout the season, winning the highs against B. U. in 15.4, while he and Boynton ran a dead heat against Amherst. Nicolls won two of his three low hurdles meets, being beaten by Felt of Amherst. Shoaff also ran well in the lows. The high jump was weak all season, but G. Dougherty and Rowley did well in the broad jump. Little, college record-holder in the pole vault, sprained his wrist at the start of the season, and Conch Seeley drafted Dudley who, after two days of practice, took a first against B. U., and was barely nosed out of first place by Amherst.

Callaghan, Gailer, Rowley, and Weeks proved a source of strength in the field events. Gailer was undefeated in the shot, putting it around 39 feet in each meet. Weeks was not even pressed to win the hammer throw in any meet, Rohrer also doing well in this event. Callaghan and Rowley were practically even in the javelin, the former having a slight advantage, and threatening his own college record several times throughout the season. Although not as strong as the other field events, the discus was capably taken care of by Rowley and Anderson.

Barrie Made Real

BARRIE. By Thomas Moulton. New York. (Charles Scribner's Sons). $2.00.

W. K. L.

Undergraduate literary discussion (in Williams at least) is lamentably free of the name of James M. Barrie. Whether this is because of our New England self-consciousness about our childhood (for instance the memory of being taken to "Peter Pan" at an early age and asked if we believed in fairies) or our general modern distrust of the sentimentally romantic, I do not know. In "Barrie" Mr. Thomas Moulton has written a biography of the Scotch writer, which should be extremely interesting to all those slightly acquainted with J. M. Barrie, for everyone is that, and a real delight to his followers. Mr. Moulton has written of Barrie with all the understanding, admiration and keenness which you would expect of a man who really loves Barrie as Barrie should be loved. He has written as all of us would like to write who have felt the tenderest personal friendship with Grizel and Babbie and Myssie Drolly and Margaret Ogilvy and Gavin and Tommy and Cree Queery and the score of delightful people in Thrums, that ugly town, so styled by Barrie himself, which has for so many such a roseate glow of warmth and beauty as no other town in literature.

He has written as we all would like to who have seen Maude Adams (and Maude Adams is not Marilyn Miller) as "Peter Pan" or more recently Helen Hayes as Maggie Wylie, and who have stared off at the ceiling or boxes toward the end of the acts lest the sudden flash of lights betray sophistication.

Mr. Moulton, however, is no fool. He writes in high praise of Barrie, but does not lose sight of the fact that Barrie for all his charm and whimsical qualities is human. In the book we have a close analysis of practically everything that Barrie has written, and much of it, Mr. Moulton, with a keen sense of literary values, criticizes severely. A great deal of Barrie's earlier work, naturally enough, is not very good. In his zeal to portray accurately the Scotch people and life in Kirriemuir (his birthplace and the other name for Thrums), Barrie often inclined more toward the reporter than the artist, and his extensive use of dialect, which he gives to us in the form of misspellings is often irritating, martistic, and for the American reader incomprehensible without a glossary (and none is supplied). "Barrie" is more of a literary study than a biography, and I believe that it is more interesting for that reason. Mr. Moulton is not a Boswell, and he loses nothing, I think, by not being one. He does not inform us of every little thing which Barrie said or did, nor does he give even the usual amount of actual life history which is found in most biographies. He is concerned with the artistic Barrie almost exclusively. He has a compilation of the writings of Barrie which is surprising. We may appreciate perhaps for the first time the really extensive output of the man, for he has been poet, reporter, novelist, playwright, essayist, and short story writer and though he is now well toward seventy the quantity of his work in these various forms is astonishing.

Mr. Moulton's acquaintance with Barrie's work is so deep that it is noticeable in the very style in which he writes. He writes with a remarkably kindred whimsicality and gentle sense of humor. The quaint good humor, keen appreciation, and honest sense of values of the book make it one of the most delightful of recent books.

James Stephens

Haze of a Nocturnal Vision

ETCHED IN MOONLIGHT. By James Stephens. (New York. The MacMillan Company.) $2.50.

S. L. FAISON, JR.

With the silver haze of a nocturnal vision James Stephens grooves his plate and stabs beneath our human selves. His is the clairvoyant touch of mysticism tinted with the poetry of understanding. There is the depth of the genuine in him, whence we too may learn to observe. He is of the modern trend that prefers a speck of dirt deftly turned into a symbol, to a more detailed psychology. His is the clever choice of words that loads with meaning an empty blankness.

This book of story-sketches centers about the longest one whose name so neatly tells the pervading tone. All of them concern themselves with human emotions that will never disappear. There is one's dislike for an old acquaintance, or one's premonition of death, or one's jealousy. There is, too, the dull throb of poverty, and the tragedy of being drab. Each of these is embodied in an instance to which conscious arrangement and unnatural exaggeration only lend a heightened emphasis. And these last are forgiven, even, by the presence of the grey veil of Romance that shrouds in dreams, real or suggested.

There is a trait in him that impinges on an almost virgin beauty. This is an attitude that draws philosophy from its shell and the science of psychoanalysis and places them undecorated in the realm of the aesthetic. There comes a piece of description whose rhythm beats forth its own meaning, then of a sudden a change, and a few sentences of profound thought and a few more of precise explanation of the workings of one's emotions. There is something of the unimpassioned surgeon in this, or of the scorned academicist who is at best only beauty's butler—a something foreign to the beauty it pretends to be. For it is not garbed with a special place in this world of events, but floats endlessly, apart even from the dream-castle whence all this Romance started.

It might well be said of Stephens that he progresses in the impetuous slashes of a lightning storm instead of in the broader, more strongly interwoven movements of a Tolstoy. But let the poet be praised by his own works, for such is the man that caught this mood:

"It was a lovely night with a sky swept bare of all but the moon.

High in the air, bare and bright and round, she rode in beauty.

And, but for her, we might have seen how lovely was the blue serenade that swung about her.

Naught stayed in that immense for eye or ear. Naught stirred or crept. All slept but sheer, clear space and silence. And they, with the wonder of the wide, high heaven, were wonderful.

Afar, apart, in lovely alternating jet and silver, the sparse trees dreamed. They seemed as turned upon themselves. As elves they brooded; green in green; whist and inhuman and serene.

All moved within.

All was indrawn.

All was infolded in solitude.

The sky, the grass, the very earth rejected knowing; and we hid with the moon as though she were atune to naught beside."

Soldier of Antichrist

GENGHIS KHAN, THE EMPEROR OF ALL MEN. By Harold Lamb. New York. (Robert M. McBride & Co.)

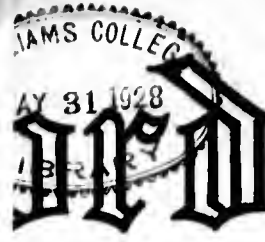

DWIGHT LITTLE

There have been as many complaints as boasts concerning the progress or lack of progress of our civilization. The atrocities of the Great War are pointed out, crime waves, or divorces. To Genghis Khan violation of Belgium's neutrality would have been an affair of honor, the slaughter of every living being in a city the size of Philadelphia an engaging gesture. To realize the society over which the great Khan ruled it is only necessary to turn to the 20th law in which he commanded "It is forbidden to bathe or wash garments in running water during thunder." This law, it is explained, was enacted in order to prevent the Mongols, who were very much afraid of thunder, from drowning themselves in lakes and river during a storm. Likewise, places nearest the fire in the family tent belonged to the grim warriors and to guests—women at a distance and children where they could. On long journeys dried meat was carried for food between the saddle and the horse's back to soften it and keep it warm. If this failed horses' blood was resorted to. Men on the march endured incredible hardships, sleeping in the snow and existing on mares' and dry-pounded goats' milk. Human life to nature meant little and less to man. Deceit was virtuous if clever, enemies invited each other to ambushes and poison. The sentence of immediate death was merciful for the slightest offences. Fantastic deaths became greater retributions; the foeman of the Khan taken alive had molten silver poured into his eyes and ears. Men were diabolically torn apart by the slowest of machines.

In this society, in this seeming madness, Temujin, later the Great Khan, was born. His father, a minor chieftain, died when he was less than a youth and his small inherited tribe broke up, fleeing to safer standards. Temujin, abandoned, was captured by jealous neighboring tribes, but managed to escape to the Gobi Desert, to the beginning of his conquering career.

The story of conquest is the matter of the book. It is no great wonder that some man schooled from birth in self-reliance, war, and leadership, might have at last subdued the entire known world. In matter of mere geography, however, Genghis Khan covered more territory than Caesar, Napoleon, and Alexander combined; Tamburlaine might have been his vassal. What if the law of our land read "Every man who does not go to war, must work for the empire without reward?" In such a land as the Khan's where manpower was not at premium his armies became hordes, pious Christians prayed for protection from the soldiers of Antichrist which were at one time prophesied to descend from the land of Gog and Magog. Genghis Khan did not trouble himself with revolt; summoning a conspirator to his tent three strong wrestlers seized the man, broke his spine, and threw him aside. He rewarded his paldins at any time without ceremony. Moreover they could do no wrong, and nine times the death penalty would be forgiven them. The Khan could not be lenient, however, and live. He stood at the summit of a restless driving heap which wished to be domineered. One of his first realizations was that the nomadic tribes must have constant occupation in order to keep from each other's

The author first dissects in his book the physical character of man's prehistoric ancestors of the Old and New Stone Age, and the cultures they developed, the remarkable cave art of the men of the Old Stone Age, their customs and their religion. Considerable stress is laid on the Neolithic or New Stone Age, because in it man invented the fundamentals on which civilization is based. The importance of the discovery of metals, which led first to the use of copper and later to that of bronze, is discussed in some detail.

The star-actor editor will keep in all the "fat" of the star part of Hamlet, though to do so he must also keep in passages of slight dramatic value, because they lead up to a famous passage for himself. Under both these systems, scenes of prime necessity to the story have to be sacrificed because something must go.

H. M. MACMULLAN

A certain temerity is necessary for a person who, at this late date, hazards any remarks on the most widely reviewed, most ecstatically praised novel of the month, The Closed Garden, by the American-French, Mr. Julian Green. Yet, perhaps due to a natural reaction in myself from such untempered applause, perhaps because of an inherent distrust of the value of the psychological novel as compared with the ethical or aesthetic story, I, at least, feel that there is a decided need for a less rhapsodic, more calm view of the book. The story, or rather analysis, concerns itself with a young girl, Adrienne Mesurat, who through loneliness and misunderstanding murders her father, falls in love with a man who knows her not, and, being absorbed by a melancholia, becomes insane. The action, save for a day's trip to a neighbouring village, takes place in the small provincial town, La Tour l'Évêque; the characters, including two hotel mistresses, number twelve. From such a restricted field, a most minute and rich study should result, a book in which characters may be so thoroughly portrayed, that the reader should come to a more full realization of a significance in life, some knowledge of the problem of the individual, should perceive some hint of the way in which the author has sought to show, what of beauty, of good, of any of the common ideals or emotions, is embodied in his characters or situations. Yet Mr. Julian Green offers no such hint, he has presented nothing which could have important significance save to the warden of the insane asylum who might wish to know the past history of Adrienne when he took her in charge. He has localized his story, he has reduced to an absurdity the small town material, for Adrienne is a specialized character, her appeal to our sensibilities is unimportant, for we will never be called upon to know or to give aid to a person in a like predicament. His only message is the story of a frustrate life, of a life wrecked by the misunderstanding of people, and, above all, by her own incapacities for action. Yet even that much of an explanation for life, and that some explanation is needed to raise a book from "hammock reading" to a work of art seems to me evident, is not extremely valid through the extreme particularization of the subject matter, and through a presentation, uninterpreted by the author. It is a common vice of the psychological novel, this inability to bring wealth of character, wealth of experience, and an interpretation frankly offered by the author for its bearing on the general problems of life.

Brookes Atkinson remarks that, although his characters are few, and his play nine acts, O'Neill fails in Strange Interlude through too much interest in the wanderings of their thoughts, to develop his characters completely; he has sacrificed his opportunity to show how they act in relationship to the whole world, how they have become popular, how wealthy. The same is true of The Closed Garden. The very choice of his subject limits Green considerably,—Adrienne knows so few people, and those she does are not clear, are no more than subjects to inspire her mind to further wanderings; still even within that limitation he fails to develop his heroine. You know everything she thinks, but usually what acts she performs, save to dust and to lie down, are so greatly subordinated, that they pass unnoticed. The falsity in presenting a character so completely through her thoughts, is two-fold. You suspect the author, although the method contains no explanation from him in his own part, of showing her to you only as he views her; her thoughts frequently are too good to be true. And then no detail, important or unimportant is left to the reader on which to make his own estimate, to enrich it with his imagination, to take it into himself, to give it value and significance for himself. Too rarely, does one find those incidents in which by one movement does Adrienne come to be real. The finest, it seems to me, happens when she is being pursued by a young man on the street—

"She turned on her heel, her back to the wall and spoke breathlessly.

"Go away."

"What are you afraid of," he asked.

Adrienne clenched her hand on the handle of her umbrella."

It is the gesture of clutching the umbrella, unmentioned on by the author, unspoiled by any intrusion on his part of what she thought, which takes on significance as it seems more and more the act of an inhibited old-maid, so unused to the ways of the world that her first instinct is the use of her umbrella on this being so much stronger than she. And that is just one of the possible explanations; it is this lee-way given by the author to the reader to make such theories that creates a value in a book that gives it wealth of meaning. Green has used to advantage neither this method, the suggestive detail, or that technique which allows him comment on his own.

Then, too, the subject matter lacks vitality. Ophelia's madness becomes interesting as it is the result of Hamlet's character; there is no abnormality in Ophelia herself which, as in the case of Adrienne, drives her irrevocably toward her doom. Ophelia has general meaning, we can see situations around us, with madness as a possible solution; in which influence of character on character causes the necessary changes. Adrienne's madness is not the product of the influence of her father, her sister, or the man she loves; it is her own fate—naturalistically predestined, if you will. But we know no Adriennes, or, if we do, their problems have no great meaning for us. Ophelia inspires pity and terror; we feel for her, because to some extent we can put ourselves in her place, realizing the effect on our minds of Polonius' death, of Hamlet's desertion. But those who can put themselves in Adrienne's position must be few and far between—we can but observe her actions as fashioned and motivated by the author; she moves and does not have her being; we watch her, as, dispassionately, we watch an ant working, curious, perhaps, to see what will happen, but with no compelling interest born from an identification of her—and the ant's—problems with our own.

Then, too, Mr. Green's very method of telling the story of Adrienne's madness, is uninteresting, unemotional. The Closed Garden has been compared to Wuthering Heights, and yet the difference, and a wide and deep difference it is, between the two, is shown in the difference in the treatment of Cathy's and Adrienne's madness. Catherine flings herself on her bed, and takes the feathers from her pillows and sorts them into types. "That's a turkey's," she murmured to herself; "and this is a pigeon's. Ah, they put pigeon feathers in the pillows—no wonder I couldn't die! Let me take care to throw it on the floor when I lie down." Whereas Adrienne walking in the street sees a woman whom she does not know and calls after her:—"Off with you," cried the madwoman. "You're afraid, too, are you! Yes, you may well run! . . . She may well run," she added, speaking to herself, when the old woman had disappeared. "They'd better not upset me today. I've had enough of all these dirty sluts." Suddenly a torrent of the grossest insults poured from her mouth." In comparison, Emily Bronte inspires one with pity, which Green does not, and the fear of babbling insanity lies deeper, certainly, than the disgust aroused by a coarse and violent flow of invective; at which Mr. Green, with an embarrassment which did not strike Shakespeare, takes the words from her mouth and describes them. And, surely, the fennel and rue scene of Ophelia is more moving, comes closer to arousing a response in the listener, than the smutty song sung before. The writer, though, who is in revolt against Victorian sweetness, cannot be bothered to remember that, since people prefer generally to be decent, the use of filth, for its own sake, is liable to arouse disgust before it creates the true emotional attitude in which an incident clothes itself with meaning. That may be one explanation for the quality in Cathy's madness which makes it far more reaching than Adrienne's. Although Mr. Green's novel shows a sensitive mind and a good style, he cannot avoid the charge that his material is unimportant, that it is distorted, that his character development is not good, and that, like O'Neill in The Rope, Strange Interlude, etc., he has made the mistake of believing great abnormality to be worthy of literary treatment for its own sake, and that generally speaking, the world is nothing but a large insane asylum. As to whether he is right, depends on the individual reader. Personally, I think not.

'Insurancide'

PARK AVENUE. By Willis Vernon-Cole. New York. (The Writers Guild of America.) $2.00.

J. F. M.

If Mr. Vernon-Cole had been writing a scenario, we might simply say that his first attempt to present a story of modern life is conventional and let it go at that. Unfortunately for him, however, we are accustomed to expect rather more from a novelist in the way of originality. He has had some success as a writer of historic novels, and if this is a fair sample of his ability as an author of mystery thrillers, he will probably find more readers, and certainly make the task of the reviewer more pleasant, by returning to stories for which history has provided a background and—to some extent—a plot.

As is indicated by the title the setting is in Park Avenue, but even the attempt to create the illusion of life in the world of fashion fails to ring true. If the reader is able to persist in an effort to read the book he will discover that the plot is built upon a wonderfully new and original idea. A murder is committed upon the opening pages and the district attorney must discover and convict the culprit in order to be elected governor. Of course there is the inevitable debutante who is included as a complement to the happy ending that the author plans so carefully for the struggling young district attorney.

Even the denouement—startling as it is intended to be—is reminiscent of a situation that has been used before. Hiram Gore, the murdered man, appears at the concluding trial scene and announces that he has been fooling everyone in order to uncover the operations of a gang of murderers whom he calls the Insurancides. Perhaps it is to remind us even more strongly of Arnold Bennett's Buried Alive that Mr. Vernon-Cole has this character say that one of his most trying problems has been "to prevent the learned societies of the world from erecting monuments to a confrere who has not passed through the portal of death where posthumous honors are becoming."

We shall not consider our own time thrown away if our warning is sufficient to prevent others from wasting time on this book.

Stylized Lovers

DEAD LOVERS ARE FAITHFUL LOVERS. By Frances Newman. New York. (Boni and Liveright). $2.50.

In "Dead Lovers Are Faithful Lovers", Frances Newman has written a book of which it has been said that most men will not be able to read it. And that's all right with me. Such women as are able to read it will only do it, my guess is, as a strength test. The tremendous maze of its style and the faintly interesting plot do not make for delighted reading at one sitting. In fact, you feel that you had better read it running around the block, just to make it harder.

But with all this, there exists unmistakably the impression all through the book that the author is keen and possessed of an amazingly clear insight into the feminine mind, like it or not.

The story for the first half is told by Evelyn Page Cunningham, the wife of Charlton Cunningham, who is ever so slightly more engrossed in his work than in his wife. Ten years later, and in the middle of the novel, he falls in love with Isabel Ramsay, through whose consciousness we are told the remainder of the story. Charlton Cunningham very nearly asks his wife for a divorce, but he falls ill with pneumonia before he can quite nerve himself to the point and dies. Evelyn Page Cunningham does not know of his love for Isabel Ramsay, and, —well—dead lovers are quite probably faithful lovers. The transition from the consciousness of Evelyn Page Cunningham to that of Isabel Ramsay is abrupt, and rather poor construction, but then neither construction nor form nor interest nor whatever else you might expect of a novel do not appear to be of intense interest to Miss Newman. She writes with an apparently delighted desire to shock, and she succeeds unless you say "Yeah, louder and funner". And you cannot always.

Old-Time Minstrelsy

GENTLEMEN, BE SEATED. By
Dailey Paskman and Sigmund Spaeth.
New York. (Doubleday, Doran, and Company). $4.00.

J. F. M.

Carrying out his avowed purpose of re-suing the songs and humor of the past from oblivion, Dr. Spaeth has turned his attention to the most characteristic of all American forms of entertainment—the old-time minstrels. The book does not purport to be an academic or technical discussion of the shows themselves, or the negro music. It is intended purely—as was the minstrel itself—to amuse. Our only objection to the treatment of Dr.
Spaeth and Dailey Paskman is that possibly he has not given sufficient attention to the more serious aspect of his subject matter—the influence of the minstrel upon modern trends in music and the drama.

The authors begin, appropriately enough, with an account of the development of the black-face. The credit for being the first to make a national or "race illustration" of the Negro character goes to Thomas D. Rice, known to all his companions of the profession as "Daddy" Rice.
This progenitor of the "end-man" originated the famous Jim Crow song, whose title is still applied to the railroad cars allotted to the colored people in the South.

The idea came to Rice when he happened to overhear an old dandy in Cincinnati sing this ditty:

"Weel about ad turn about ad do jis' so,
Eb'ry time I weel about I jump Jum
Crow."

And from this hint came the song that he made famous. Just before the curtain went up at the first try-out in Pittsburgh, Rice happened to fix his eyes upon the grotesque costume of an old negro who was a regular hanger-on at the theatre. In spite of the man's objection that he had no other clothes, Rice insisted that he needed the costume for his act, and the colored man was forced to wait, shivering, in the alley.

The act featuring the new song was a success, and Rice found it necessary to respond to a number of encores. Meanwhile the negro in the alley was not taking kindly to his continued separation from his clothes, and the act came to an abrupt close when the owner of the costume came in through the stage door and remarked in an audible tone, "Ah wants mah clothes."

The authors call attention to the psychology behind the traditional method of conducting the first part of the programme.
The "Mr. Interlocutor" is the one performer about whom there is no suggestion of a comic make-up. He is immaculately attired in full-dress, and appears usually without the burnt-cork of his fellow performers. His voice is magnificent and he must speak painfully correct English. Of course, all of the jokes are directed towards this luckless individual, and the triumph of the half-wits who engage in the verbal exchanges with the Interlocutor is made doubly funny to the audience by the discomfiture of this obviously intelligent and superior being. We are inclined to agree with the authors that this triumph of the half-wits restores the confidence of the audience, thus contributing to its amusement.

Like "Read 'em and Weep and Weep
Some More, My Lady," this book may be enjoyed for its musical content as well as for the humorous subject matter. The words and music of such songs as The Big Sun-Flower, Root Hog or Die, Wake Neodemus, and many others are included as well as a working model of one of the old-time shows.

Perhaps the authors are a bit over-optimistic for the future of the minstrel when they characterize their book as an advance notice of the permanent life of this form of entertainment rather than as an obituary to minstrelsy. We must grant, however, that their book is entertaining, regardless of what we may believe concerning the future of American entertainment.

Not Too Much Flare

THE TORCHES FLARE. By Stark Young. New York. (Charles Scribner's Sons). $2.50.

Stark Young has gone Hemingway,
but he has not done so very successfully.
His realistic conversations in the resorts of Greenwich Village do not quite ring true—though we must admit that Mr.
Young, as a former dramatic critic, certainly should be familiar with the background that he seeks to create for his novel.

The story is a rather unusual variation of the ordinary love triangle. Two writers, Henry Boardman and Arthur Lane, share an affection for Eleanor Dandridge, a young actress. The element that is out of the ordinary is his conclusion to the situation. The love affair merely dissolves and the three principals drift apart in pursuit of their respective careers.
Despite the element of surprise, that is always pleasant, we must say that the solution is rather disappointing.

As we might reasonably expect, the passages dealing with the stage are good as are his descriptions of the people of the stage. For example: "This part was played by Agnes Williams, an actress of fifty-five or more. . . . I had heard much about her. She painted the town red by night and dozed by day. . . . She dressed so recklessly that her friends used to take her out and make her buy a frock now and then, and one day some of them had taken her out to a phenomenal sale and bought her ten hats at twenty-five cents apiece."

Blondes and Brunettes

BUT GENTLEMEN MARRY BRU-NETTES. By Anita Loos. New York.
(Boni and Liveright). $2.00.

So Lorelei married Henry, and very soon it was time for her to be knitting small socks. She moves to New York and changed the interior of her home to Old Italian. She is really more pleased than otherwise with her child as it looks like Daddy and "a kid that looks like any rich father is as good as money in the bank."
And there's the first of "But Gentlemen Marry Brunettes", written by Anita Loos, the author of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes", as you could almost guess. After this brief chronicle of Lorelei's affairs, the book is given over to the story of Dorothy, Lorelei's brunette companion who accompanied her to Paris in the first book and supplied so much of the background of Anita Loos' sly and crackling humor.
Dorothy's whole story is told in the fast, breezy manner of the first book. We learn how she joined the Follies, became engaged to the rich Charlie Breene, married Lester the saxophone player, and when Lester fell out of a window, (not entirely from desire) received $500 a month from the wealthy Breene family, and married Charlie, disinherited now and inclined to order her around.

The success of books like "Gentlemen
Prefer Blondes" and "But Gentlemen Marry Brunettes" is rather like that of the cross-word puzzle books or the "ask me another" series. It is impossible to say whether or not they will have a large success. The sly, biting humor is of a sort for which you could not with assurance predict success. It is not literary high-hatishness, I think, to say that it might be expected to be ever so slightly over the heads of the people who can push a book into a two-figured edition. It is not snobbishness, because "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" went into an astonishing number of editions, and is as much a part of the general bookshelf as "Main Street" or "So Big". It is to be hoped that the success of "But Gentlemen Marry Brunettes" will be as large, for the humor is the same, smart, sparkling, and not on the whole "wise-cracky", though there are places where it tends that way where the former book did not. The clear understanding of Lorelei and Dorothy, gold-diggers par excellence, is a real delight.

Sesquicentennial Record

J. K. CLOSE

In commemoration of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of Phillips Academy, the Sesquicentennial Record was published, with the purpose of presenting "not only a group of stories, poems, letters, and drawings about Andover, but also special articles characteristic of the work of Andover alumni in various fields." A casual glance through its pages shows how well the editors have borne out their intentions, for the index contains such titles as "Andover in Indian Times", "American Art Today and Tomorrow", "Canada Our Neighbor", "Andover in the Diplomatic Service"; and such names as Ring Lardner, Commander Byrd, William Lyon Phelps, and others.

One of the most impressive sections of the book was headed "Words from Our Friends", with congratulatory messages from leading graduates and prominent men throughout the country—William Howard Taft, Oliver Wendell Holmes, Herbert Hoover, Clarence A. Barbour are but a few of an imposing list of men. On behalf of the College, President Garfield sent the following message, "Williams College sends greetings to Phillips Academy, Andover. To have completed one hundred and fifty years of service in the cause of education is noteworthy. To have marked the service by constant devotion to the intellectual and spiritual ideals of the founder is a distinction. Andover is indeed fortunate in her long line of noble principals and distinguished sons. Williams sends congratulations on this auspicious occasion and can extend no better wish than that the bright prospects under her present leadership may be extended for many years to come."

The Record was dedicated to James Coan Sawyer, "for twenty-eight years trustee and treasurer of Phillips Academy, whose interest and friendship have won the love and esteem of hosts of Andover students. Alfred E. Stearns, headmaster of Andover, heads the editorial page with a short but illuminating article on secondary education, which some one has laughingly called "secondary" because it comes first. "To bring home to the public consciousness the more important truth that it comes first in point of importance as well, is a crying need of the time; and it is to the accomplishment of this great task that the trustees of Phillips Academy have set themselves in the belief that the One Hundred and Fiftieth Anniversary of the Founders of the Academy supplies the best kind of a setting and will in turn engender the needed momentum to assure the success of their high and worthy venture." Passing on to the quality of men teaching in preparatory schools, Headmaster Stearns praises the "new foundations for teachers' salaries which ring the death knell for niggardly material returns for a service than which there is no higher", and he goes on to assert that with increasing efforts to attract men of the best type, "anew and refreshing dignity will have been given to the teaching profession in the secondary field. . . . In its deepest sense this is what the anniversary season truly signifies in the life of our historic school."

To review accurately the large number of articles in the magazine is a sheer impossibility in anything under two thousand words. For one who has never realized the objects and traditions of an established secondary school, this book is a rare treasure. Within its pages one can see a living picture of Andover life for the past seventy-five years, illustrated by well-chosen pictures portraying the course of the school's physical development from the old "Latin Commons" to a bird's-eye view of present-day Andover. Ring Lardner vividly describes the socially inclined students as "macaronis" who played mandolins and rode high-wheeled bicycles, while "trousers ran amuck and caused as much reeling, floundering, and falling as does our modern gin." "He Came to Himself" by President Hopkins of Dartmouth treats of education, which can lead a man "through the involved labyrinth of his personality to find those qualities, the recognition of which may bring him to himself. Thus a man can be enabled more nearly to capitalize those qualities of wisdom, industry, goodness, and size which, in varying degrees, attach to the real selves of all of us." "The Old School" by Boyd Edwards, Williams '89, is a short but terse explanation of the broadening effect of Andover.

The various stories also are instructive and would compose an excellent list of contributions to any periodical. Commander Byrd outlines the plans for his trip to the South Pole, and points out the value and reward of scientific exploration. "A Letter from the Labrador Doctor" describes the great achievement of Doctor Grenfell in that country. Montague J. Kendall, late headmaster of Winchester College, Andover's English sister school, contributed an enlightening article on "War Memorials", which should "represent the society to which they belong". In conclusion, he writes, "I know no truer and finer Memorial than the White Campaign of Andover, which often rises before my eyes, towering among its elms and ringing music born in Belgium across your great Campus." Senator Hiram Bingham, Andover '94, describes the development of aviation and the government Air Mail with its pilots "mastering nature's moods" and pursuing their invisible courses day and night. Other articles on foreign relations, the World War, and many diverse subjects promise a worth while and varied hour to any reader.

When summing up the success of the editors in following out their ideals, even the most biased authority would admit that Andover and its activities are accurately pictured. The greater purpose—the Commemoration of an epoch-making event in the United States—is also brought to the fore; so that one can realize that Andover has an achievement, of which she can be justly proud. Facing a difficult task, the editors of the Sesquicentennial Record have fittingly celebrated, in literary form, the birthday of America's oldest "prep school".

Soldier of Antichrist

throats. He harnessed this whirlwind and directed it away from the Gobi Desert to the Kingdom of Prester John, Golden Cathay, and later to the West as far as India, even Europe. The whirlwind always of necessity at war became adept at war, new desolations brought new engines; Cathay yielded twenty horse chariots, stone casters, crossbows, gigantic catapults the use of naphtha, the fire that could be exploded in bamboo tubes. The horde became a disciplined, hardened machine. Declarations of war took the form of invitations. Genghis Khan found that destruction was the simplest way of lightening human impediments; returning from Cathay he slew all the captives with him. His interest in a foreign land existed only in its military conquests. Conquest was a matter of long determination and plan. The Day was anticipated with an army of spies, a screen of vanguard scouts followed by the Mangudoi or suicide squad, which was "God-belonging" and pre-doomed, next heavy shock cavalry with flanking lighter squadrons. When the city was taken, men, women, and children were separated into three masses and forced to lie down, their arms across their backs. "All this unhappy people was then divided among the Mongol warriors who strangled and slashed them to death." This substitute machine gun was used when it was found that at one place some people had saved themselves by lying down among piles of lifeless bodies. Every ingenious trick was used in order to track down human life. In one place a captured muezzin was ordered to cry the summons to prayer from a minaret. The Scourge of God was a shrewd pestilence; in order to connect his great armies across vast distances he established roads with more than 10,000 posts and 300,000 horses over which messengers could travel 200 miles in a day. When the horde was not at war it substituted animals for human prey. The campaign of hunting was as serious as war. A front of about one hundred miles would be chosen over which the army spread in a half circle. Month by month the circle would move forward, the lines becoming closer, the animals more enraged. It was considered a disgrace to use arms. No four-footed thing was allowed to escape through the tense line. "Matters went a little harder in the night. After the first month of the hunt, great numbers of animals were massing ahead of the half-circle of humans. The warriors went into camp, lighted fires, posted sentries. There was even the usual password. Officers went the rounds. All the four-footed life of the mountains was astir in front of them—eyes gleaming from the ground, the howling of wolves and the spitting snarl of leopards breaking through the silence." It was harder a month later with the circle ahead an arena of driven beasts—no relaxation when a tusked boar or herd turned and rushed the warriors or when a bear had to be driven out from a cave. It was all good practice for live game.

What price conquest? It was true that the horde once organized must continue fighting for existence alone. It was impossible for the rude nomads to adapt themselves to the life of Cathay. Yet the organizer of the horde might well have retired after a single looting fray and lived happily ever after. Genghis Khan could not. For him life was a perpetual hunt to be enjoyed until the last breathing two-legged animal was either dead or joined to his command. But his interest in a foreign land ceased immediately after its conquest. Never did he change the habits and dress of the Gobi for the luxury of Islam. His single excuse might have been that his sons would live to desire his lands and cities. Once he asked a wise man of the West "Dost thou think that the blood I have shed will be remembered against me by mankind? I see now I have slain without knowledge of what to do rightly. But what care I for such men?" The Khan had shattered civilization and substituted brutish nomad clans for long cultural tradition. After his death the whole world must begin anew. The Mongols fittingly were no less than a harvesting punishment of God visited upon a sinning world. The immensity of their devastation made them feared supernaturally, held them revered as a myth. It is for other people to build a civilization, for his part destruction; he was a meteor that might terrify the earth and Hell and Elysium swarmed with ghosts of men that he had sent from sundry foughten fields.

If all history were written so enchantingly even the life of such a murderer as Genghis Khan might have its purpose. Truth makes strange fiction and it is only when one turns to the last fifty pages of Afterwords and Bibliography that it is clear that the imagination is strengthened by fact. Yet the word Bibliography must not frighten. This is an example of Harold Lamb's poetry. "Cathay was like an aged woman, sunk in meditation; clad perhaps in too elaborate garments, surrounded by many children, little heeded. The hours of its rising and sleeping were all ordained; it went forth in chariots, attended by servants, and prayed to the tablets of the dead."

"Its garments were of floss silk, many colored—though the slaves might run barefoot and cotton clad. Over the heads of its high officials umbrellas were carried. Inside the entrances of its dwelling, screens served to keep out wandering devils. It bowed the head to ritual, and studied law to make its conduct perfect."

One would like to know more about Genghis Khan and what kind of man he was, but the Gobi desert lacked chroniclers and the only biographers were his enemies.

She Stoops to Conquer

J. H. ROBERTS

Most American producers apparently put on their plays with the Wordsworthian simile in mind:

Fair as a star, when only one
Is shining in the sky.

But Mr. George C. Tyler is more prodigal. Believing in what the Broadway critics love to call galaxies, he periodically collects a group of theatrical celebrities, some of whom toward the end of the season are no doubt thankful for a job even at the price of barn-storming, revives a play out of the school text books, and serves Art and the Commercial Stage at one and the same time. The first of his ventures this year was Goldsmith's She Stoops to Conquer, presented at Pittsfield early in the month.

Today it is difficult to realize, even with the help of Garriek's admirable Prologue, that Goldsmith in this play was consciously revolting against the over-sweetness of Eighteenth Century Sentimental Comedy. We are likely to miss the satire in the speeches of the "shabby fellows" at The Three Pigeons and in Young Marlow's embarrassed attempts at refinement. But the comic element still remains so bright and hilarious that we can agree with Dr. Johnson when he remarked to the author that She Stoops to Conquer served "the great end of comedy—making an audience merry". Even a certain stiffness in construction and an artificiality in situation, which in a playwright of our own day would be severely condemned, only add to our amusement.

And certainly it was a relief after countless amateur productions to see the old comedy profit by professional acting. From the moment Pauline Lord began to speak the Prologue there was hardly a flaw in the performance. What if one found Patricia Collinge a little wooden in the role of Miss Neville or Fay Bainter a little strident as Kate Hardcastle? These were minor matters. There was the grand manner of Mrs. Leslie Carter playing Mrs. Hardcastle, the provincial solidity of Lyn Harding as the country squire, the loquaciousness of O. P. Heggie as Diggory. But perhaps the hit of the evening was Glenn Hunter's portrayal of Tony Lumpkin. Here was an entirely new Mr. Hunter (except for the Brooklyn accent), who had forsaken, at least for the moment, his moody youth to clown and caper and shout. One felt the true genius of character acting in his prankish scenes with Miss Collinge and his lusty interviews with Mrs. Carter. Under capable direction all these artists combined to make as thoroughly delightful an evening as must have occurred in 1771 when Dr. Johnson sat in a stage box at Covent Garden and led the applause.

Book Notes

The publishing house of E. P. Dutton and Co. has its own Book-of-the-Month Club which has selected for its May book The Friend of Antaeus by Gerard Hopkins. The first book of the month selected by the Duttons was Reeds and Mud by Blasco Ibanez.

Charles Scribner's will publish in the Fall the autobiography of Benito Mussolini. As well as dwelling at length upon the details of his own life from his birth in the ancient town of Varano da Costa to his present position as dictator of the Italian nation, he describes the rise of Fascism and its early battles with communism. Perhaps the most interesting part of the work is the section on which Mussolini gives his personal opinion of the statesmen of Europe.

The Parables of Jesus by George A. Butterick published by Doubleday, Doran and Company has been selected by the Religious Book of the Month Club as its book for May. Dr. Butterick was formerly pastor of the Old First Church of Buffalo, and is at present pastor of the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church of New York City.

'CAP AND BELLS' WILL GIVE 'HAMLET' TONIGHT

Tragedy Will Be Produced for Two Successive Nights in Chapin Auditorium

HARRY IRVINE IS DIRECTOR

Stark Young, Well-Known Author, Praises Plan To Use 'Com-media' Style

Following its custom of producing one of the plays of Shakespeare each spring, Cap and Bells will present the Tragedy of Hamlet in the Chapin Hall Auditorium tonight and Wednesday night at 8.30 o'clock. An innovation in the production of Shakespearean drama is being tried by Mr. Harry Irvine, actor and dramatic critic, who is again directing the organization's spring production, as the tragedy will not be presented in the usual Elizabethan manner, but in the style of the Italian Commedia dell'Arte, with the character Hamlet dressed as Pierrot.

Concerning the decision to use the Commedia method, Stark Young, one of America's leading dramatic critics and authors, wrote to Washburn '28, president of Cap and Bells, a letter which is here reproduced in part: "Thank you very much for sending me the clipping and for writing me with regard to your production. It sounds very engaging indeed and I think there are many arguments in its favor." Mr. Young has written several books in which he advocates the Italian method of producing Shakespeare, among them The Theatre and his new novel, The Torch and Flame.

Mr. Irvine, who will be remembered as largely responsible for the success of the Cap and Bells production of Othello a year ago, is an actor of many years' experience in both England and America. In London he has served under the banner of such masters of the drama as Sir Herbert Tree and Sir Charles Wyndham. An engagement with the original London production of The Miracle with the famous Professor Max Reinhardt gave him an exceptional education in the art of pantomime and gesture. Coming to America with Sir Johnson Forbes-Robertson in his farewell tour with Hamlet, he remained to appear in New York under Edgar Selwyn, William Faversham, and many other managements. Finally he allied himself with Walter Hampden with whom he remained for nearly four years as second man and director. At present he is appearing as a lecture-platform exponent of poetry, and as a director of plays and pageants. During the summer Mr. Irvine, assisted by Mrs. Irvine, conducts a summer school of acting and all branches of dramatic training at Boothbay Harbor, Maine.

A series of three articles written by Mr. Irvine, the final one of them in this issue, has appeared in The Record, explaining the plans for tonight's production and justifying the decision to do Hamlet in the style of the Italian Commedia. He outlines his policy as follows: "As far as in us (Continued on Third Page)

GARGOYLES TO TAP JUNIOR DELEGATION

Traditional Rites To Be Repeated on Lab Campus Just as for Past 33 Years

Austere and formal tapping will once again announce to the world the elections to Gargoyle when that organization escorts its thirty-fifth delegation from the Lab fence after the Amherst baseball game tomorrow afternoon. Since its foundation in 1895 the senior honorary society has steadily accumulated a prestige through its work for the improvement of campus politics and interfraternity relations which has now become a firmly established tradition, so that the Memorial Day election is perhaps the highest honor Williams can confer.

The first formal announcement of the birth of Gargoyle was the following statement published by the secretary of the original group in the Williams Weekly of May 30, 1895: "A number of men in the senior class, realizing the need of reform in many things here at Williams, and desiring that a more manly, unselfish, and wholesome spirit should pervade the college, have formed a non-secret organization called Gargoyle. The object of this organization shall be to discuss college matters, and to take active steps for the advancement of Williams in every branch of college life and work, and to exert its (Continued on Seventh Page)

FRESHMEN TO OPPOSE TWO AMHERST TEAMS

1931 Baseball Game Will Be Played at Home; Track Meet Is at Amherst

Strengthened by their 5-3 defeat of Deerfield Academy last Saturday, the Williams Freshman baseball team will play their only game with a "Little Three" rival when they face the Amherst Cubs on Cole Field Wednesday at 10.30 a. m. At the same time the Williams 1931 track team will meet the Sabrina runners at Amherst in a contest which will either give Williams equal claims to the "Little Three" Freshman championship with Wesleyan or give the Lord Jeffs second place.

The Amherst and Williams baseball teams have both played Deerfield, the former losing to the schoolboys 4-3 last Wednesday. In Groskloss the Amherst frosh have an excellent left-handed pitcher, who is also their star hitter. The Purple ball team, with no individual star, has improved throughout the season, correcting first a batting slump and then a fielding weakness. The probable batting line-up for the Williams freshmen is as follows: 3b., Thomas; s.s., Wallace (Capt.); c.f., Schwartz; p. or c.f., Laugmaid; 1b., Grosvenor; 2b., Ripa or Fox; p. or c.f., Lonsdale or Clark; 1b., McGlynn or Leber; c., Bowden or Schlosser.

In track Amherst does not appear to have too strong a team, having been defeated last Saturday by a 70-38 score. Their best events are the 440-yard and mile-runs, but in the field events they made a total of only 10 points against Wesleyan. Captain Dougherty of Williams is counted on to win both the hurdles, while Truman is a strong entry in the half-mile. If Davidson is able to enter the meet he has a good chance to win the high jump. In other events the teams appear more evenly matched, and a closely fought contest can be expected.

'Cew' To Appear on May 30

Including a variety of material contributed largely by staff artists and writers, the May issue of the Purple Cow will make its appearance on Memorial Day. The cover design is seasonal, being meant to portray the "Spirit of Spring", and has been drawn by Eisner '29. The feature article describes the method used by Cap and Bells in choosing their spring play. The chief contributors of art work for this issue are Shepler '28, Layman '29, and Baxter '30, while Garth, McGeath, and Pearl '31 have furnished editorial material.

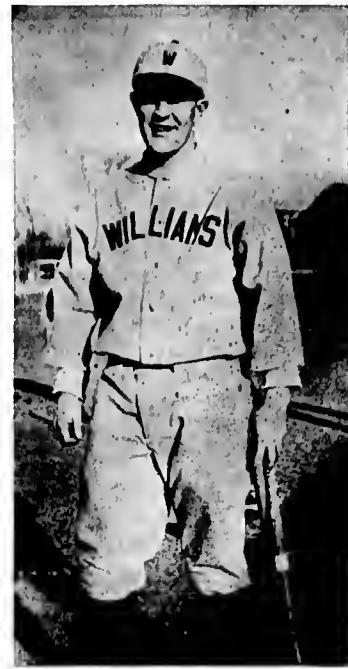

'Purple Key' Elects Officers

Dudley Estabrook Skinner '30, of Bridgeport, Conn., was elected president of the 1930 delegation of the Purple Key society for the coming year, when the newly-chosen members of the Sophomore class of that organization met in Jesup Hall last Friday noon. At the same time Walter Alexander, of Tenafly, N. J., was elected vice-president, Franklin Knibloe Hoyt, of West Newton, secretary, and Henry Pickens Adams, of Indianapolis, Ind., treasurer.

AMHERST WILL MEET PURPLE NINE IN ANNUAL MEMORIAL DAY CONTEST

T. H. SMITH, 1928
Captain of the Williams Nine that Meets Amherst on Weston Field Tomorrow

TENNIS TEAM FACES ITS LAST OPPONENT

Season Ends Memorial Day With Amherst Match—Purple Is Favored To Win

Amherst will be the opponent of the Williams tennis team this afternoon on the Sage Hall courts, when the Purple, with the odds in its favor, will attempt to round out a successful season by retaining the championship of the "Little Three". Amherst has also enjoyed a good season, losing only to Yale and Brown, but the fact that Williams defeated Yale and won the New England Championship, besides completely shutting out the Sabrinas in the match at Amherst last spring, seems to point to a victory for the home team.

Although it has been unable to equal its record of last spring, when it defeated all of its opponents including the members of the "Big Three", the Varsity tennis team has shown strength this season by defeating Yale, Wesleyan, Bowdoin, and Union, while it has dropped matches only to Princeton and Harvard. Wolf and Captain Banks will again play in the first two positions for the Purple, and will form a pair in the doubles. Sewall will be number three, while Chase, who possesses the unusual record of being undefeated in his two years of intercollegiate match play, will oppose Amherst's fourth man. The last two positions in the line-up are being vigorously contested between Adsit, Calvert, J. S. Clark, Denison, McGregor, and Shoaff.

Victors in Earlier Encounter Are Superior as to Quality of Pitching Staff

'TROPHY' HINGES ON OUTCOME

Steady Improvement of Varsity in Past Weeks Promises Tight Game

The Royal Purple of Williams will once again meet the Purple and White of Amherst in a Memorial Day baseball game, when nines representing the two ancient rivals meet at 2.30 p. m. on Weston Field in the 131st game of a traditional series stretching back to 1880, when Williams in the opening contest forced the Sabrinas to accept a 10-4 defeat. The encounter on Wednesday will be the deciding factor in the race for the "Trophy of Trophies", for with its loss will go all chance of even tying the present lead of Amherst in the "Trophy" race. Williams' recent victory over M. A. C. and the creditable showing made in the games with Yale and Tufts point to a fiercely contested battle which will probably result in a pitcher's duel.

From pre-game indications Amherst, with Nichols or Pratt pitching, seem to have things a shade better in that department. Nichols, who opposed Captain Smith in the annual battle last year, is very cool under fire and is also a veteran of many close games, while Pratt, although not possessing the assortment of stuff that his teammate has, is known as a good consistent pitcher. Trenchard, who does the receiving for the Purple and White, has a remarkably strong and accurate throw to second base as well as a quick snap to first. He is considered one of the best defenses against stealing in the East by many sport writers. Former captain Walker, a clever all-round player, has been in a short hitting slump and has not maintained his high average of last year, but should he regain his eye the Williams outfielders will see plenty of action.

Dean, who holds down the "hot corner" has played with the Sabrinas for three seasons and is not only a pastmaster of strategy, but is a strong hitter and brilliant fielder. Pithie, regular shortstop, received a knee injury along with Dean in the New Hampshire game and may not play in the game. He has played for two seasons and is a heady performer. Captain W. Parker and L. Parker, who play center and left field respectively, are both players of excellent standing. L. Parker is considered the stronger of the two in the hitting department, but both men are dangerous batters and brilliant fielders. Goodwin, right fielder, bats in the cleanup position and is a tower of strength in the field. On the basis of scores Amherst would seem to have an advantage, especially since their 8-2 victory over the Varsity, but those who have seen the Pur-

Mr. Harry Irvine Outlines the Acting Version of 'Hamlet' That Will Be Used in 'Cap and Bells' Play

Almost all of the plays of Shakespeare as we possess them offer a problem to the modern director in their length. In the case of "Hamlet" the Quarto of 1604 was "enlarged to almost as much again as it was"; and by the time we have collated that with the Folio of 1623, which contains passages not to be found in the Quarto, we are confronted with a complete play of a length entirely too great for modern tastes. To reduce this play to modern time limits, we must cut nearly one-third of the whole.

What passages are to be sacrificed? The literary editor would keep in all the passages of surpassing literary merit, sacrificing much of which he does not even see the dramatic significance. The star-actor editor will keep in all the "fat" of the star part of Hamlet, though to do so he must also keep in passages of slight dramatic value, because they lead up to a famous passage for himself. Under both these systems, scenes of prime necessity to the story have to be sacrificed because something must go.

We have endeavored to keep in all scenes that have a direct bearing on the plot; to do so we have sacrificed some very famous passages which have no direct dramatic bearing on the story, and in many cases only a slight psychological bearing on the character of Hamlet. It may be of interest to indicate the chief "cuts" and our reasons for making them.

Act I, Scene 1, establishes the objective appearance of the Ghost; we cut the local politics of Fortinbras and his ambitions.

Act I, Scene 2, establishes the relations between Hamlet and Claudius (again cutting the local politics of Voltimand and Cornelius) and brings the news of the Ghost to Hamlet. For scenic reasons we go straight on to the first sight of the Ghost by Hamlet. (Act I, Scene 4) On the exit of the Ghost, to prevent an immediate return to the same spot, we go back to Act I, Scene 3, introducing Laertes, Ophelia, and Polonius; and setting forth the relationship between Hamlet and Ophelia as it appears to others.

Act I, Scene 5, gives the revelation of the Ghost to Hamlet, and Hamlet's resolution to avenge his father's death and to feign madness in order to mask his designs.

Here we take our first interval.

Act II, Scene 1, brings the news of Hamlet's madness through Ophelia; we cut (Continued on Ninth Page)

Professor Cleland Discusses Prehistoric Man's Contribution to Modern Civilization in New Book

PROF. H. F. CLELAND of the Geology Department, Whose New Book on Prehistoric Man Appears Soon

Describing, in the words of its preface, "the events in man's prehistory which have been of greatest significance in his progress toward civilization", Our Prehistoric Ancestors, written by Professor Herdman F. Cleland of the Geology Department, will make its appearance in June. The book is the result of several years of extensive research by its author, who recently spent his sabbatical year in Europe studying the archaeological collections in the great museums of that Continent.

The author first discusses in his book the physical character of man's prehistoric ancestors of the Old and New Stone Age, and the cultures they developed, the remarkable cave art of the men of the Old Stone Age, their customs and their religion. Considerable stress is laid on the Neolithic or New Stone Age, because in it man invented the fundamentals on which civilization is based. The importance of the discovery of metals, which led first to the use of copper and later to that of bronze, is discussed in some detail.

The influence of the use of bronze, amber, and gold, in the development of trade and the spread of the Mediterranean (Continued on Seventh Page)

LACROSSE TEAM TO OPPOSE SPRINGFIELD

Close Struggle Is Predicted for Memorial Day Contest on Weston Field

Expecting as stiff opposition as was encountered last year, the Williams lacrosse team will meet the Springfield College stickmen on Wednesday, May 30, at 11 a. m. This is the second of two lacrosse games scheduled between the Purple and Springfield, the first, which was to usher in the season, having been cancelled on account of rain and, according to present arrangements, the contest will take place on Weston instead of Cole Field.

Although very little is known of the Springfield team, it is worthy of mention that Harvard, which nosed the Purple out, 5-4, last Saturday, conquered the Springfield twelve by a 6-3 score. Springfield has also suffered defeat at the hands of Colgate and Syracuse, but was able to conquer Brown, 3-2. As Harvard also beat Brown this indicates a fairly even match in Wednesday's contest.

When interviewed by a RECORD reporter, Coach Bellerose would not make any predictions, but remarked that if the twelve played as good a game as they did against Harvard last Saturday the outlook would be bright. He expects to start the same combination which took the field against the Crimson. The tentative line-ups are as follows:

WILLIAMS—Senecal, g.; Collins, p.; Dunning, c.p.; Ashby, 1d.; Arndt, 2d.; Wulff, 3d.; Thurston, c.; Jacobs, 3a.; Reiff, 2a.; Dunn, 1a.; Brown, o.h.; Hubbard, i.h.

SPRINGFIELD—Lang, g.; King, p.; Clogston, c.p.; Potter, 1d.; Outten, 2d.; Bohn, 3d.; Whiting, c.; Miller (Capt.), 3a.; Randall, 2a.; Ready, 1a.; Large, o.h.; Jonah, i.h.

'Ave atque Vale'

All undergraduates are requested to attend the final morning chapel service on June 6, as it is the last assembly of the Senior class with the rest of the College. After the customary services, the men will gather outside by classes and give their final salutations to the graduating class.

'Rousseau's Great Influence Was Largely Due to Stylistic Skill, Not Novelty of Ideas,' Says Buehler

Demonstration of the full extent to which Jean Jacques Rousseau influenced the literary, educational, and political atmosphere of eighteenth century England is the task which Assistant Professor R. G. Buehler has set before himself for the coming year, which he will spend on leave of absence at Harvard engaged in research for the thesis which will complete his work for the Doctor's degree. Previous to resuming his studies at Harvard, where he fulfilled the residence work requirements in 1921-23, Professor Buehler will spend some time in investigations in the British Museum and the Cambridge University library during the summer.

ASST. PROF. R. G. BUEHLER of the English Department Who Will Spend Next Year Doing Research Work

"The extent of Rousseau's influence in all three fields of English thought is well known," Professor Buehler told a RECORD reporter. "The difficulty lies in the accurate tracing of the evidences of his ideas, especially in view of the fact that Rousseau himself owes so much to earlier English writers, such as Locke and Richardson. Rousseau visited England, as did Voltaire, one might say under the auspices of Hume.

Victory on the Links Is Trophy Meet Prediction

One point on the Trophy of Trophies seems to be assured to the Purple when the Williams golfers meet over the Springfield Country Club course on Memorial Day almost the same line-up of Amherst players which was unable to secure a single match a year ago. Since Amherst has put only a four-man team in the field this year, it is probable that the Williams team will be cut to Blaney, Williams, Heller, and Smith, who will meet Lawson, Meek, Burnett, and Miller for the Sabrinas.

Immune from graduation losses, Amherst started the season with a veteran team and dropped only two points in her first three matches with Boston College, Worcester Polytechnical Institute, and Tufts. Though the decisive scores gave promise, the victories themselves were not such as to threaten a team with a record behind it like that of Williams this season. An automobile accident resulting in the death of Mahoney and the injury of Cohn, who played in third and fourth places respectively, has since disorganized the team and will unfortunately make it unable to show its original strength in the Memorial Day encounter.

Frosh Tennis to Begin Against Amherst Today

Williams and Amherst will add another item to their already imposing list of athletic rivalries tomorrow when the freshman tennis teams of the two colleges will meet for the first time. While the Sabrinn Varsity is journeying Williamsward to meet the Varsity on the Sage Hall courts, the Purple freshmen will travel the other way and encounter the enemy on foreign soil.

The yearling sextet is the outgrowth of the various tournaments that are sponsored in Physical Training. A win over Hoosac and a loss to Williston are the results to date. Amherst has indulged in a rather successful season, having defeated, among others, Loomis, present interscholastic champions. It is, according to the Lawn Tennis Magazine, stronger than the Purple and White varsity.

FIVE TROPHY POINTS AT STAKE TOMORROW

Clean Sweep in All Events Needed To Prevent Amherst Tying a Second Time

Five points in the "Trophy of Trophies" score will be at stake tomorrow when the Purple will encounter the Sabrinas on the diamond, the tennis courts and the golf links. Williams must win all events to win the "Trophy", while a defeat in golf would create a tie score, for the second time in history, Amherst having never yet won the competition.

The original "Trophy", given in 1920 by Henry Rust Johnston, Williams 1909, became the permanent possession of the Purple by the terms of the contest in 1924, after five Williams victories in succession. The present one, also given by Mr. Johnston, will become the property of the first college to win it ten times. It is a large bronze plaque, and is at present hanging in the reading room in Jesup Hall. In 1925, the first year it was in competition, the score was a tie and the plaque divided the year between Amherst and Williams-town. In 1926 and 1927, however, it was won by Williams, by scores of 14-11 and 13½-10½ respectively.

As the score now stands at 8½-11½ in favor of Amherst, it will be necessary for the Purple to make a clean sweep in today's contests to prevent the "Trophy" from spending at least a part of next year across the Berkshires. The baseball game and the tennis match each count two points toward the final score, while the golf match will contribute another point to the final standing. A defeat in either the baseball game or the tennis match would mean a Sabrina victory by a score of 13½-11½, as Amherst needs only 1½ points to clinch the race, but a Lord Jeff victory in golf would tie the score again.

Amherst has amassed her 11½ points by virtue of her victories in football, soccer, and debating, in addition to winning one game apiece in hockey, basketball, and baseball. The Purple's 8½ points were scored by winning the swimming and track meets, as well as taking one hockey and one basketball contest. The present standing in the race together with the points allotted to each event is as follows:

Event	Williams	Amherst
Football (4)	0	4
Soccer (2)	0	2
Basketball (3)	1½	1½
Hockey (2)	1	1
Swimming (2)	2	0
Debating (1)	0	1
Track (4)	4	0
Baseball (4)	?	2
Tennis (2)	?	?
Golf (1)	?	?
Total to date	8½	11½

Deerfield Succumbs to Frosh Nine After Rally

After trailing by three runs for six innings, the Freshman baseball team sandwiched passed balls, errors, and three hits off Leighton in the "lucky seventh" for four runs to lead the Deerfield Academy nine the rest of the way and win 5-3 at Deerfield last Saturday afternoon. Replacing Langmaid on the mound for the yearlings, Lonsdale pitched shut-out ball during the last four innings, while Grosvenor led the Purple hitters with four hits out of five times at bat.

Deerfield scored once in each of the first three innings on hits by Sheehan and Catlin, errors by Thomas and Wallace, and a wild pitch by Langmaid. Thereafter the yearlings settled down and effectively checked all further scoring threats. Catlin held the Purple scoreless for six innings and was responsible for one of Deerfield's points by his double in the second, but, for some obscure reason, was withdrawn in the seventh in favor of Leighton, who had turned the Amherst freshmen to defeat in a previous game.

For the second time this season the yearlings won by a seventh inning rally. Thomas opened festivities with a clean single to right, Wallace following with a walk, and the former scored on Schwartz's single through short. An error by Sheehan allowed Langmaid to reach first and Wallace to cross the plate for another counter. Langmaid then stole second, and he and Schwartz both scored on Grosvenor's single, but here activities ceased when Ripa and Fox were thrown out in order. Williams' last tally came in the ninth, when, with two out, Langmaid reached second by a walk and steal, and came in while Sheehan was busy juggling Grosvenor's hit.

"Hail! Hail! The Gang's All Here!"

WHETHER it is a baseball game or an exam knocked for a loop, there is always some joyous occasion for "Canada Dry." Then whoop her up with a light-fingered jazz-artist on the ukulele and "Hail, Hail! The Gang's All Here!" in close harmony.

"Canada Dry" has a delightful flavor . . . tang to it . . . dryness . . . sparkle. It contains no capsicum (red pepper). And because it contains only pure Jamaica ginger to give it that mild, subtle taste, it blends well with other beverages.

HARVARD OVERCOMES WILLIAMS STICK MEN

Exciting Contest Decided in Extra Period as Crimson Stages
Great Rally

After staging a spirited rally in the last few minutes of the second half which left the score tied at 4 all, necessitating an overtime period, the Harvard lacrosse team finally conquered the Purple twelve by a 5-4 score in their game played on Cole Field last Saturday afternoon. The contest, which was probably the most exciting ever seen here, was a seesaw affair from the start, and the Williams players, even though defeated, gave a very creditable account of themselves against a far more experienced team which was playing its thirteenth contest of the season.

As usual the Williams team was a little slow in getting started, and the Crimson players had everything their own way for the first few minutes of the game, and during this time McQuaid and Wallace succeeded in caging a shot apiece. The Purple twelve then found itself and Thurston scored, after which the play was even for the rest of the half, neither side being able to break through. At half time the score was 2-1 in favor of Harvard.

In the opening minutes of the second half it was the Purple's turn to rejoice as the tally was carried to 4-2 in favor of the home team. This turning of the tables was accomplished by two scores in succession made by Brown, followed by a tally by Christie. Though not expected at the time, the Crimson now staged a magnificent rally, during which they held Williams scoreless, while Dreier and Hatch each contrived to get a shot into the net. The whistle at the end of the second half blew with the score tied at 4-4, thus necessitating a 5-minute overtime period.

During this session Harvard maintained its furious attack, and the Purple was not able to threaten again. Dreier, the Crimson first attack, succeeded in rolling past Senecal and into the net, giving the victory to Harvard. Throughout the contest the Williams twelve gave evidence of great improvement, due principally to the additional experience recently acquired. Brown was again high scorer for the Purple and played a good game while Dreier and McQuaid starred for the visitors.

The summary of the game is as follows:

WILLIAMS (4)		HARVARD (5)
Senecal	g.	Ellison
Collins	p.	Pickard
Deming	c.p.	Hartnett
Ashby	ld.	Park
Arndt	2d.	McSweeney
Wulff	3d.	Mulliken
Thurston (Capt.)	c.	Hatch
Jacobs	3a.	McQuaid
Reiff	2a.	Glenn
Dunn	1a.	Dreier
Brown	o.h.	Wallace
Hubbard	i.h.	Lane (Capt.)

Substitutions: WILLIAMS—Lawder for Arndt, Dunning for Deming, Christie for Jacobs, Scott for Reiff, Deming for Scott, Arndt for Lawder, Reiff for Deming, Deming for Reiff, Andrews for Hubbard, Ballou for Andrews. HARVARD—Murphy for Dreier, Daniels for Glenn, Harper for Mulliken, Saunders for Murphy, Glenn for Daniels, Mulliken for Harper, Murphy for Saunders, Saunders for Dreier, Dreier for Saunders.

Goals—Brown 2, Christie, Thurston; Dreier 2, Hatch, McQuaid, Wallace.

Referee—Bullock (Williams). Time: Two 30-minute halves and one 5-minute overtime period.

Interclass Singing to Follow Amherst Game

In accordance with the usual College custom, the annual Interclass Singing Contest, which was won last year by the class of 1928, will be held tomorrow afternoon on the Jesup Hall steps, immediately following the baseball game with Amherst. Each class in order, commencing with the freshmen, will render one original and one college song in competition for two prizes of five dollars each, awarded by the Williams Musical Club to the composers of the words and music of the winning song.

The freshmen have yet to hold a class vote on the college song that they will render, and Heermance and Merrill '31 have both composed original class songs from which a choice must be made. Yard by Yard will be sung by the Sophomores, followed by a class song by Rogers '30. The Juniors will sing Our Mother and their class song, the music of which is by Elliott '29 and the words the result of a collaboration of talent. 'Neath the Shadow of the Hills has been chosen by the Seniors, and their class song by Banks will conclude the program.

Tennis Team Faces

Its Last Opponent

Amherst has an experienced team which only lost one man, Captain Libson, by graduation last June. In its first match of the season, the Purple and White defeated Springfield College, 6-3, but two weeks later it was only able to take one set from Yale, which was defeated by Williams, 5-4. Worcester Polytechnic Institute was outclassed, 6-0, and Bowdoin, which took two matches from Williams, was shut out without the loss of a set. Brown, with a strong team which has been undefeated for two seasons, took the measure of the Amherst netmen, 6-3, after the teams had broken even in the singles. The Salrina lineup has been different in almost every match so far, but it is probable that most of the following men will see action: Bird, Captain Sears, Wright Bowditch, Freshman, Wyckoff, Richardson, Hadley, Baker, Strycker, and Mason.

The Yale and Bowdoin matches afford the only means of comparison. In the matches at New Haven, Wolf, Sewall, and Chase won from their Eli opponents, who in turn defeated Wright, Bowditch, and Sears respectively of Amherst. Against Bowdoin, the Amherst team made the better showing, defeating all of its opponents including the two who were able to take their matches from Williams. In the match against Amherst last season, Wolf defeated Hadley, Banks defeated Wyckoff, Sewall defeated Richardson, and Chase defeated Sears, while Banks and Sewall overcame the present first doubles team of Freshman and Bird.

lies, the diction will aim at externalizing the thought and meaning of the archaic words; the necessary "cuts" will aim at telling the full dramatic story and not at making Hamlet a "star part"; the dresses and mounting will be modeled on the Italian Commedia dell'Arte. Hamlet will appear in the dress of our good friend Pierrot.

The cast of the production is made up of a group of actors of several years' experience in Williams College dramatic productions, together with a number of freshmen who have not appeared on the stage here before. Hilmer '28, who has the title part, is perhaps the most experienced of those participating, while Reid '28 showed remarkable ability in his impersonation of the Duchess in the production of "Jabberwocky" last Christmas. The leading female roles of the Queen and Ophelia are filled by two freshmen, Heermance and Sessions. Baxter as the King, Gilbert as Laertes, and Robinson as Horatio are among the players who have been for at least two years acting in productions of the Little Theatre and Cap and Bells.

The sets have been designed by J. L. Casaday '29, and are such as to provide a background which will show up the costumes most effectively. Good use will be made of lighting effects. The costumes are by Casaday and Anderson '30, who are assisted by Clapp '30. Mr. C. L. Safford, Director of Music, composed the musical score for the play-within-a-play, and is in charge of all the musical arrangements.

Following is the cast:

What happened when a college graduate looked for a job

"SAY Fred, do you remember Eddie Vincent?"

"Sure. He graduated in '26."

"I saw him the other day."

"What's he doing?"

"He's with Jones and Underwood. Likes his job a lot. He gave me some interesting dope too."

"What was it?"

"About getting a job. He said he went directly to old man Underwood and the old boy, instead of talking about the job, talked politics and baseball and music and the international situation."

"Eccentric old fellow, eh?"

"Well, yes. But smart too. You see, he knew Eddie would be all set to talk about the job and how well he was fitted for it. So Underwood took that part for granted. He figured he could get a better picture of Eddie by talking about something Eddie wasn't prepared on in advance."

"That's interesting. But I guess

Eddie felt right at home talking on general topics. He was usually buried in his Herald Tribune for an hour or so every day."

"Yes—he was. And one of his favorites is the man who wrote this: 'All Jackson had to do was scoop up the ball and toss it to Andrew Reese. But Jackson tried to throw the ball before he had caught it. Thousands of ball players have tried to do this and none of them has ever succeeded. And none ever will.'"

"He has a sense of humor! That's the way I like to read my baseball."

"Right. In fact the whole paper has a sense of humor. You'll even find it in the news columns when it's appropriate."

"Well, I guess Eddie Vincent had the right idea. A supply of general information may be useful to the budding business man, even if this is the so-called Age of Specialization."

"Yes, and I must say I think Eddie showed judgment in getting his where he did. The Herald Tribune makes general information easier to take than any newspaper I know."

MEMORIAL DAY

Memorial Day at Williams seems to have lost something of its original meaning. Our outward observance of the day certainly has little to do with the memory of the soldiers and sailors who gave their lives in the Civil War. In the morning we sleep a little longer, and in the afternoon play Amherst in baseball, sing class and college songs, and hold ceremonies to honor, not those who are dead, but those who are still very much among us.

While we are thus busily occupied in preserving our own traditions, the people of almost every village, town, and city throughout the country are devoting a good portion of the day to memorial services and decoration ceremonies. Every Main Street has its proud parade: khaki uniforms again, flags, and the beat of drums. Occasionally there will be a uniform of a different color. It is worn by an old man who marches slowly, stiffly before the rest. He keeps his eyes straight ahead, and they shine brightly for an old man's. No one is ashamed to feel sentimental, for patriotism takes its most attractive, most genuine form on this day.

Our College exercises may seem to miss some of the true significance of Decoration Day, and to outsiders we may appear provincially indifferent to emotions that are stirring the whole nation. But sons of Williams who gave their lives in the Civil War could perhaps have a no more fitting commemoration of their heroism than the traditional exercises of their Alma Mater on this day. For by keeping alive the same customs which they took part in while at College, we preserve and strengthen the bond between their day and ours.

In our festivities tomorrow let us find some room for the memory of these men. May we hand it down with the rest of our Memorial Day traditions so that our sons will honor the occasion not only as members of Williams College, but as citizens of the United States.

IN A NEW BOTTLE

On the face of it there is nothing especially noteworthy in the announcement that Cap and Bells will present Hamlet tonight. Amateurs are always presenting Hamlet, and they always do it in the same old way. Many a little theatre owes its birth as well as its death to Shakespeare, and probably not a few of us have at one time or other been a Portia or a Macbeth or at least and often voice offstage. It is quite pardonable, then, if we have come to associate Shakespearean performances with mawkish youths in female garb grandly declaiming solemn soliloquies in cracked, sing-song tones. Hamlet, especially, has a hard time of it. Every year the dramatic organizations of high schools, girls' seminaries and community centers resurrect his ghost while bored audiences try to feel stirred by the funereal result.

But our past experiences with Hamlet, however unpleasant, should not sear us off from tonight's performance. For Cap and Bells, remarkably thoughtful of its audience, has been laboring for some weeks to lift Hamlet from that drab, conventional role into which amateurs have so persistently put him. By taking a few hints from the Italian Commedia dell'Arte, the directors have attempted to reduce to a minimum that lumbering element of tragedy which, on an amateur stage, can so easily produce the opposite effect. A refreshing interpretation of lines, a modern use of screens for the sets, and a sprightly Pierrot costume for Hamlet's new wardrobe are the most important innovations designed to bring about the happiness of a Hamlet-weary audience.

Whether Cap and Bells is successful in what must seem a rather delicate experiment will probably be determined long before the final curtain. But the idea—which, incidentally, has been endorsed by Stark Young, the prominent Times critic—sounds most promising. Never attempted before, it may quite possibly revolutionize the Shakespearean industry in amateur theatrics throughout the country.

Even those who abhor amateurs and Shakespeare on general principles should be interested to see just what Mr. Irvine and his cast have been concocting behind the scenes. Without even waiting to see, we feel inclined to congratulate Cap and Bells simply because it has had the courage to attempt this truly humanitarian experiment.

COMMUNICATION

To the Editor of THE WILLIAMS RECORD:
Sir:

There has been considerable misunderstanding in connection with my poem "Vindication" which appeared in the May issue of the Graphic, and I wish to explain my idea in writing it. It certainly does not mean that I am trying to compare my work to that of Keats; until it was pointed out to me, I did not see that such an interpretation was possible. And I think no one will not admit that I would hardly make such a monstrous statement intentionally.

What I intended was to say that merely because one is not approved, one is not necessarily a failure, and even so, I did not intend it as a serious piece of work. But since another interpretation seems to be the obvious one, I wish to point out that it is due entirely to my negligence and certainly not to my intention.

Very truly yours,
Ray L. Armstrong.

ANCIENT EDITS TRACE MEMORIAL DAY SPIRIT

Details Seem Old and Strange to 1928, But Hopes and Fears
Are the Same

In the interests and traditions which surround Memorial Day the Williams man finds a tie that binds him to generations of other Williams men, trailing off into that dim past when they did such funny things, who on this occasion have gossiped about the same elections, sung the same songs, played the same game, with the same varying fortune, against the same opponents, and moreover seemed to hope and think and write much the same way about it all. Nothing could be more appropriate in this place on Memorial Day than a random review of the remarks of our predecessors, which, though fragmentary and perhaps strange and pointless in content, are yet one in the spirit of Williams.

"As I break the spell with bellowing yell
I will sup in the chapel and gym;
Of my wrath so fell none will live to tell,—
Or my cannibalistic whim;
For I'll eat them by pecks and finish with Prex:—
I am a ghoulish Gargoyles grim."

(From the Chant of Pippa, the Morgan Hall Gargoyle, reprinted from the Williams Weekly of May 30, 1895, at which time it was proposed as the initiation hymn of the newly organized Gargoyle Society.)

"Some have expressed the opinion that it (Gargoyle) will gradually work into a clique and that it will not be representative, others that elections to it will not always be rewards for past deeds for the benefit of the college."—Editorial, The Williams Weekly, May 30, 1895. . . "The fairness and justice of the election was a cause of remark to everyone present."—June 5, 1895.

"What is in most respects the most important game of the year will be played on Wednesday. Comment is unnecessary, for we are sure that nothing will be wanting that will be of use toward bringing us the game, if we can play ball enough to get it."—Editorial, The Weekly, May 28, 1891. Or if you prefer—"Wednesday, with its various events of interest, bids fair to be as of old the gala day of the year in Williamstown."—Editorial, The Weekly.

BOYNTON'S WEAK NINE UPSET AMHERST IN '20

Memorial Day Triumph on Diamond
Was Augmented by Golf and Tennis Victories

Stimulated by the traditional spirit of rivalry which always characterizes contests with Amherst three Williams teams won victories in their Memorial Day contests in 1920. The Purple baseball team, led by Captain Boynton, vanquished the visitors 11-6, while the linksmen were playing par golf to win 7-2 and the tennis squad emerged with a 5-1 victory.

Defeated eight times in succession, the Purple victory on the diamond was especially noteworthy. The support given the pitcher, Holmes, was of the first order, McLean starring in particular with four difficult catches to his credit, while the fielding was almost perfect, only two errors were committed and 14 assists were made by the infield alone. Captain Boynton was the star of the hitting department, collecting a three-base hit, a double and two singles out of five times at bat. Nicholls followed a close second with three blows out of four chances to his credit. Mason was the only other Purple player to secure an extra base bingle, but seven men secured at least one single.

Holmes struck out eight men in the first eight innings, when he was relieved by Burrows who kept up the record by fanning two men to end the game. Ward and Burger started the scoring in the second inning to give the Williams team a safe lead. Hoyt's single was followed by another on the part of Boynton and another run was scored. The Purple and

TO THE SENIORS

To the Editor of THE RECORD,
Sir:

May I call to the attention of the members of the graduating class the opportunity afforded them of joining the Williams Club of New York City, which is located in its own five-story clubhouse at 24 East 39th Street, in the heart of the Grand Central district.

To those undergraduates who have made use of the Club, it is unnecessary to recount the advantages of membership therein; to others I would suggest that they inquire, between now and Commencement time, of alumni Club members who happen to be in Williamstown, as to the atmosphere of the Club, the excellence of the dining room and grill, and the various other facilities afforded.

Members of 1928 who are proposed and seconded for membership in the Club promptly after the graduation of their class are not required to pay the customary entrance fee of $10.00.

Blank membership proposal cards will be available at Commencement time at the various fraternities and eating-houses in the hands of members of the Membership Committee who will be pleased to answer any questions which may arise in the minds of prospective candidates.

Sincerely yours,

William O. Wyckoff

Chairman Membership Committee, Williams Club, 24 East 39th St., New York

VARSITY BALL TEAM LOSES EIGHTH GAME

Allowed Only Four Hits, Opponents
Take Advantage of Errors
To Score Victory

Featured by fast playing and timely hitting on the part of the visitors, the Purple baseball team's ninth game of the season spelled her eighth defeat, the Tufts team triumphing 5-1 after an hour and thirty two minutes of first class ball. In spite of the steady drizzle which caused more than the usual number of errors, the Williams club displayed their best form of the season and were vanquished only by the spectacular fielding of their opponents who time and again robbed the home team of hits.

Tufts started the game by scoring in their half of the inning. Ellis reached first on R. Smith's error, stole second and was brought home by Fitzgerald's long fly to center field. Putnam and Thoms struck out to begin the activities for Williams; however, hopes for a rally were seen when Delano poked a long triple to center field. In an attempt to make home he was tagged and the side retired without a score. Henman provided the second visiting run in the following inning when he was brought home on Phillips' sacrifice.

The proverbial seventh inning rally was started for the Purple when Delano secured his second blow of the game, a two-bagger, and was advanced to third on T. Smith's sacrifice hunt. He was later brought home by Foster's single to left field. The rally was short lived, though, for Tyson grounded out to complete the inning. In this frame especially, and throughout the game as a whole the Williams team had hard luck with their batting. Hits which normally would have been safe blows found themselves in the hands of outfielders or accurate throwing infielders.

Tufts scored two runs again in the eighth, one of them directly due to the rain. C. Smith threw to third base and the slippery ball caused a wild throw allowing the Tufts player to come home. The ninth inning was featured by the fielding of Thoms, who made three straight catches to retire the side. Delano started a ninth inning rally, but died on base after the following two men had flied out to end the game.

Eva Le Gallienne to Play at Stockbridge Premiere

Lovers of the theatre-going opportunities of New York will hear with pleasure that this aspect of civilization is being brought considerably nearer Williams-town by the opening on June 4 of the Berkshire Playhouse at Stockbridge with Eva Le Gallienne and her complete metropolitan company in The Cradle Song. Performances of this attraction will take place on both Monday and Tuesday, June 4 and 5, at 8.30 p. m., and tickets ranging from $2.00-$3.00 are to be had through Graff's Book Store in Williams-town, by telephoning Stockbridge 99, or by request addressed to the Berkshire Playhouse through the mail.

The Playhouse was reconstructed at the cost of $50,000 from the old Casino, designed by Sanford White, and commencing July 2 a program of eight weeks duration, comprising eight plays by Barrie, Shakespeare, Shaw, and others, will be given. Such actors as Janet Beecher, Cissie Loftus, Margaret Wycheley, O. P. Heggie, and Ian McLaren have been engaged for this season by the manager, Alexander Kirkland. Two subscription seats in the orchestra for all eight summer plays may be secured for $25.00, $35.00, or $40.00.

BALL TEAM TO TAKE JOURNEY TO VERMONT

Purple To Oppose Middlebury and University of Vermont on Trip This Week

Defeated in every game but one, the downtrodden Varsity baseball team will invade Vermont this week-end, playing Middlebury on Friday and Vermont on Saturday, in an attempt to end the season with a few victories. The Purple seems to have at least an even chance to triumph in the game with Middlebury, as that team has had but fair success, winning five games and losing four, playing teams which on the whole are inferior to those that the Williams squad has been forced to meet.

The Berkshire team is in the midst of the most strenuous part of its schedule, with five games scheduled for a period of eight days. Due to this fact, Coach Fox has had to handle his pitchers with the utmost care, and he will be unable to select the one that will oppose Middlebury until game time. The rest of the line-up will be the same as in the Tufts game unless some of the men on the crippled list, which has assumed alarming proportions, are able to play. Titman and Alexander, both suffering from wrenched knees, will not be in condition to take the field until the commencement games, but D. P. Williams, just out of the infirmary, may be in shape by this week-end.

A comparison of scores indicates that the Williams and Middlebury nines are closely matched, and a hard-fought game is assured. The Vermonters have won one contest from St. Michael, two from Clarkson and two from Clark, but have lost to Harvard, Vermont, Norwich, and Tufts, which are all strong teams. Middlebury is considered one of the most dangerous of the small New England colleges, boasting of a group of steady fielders and fair batters.

The tentative line-ups and batting orders are:

WILLIAMS—Putnam, ss; Thoms or T. H. Smith, cf; Delano, 3b; Foster, lf; Tyson, 1b; R. H. Williams, rf; Winn, 2b; C. H. Smith, c; T. H. Smith, Singmaster, or Wolcott, p. MIDDLEBURY—Hasseltine, rf; Anderson, 3b; Sorenson, ss; March, cf; Franzoni, 2b; Humeston, lf; Collins, 1b; Willis, c; Whittenmore or Hingston, p.

Wesleyan Ahead in Race for Athletic Supremacy

Competition for Little Three supremacy this year, although it has been fairly successful for Williams, finds a new member, Wesleyan, as the leader in victories in the different branches of sport to date. This is the first time the Middletowners have been uniformly victorious in many years, and the last Wesleyan football championships previous to this year was during the war.

Football supremacy was claimed by the Methodists when they rather unexpectedly turned in victories over both the Sabrinas and the Purple, and in basketball they had to be content with a triple tie only after bowing to Williams here in one of the closest games ever seen on a local court. In track this spring Wesleyan pulled the seemingly impossible when they defeated a team coached by "Doc" Seelye. This showed Wesleyan power in an all-around way, and gave them the championship in track, as they also defeated Amherst.

Williams, however, has by no means had a disastrous year in her athletics. She finished last in football, but gained a triple tie in basketball and won one and lost one in her only two hockey games of a Little Three nature, both of which were against Amherst. Swimming resulted in a Purple victory, Amherst being swamped and Wesleyan narrowly defeated by a disqualification. Amherst is yet to be played in tennis this year, but the Purple defeated the Middletown team in the only Little Three meeting thus far.

Amherst is encountered in golf tomorrow and Williams won her match with Wesleyan held on Saturday. The baseball team here seems to be a negative quantity but always can be depended upon to play a good game when pitted against Little Three teams. Wesleyan was played yesterday, and in the Amherst game tomorrow an excellent contest can be expected, no matter what is the strength of the two teams from a comparative standpoint.

WILLIAMS LINKSMEN SHUT OUT WESLEYAN

Yale Proves More Powerful Than Visitors Over Cardinal and Black, Winning 6-3

For the first time this season Captain Blaney of the Purple golf team was defeated when he met Captain Lanman of Yale at New Haven last Saturday afternoon, while all but three of the other matches were dropped to the Blue by his team-mates. To balance this reverse the Williams linksmen can show the shutout scored against Wesleyan on the New Haven course Saturday morning, when Blaney started by downing Captain Lee of the Cardinal and Black six and four.

None of the scores of the Wesleyan match were close in any way, since the nearest to defeat that any Purple player came was the very secure margin of four and three set up by Williams in his round with Lockwood. He and Blaney easily triumphed over Lee and Lockwood in the first foursome with a card of five and four. The Yale meet was featured by the close match between the two captains, in which Lanman had his hands full in taking a one up count over Blaney. Smith was the only unconquered Purple player, winning his twosome and his foursome with the aid of Heller.

The summaries are as follows:

Wesleyan Meet

Score—Williams 9, Wesleyan 0.

Twosomes—Capt. Blaney (W) defeated Capt. Lee (Wes.) 6 and 4; Williams (W) defeated Lockwood (Wes.) 4 and 3; Heller (W) defeated Longacre (Wes.) 6 and 5; Smith (W) defeated Inglis (Wes.) 5 and 4; Wheeler (W) defeated Rusk (Wes.) 5 and 4; Nye (W) won by default.

Foursomes—Blaney and Williams (W) defeated Lee and Lockwood (Wes.) 5 and 4; Heller and Smith (W) defeated Longacre and Inglis (Wes.) 5 and 4; Wheeler and Nye (W) defeated Rusk (Wes.) 8 and 7 (best ball).

Yale Meet

Score—Yale 6, Williams 3.

Twosomes—Capt. Lanman (Y) defeated Capt. Blaney (W) one up; Parker (Y) defeated Williams (W) 3 and 2; Knapp (Y) defeated Heller (W) 2 up; K. Smith (Y) defeated Forrester (Y) 2 up; Roberts (Y) defeated Wheeler (W) 5 and 4; Nye (W) defeated Dow (Y) 2 up.

Foursomes—Lanman and Parker (Y) defeated Blaney and Williams (W) 2 and 1; Heller and Smith (W) defeated Knapp and Forrester (Y) 2 up; Roberts and Dow (Y) defeated Wheeler and Nye (W) 2 up.

Amherst Will Meet Purple in Memorial Day Contest

ple and White perform recently feel that the Williams team has improved more rapidly than their opponents. Bowdoin emerged victor in a pitchers' duel, 2-1, and Springfield also won a pitchers' battle, 3-2. Union started on the way to a decisive victory and were leading in the fifth inning 5-0 when the game was called on account of rain. New Hampshire was defeated 4-3 in a game which was featured by the playing of the infield, one triple play and two double plays being made.

The prevailing rain all last week, though it has interfered with the Williams practice, seems to have been the very thing to bring the men out of a hopeless batting slump. They hit the ball hard in the Tufts game and appear to have found their eye. Coach Fox will probably start the same line-up that played against Tufts. T. Smith, by virtue of his defeat of Amherst last year will be assigned the mound duty and C. Smith will do the receiving. C. Smith's throwing arm to second has improved and his ability at bat is somewhat better. Putnam will probably be the lead-off man because of his ability to run the bases. Thoms will bat second with Delano, who has proved to be the hitting find of the season, in the third position. Although Thoms is a "fly hawk" of excellent ability, his batting is not very good while Delano, who is leading the infield in hitting, is weak on the fielding. T. Smith, whose blows have accounted for many runs this season, will bat in the clean-up position. Foster,

Tyson, and Williams will follow in order. Although the loss of Alexander is felt keenly, Tyson's fielding has been good and he is holding down the initial sack in a very creditable manner. Foster and Williams are both improving in their batting and fielding in a more efficient way. Winn and C. Smith, both of whom are good fielders, are the weakest in hitting of the entire outfit, but Coach Fox has them working out daily and an improvement is expected. Defeats at the hands of Holy Cross, West Point, Amherst, Wesleyan, Yale, Brown, Tufts and Columbia seem to indicate that the Purple is an inferior team, but none of these teams are weak and the scores have been comparatively small when the amount of practice obtainable by the Purple is considered.

The probable line-up is as follows:

WILLIAMS		AMHERST
Putnam	s.s.	Pithie
Thoms	c.f.	W. Parker
Delano	3b	Dean
T. Smith	p.	Nichols
Foster	l.f.	L. Parker
Tyson	1b	Walker
Williams	r.f.	Goodwin
Winn	2b	Wilson
C. Smith	c.	Trenchard

"In the first Amherst-Williams game of the season complaint was made that some of the Williams men smoked in the grand stand, to the annoyance of the ladies seated there. We are sorry to hear of such ungentlemanly conduct charged against the College, and hope that no opportunity will hereafter be given for its repetition."—Editorial, the Weekly, May 28, 1888.

"Since the new grand stand is completed and ready for use, it should be made the center from which the cheering should emanate; let it be generally understood that some one fellow is to lead the cheering and let him locate himself as nearly as possible in the middle of the stand; when the time seems ripe for a cheer, the leader in the stand can start the fellows from there in a distinct, hearty, yell."—Editorial, the Weekly, May 27, 1887.

"Baseball, we regret to say, has to all intents and purposes become defunct. . . . Let, then, this sport for the present die a placid, easy death, and while, if so disposed, we deposit a tear or two upon the grave, let us not by unseemly reiterations or piteous supplications, bring the corpse to a premature resurrection, but respect the benevolent epitaph R. I. P., the appropriateness of which everyone must recognize."—Editorial, the Williams Review, June 5, 1871.

"The custom of ringing the chapel bell after a victory is an old one which has died out in late years. The chapel bell may well be made a part of the college and ring out the good news of a Williams victory on Wednesday as it has never and will never ring out the 'good tidings' of compulsory chapel. Let the bell become hilarious occasionally and forget its gloomy mission of ringing only the 'ones', 'twos', and 'threes'."—Editorial, the Weekly, May 26, 1894.

civilizations is emphasized. With the discovery of iron, civilization underwent important changes and war in the modern sense had its beginning. It was at this time that the Celts conquered Great Britain and Ireland, and the greater part of Europe. Prehistoric times, according to the author, closed in Northern, Central, and Western Europe with the conquests of Caesar, the introduction of writing, and of Roman law and culture.

In his final chapter, entitled "In Retrospect", Professor Cleland sums up the history of early man. "Civilization is primarily the result of man's strivings for a constant supply of food; for protection against danger, human or other; for shelter; and for mating. In his million years' struggle man slowly ameliorated the hard conditions under which he lived: he found means of reducing the horrors of famine; of lessening the discomfort of cold by making better garments; of sheltering himself in storm and winter in better habitations; of securing more adequate protection from human enemies and wild beasts. As an indirect result of these endeavors, religion and government arose."

The book, which is being published by the Coward-McGann Company of New York, is amply illustrated, containing 150 engravings and five colored plates. The frontispiece represents a restoration of life in the bronze age conceived by the author himself. The other plates picture gold ornaments of the Bronze Age from Ireland, cave drawings from Spain, a Celtic shield, and specimens of pottery from the Iron Age.

sell against anything which it considers detrimental to such advancement." It is emphasized that Gargoyle is not a final reward for previous successes, but a group chosen for the spirit with which it has worked in the past, in order that it may apply the same spirit to the constructive program of the organization.

After the first tapping 33 years ago, the newly honored men gave a Williams cheer under the Morgan Hall Gargoyle, which had given the society its name and which was draped in royal purple for the occasion. The first Gargoyle banquet was held at the Greylock that evening, concerning which the Weekly made the following comment: "One who heard the singing could not but have been impressed with the spirit of these men, and it is to be hoped and confidently expected that all sides of college life will be bound together and strengthened by the 'Gargoyle'."

ZETA PSI IS WINNER IN INTRAMURAL MEET

Scores 36 Points To Win Spring Track—Mason is Individual Star of Winners

Taking live out of a possible 14 first places, and amassing a total of 36 points, Zeta Psi was the winner of the annual intramural track meet which was held last Tuesday and Friday afternoons on Weston Field. Although scoring first in only three events, Phi Sigma Kappa was close behind the leaders with 31 points, followed by Kappa Alpha with 14 points, and Beta Theta Pi and Delta Phi tied for fourth with 11 points each.

Mason of Zeta Psi was the individual star of the meet, taking first place in the 120-yd. high hurdles and the high jump and finishing fourth in the shot put, while his team mates, Jarrett and McIntosh, each won a first and a fourth to contribute six points to the Zeta Psi total. Bartow of Kappa Alpha with victories in the 100-yd. and 220-yd. dashes, and Grant of Sigma Phi with second in the discus and javelin throws, were the other high scorers of the meet. Both the times and distances of all the events were extremely poor due to the condition of track and field brought about by the rains earlier in the week.

A list of the winners is as follows:

100-yd. dash—Won by Bartow, Kappa Alpha. 10.7 sec.
220-yd. dash—Won by Bartow, Kappa Alpha. 23.6 sec.
120-yd. high hurdles—Won by Mason, Zeta Psi. 18.3 sec.
220-yd. low hurdles—Won by Christie, Phi Sigma Kappa. 31.3 sec.
440-yd. run—Won by Child, Phi Sigma Kappa. 54 sec.
880-yd. run—Won by Jarrett, Zeta Psi. 2 min. 12.8 sec.
1 Mile run—Won by Gross, Alpha Delta Phi. 5 min. 2 sec.
Broad Jump—Won by McIntosh, Zeta Psi. 18 ft. 9 in.
High Jump—Won by Mason, Zeta Psi. 5 ft. 3 in.
Pole Vault—Won by Baldwin, Phi Sigma Kappa. 9 ft. 3 in.
Javelin Throw—Won by Froeb, Zeta Psi. 125 ft. 10.5 in.
Discus Throw—Won by Fowle, Chi Psi. 94 ft. 10 in.
Hammer Throw—Won by Kelly, Commons Club. 93 ft. 2 in.

Boynton's Weak Nine Upsets Amherst in '20

White scored heavily in the eighth, but Williams retaliated with five runs and the game. Hoyt and Ward performed creditably on the bases, both men having three stolen sacks to their credit.

Meanwhile the Purple tennis team was slashing its way to a fifth consecutive victory by overcoming the Amherst netmen 5-1. Chapin, playing at number 1, was off his game and had considerable difficulty in disposing of Bennet, Amherst's stellar player. Time and again his sweeping drives would miss the base line by a mere inch and his cross court volleys would invariably go for naught. It was only by superior service and short rallies that Chapin finally won after three sets, 5-7, 6-3, 7-5.

Captain Pollard played his usual steady game to defeat the Amherst captain 6-2, 6-3. By superior overhead work and almost perfect court strategy the Williams captain had the visitor at his mercy throughout. Only by the best of tennis was Thorpe able to secure the few games that were not chalked up to Pollard's credit. Bullock was being hard pressed by Elwell, but his brilliant net playing triumphed after a three set battle which ended 6-2, 4-6, 6-2. Fraker won the last match handily 6-4, 6-3. Chapin and Sprague won the doubles match after a hard fought deuce set, the set scores being 6-3, 4-6, 10-8. Prescott and Rowse dropped their match after three sets also, losing 4-6, 8-6, 6-3.

The third victory of the day was won when the golf team, playing at the Hokyoke Country Club, overwhelmed the Purple and White 7-2. Murdock, playing at number three, lost the first match to Uehida on the 18th green after missing a difficult putt. Stearns defeated Simmons for the remaining Amherst victory. The only other close match of the day was that of Captain-elect Adams, who defeated Fenno one up on the nineteenth hole.

Mr. Harry Irvine Outlines 'Hamlet', Cap and Bells Play

most of Polonius' instructions to Reynaldo as having no direct bearing on any of the rest of the play.

Act II, Scene 2, (again cutting local politics) gives Polonius' report to the King and Queen, the spying mission of Rosenkrantz and Guildenstern, exhibitions of assumed madness by Hamlet to Polonius and to his friends when he discovers that they are spies, and the entrance of the Players. Here we cut a topical discussion of the English theatrical companies of Shakespeare's time, and a lengthy oration by the First Player, which is usually kept in because it leads up to the first half of Hamlet's "rogue and peasant slave" soliloquy. We cut this also, keeping in only that portion which refers to the catching of the conscience of the King through the play. To save a scene wait, we put the play "to-night" instead of "to-morrow night" and go straight on to Act III, Scene I, where the King and Polonius spy on an interview between Hamlet and Ophelia. Hamlet, detecting the spying, returns to his assumption of madness.

Act III, Scene 2. We cut Hamlet's views on the art of acting and go straight to the play. Here we have to choose between the "Dumb Show" and a very long verbal exposition of the tragedy; it is almost incredible that both were ever used at the one performance. Greatly daring, we choose the dumb show, keeping in only the specially written speech for Lucianus. And so, with the success of Hamlet's device for forcing a mute confession from the King, we come to the arranged interview between Hamlet and his Mother in the Queen's closet.

Act III, Scene 3, we cut almost in its entirety as retarding the swift development of the drama, though we greatly regret the sacrifice of the King's Freudian revelation, and come to Act III, Scene 4, the interview between Hamlet and his Mother and the death of Polonius, following straight on with

Act IV, Scene I & Act IV, Scene 3, giving the banishment of Hamlet to England and the plot for his murder on arrival there.

Act IV, Scene 4, we keep the soliloquy as a climax to the act, cutting the meeting with the army of Fortinbras.

Here we break the play again with an interval.

Act IV, Scene 5, we come straight to the return of Laertes, keeping in only enough of Ophelia's madness to strengthen Laertes' desire for revenge.

Act IV, Scene 6, Hamlet's return from the English-bound ship is reported to Horatio, and

Act IV, Scene 7, to the King and Laertes, who promptly plot the death of Hamlet at the hands of Laertes; the consent of Laertes to the treacherous device being insured by the news of Ophelia's death brought by the Queen. Cutting the humours of the Grave-Diggers and the resultant philosophisings of Hamlet over an unexplained and improbable skull, we allow Hamlet to tell Horatio (Act V, Scene 2) how he turned the tables on Rosenkrantz and Guildenstern, interrupting the scene with Act V, Scene 1. The burial of Ophelia and the quarrel between Hamlet and Laertes at the grave, returning at once to Act V, Scene 2, the reception by Hamlet of Laertes' challenge through Osric, the fatal fencing match, and the denouement.

We have not space to elaborate the differences between this acting version and the one in general professional use; suffice it to say that as a rule Hamlet leaves his Mother's closet in a most dignified manner—not "hugging the guts into the neighbour room"—and is next seen at Ophelia's grave with practically no explanation of what has happened in the interim.

Town Voters Protest Road Across Field Park

Eighty voters of the town of Williams-town at a meeting held in Jesup Hall last Friday decided unanimously in favor of presenting a petition to the Board of Selectmen, asking that the proposed extension of Main Street through Field Memorial Park be immediately reconsidered. Present plans for the extension connecting Main Street with Glen Street and the new Petersburg highway, were voted by the Board of Selectmen on April 11, and if carried out will seriously injure the appearance of the park.

Mr. E. Herbert Botsford presided as chairman of the meeting. It was brought out that the decision was not representative of town sentiment, but that a general lack of information had caused its passage. A petition, asking that two sets of plans and estimates, one for the proposed road and one showing the road as it would look if continued around the park on both sides, was prepared and signed by those present. It was decided to have Dr. Garfield, Mr. George Chett, and Mr. Thomas McMahon present the petition to the Board.

FROSH NETMEN BREAK EVEN IN FIRST MATCH

Lose Close Contest to Williston,
4-5, In Drizzle, But Blank
Hoosac, 9-0

Playing in an almost continual rain with wet, slippery courts underfoot, the first Freshman tennis team at Williams lost its opening match, by a 4-5 score, to Williston Academy on the Lynde Lane courts last Saturday afternoon, but, with the sun shining later in the day, made up for their defeat by whitewashing Hoosac School, 9-0. After losing the singles, 2-1, to the experienced Williston team, the yearlings were unable to take all three of the doubles necessary for final victory, but found no such opposition in Hoosac, winning every match in straight sets.

All but three of the matches going to three sets, the Williston encounter was exceedingly close, but, partially due to the rain, the tennis exhibited on both sides lacked brilliancy, the freshmen especially show want of confidence in stroking the ball. Groehl, playing No. 1 for Williams, had difficulty with his driving game on the wet courts and lost to the Williston first man, Clayton, 6-3, 6-0. In second position, however, Shaw showed steady form throughout a long match to win from Tupper, 7-5, 5-7, 6-1. Morris was the only other Purple player to win his singles, triumphing over Bryant, No. 6 for Williston, by a 6-1, 6-3 score. With the match depending on victory in all of the doubles, three hard fought three-set matches resulted. Groehl and Shaw defeated Clayton and Barnaby in the first doubles, 6-3, 1-6, 6-4, while the third doubles team of Haefner and Morris was also victorious, 3-6, 8-6, 6-3, but Tupper and Thayer, after a long struggle with both sides playing cautious tennis, defeated Crane and Elting, 7-5, 4-6, 7-5, to win the match for Williston.

The Hoosac encounter was not nearly as hard-fought an affair, and consequently was less interesting. In the singles, every match went to Williams with the loss of a total of only 12 games. The Purple line-up remained the same in the first three places, but Heine, Dorrance, and Ringe played the last three in the order named. Little difficulty was experienced in winning all three of the doubles in straight sets.

Senior Class Vote Features New 'Gul'

class favorites, etc., there are bigger and better pages of individual pictures and the personal answers of said individuals and others to the following questions: "What is Williams' Greatest Need?"; "How Has Williams Improved in the Last Four Years?"; "What Activity Does Most for the College?"; "What Activity Does Most for the Individual?"; "What Opportunity that Williams Offers is Least Appreciated?"; "What Event or Person is the Most Worthy of Praise?"; "What Would You do if You Ran Williams?"

Due to an unfortunate printer's error the picture of Banks '28 was inserted above the name of L. D. Rohrbach as president of the Junior Class, but photographs of Rohrbach are being printed which may be pasted in the correct place, and these may be obtained by leaving name and room address at the Gul desk. Some of the results of the Senior questionnaire are quite intriguing, and the choice of Art 1-2 as the favorite course, Art 5-6 as the easiest, and Physics 1-2 as the hardest, may well aid in the mapping out of programs for next year. It also may interest national producers of breakfast foods to know that the Williams man prefers shredded wheat to all others, whereas the New York Times is considered more than twice as good as anything else for mental digestion, its austerity being tempered each Thursday by the Saturday Evening Post. All in all, the Gul is to be recommended if for this section alone.

Freshman Track Team Downs Pittsfield, 68-40

Taking six out of eleven first places after gaining an early lead, the 1931 track team won their first meet of the season last Saturday afternoon on Weston Field from the Pittsfield High aggregation by a score of 68 to 40. Captain Dougherty of the home team led the scoring with a total of 15 points gained through firsts in the two hurdles events and the broad jump, the high hurdles being run in the exceptionally good time of 15.6.

Dougherty put his team into an early lead by his victories in both hurdles. Pittsfield was unable to score in these events, Capps and Gregg following Dougherty in the highs and Lewis and Harmon taking second and third in the low hurdles. One of Pittsfield's five firsts was taken by Bastow in the shot put, another in the pole vault, in which Curtis and Pierson were first and second.

Hendricks of the high school team took the century in 10.8, the wet track making this and all other races fairly slow, and the Pittsfield sprinter repeated his triumph in the 220 in 23.6 seconds. Of the middle distance runs, the 440 went to Abrams of Pittsfield, Sessions and Arscott for the freshmen taking second and third. Truman for the frosh won the half mile, and the mile run was purely a Williams event, with Goodbody, Suffern and Guernsey finishing in that order. Meier of the yearlings took the high jump, while the discus also went to the freshmen on L. K. Miller's heave.

The summary is as follows

100-yard dash—Won by Hendricks (P); Hood (W), second; Evans (W), third. Time, 10.8 secs.

220-yd. dash—Won by Hendricks (P); Evans (W), second; Dixon (W), third. Time, 23.6 secs.

120-yd. high hurdles—Won by Dougherty (W); Capps (W), second; Gregg (W), third. Time, 15.6 secs.

220-yd. low hurdles—Won by Dougherty (W); Lewis (W), second; Harmon (W), third. Time, 26.1 secs.

440-yd. dash—Won by Abrams (P); Sessions (W), second; Arscott (W), third. Time, 54.2 secs.

880-yd. dash—Won by Truman (W); Pruyn (P), second; Winclerg (W), third. Time, 2 min. 10.9 secs.

Mile Run—Won by Goodbody (W); Suffern (W), second; Guernsey (W), third. Time, 4 min. 52.2 secs.

High Jump—Won by Meier (W); Miller (W), second; tie between Abrams (P) and Clark (P) for third. Height, 5 ft. 1 in.

Pole Vault—Won by Curtis (P); Pierson (P), second; tie between Brayton (W) and Camp (W) for third. Height, 9 feet.

Shot Put—Won by Bastow (P); Kipp (W), second; Stewart (W), third. Distance, 39 ft. 10 in.

Discus—Won by Miller (W); Bastow (P), second; Stewart (W), third. Distance, 102 feet, 6 in.

Broad Jump—Won by Dougherty (W); Bastow (P), second; Abraham (P), third. Distance, 19 ft. 10½ in.

Robinson and Sweeney Receive Dunbar Prizes

The James R. Dunbar Student Life Prizes, awarded annually by a group of twenty-five alumni, have been conferred this year upon Thomas P. Robinson '28, who submitted an article entitled "Stability and Power", and Edward Sweeney '28, for his article "Undergraduate Society at Williams." Honorable mention went to Thurston Greene for a communication to The Record on athletic conditions.

The Dunbar Prizes were established last year, and offer $100 and $50 to the successful contestants. The conditions of the contest state that any article, essay, or editorial printed in a Williams undergraduate publication is eligible for the prize, the award being based on the influence of the article in leading college student life in a social, political, educational or religious aspect to express itself well. The award this year was made by Sterling '28, after the Class Singing Contest on Wednesday afternoon.

W. C. A. LAYS PLANS FOR ACTIVE SEASON

Cabinet Discusses New Membership System, Probable Speakers, and Fall Reception

Anticipating a year that promises exceptional social and religious activity, the Williams Christian Association Cabinet, meeting in Jessup Hall Reading Room Monday evening, laid plans for various lectures, the annual fall reception for freshmen, and the membership campaign. Among the cosmopolitan group that the Association hopes to secure as speakers are Michael Pupin, onetime Serbian peasant boy and now a world-famous scientist, Bernard L. Bell, Henry Sloane Coffin, and William Adams Brown.

In regard to membership, a considerable change will be put into effect next fall. Instead of launching a drive, there will be a committee headed by Hess' 29 which will be active throughout the year in obtaining members for the organization. There will be no alteration in the qualifications for membership—which simply require a pledge of cooperation in the association's work—but there will be a greater effort to interest the college community in the diverse fields which the W. C. A. occupies: boys' work, education, community religious work, lectures and open forums, and activity among the undergraduates. In connection with this last phase of the organization's interest, it is probable that there will be informal discussions on general philosophic and religious subjects if interest warrants them. In the past, considerable individual benefit has been derived from such gatherings, and it is hoped that they may provide an opportunity for spontaneous expression and varied discussion on the common everyday questions before the college man.

In addition to drawing up these plans, several matters of lesser importance came before the meeting. It was decided to hold the annual Freshman reception on the first Saturday evening of college, September 24, under the direction of the College Religious Committee. In regard to publicity, all information will be turned in by the various officers to the president, who will give it out directly or through Adams '30 for publication in The Record.

2. Ely
3. Covell
4. Park

VARSITY TENNIS TEAM OVERWHELMS AMHERST

Netmen Lose But Two Matches in Again Winning 'Little Three' Championship

Taking seven of the nine matches and with them the Purple's final two points toward the "Trophy of Trophies" and the championship of the "Little Three", the Williams tennis team easily defeated the Amherst netmen on the Sage Hall courts last Wednesday. Although the contest was played in a continual drizzle, alternating with driving rain, the playing of the Varsity was consistently good, and the only two matches which were dropped during the day were lost by the narrowest of margins.

By virtue of his victory over Freshman of Amherst, Chase completed his second season as a member of the team with the remarkable record of never having been defeated in dual matches. Wolf, Banks, Sewall, and McGregor also defeated their Sabrina opponents, but the weakness of the team which has been apparent all season, namely, a lack of balance at the end of the lineup, again showed itself Wednesday, and Calvert in the singles, and Shouff and Denison in the doubles lost by close scores to Richardson, and Stryker and Baker respectively. Williams took 15 sets, several of them at love, while Amherst was accounting for but four.

As only two members of the Amherst team arrived before noon, only two matches could be played in the morning, which was unfortunate, since the morning was clear and it rained all afternoon. Wolf met Bowditch in the first contest of the day. Making good use of his strong service, which he never dropped, and his usual assortment of trick shots and chop strokes, the Williams first man built up a lead of three games to two in the first set and then took nine in succession to win the match at 6-2, 6-0. The other morning contest was a hard fought struggle between

WESLEYAN GAME TIED WHEN RAIN ENDS PLAY

Purple Rally in Sixth Inning Evens Score, but Game Is Called in Seventh

Rain accomplished what Thomas was unable to do—halt the Purple batters—last Monday afternoon when Williams and Wesleyan played six and a half innings to a 4-4 tie on Weston Field, with rain forcing the players to shelter at this point. Seven hits were garnered off the delivery of the Methodist hurler, four of them in the fifth inning, and the Berkshire team seemed on the way to a glorious victory when a deluge, which had been impending throughout the afternoon, halted hostilities.

Thomas was driven from the mound in the big fifth by four timely blows, one of them a hard-hit double by C. H. Smith which was responsible for one run, and Travis took up the hurling duties, but for the brief time he was on the mound, he seemed rather ineffective. True, he retired the side in the fifth after Thomas had made his exit, but in the sixth he walked Delano, the first man up, and, with Capt. Smith at bat, the stage seemed set for

Amherst Golf Is Cancelled

Due to an automobile accident several weeks ago which resulted in the death of Mahoney and the serious injury of Cohn, third and fourth ranking Sabrina golfers, Amherst was forced to cancel the Memorial Day match. Because of the unfortunate circumstances which made the cancellation necessary, the "Trophy of Trophies" point has been waived.

AMHERST TAKES MEMORIAL DAY GAME FROM WEAK PURPLE NINE

L. Beals, '29, Is Elected Captain of Track Team

Lawrence Wilson Beals, of Bronxville, N. Y., was elected to the captaincy of the Varsity track team at a recent meeting of this year's letter men in Jessup Hall last Thursday. Beals, who did not begin running until he entered college, has been one of the most consistent point scorers since he has been on the Purple team.

He prepared for Williams at Mount Vernon High School where he was valedictorian of his class. In his freshman year Beals ran the dashes on his class team. In his sophomore and junior years he won many points in the 100- and 220-yard dashes. Beals is also a member of Gargoyle, the Student Council, and the Honor System Committee.

TRIUMPH IS SCORED BY PIERROT 'HAMLET'

Critic Believes that 'Cap and Bells' 'Has Contributed Something New to Theater'

THE CAP AND BELLS' "HAMLET"

(Courtesy of Hubbard Hutchinson, '17)

In a recent article in The Record, Mr. Harry Irvine, the Director of Cap and Bells, outlined the purpose of the organization in undertaking the mode of the Hamlet production which took place Tuesday and Wednesday evenings in Chapin Hall.

The Commedia dell'Arte was a form of dramatic presentation used by the Italian Theatre of the sixteenth century. In its evolution from a skeleton play in which the actors improvised their parts, to a written text from which they eventually acted, certain characters originally carrying the comic relief in these spontaneous performances (clowns, tumbrels, etc.) became formalized into symbols of love, pathos and villainy; into Pierrot, Columbine and Harlequin. Still later, certain great actors, notably Deburau, altered and deepened their scope, and it is his Pierrot, "pale as the moon, mysterious as silence" which replaced the flour-faced clown and fixed the character as a symbol of universal human significance.

It was the tradition of this theatre, formalized yet variable, fixed yet supple, from which Shakespeare borrowed so extensively, that Mr. Irvine and Mr. Gordon Washburn utilized as a point of departure for an original conception, a version avoiding the historic tradition which taxes Hampdens and overwhelms amateurs, and the modern method which combats the archaic text.

Above all, the Commedia dell'Arte provided them with a method for projecting that element of whimsical fantasy so inherent in the texture of Hamlet and so ignored in its presentations, that fantasy of costume and setting and manner against which the bitter emotional realism of the play's psychology might stand forth in sombre relief.

This scant outline will indicate the dimensions of their aim; an intent demand—

Inability to Hit in Pinches Proves Reason For Team's Failure To Win Game

DECIDES WINNER OF 'TROPHY'

Captain Smith Pitches Last Game For Purple, Allowing But Six Hits to Visitors

Nine rain-soaked Williams ball players, battling intensely from start to finish, had but one brief let-up, allowing three determined Sabrinas to cross the plate in the fifth inning, and fell short by the narrowest margins, one run, to equal their rivals' score, losing the annual Memorial Day ball game, 4-3, and with it the "Trophy of Trophies", which will cross the Berkshires for the first time in its history. A huge crowd, attracted to Williamstown by the activities of Gargoyle Day, braved the drizzling rain and sat spell-bound as the rival teams performed brilliantly at bat and in the field in a colorful contest which was anybody's until the final out was made.

In spite of the fact that Captain Smith was wild at times, he played a remarkable game on the whole, gaining two hits out of three times at bat, making one put-out and four assists. The entire team played good ball in the field, especially Thoms, who, fielding like a big leaguer, accounted for five put outs. The initial Amherst run was obtained in the first inning when the Sabrinas started off with two passes; and an infield error, but from then until the fifth inning the Purple team tightened up and the visitors were retired in order.

Williams started her first rally in the third inning and, as a result, held the lead for a short time. Tyson was hit to start the frame and by some rather spectacular, if not scientific, base running gained second and third to be brought home on Pratt's wild pitch. C. Smith drew a walk and was advanced to second on Thoms' bunt which Pratt muffed to allow the Purple fielder to gain first base, Smith going to third in the meantime. A squeeze play followed in which Smith scored to put the Purple ahead. A rally was started in the fourth, but Pratt proved to be better than the Williams batters and no runs were scored.

In the fifth frame Walker flied out to start, but Dean was hit and advanced to second and later to third on Wilson's double to left center, Thoms' throw keeping him on third. Two successive passes by Smith made the Purple's hopes grow dim, especially as Parker and Campbell secured hits, but with the bases loaded Smith struck out Pithie to end the inning, three runs having been scored. The Purple made a desperate effort to tie the count in the following inning when a pass and a squeeze play accounted for a run, but ineffective batting caused the side to be retired. From then on until the final out, the Williams team made a start in every inning for more runs, but at the crucial moments brilliant fielding or the pitching of Nichols, who had relieved Pratt, kept the home team from doing more than threatening. Both in the

Professor Pratt Champions Present-Day Student as Compared With the Graduate of 30 Years Ago

"The present generation of college men is, on the whole, a cleaner, more intelligent, more interesting, more promising lot than were their predecessors at the beginning of the century," said Professor James Bissett Pratt in addressing the 101st annual meeting of the Unitarian Sunday School Society at Boston last week. Professor Pratt went on to expatiate at length upon his subject, "Our Boys at College," comparing the college student of today with the undergraduate of 30 years ago with a result that showed a far from hopeless outlook for the so-called "jazz-age".

Professor Pratt described contemporary students as "saneer than their predecessors, perhaps a little too sane. One misses in them," he continued, "certain enthusiasms of 30 years ago. They are certainly less sentimental; on the whole a little harder, a little more mature than men of their age used to be. Certainly they have wider and deeper intellectual interests than used to be found in college men. Probably

"What is the right kind of religious preparation for the boy who is heading toward college? There are two kinds of wrong preparation. One is that which gives him too much shelter from the destructive ideas of the times. If the young man learns of these things for the first time when he reaches college he will conclude that his parents and religious teachers knew nothing of them and that therefore their religious faith was based on ignorance." ## FROM CONFUSION TO CONVICTION

The general confusion and fluttering which June days always create in the colleges are in one sense a reflection of the confusion and fluttering which go on in the minds of most undergraduates at this time. It is yet too soon to distinguish clearly the important things of the past year from the trivial. Classroom and campus have been steadily insinuating their influence on us, sometimes pulling in opposite directions, sometimes boring us to death. Vaguely we snatch at problems of history, politics, philosophy, social relations, and God, and perhaps become violently discouraged because we cannot quite understand what it is all about.

It is now, more than at any other time, that the undergraduate needs the right guidance in putting together in workable form the scattered pieces of a year's liberal education. Perhaps he is getting a different slant on things, beginning to feel some of the ordinary problems that are involved in living in this world. A most critical period, it is important that young men have the proper perspective when they pass through it. Too much random brooding will produce that pseudo-cynical attitude that so many men of untutored imaginations and overwhelming libidos affect. On the other hand, a little straight thinking will lay the foundation for a well-lived life, and make real the vague beginnings of ideals. Guidance, more friendly than examinations, more enlightening than half-baked Menckens, is what is needed most.

Such guidance is well supplied by the annual Northfield Student Conference, to take place this year from June 15 to 23. As usual, the leaders and speakers are of outstanding character and reputation, pre-eminently qualified to deal with problems that should be disturbing the peace of thinking college men. A year's education could hardly be capped more profitably than by a week spent in such company. The purpose of the conference is not to "revive" religion but "to point the way to power for weak lives, to join in friendship thousands of students who are in earnest about finding an adequate ideal for themselves, and to find ways of making the real world more like the Christian ideal."

Williams men should be quick to take advantage of such an opportunity. And it might be well to remind the timid soul that he need not be a Christer to attend. He need only be a Christian.

seventh and eighth frames failure to heed the signals of Coach Fox cost the team at least a better chance of scoring, if not the possibility of overcoming the visitor's lead. Both teams played excellent ball, only one error being credited to each, but the fact that the Purple could obtain but five scattered hits is an evidence of the cause for defeat.

ance. The other wrong kind of preparation for the youth is that which fails to provide him with positive culture of the religious life. He should have religious instruction of a sort that too many Sunday schools fail to give; but what is more important, the emotional and volitional springs of his religious nature should be carefully fed. Religious culture, if it is to be effective, must be given in childhood and early youth. It is not enough to provide the young man with a liberal and rational theology.

"We must remember and we must make him realize that philosophy and religion are not identical; that philosophy bears to religion the same relation that the skeleton bears to the living body. The truths of philosophy are presented by religion in the form of moving and compelling symbols, and if these symbols are to have the power which they will need in later life they must accumulate it in the impressionable years. The truths of philosophy must be not only accepted but experienced. This means the cultivation of worship. It means practice in contemplation and the growth of a sense for cosmic values, a feeling for the whole of things. Religion at its best is both personal and cosmic, and no philosophical truth in abstract form, no moral or social activity can take its place. The young man or woman who has learned to worship in this large sense of personal and cosmic realization is pretty well prepared for the religious difficulties that may be in store for him, and which, without this preparation, might be destructive of many of the values of religion and of life."

Wesleyan Game Tied When Rain Ends Play

some action, but at this point a down-pour of rain drove the players under cover.

Wesleyan got off to a flying start by pushing a run across when Dietter, as the first man up, smashed out a double, and then scored on a single by Capt. Funk and a bid for a hit by Rupprecht. Williams retaliated in the second half of the inning when Putnam singled, was advanced to second by a sacrifice hit by Thoms, and then scored on Ted Smith's hit. Rain started to fall at this point, but not hard enough to stop the game, the rest of which was played in a steady drizzle.

In the third, the visitors seemed to put the game on ice by bunting four hits and a walk to produce three runs, but the Purple bats would not be silenced and drove across another counter, narrowly missing two more, when Putnam and Singmaster were both caught at the plate. Singmaster then tightened and held the Middletown nine at bay for the rest of the game. Thomas, however, became ineffective and the Purple batters got to him for four hits and two runs.

In this big inning, Foster, as first up, fanned, but Tyson followed with a single and stole second. Winn fled to left, but C. H. Smith delivered in the pinch with a two-base hit, scoring Tyson. Singmaster followed with another hit, and Smith brought in the tying run. Putnam produced another hit, advancing Singmaster to second, but both runners died on base when, Travis, now on the mound for Wesleyan, struck out Thoms. Wesleyan was held scoreless in their half of the next inning, and when the Purple came to bat again the rain increased to such an extent that it was necessary for the umpires to send the players from the field, after Delano had opened the inning by receiving a walk.

ALUMNI COLUMN

PROMINENT ALUMNUS DIES IN LOS ANGELES

Joseph H. Johnson, '70, Victim of Pneumonia, Gave His Life to Higher Education

Following 32 years of active service in civic and spiritual affairs in California the Rt. Reverend Joseph Horsfall Johnson '70, succumbed to an attack of pneumonia and died at his home in Los Angeles last Tuesday. Reverend Johnson, who was 81 years old, at the time of his death, was one of Williams' oldest alumni and was known throughout the West for his work in behalf of the College.

Bishop Johnson was born in Schenectady, N. Y. in 1847. His school days were spent there until he was ready to prepare for college, when he went to school in Albany, N. Y. He entered Williams in 1866 and was graduated in 1870. During his college career he was interested in literary and intellectual subjects especially, but at times was known to give the athletic teams excellent support in the way of management. After he was graduated Bishop Johnson became active in alumni affairs. He served on important committees both in and out of College with the late Francis Lynde Stetson, Francis E. Leupp, former commissioner of Indian affairs, and the late Harry Pratt Judson of the University of Chicago.

After attending the general theological seminary in New York, Doctor Johnson was appointed deacon in the Episcopal church in 1873 and priest in 1871. In 1896 the section known as Southern California was made a separate diocese and Doctor Johnson was created a bishop. Today there stands in his memory, the Hospital of the Good Samaritan in Los Angeles; the Harvard School for Boys in the same city; the Bishop's School for Girls at La Jolla, often called Scripps' School; Pomona College, and the recent system of Claremont College. The funeral which was held last Saturday was attended by a committee of alumni appointed by Morton Eddy '03, president of the Williams College Alumni Association of Southern California, which consisted of G. D. Ramsey '72, B. C. Heald '71, J. D. Crawford '70, and Rev. M. C. Hayes '84.

FROSH TRIUMPH OVER LORD JEFF IN TRACK

Dougherty and Kipp Star in 75-51 Victory; Purple Strong in Field Events

Led by Captain Dougherty, who scored a total of 17 points in four events, the Freshman track team won a decisive victory over the Amherst yearlings with a score of 75-51 in the meet held at Amherst last Wednesday. The Lord Jeffs were stronger than Williams in the running events, taking four out of seven firsts and tying for a fifth, but the Purple trackmen's superiority in the field, where they took six firsts and five seconds, piled up the winning score.

In the half-mile, which was the best race of the day, Truman of Williams led for almost the entire race only to be overtaken and tied by Keyworth of Amherst after a neck and neck sprint up the last straightaway. Trull of Amherst turned in the fast time of 10.2 seconds in the hundred, barely beating out Dougherty of Williams who lost on a slow start and was gradually overtaking the Sabrina sprinter. After following Jardine for the first three laps of the mile, Goodbody of Williams was unable to sprint enough to overtake the Amherst runner, although the time was a second slower than that Goodbody made against Pittsfield last Saturday.

Kipp of Williams was the individual star in the field events, taking first in the javelin throw with a toss of 138 ft. 4 in., first in the shot put, and second in the discus. Davidson, Meier, and Miller, all of Williams, tied for first in the high jump, while Miller, Kipp, and Stewart scored another clean sweep for the Purple in the discus. Besides taking second place in the low hurdles, Thompson of Amherst won the broad jump with a leap of 19 ft. 11 in. The total score of the field events was, Williams 48, Amherst 15, while in the running events Amherst scored 36 to Williams 27.

The following is a summary of the meet:
100-yd. dash—Won by Trull (A); Dougherty (W), second; Norriss (A), third. Time 10.2 secs.

220-yd. dash—Won by Norriss (A); Keith (A), second; Evans (W), third. Time 24.1 secs.

440-yd. dash—Won by Keith (A); Coey (A), second; Eynon (W), third. Time 53.4 secs.

880-yd. run—Tie for first between Keyworth (A) and Truman (W); Jardine (A), third. Time 2 min. 10 secs.

Mile-run—Won by Jardine (A); Goodbody (W), second; Sufferin (W), third. Time 4 min. 53 secs.

Shot put—Won by Kipp (W); Tener (A), second; Stewart (W), third. Distance 39 ft. 10 in.

Hammer throw—Won by Kelly (W); Kirk (A), second; Miller (W), third. Distance 122 ft. 7 in.

Discus throw—Won by Muller (W); Kipp (W), second; Stewart (W), third. Distance 103 ft. 4 in.

Javelin throw—Won by Kipp (W); Lewis (W), second; Moses (A), third. Distance 138 ft. 9 in.

Broad jump—Won by Thompson (A); Dougherty (W), second; Tener (A), third. Distance 19 ft. 11 in.

High jump—Tie for first among Davidson, Meier, and Miller. Height 5 ft. 4 in.

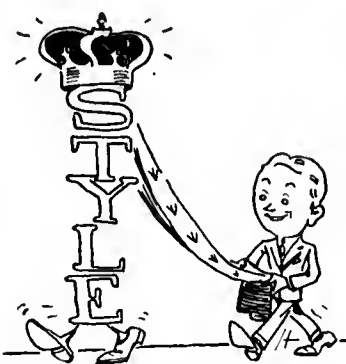

Pole vault—Won by Camp (W); Tie for second between Brayton (W) and Trull (A). Height 9 ft. 3 in.

Final score: Williams 75; Amherst 51.

Singing Contest Again Won by Class of 1928

First place in the annual Interclass Singing Contest, which was held on Memorial Day immediately following the Amherst baseball game, went to the Senior Class, while the prize for the best song was awarded to T. M. Banks, who wrote the words and music for the song rendered by the winning seniors. A light but steady rain fell throughout the whole affair, but each class, progressing upward from the freshmen, marched in procession to the Jesup steps to sing an original and a College song, all four classes joining in together at the end to sing The Mountains.

The freshmen, led by Heermance, gave the first presentation, singing a song written by Heermance and following this with Come Fill Your Glasses Up. A song by Rogers '30 was then given by the sophomores, who chose Yard by Yard for their College song. Elliot '29 wrote the Junior song, while the class also rendered Our Mother. Neath the Shadow of the Hills was chosen by the seniors, who preceded this with the winning song by Banks. Professor Dougherty, Professor Weston, and Mr. Banks were the judges of the contest.

AMHERST FROSH NINE BEATS WILLIAMS, 8-5

Visitors Put Over Four Runs at Start—Boutwell Holds 1931 to Four Hits

By scoring four runs in the first and third innings on passed balls and errors, the Amherst Freshman baseball team gained a sufficient lead to beat the Purple yearlings, 8-5, on Cole Field Wednesday morning. The game was close throughout with Amherst ahead 6-5 until the ninth inning, when they tallied two more runs on well-executed squeeze plays to put the game on ice, after Williams had lost a good scoring opportunity in the eighth frame.

Amherst started with two runs in the first inning and added a like number in the third, all of which were made possible by misplays on the part of the home team. Williams tied the count at two-all in the second and made one more in the third, fourth, and fifth. In the fourth the Sabrinas sent another pair of runs over, after which they were held scoreless until the last stanza. In the eighth inning the Purple was deprived of a good scoring chance to tie the count at six-all. Lonsdale got a hit and went to first, being advanced to second by the next man up on a sacrifice hit. The next batter sent a ball between second and third, which hit Lonsdale and automatically retired him, with only one man down and the strong end of the batting order up. In the ninth Amherst worked the squeeze play to good advantage and put over another two runs, deciding the game.

Boutwell, the visiting pitcher, had good control, and, although he looked easy, had three different hooks, which he used effectively. Lonsdale, who twirled for the home team, was erratic, but at times was invincible. Goven, the Sabrina second baseman, played a brilliant game at the keystone sack, and in addition collected three hits in four time at bat, one of them being a triple, the longest hit of the day. Groszkloss at shortstop also gave a good account of himself. No player on the Williams team got more than one hit, the nine only hitting four times, while Lonsdale was nicked seven times.

BRILLIANT SPEAKERS TO VISIT NORTHFIELD

Student Conference Will Discuss Undergraduate Problems in 43rd Session

Under the auspices of the New England Field Council, which represents the Student Associations of New England, the five State Committees, and the National Council of Young Men's Christian Associations, the 43rd annual Northfield Conference will meet this year from June 15th to 23rd at Northfield, Mass. The Conference is but one of many student conferences throughout this country and the world which are endeavoring to shed light on the undergraduate's perplexing problems, and to assist him in regaining his perspective.

This year's Conference offers a number of features which should prove of interest to the college man. Platform meetings will be held every morning and evening, at which men of outstanding experience and ability will address the gathering. Among the speakers are: Oswald Garrison Villard, editor of The Nation; Henry H. Tweedy of the Yale Divinity School; Kirby Page, editor of The World Tomorrow; and Henry Sloane Coffin, President of Union Theological Seminary. For an hour and a half every morning there will be discussion groups, led by capable men, on such topics as "International Relations", "Religions of the World", "Modern Education", "American Politics", and "Problems of Industry". Henry P. Van Dusen, Secretary of the Student Y. M. C. A., will conduct a course in Bible Study throughout the Conference. In the afternoon Coach William Wood of Wesleyan will have charge of an organized program of athletics, including baseball, swimming, tennis, and track. A recently introduced feature is the "Under the Tree Meetings", where there is a chance to question the noted men who have spoken from the platform during the day.

The first student conference in the country was called 42 years ago at Northfield under the leadership of Dwight L. Moody, and Northfield is thus, in a special sense, the source of much of the power of the Student Christian Movement during the past half century. The Conference has always counted it one of the greatest privileges to have among the delegates a number of students from foreign countries, and last year over forty men from abroad were enrolled. Several Williams men have attended recent Northfield conferences, and a group is planning to be present this year. Those interested in the project should co-operate with L. D. Rohrbach '29, President of the W. C. A., who can furnish particulars regarding Northfield and the Conference.

WILLIAMS STICKMEN BOW TO SPRINGFIELD

Purple Attack Not as Effective as in Harvard Game—Final Score Is 4-2

Handicapped by a mysterious inability to score after carrying the ball well within their opponents' territory, the Williams lacrosse team went down to defeat at the hands of the Springfield College twelve in the game played last Wednesday morning on Weston Field. The game was much less a one-sided affair than the final score of 4-2 would indicate, for the ball constantly was carried from one end of the field to the other, but the Purple offensive seemed to die out when it had taken the ball within reasonable scoring distance.

It would not be fair, however, to put all the blame on the Williams attack, for the Springfield defense was exceptionally good, with Clogston starring at cover point. The Purple defense also showed up well, Collins and Dunning being the outstanding figures. On the whole the game was even and well played, the superiority of the Springfield men in passing and shooting giving them the victory.

The first goal came within 15 seconds of the opening whistle, when Follette shot the ball past Senechal from a confused scrimmage. Quickly recovering from their surprise, the Williams players held their opponents for several minutes, when Whiting finally broke through and made the second tally. A few minutes later Williams got her first score when Brown took a pass from Hubbard and shot the ball into the net. Shortly before the half ended, Ready tallied again for Springfield, leaving the count at half time at 3-1.

In the second half there was much less scoring, both defenses working more smoothly. Thurston attempted to start the usual second period rally, scoring on a long shot, but he found nobody to follow his example. Springfield, too, was unable to score but once, when Large managed to shove the ball past Senechal in a wild scrimmage directly in front of the goal. A few minutes later the game was over, with the final score standing at 4-2.

The summary of the game is as follows:

WILLIAMS (2)		SPRINGFIELD (4)
Senechal	g.		Lang
Collins	p.		King
Dunning	c.p.		Clogston
Ashby	1d		Potter
Arndt	2d		Outten
Wulff	3d.		Ready
Thurston (Capt.)	c.		Follette
Jacobs	3a.	Miller (Capt.)
Reiff	2a.		Randall
Willmott	1a.		Bohn
Brown	o.h.		Large
Hubbard	i.h.		Jonah

Substitutions: WILLIAMS—Lawder for Arndt, Christie for Jacobs, Arndt for Lawder, Deming for Ashby, Jacobs for Thurston, Bowman for Senechal. SPRINGFIELD—Whiting for Follette, Cochrane for Jonah, Springer for Cochrane, Follette for Whiting, Benton for Randall. Goals: Brown, Thurston, Follette, Large, Ready, Whiting. Referee: Green (Swarthmore). Judge of Play: Dunn, Neilson. Time: 25-minute halves.

Commons Club Retains Intramural Trophy Lead

With but one more week of competition remaining, the intramural standings remain practically unchanged, Commons Club still clinging to a narrow lead over Phi Sigma Kappa, with Phi Gamma Delta in third place, well behind the two leaders. Finalists in the baseball and horseshoe tournaments, however, practically assure the Commons Club of the Intramural Trophy for a second year.

Another rainy week interrupted the completion of the outdoor schedule, two semi-final golf matches being the only contests played. In these, Sigma Phi defeated Chi Psi 2-0, and Alpha Delta Phi won over Kappa Alpha, 3-0. The final baseball game, between Delta Upsilon and Commons Club is scheduled for this week, while one semi-final match remains in the horseshoe tournament, although in the lower bracket Commons Club has advanced to the final round. As yet, no second round tennis matches have been completed, and four first-round contests remain on the schedule.

The complete standings are as follows: Commons Club, 103; Phi Sigma Kappa, 97; Phi Gamma Delta, 83; Delta Upsilon, 80; Sigma Phi, 75½; Zeta Psi, 75; Chi Psi, 72; Phi Delta Theta, 71½; Psi Upsilon, 68; Delta Phi, 67½; Kappa Alpha, 64; Delta Kappa Epsilon, 59; Beta Theta Pi and Theta Delta Chi, 57½; Alpha Delta Phi, 52; Delta Psi, 50.

PURPLE NINE TO PLAY AT BURLINGTON TODAY

Williams To Meet Powerful U. of Vermont Team in Second Game of Trip

Vermont, riding on the crest of victory, will act as host to Williams in a baseball game this afternoon at Burlington in the second contest of the Berkshire team's week-end invasion of the Green Mountain state. The home team is a decided favorite according to comparative scores, as it has won the last eight games it has played and has lost only to the strongest nines in the East, compiling a record of 16 victories and eight defeats.

Williams is not present playing better than it has all season, and, if the present pace is maintained, the Vermont nine will be forced to the limit to down the Purple. Coach Fox has had difficulty in handling his limited pitching staff in the games of the last week because the nine has been forced to meet strong opponents in every game, but both Singmaster and Ted Smith have turned in creditable performances, and the contests have been lost simply because the batters could not deliver in the pinch, when hits meant runs.

Listed in Vermont's long string of victims are such teams as the Navy, Army, Tufts, Springfield, M. A. C., Middlebury, and Dartmouth, with the latter two having been defeated twice, while games have been dropped to some of the most powerful squads in this section, such as N. Y. U., Fordham, Holy Cross, Boston College, and Catholic University, all of these games being closely-contested. The Green Mountain team also lost two games to the Quantico Marines, who have yet to taste defeat, but both games were won by small margins. Among the nines that have played both Vermont and Williams are M. A. C., whom Vermont nosed out, 2-1, and whom the Varsity trounced, 14-6, in their only victory of the season, Holy Cross, who won from Vermont, 4-0, as contrasted to the 14-2 defeat which the Crusaders handed to the Purple, and the Army, who was downed, 9-6, in comparison to the 8-4 game which the latter won in Williamstown.

The tentative line-ups and batting orders are:

WILLIAMS—Putnam, ss; Thoms or T. H. Smith, cf; Delano, 3b; Foster, lf; Tyson, rf; R. H. Williams, cf; Winn, 2b; C. H. Smith, c; T. H. Smith, Singmaster, or Wolcott, p. VERMONT—Smith, 2b; Prentice, lf; Conway, ss; Cogswell, 3b; Macomber, cf; Price, r.f.; Wichenbach, l.f.; Aronson, c; Moriarty, Schloppe, Talcott, p.

Varsity Tennis Team Overwhelms Amherst

Calvert and Richardson of Amherst. After barely losing the first set at 10-8, the former succumbed to the placement shots of his opponent and dropped the second at 6-1.

With the score even at one match all, the two captains, Banks of Williams and Sears of Amherst, opposed each other. At first the play was fairly even, with Sears driving well and hard, but Banks made such good use of his service, which, on several occasions, he used two or three times in one game, that the Amherst player soon fell behind. In the second set Sears seemed to be unable to return many of the balls which came to his side of the net, and the score stood 6-3, 6-1 against him. Sewall and Chase played well and consistently in spite of rain which often halted play, and won from Wright and Freshman respectively. MacGregor dropped but two games to Bird.

Probably the best tennis of the day was provided by the encounter of Wolf and Banks with Bird and Freshman. In spite of the fact that Jupiter Pluvius was at his best, or perhaps it might be called worst, some spectacular playing was produced, mostly in the form of overhead smashes and cross-court drives by Banks, and chops and services from Wolf. After getting used to the rain, which helped in making matters even at 4-all in the first set, the Williams pair went through eight games successfully and won, 6-4, 6-0. Sewall and Chase had no trouble with Hadley and Richardson, but Shoaff and Denison, opposing Stryker and Baker, had to succumb after extending the match to three sets, making it the longest of the day.

Scores: Williams 7, Amherst 2.
Singles—Wolf (W) d. Bowditch (A), 6-2, 6-0; Captain Banks (W) d. Captain Sears (A), 6-3, 6-1; Sewall (W) d. Wright (A), 6-1, 6-3; Chase (W) d. Freshman (A), 6-4, 6-2; Richardson (A) d. Calvert (W), 10-8, 6-1; McGregor (W) d. Bird (A), 6-1, 6-1.

Doubles—Wolf and Banks (W) d. Bird and Freshman (A), 6-4, 6-0; Sewall and Chase (W) d. Hadley and Richardson (A), 6-3, 6-0; Stryker and Baker (A) d. Shoaff and Denison (W), 6-4, 3-6, 7-5, 50.

SABRINAS WIN 'TROPHY' WITH DIAMOND VICTORY

Williams Defeated for First Time in Annual Athletic Race by 13 1-2—10 1-2 Score

By virtue of the baseball victory scored by them last Wednesday, the Sabrinas are credited with their first triumph in the annual 'Trophy of Trophies' race instituted by H. R. Johnston '09 in 1920. The 7-2 reverse administered to the Purple and White netmen merely makes the year's score closer, while an accident to the Amherst team made it impossible to play off the golf match.

Right to permanent possession of the original 'Trophy' was acquired by Williams in 1924 by five successive yearly victories, and the present plaque will go the college which wins it ten times. In 1925 the score was tied, and in 1926 and 1927 the Purple emerged victorious. The final standing in the various sports this year is as follows:

Event	Williams	Amherst
Football (4)	0	4
Soccer (2)	0	2
Basketball (3)	1 1/2	1 1/2
Hockey (2)	1	1
Swimming (2)	2	0
Debating (1)	0	1
Track (4)	4	0
Baseball (4)	0	4
Tennis (2)	2	0
Total	10 1/2	13 1/2

BROWN GAME WILL END TWELVE'S CARD

Comparative Scores Indicate an Interesting Game If Attack
Works Properly

Closing a not too successful season at Providence today, the Williams lacrosse team will face-off with the Brown University twelve on Aldrich Field at 1:30 this afternoon. If the Purple twelve can flash the same brand of play which characterized the contest with Harvard two weeks ago, all indications point to a close and hard-fought game with the teams well matched.

Comparative scores point to a close encounter, as Harvard and Springfield, both of which defeated Williams, have conquered the Bruins, by scores of 8-3 and 3-2 respectively. Beside these two games, Brown has been swamped by Dartmouth, 15-2, and has whitewashed C. C. N. Y. by a 7-0 count. In the only other contest on her schedule, she tied the Boston Lacrosse Club at 8 all.

Brown is reputed to have a hard-fighting twelve which will certainly furnish stiff opposition to the Purple team. However, if the Williams aggregation can overcome its principal shortcoming evident so far, there is a good chance of victory. This defeat has been the apparent inability to launch an attack until the opponents have already secured a respectable lead. It is then very difficult to maintain throughout the second half the pace necessary to insure a victory. Coach Bellerose plans to start the same combination he used in the last game against Springfield.

The probable starting line-ups are as follows:

WILLIAMS—Senechal, g.; Collins, p.; Dunning, c.p.; Ashby, lf.; Arndt, 2d.; Wilff, 3d.; Thurston, c.; Jacobs, 3a.; Reiff, 2a.; Willmott, 1a.; Brown, o.h.; Hubbard, l.h.

BROWN—Wallace, g.; Giddings, p.; Fisher, c.p.; Polsky, lf.; Cornsweet, 2d.; Bullard, 3d.; Elton, c.; Scherck, 3a.; Geisler, 2a.; Cutler, 1a.; Abrams, o.h.; Slater, l.h.

Freshmen to Oppose Poly Prep Nine Today

With the warmly contested Amherst game in view, better ball is expected of the Freshman nine than earlier in the season when it meets the Poly Prep diamond squad this afternoon on Weston Field. The Purple yearlings have had little opportunity for practice since the Amherst game, but indications point to a considerable betterment of the four hits made in that contest, when batting seemed to be the chief weakness.

The Poly Prep team has had a moderately successful season thus far, and in Van Woert it is reputed to have a competent hurler.

The probable line-ups are as follows:

WILLIAMS 1931: Thomas, 3b; Wallace (Capt.), ss.; Schwartz, r.f.; Langmaid, p. or c.f.; Grosvenor, l.f.; Ripa or Fox, 2b.; Lonsdale or Clark, p. or c.f.; McGlynn or Leber, 1b.; Bowden or Schlosser, c.

POLY PREP: Sheldon, 3b.; Van Vranken, 2b.; Ray, 1b.; Phillips, ss.; Gonzalez, l.f.; Saydah, r.f.; Kaydough, c.f.; Higgins, c.; Van Woert, p.

"Are College Men Wanted?"

An article by Franklin S. Clark in June 1st Issue of Forbes

YOU are one of 40,000 college graduates who will seek to enter business this year. What are you doing to equip yourself to meet the demands of modern business?

Read what industry expects of the college man as outlined in an interview with Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of General Motors Corporation; the value of college education in business as seen by James H. Post, president of U.S. Sugar Refining Company; the advantage of education as dependent upon originality and habits of thought according to President J. I. Keller of Keller Mechanical Engineering Corporation; the college man with a definite idea of what he wants is rare, as discovered by C. R. Dooley, personnel director of the Standard Oil Company.

Many universities and colleges are giving students practical business experience and supervision to help students adjust themselves to business.

This article presents the relationship between the practical world and the college man. It explains how the graduate is taken into industry and the qualifications he must have to succeed. For your convenience we have made arrangements whereby the June 1st issue, containing this article, is available at your newsstand.

Triumph is Scored by Pierrot 'Hamlet'

ing not only the courage that turns its back on tradition, but the creative skill without which such pioneering gestures are fardoomed to confusion.

They set themselves an extremely ambitious task. It is only by understanding its magnitude that the startling distinction of their performance can be justly appreciated. Its sponsors had much to contend with; the enormous hurdle that young men playing tragic female roles interposes to credulity; a stage on which one may erect but not build, and the antagonism of the conventional-minded to anything new, for whom a Pierrot Hamlet sounded like a violation of the decencies.

Yet, despite all this, the play achieved a quality so fresh, so vital, and so moving that many who came to scoff remained, in all seriousness, to weep as time after time the sheer beauty, the clear intensity of the performance burned away the trappings of illusion and carried the audience straight into that dimension of changeless reality wherein the great play itself exists. As all who know the theatre realize, this is an accomplishment of which any professional company might be proud. For an amateur creation in a new manner it is little short of a miracle.

Direction, sets, and acting contributed equally to this excellence, though the chief credit is, of course, due Mr. Irvine, who used admirable skill and invention in establishing the double atmosphere of fantastic artificiality and realism above mentioned. He cut judiciously, though heavily. He deepened the significance of the Commedia's masks, making them psychological symbols in the manner of O'Neill's Great God Brown. His characters were clearly, delicately stylized, drawn with the calligraphic line of decoration without a loss of three-dimensional solidity—an effect enhanced by the sharp variation in tempi which the alternate (and sometimes superposed) moods of fantasy and realism demanded. The production throughout bore in numerous ways the signature of care and ingenuity, as for instance the disposition of the sabres on the iron grills of the fore-stage, where they solved the problem of a Pierrot carrying a sword and were at the same time splendidly decorative.

This leads us naturally to sets and costumes. To those who have followed Mr. Casaday's work in other productions, it was a pleasure to see what his remarkable talent could do when given the scope and freedom of the Hamlet production. It abounded in beautifully and sensitively built pictures—the moment of the Prologue in the Players' Scene—the treatment of the Ghost—the Queen's Closet Scene—the final tableau of Hamlet raised upon the shields. With an economy of means that marks all originality (the sets were relatively simple) he produced more than variety of background. He "dramatically expressed in the decor the shadings which the play exhibited". If the costumes seemed to lack unity, one must remember that the Commedia dell'Arte deliberately clothed some characters in conventional sixteenth century garb and others in the stylized garments of fantasy. Individually the costumes were alive with a sureness and style, a flair for the effective notably absent from amateur—and from many professional—performances, the Queen, Hamlet, and Ophelia being especially impressive, while collectively they mantled the play in a manner which fulfilled but never usurped its spirit.

But after all "the play's the thing" and no amount of direction and setting could have brought it to life had it been badly acted. Fortunately their standard was realized in the performance of the principals, led by that of Mr. Hilmer's Hamlet. Perhaps of all the surprises of the evening his achievement was the most startling. It is irksome to sickly o'er its moving quality with a pale cast of critical thought. If his first act (I speak of Tuesday's performance) moved a little uninspiredly, that impression was lost in the fire and ice of the next two. Beyond the new reading of the lines which the new presentation required, beyond the excellent business of timing and stress and diction, lay something much more subtle; the creation of a Hamlet whose differing phases were pushed to their ultimate capacity—in one direction to the savage suffering of the real man, in another to the biting whimsy under which he masked. From the moment of the assumption of madness, Mr. Hilmer produced a steadily mounting intensity by contrasting these moods more and more, manoeuvring mask and altered intonation as aid and symbol until the divergence between the two manners, reaching its maximum in the Player's Scene, in that stealthy crawl across the stage, built a tension as electric and charged as the air between earth and sky in a storm. There were other things as satisfying in the details of the role; the authentic weariness of his talk with Osric, the appeal to the Ghost in the Closet Scene. The part was tense, rich in modelling and variety. He played superbly.

Mr. Session's chief problem as Ophelia was that of voice and gesture. One felt in the earlier scenes a slight tendency to posture, a vocal placement that sometimes sought sweetness at the expense of clarity. But the mad scene was real. He mastered it. The eerie quality of the songs, the bewildered shift of mood, especially the strangely authentic poignancy of his "He will never return" left the audience convinced and moved. Which is more than can be said for certain other Ophelias, unhampered by masculinity, that one has seen. He was throughout easy in the role, deft, assured, and pleasant to see.

Mr. Heermance's Gertrude, demanding less, was more evenly if not so deeply realized. He gave the role an outer dignity and beauty that recalled Clare Eames, moving with a grace that added as much to the picture as did his excellent handling of voice and diction. He was alone in presenting clearly and without stress every word of his lines, though I wished they might have sung a more intense obligato to Hamlet's in the Closet Scene, despite its general excellence. His death scene, obscured a little by the high mortality round it, was sensitively done.

Since this issue of THE RECORD cannot be devoted exclusively to Hamlet (one wishes it might be), comment on the other roles must be briefer than the deserve. Mr. Reid dressed nature to advantage in his Polonius, giving it a nice shade of pompous humor without clowning it and launching his vital platitudes with a fine solemnity. If the lines trundled occasionally perhaps that is what one should expect of obese senility. Mr. Gilbert, at first not wholly in the part of Laertes worked into its blundering fury thoroughly in the curtain scene with the King, and did a good last scene. Messrs. Spencer's and Elbrick's Rosencrantz and GUILDENSTERN carried their treachery becomingly and Mr. Lucas' Ghost projected his lines with sonorous effectiveness through theatrical gauze and the well-known acoustic mattresses of Chapin Hall's back-stage. Osric, obviously in love with his orange bonnet, simpered delightfully in Mr. McAneny's hands. Mr. Robinson played the difficult role of Horatio—difficult because the character's outlines are so few, its texture so simple—with a straightforward sincerity well suited to it, but with somewhat less warmth of color than it might be given. Finally, the King. To me Mr. Baxter was not always able to overcome the handicap of being almost continually masked, and sometimes mistook heaviness for dignity. But his finely timed unmasking during the Player's Scene was one of the high points of the performance, and his last scene carried strongly. The minor roles, Fortinbras (By Mr. Russell Wheeler) and the others were filled with a refreshing adequacy, and all prospered under the gleam and glitter of Mr. Casaday's costuming.

The play would have lost much without the quaint duet which Mr. Safford contrived in the spirit of the period for the "flageoletists", and the entre-act playing with which he maintained and heightened the mood it had engendered.

Lastly, praise is due to Mr. Curll and his assistants. He labors, as the writer feelingly remembers, under maddening difficulties. His stage structure is so sacrosanct that not one pin may be applied to it. This ridiculous repression in the one place where the college may house its serious dramatic efforts has been responsible in the past for more than Freudian scenic complexes. Yet Mr. Curll propelled the play upon smoothly oiled and well-nigh invisible wheels.

There were occasional lapses in the performance. Curtains that adhered alarmingly at one occasion, lines that failed at another. But they were as irrelevant to the quality of the whole as occasional wrong notes to the rendition of a gifted amateur musician. The chief thing is this—that Cap and Bells under Mr. Irvine's direction has contributed something new to the theatre. It anticipated Stark Young, who in a recent review of the Theatre Guild's Commedia dell'Arte version of Volpone, regretted that the medium could not be used for Hamlet. It is unfortunate that its first appearance in America, an appearance so supremely good, could not have had a wider audience. The one that saw it violated all New England traditions. They cheered.

TENNIS TEAM ENDS SUCCESSFUL SEASON

Varsity Netmen Win New England and 'Little Three' Titles in Spring Contests

Taking both singles and doubles in the New England Intercollegiate tennis tournament, retaining the "Little Three" championship, defeating Yale, and losing only to Harvard and Princeton, the Williams tennis team closed another successful season with its defeat of Amherst on Memorial Day. Although it could not equal its remarkable record of last season, when all of the "Big Three" were defeated and Amherst, Dartmouth, Wesleyan, and Hamilton were shut out without the loss of a match, the team, though at first handicapped by lack of practice, performed consistently well and lost only to two of the best teams in the East. Chase completed his second season on the team undefeated in the singles and, paired with

GOLFERS COMPLETE CREDITABLE SEASON

Only Losses Are Met at Hands of 'Big Three'—Captain Blaney Has Fine Record

Nothing short of the "Big Three" proved able to mar the victorious record of this year's Purple golfers, who, quite out of the class of their "Little Three" competition, scored decisively against Brown, Dartmouth, and Pennsylvania, in addition to completely shutting out Wesleyan and the Wyandotte Country Club of Great Barrington, in order to win five of their eight meets. Of the "Big Three" reverses, that at the hands of Harvard is memorable in view of the fact that five of the nine matches went to the eighteenth green or beyond, while Yale was the only opponent able to put up a man who could defeat Captain Blaney.

Captain Blaney's string of personal victories was the outstanding feature of the season. He opened with a 5 and 4 defeat of Captain Partridge of Brown, victor in 11 consecutive intercollegiate matches last year, and on the same day took his point from Captain Hutchinson of Harvard on the nineteenth hole. Rockwell of Dartmouth next fell on the nineteenth, and Captains Ames of Princeton and Coltart of Pennsylvania went the same way before nightfall on May 19. Lee of Wesleyan was added to the string with comparative ease before Captain Lauman of Yale broke the creditable record on the eighteenth green in the final match of the year at New Haven.

Heller, who lost only to Princeton and Yale, stands second in the order of personal success, while Smith and Williams, each with five victories, are tied for third individual honors. Williams, who played number two throughout the year, has a record which is particularly symbolic of the team as a whole, since he lost only his Big Three matches, and his defeat at Harvard was one of those which was carried to the nineteenth hole. Smith was one of the two to win their matches at Princeton and one of the three at Yale, for which he substituted defeats at the hands of Dartmouth and Pennsylvania players.

Lacrosse Team Bows to Brown Twelve, 2-0

Handicapped by the loss of Brown, who was unable to make the trip, the Williams lacrosse team was defeated in its final game of the season by the Brown twelve on Aldrich Field, Providence, last Saturday afternoon. The Purple outplayed the Bruins throughout the contest, but succumbed because of a lack of good hard shooting into the net, the final score standing at 2-0.

The Williams players threatened the Brown goal practically all the time, but always failed to score, either because of inaccurate shots, or because they were too easy to get past the Brown goalie. On the defensive the Purple showed up very well, as Brown was held scoreless until late in the second half of the game. Finally, however, the Brown attack succeeded in penetrating to its mark, and two goals were quickly scored shortly before the final whistle.

TELEVISION METHODS TO BE DEMONSTRATED

Device Built by Messrs Manning and Pierce Will Be Shown Tonight at 8

Monday, June 4—Television will be demonstrated for the first time in Williamstown tonight at 8 o'clock in the lecture room of the Thompson Physical Laboratory at an open meeting of the Science Club. The apparatus has been constructed during the past months by Messrs Manning and Pierce of the Physics Department, who will accompany the demonstration with a brief explanation of the principles involved in the new art.

In the demonstration apparatus they have constructed, the transmitting and receiving units have been mounted together for simplicity, so that by looking into the receiving end one will see by electrical means the picture inserted in the transmitting end. The operation is briefly as follows: Light from a powerful source is

LEET '28 IS ASSIGNED TO TURKISH FACULTY

Students of 24 Nationalities Are Trained in Western Ways in Constantinople

John Daskam Leet '28 has recently been appointed to the faculty of Robert College, Constantinople, as an instructor in English. Robert College, the oldest of the six American colleges in the Near East, having been founded in 1863, has an enrollment of over 700 students, which includes, in addition to the Turkish majority, Greeks, Armenians, Bulgarians,

J. D. LEET, 1928

Hebrews, Russians, Albanians, Persians, Syrians, Americans, English, Arabs, Germans, Egyptians, and Tartars, not to mention representatives of Azerbaijan, Croatia, Caucasasia, Czechoslovakia, France, Hungary, Iraq, Karai, and Roumania.

The college is actively encouraged by the Turkish government, which supports a number of students in the Engineering School, and cooperates in the agricultural work of the institution as well as the regular courses of the College of Arts and Sciences. Many of the governing class of Turkey have received their education at Robert College, and not only are the graduates taking an active part in the modernization of Turkey, but also the students themselves have had some part in efforts to westernize their country. The American colleges are at present taxed to their capacity, and an endowment fund of $15,000,000 is now being raised to put them on a self supporting basis.

1928 COMMENCEMENT PLANS ARE COMPLETE

Class of 1903 Will Celebrate 25th Anniversary at Four Day Festivities

Plans for the one hundred and thirty-fourth Commencement exercises have now been completed and programs have been mailed to all of the alumni by E. Herbert Botsford, secretary of the Society of Alumni. Saturday, June 23, has been set aside as reunion day and it is expected that more than 25 classes will return for this and the other festivities that will be spread over a period of four days and will consist of meetings of the Trustees, the Society of Alumni, the Loyalty Fund Association, Phi Beta Kappa Society, the Alumni Athletic Association, as well as the various fraternity meetings, the events of Class Day and Commencement Day, and a reception at the President's house.

On Friday morning, June 22, there will be meetings of the Alumni Advisory Council, the directors of the Loyalty Fund Association, the board of Trustees and the Phi Beta Kappa Society. In the afternoon the regular Class Day exercises will be held. The program, which is given elsewhere in this issue, will begin at 2.00 p. m. At 8.00 p. m. the annual Moonlight Orations will be held on the porch of Chapin Hall. Directly following these speeches there will be fraternity reunions at the various chapter houses.

The only events to take place on Saturday morning are the meetings of the Society of the Alumni and the Loyalty Fund Association. Dr. Garfield will hold a reception at his house in the afternoon. There will also be meetings of the Gargyle Alumni Association and the Alumni Athletic Association. Throughout the day there will be the reunions of the various classes.

At the regular baccalaureate service on Sunday morning at 10.30 a. m. Dr. Henry Sloane Cotter will preach. As has been the

Stories and Essays Feature Coming Graphic

"The Wonder Surviving" by Ray Armstrong, the story of a girl who wanted to be popular and wondered why she wasn't, and "The Red Window", an anonymous portrayal of what happened to the dreams of a little boy when his father died, are two of the prose features of the June issue of the Graphic and Literary Monthly, which will be circulated during the examination period. An essay called "An Appreciation of Plato" has been contributed by S. L. Faison, while the prose section is completed with "Trianon", a vivid "local color" sketch with its setting in the gardens of Marie Antoinette, written by E. V. Nash, and the Books of the Day column, introduced last month under the direction of Mark Harris, in which The Way Things Are by E. M. Delafield is reviewed.

In the field of verse the June issue will be nothing lacking, with "Dry Day Heat" by Alm Baxter, "Futility" by Ray Armstrong, "Froth and Druggs", "Lyric from the Persian", and "Gnome" by A. J. Kobler, as well as many unsigned contributions, including "Sacraments", "A Confidence", "Lambic Reflections in June", "Decadence", and "An Egoism".

Masterpieces Are on Display

Fifty masterpieces of woodcutting, engraving, lithographing, and etching by masters from the sixteenth to the twentieth century have been placed on exhibition in Lawrence Hall Museum by the Department of Art. The artists include Durer, Cranach, Claude, Lorrain, Van Dyck, Tiepolo, Meryon, J. F. Millet, Sir Seymour Haden, Meissonnier, Whistler, Zorn, Sir D. Y. Cameron, and Benson. These prints, which have been loaned to the American Federation of Arts for circulation in colleges and universities, were selected for this purpose by Mr. FitzRoy Carrington, Editor of the Print Collector's Quarterly and one of the leading authorities on prints in this country. The museum will be open on week days from 10 to 12 a. m. and from 3 to 5 p. m., and on Sundays from 3 to 5 p. m.

Layman '29 Is Elected Head of 'Cap and Bells'

Daniel Wonderlich Layman, Jr. '29, of Indianapolis, Ind., was elected president of the Cap and Bells Corporation for the coming year when the members of that organization met recently. At the same time James Munsfield Ashley '30, of Sylvan, Ohio, and Harold Bancroft Gross of Providence, R. I., were chosen to the position of vice-president, secretary and delegate-at-large respectively.

Coming to Williams from Andover, Layman has been active in undergraduate activities. He is editor-in-chief of the Purple Cow, art editor of the Gul, and a member of the Adelphi Union. Besides having taken part in all of the Cap and Bells productions this year, Ashley has had prominent parts in Jubberwocky and Hamlet, and is also a member of the Choir. Gross belongs to the Purple Key Society and will be manager of Freshman football and secretary-treasurer of The Forum next year.

10 FRATERNITIES WILL GIVE PARTIES IN JUNE

Senior Promenade Will Be Climax on Last Evening; Festivities June 18 to 20

Approximately 200 girls will attend the June houseparties, to be held by ten fraternities on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, June 18, 19, and 20, which

D. G. GRAFFIN, 1928
Chairman of the Senior Prom Committee will culminate in the Senior Promenade on the last night. Several famous orchestras have been engaged for these parties, which are the last for the graduating class; particularly well-known is the Jan Garber orchestra of New York City, which is to play at the Prom.

Alpha Delta Phi, Delta Kappa Epsilon, Delta Psi, and Chi Psi have formed a quadruple combination as last year; these houses have secured for their joint party Meyer Davis' orchestra from New York City under the direction of Jean Gasparde. Delta Phi has engaged Morey Pearl's orchestra from Boston, while Delta Upsilon expects the Cotton Pickers of St. Louis. Phi Delta Theta is negotiating with Morey Pearl for an orchestra, and Phi Gamma Delta has completed arrangements with

VARSITY LOSES TWICE ON VERMONT JOURNEY

Contests Are Dropped by One-Run Margins to U. of Vermont and Middlebury

Two Vermont teams, Middlebury and the University of Vermont, were able to score but a total of three runs against the Varsity baseball team, but even this small number was enough to force the Purple to accept defeat twice on their invasion of the Green Mountain state last week-end. On Friday Middlebury pushed a run across the plate in the ninth inning to score a 2-1 victory, and on Saturday the University of Vermont, although held to four hits by Capt. Smith, was able to nose out the Williams nine, 1-0.

MIDDLEBURY GAME

Five errors by the visiting nine aided materially in giving Middlebury a victory, but a fine exhibition of pitching by Whittemore, who allowed but four hits, gave Williams little opportunity to break into the scoring column, and consequently, another defeat was added to the long list of the Berkshire team. Middlebury drew first blood in the fourth inning when Humeston tripled and scored on an error by Tyson. Sorenson attempted a squeeze play, bunting to Putnam, but the Purple shortstop held the runner on base by bluffing his throw to third and then pegging to first to catch Sorenson, but Humeston scored when Tyson threw wildly to the plate. Williams retaliated in the seventh when Tyson single, advanced to second on a sacrifice by C. H. Smith, took third on an infield out, and scored on a wild pitch. The game was won in the last of the ninth when Jacobs, as first man up, singled, took second when Foster erred on his hit which took a bad bounce in left field, and came home on a single by Willis.

The score by innings:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	R	H	E
Middlebury	0	0	0	1	0	0	0	0	1	2	7	2

Batteries: WILLIAMS—Singmaster and C. H. Smith. MIDDLEBURY—Whittemore and Willis.

VERMONT GAME

With a record of eight consecutive victories behind them, the Vermont players were considered overwhelming favorites to win Saturday's contest, but the Williams squad, with Capt. Smith on the mound, put up unexpected resistance and forced the Green Mountain nine to the limit. The game was a pitchers' duel between Smith and Talcott with the latter gaining the verdict when the Williams hurler weakened momentarily in the third inning, walking one man, who, a few minutes later, scored on an error by C. H. Smith. Three times the visitors were within scoring distance, having men on third, but on each occasion the Burlington team was able to retire the side without allowing any scoring. In the third inning Tyson, having gotten on base when he was hit by a pitched ball, worked his way around to third, but was caught at the plate while

Hon. William Phillips, American Minister to Canada Seeks Firmer Friendship Between Two Countries

"It is certain that the Canadians know far more about us than do we about them", stated Honorable William Phillips, United States Minister to Canada in an interview with THE RECORD reporter during the sesquicentennial celebration at Phillips Academy, Andover. "Our books and magazines and newspapers find a ready sale throughout the Dominion, our methods of education and business activities are carefully studied, our good and bad points are debated—and emphasis is sometimes given somewhat distressingly to our weakness—while here on this side of the border we remain for the most part unaware of the sterling qualities of our nearest neighbors."

"We are coming to appreciate the splendor of their country and the untold wealth of their natural resources, but we have not gone far in learning about the people themselves nor in reducing our business and other ties with them to the solid basis of friendship on which they should securely rest." Upon being questioned as to the application of this statement to college men, the Minister replied, "The young men of the United States and the young men of Canada should assume this responsibility and should leave no stone unturned to come in closer touch with one another. For the interests of our two countries demand that they shall go forward and progress together, each having confidence in the other, each having respect for the other's political ideals, and cooperating together wholeheartedly for the common good."

"More and more, because of their many points of contact across the border," continued Mr. Phillips without a smile at his allusion, "will the Canadians come in touch with this country and its institutions. Canada, therefore, becomes a natural medium between this country and the other parts of the British Empire, ready to interpret us to them with the same intelligence and understanding as she can interpret them to us."

"It seems then to fall upon institutions such as Williams to inspire the youth of our country with a truer understanding of these facts, and to cultivate in all possible ways a better knowledge of our nearest neighbor, in order that the peoples of both countries may go forward together, uniting those mighty forces in the United States and in the Empire which are directed towards peace and progress throughout the world."

THE SENIOR SPEAKS HIS MIND

It has been said that there is no such thing as undergraduate opinion, that it is merely a hollow catch-phrase which editors use to give raison d'être to their editorial columns. It is certainly true that, in any sizeable gathering, collective opinion in one lump is hard to find, and that except at a crisis where the issues are sharply drawn, the undergraduate is not particularly concerned with the propagation of his credo. There are times, however, when he puts his thoughts in black and white, and the world at large has the rare privilege of staring through the bars.

Whatever we may think of devices like questionnaires for prying open the undergraduate mind, it must be admitted that the votes of the Senior class in the Gul present some interesting and even trustworthy indications of trends. Of course it was inevitable that among the answers there should be many that are facetious and a few that are horribly clever. But the greater portion seem to reflect genuine opinion.

For instance, there must be some significance in the fact that almost half the number that voted expressed its distaste of restriction—vaguely called "paternalism". When asked what they would do if they ran Williams about 50 per cent advocated more freedom, especially in the matter of chapel attendance. When asked how Williams had improved in the last four years, about 50 per cent mentioned some instance of loosened regulation, especially in the matter of chapel attendance. If these answers are in any way typical of the opinion of the rest of the College, it is fairly obvious that compulsory chapel is still the most heartily hated phase of Williams. Here is one case where undergraduate opinion has been found, and where it will always be found, for the asking.

The administration should find the senior feature section of the Gul profitable, if sometimes painful, reading. For an outspoken record of what men who have had four years of Williams think of Williams cannot be altogether vapid. And more seniors agreed in their opinion of compulsory chapel than in any other single question.

English Is Most Popular Choice for Honors Work

Applications for Honors Work during the year 1928-9 to the number of 61 have been passed upon by the Advisory Committee, according to announcement made last week by the Dean's Office, and 17 requests have been tabled pending investigation of records in the coming examinations. English appears to be the most popular field, having attracted 15 of those applications which have been approved, while History has drawn 11 and Economics 10. It should be understood that where applications have been passed upon, either by the departments concerned or by the Advisory Committee, this approval may be withdrawn if final grades at the end of the semester prove unsatisfactory.

The following is the complete list of approved applications:

1929
Art: Paison, G. Smith; Biology: Phillips; Chemistry: Good, Spencer; Economics: J. McKean, Phelps, Rymers; English: Collins, Doughty, Harris, Hay, Little Reeves, Sears, Sewall, Wells; History: Healy, Leshner, Overton, Stone, Strong; Latin: Graff, Greer, Pease; Philosophy: Beals; Political Science: Shoaff, Stern.

1930
Biology: Seacord, Strother; Chemistry: Allison, Logan, McKittrick, Reeves, Tedford; Economics: Davis, Heaton, Hepburn, Hyde, R. Miller, Shoaff, F. Thun; English: Allen, Armstrong, Baxter, Gross, Hanssen, Tippy, P. Williams; French: Baldwin; German: L. Thun, Wheeler; History: Close, Jamieson, Knox, McCarthy, Newlin, Travers; Latin: Lloyd; Physics: Kuper; Political Science: Kramer.

the Domino Club Band. Theta Delta Chi has engaged the Purple Knights, and Eddie Wittstein's orchestra of New Haven is expected to play at the Zeta Psi party. Plans for the Commons Club dances are still indefinite, but they have engaged tentatively the Meadowbrook Ball Room orchestra.

The Senior Promenade, which is to be the final climax of the houseparties, will last from ten until five o'clock in the morning. The admission price will be five dollars for stags and nine dollars a couple. The members of the Prom Committee are D. G. Graff, chairman, H. C. Dinn, W. L. Dunning, J. D. Harlow, L. C. Hicks, and P. J. Reilly.

HOUSEPARTY REGULATIONS

1. There shall be absolutely no drinking at houseparties.
2. Orchestras shall not be supplied with liquor.
3. Organizations shall issue written invitations for all parties, which must be presented at the door by all persons attending houseparties even though accompanied by a girl.
4. Of Chaperones:

There shall be a chaperone at each place where the girls are staying, and the chaperone shall be informed of the houseparty rules.

Chaperones shall be present when girls arrive, and shall not leave until the girls do.

Each house shall notify the Student Council of the name of the chaperone and the place where the girls are staying three days before the date of the houseparty.

ALUMNI COLUMN

1907 BASEBALL TEAM MET WESTERN CLUBS

Encountered Michigan, Illinois, and Chicago—Emerged Victors in Two Games

Prior to the passage of the 200-mile limit for athletic teams by the trustees, Williams baseball teams were noted for their long and extensive trips through the middle West. In 1907 the nine took a "week-end" trip and played thirteen innings against the University of Michigan which resulted in a 0-0 tie, were defeated by Illinois 3-2, and overcame Chicago 4-2. The jubilant squad forgot to return to College for about a week or so and the length of athletic trips was materially lessened.

Darkness put an end to a remarkable exhibition of baseball between the East and the West when, playing on Thursday afternoon, May 17, 1907, Williams and Michigan battled to a 13 inning 0-0 tie. Ford, hurling for the Purple, combined every form of delivery known in those days to humble the Ann Arbor players. The famous "twilight ball" along with the spit ball accounted for the fanning of ten men, only four of the University athletes reaching first base. Wadsworth, second base for Williams, collected two hits out of the three allowed by the home pitcher and showed an excellent brand of base running. The Purple had a chance to win the game in the third when Lewis reached third on an error and a sacrifice, but in an attempt to slide home he was thrown out at the plate. The playing of Young at shortstop was a feature of the game. Ford walked seven men during the encounter and three times the bases were loaded, but each time the infield tightened and gained the third out, or the battery became more effective.

Travelling down to Urbana, Illinois the next afternoon, the Purple were forced to accept defeat 3-2 from Oviitz, Illinois twirler, a cousin of the pitcher who had opposed them the day before at Michigan. The fact that out of nineteen hits, one of which was a home run, only five runs were scored by both sides is proof of the excellent fielding exhibited. Pierce was in the box for the Berkshire nine and yielded twelve singles, but the staunch support of his teammates kept the game in doubt till the last. The Illinois pitcher fanned three Williams men in the ninth inning when the bases were loaded. Lewis knocked a home run in the fourth to score the first Purple run.

Chicago was overcome in an orgy of hitting, 4-2, Ford yielding a home run, two three-baggers, and a single and the Williams team gaining one triple, three two-baggers, and four singles from the Chicago pitcher. Warren, Wadsworth, and Kelly featured with extra base hits, Wadsworth getting two of the two-baggers and stealing two bases. An alumni meeting was held before the game at which about 50 alumni were present. The late Dr. Harry Pratt Judson, then president of the Chicago Association, presided. Following the game a banquet was given for the players at the Great Northern Hotel. The following men played in the games: Young, Waters, Wadsworth, Warren, Templeton, Kelly, Harmon, Osterhout, Lewis, Ford, and Pierce.

Williams Club Initiation Tax Is Free to Seniors

William O. Wyckoff, Chairman of the Membership Committee of the Williams Club, New York City has called attention, in a recent communication to THE RECORD to the favorable opportunity of joining the Club afforded to seniors. If a graduate of the Class of 1928 is proposed and seconded for membership before November 1, 1928, he need not pay the $10 initiation fee, and the yearly dues are only $15 to $25.

The Williams Club is located in its own five-story building in the center of the Grand Central district at 24 East 39th Street. Besides an excellent dining room and grill, the Club offers many facilities which would be of great use to a young man in New York. A resident membership for those out of college less than five years costs $25, while a suburban or non-resident membership for the same group costs only $15.

Infirmary Patients

Sterling '28, Cavanagh '29, and Sturkey '31 are at present confined to the Thompson Infirmary. If an undergraduate is seriously ill, his parents are immediately notified by the College authorities.

HUTCHINSON '17 WRITES TRAVEL BOOK ON ITALY

'From Rome to Florence' Has Had Considerable Success Since It Appeared

Hubbard Hutchinson '17 is the author of a book, From Rome to Florence, which appeared for sale two months ago and has been an excellent seller among travel books ever since. It is described in a concise way on the cover: "The tourist traveling from Rome to Florence will find here one of the most exhaustive yet compact descriptions of that territory ever written."

"It describes in detail every object of interest in Rome, Florence, and the intervening towns, and it gives the historical and artistic background necessary for a complete appreciation of the objects seen. Discussing such matters as art, food, money, roads, etc., this volume helps every tourist to arrive at a complete understanding of the Italian scene, past and present." This is not Mr. Hutchinson's first attempt at writing, as his Par Harbors, also a travel book, appeared some years ago.

As the quotation indicates, From Rome to Florence is an informal account of the chief points of interest between the two cities; Mr. Hutchinson's first chapter begins "This book is for the tourist going by train or motor from Rome to Florence." Further on he states that he has written largely for those who intend spending about a week on the trip, especially those who are not overburdened with baggage. The first chapter is "From Rome to Viterbo." Of Viterbo he says "no town between Rome and Florence yields as a whole so extensive and undisturbed a picture of a 13th-14th Century city."

Mr. Hutchinson's next chapter is entitled "T—";—"it is with the selfish joy of discovery that I withhold the name of T—". It is off the track. It is unspoiled. It lies in a charming country." Throughout the whole book he brings in facts and dates of history to enhance the particular part of the journey he wishes to describe. Orvieto, famed for wine, is next visited, and from there the travelers' itinerary takes them successively through the central Italian towns of Todi and Nonte Falco, Spoleto, Assisi, Perugia, Cortona, Arezzo, Montepulciano and Pienza, Siena, Volterra, and San Gimignano before they reach Florence.

Eight maps and 24 drawings by Coleman C. Mosher are in the book, and an appendix explains the facilities and itineraries of various short trips. Automobile and train routes are specified graphically on a map. In addition to this, maps of each town discussed appear in the book and make easier a close following of the itinerary and the places described.

Todi and Monte Falco are also good pictures of the 13th and 14th Century; Spoleto, the author, explains, is where Hannibal came after his famous battles of Trebia and Trasimene; the chapter on Assisi deals largely with the history of St. Francis, and the next concerns Perugia, who "sits like a savage falcion upon her sharp-risen hills;" at Cortona they visit the site of former Carthaginian-Roman battles, Lake Trasimene; after Arezzo, whose "fine clay stimulated the artisans to something very near Greek perfection," they pass through Montepulciano and Pienza to Siena, which Mr. Hutchinson says was "a sword in a velvet sheath, its handle set with rubies."

The trip to Volterra and San Gimignano, with which the book ends, totals 73 kilometers and may be added by all those so desiring, in their trip from Rome to Florence. Finishing with San Gimignano, Mr. Hutchinson also concludes his book: "And here I shall leave the traveller. Here, above the most beautiful of her small towns, Italy's voice must if anywhere reach him and sink indelibly into his soul. For on this Tuscan hill the complex polyphony of bigger cities is concentrated in a single lyric line, lifted to one high clear utterance. May there be none so deaf as cannot hear that voice, and none so dull as do not care to listen."

'Record' Competition

Members of the Class of 1931 will be given a final opportunity to make THE RECORD Board in the third competition which will begin either September 25 or October 1, and will last for approximately two months. Two men will be taken on the Board at the end of this competition, and all men interested are urged to come out. Further announcement of a meeting of those trying out will be made next fall.

THREE PROFESSORS TO BE GIVEN SABBATICALS

Three Other Faculty Members To Leave Williams To Pursue Graduate Study

Three professors are planning to take their sabbatical leaves next year, while another has been granted a leave of absence to pursue graduate study, and two instructors are also leaving to engage in further study. Professor Messer and Assistant Professors Cru and Wells will spend their sabbatical years abroad, Assistant Professor Beuhler has leave of absence to engage in study, as announced in THE RECORD a week ago, and Instructors Spring and Quinn are leaving Williams for study.

Mr. Messer was out of town over the week-end and could not be reached for verification of his plans, but it is understood that he will probably be in charge of physical education on the "Floating University" on board the ss. Aurania. This plan is only tentative, however, as there is some doubt whether the cruise will be run. Assistant Professor Jean N. Cru of the Department of Romance Languages plans to spend most of his sabbatical year in the south of France, near Marseilles, except for a short time spent in Paris. While in the south of France he intends to do some work in connection with the book he has recently finished.

Assistant Professor Volney H. Wells of the Mathematics Department will also spend his sabbatical in Europe. He plans to study at Oxford during the first two terms, or until March, after which he will travel on the Continent. While at Oxford he will work with Professor Veblin, who is an authority on modern geometry, and will be busy preparing a book containing the fruits of researches made during the last few years. Besides these men going on sabbaticals, Instructor G. M. Spring of the Romance Languages Department will study in New York and Europe for his Ph.D. degree, and is planning to return to Williams in 1929. Also Mr. A. W. Quinn, instructor in Geology, is leaving Williams to continue his graduate work by study at Harvard.

Buffinton To Write Book

Assistant Professor Arthur H. Buffinton of the History Department has announced his intention of spending this summer in writing a book on the Anglo-French encounters from 1689 to 1815. This period in European history is marked with continual international strife and is often called "the second Hundred Years' War". When completed in the early autumn, the book, containing about 100 pages, will be published by Henry Holt and Company, as a volume in the series of The Berkshire Studies in European History. The editors of this series are Professor Richard A. Newhall of Williams, who wrote The Crusades, Professor Laurence B. Packard of Amherst College, who wrote The Commercial Revolution, and Professor Sidney R. Packard of Smith College, author of Europe and the Church Under Innocent III. Professor Buffinton's book will be the sixth of the series.

1930-1931 Tennis Match Won by Sophomores, 6-3

Taking six out of a possible nine matches the 1930 tennis squad decisively defeated 1931 in the annual interclass event on Sage Hall courts last week. Although Groehl, playing no. 1 for the freshmen, won a straight-set victory over Clark by 6-4, 6-2, the sophomores took four of the remaining five singles, and two out of three doubles with the loss of only one set.

The closest match of the afternoon was staged by Webster '30 and Elting '31 in the third singles contest, Webster finally winning, 6-4, 7-5, 8-6. Shaw '31 gave Hoyt '30 a hard fight in the second position, but lost by 6-4, 7-5, while Haeffner '31 took the second Freshman singles victory in another close contest with Gross, 7-5, 6-4. In the doubles Hoyt and Clark easily defeated Groehl and Shaw, and F. L. and J. L. Nye defeated Haeffner and Dorrance, while Elting and Morris took the remaining match from Webster and Gross.

The summary:
Groehl '31 d. Clark '30, 6-4, 6-2; Hoyt '30 d. Shaw '31, 6-4, 7-5; Webster '30 d. Elting '31, 4-6, 6-5, 8-6; J. L. Nye '30 d. Morris '31, 6-4, 6-3; Haeffner '31, d. Gross '30, 7-5, 6-4; F. L. Nye '30 d. Dorrance '31, 6-3, 6-4; Hoyt and Clark d. Groehl and Shaw, 6-2, 6-1; Elting and Morris d. Webster and Gross, 6-2, 6-4; F. L. and J. L. Nye d. Haeffner and Dorrance, 6-1, 7-5.

Quality sent P.A. to the head of the class

YEARS ago, P.A. showed a clean pair of heels to the field of smoking-tobaccos. It has maintained its lead ever since putting more distance behind it every year. There must be a reason why P.A. is the world's largest-selling brand.

There is! Open a tidy red tin and get a full breath of that class-by-itself fragrance. Then tamp a load into the bowl of your pipe and light up. The first pull tells you why more men smoke P.A. than any other brand. Cool and smooth and mellow and mild—not for one pipe-load, but always. Try this long-burning tobacco, Fellows. You'll say so!

POLY PREP BLANKED BY FRESHMAN TEAM

Four Runs in Eighth Decide Final Contest for 1931—Each Nine
Makes Four Hits

In their final game of the season, the Freshman baseball team whitewashed the Poly Prep nine by a 4-0 score last Saturday afternoon on Weston Field in a contest marked by good fielding but decidedly weak hitting power on both teams. Each pitcher held the opposing batters well in check until the eighth inning, when two of the four yearling hits were made, which together with an error, a walk, and a batter hit by a pitched ball produced the only scoring in the whole contest.

Hurd, pitcher for the freshmen, went the entire route, allowing only four scattered hits. Although several Poly men threatened to score at different times, excellent support in the field, especially by third-baseman Thomas, cut off any imminent runs. Grosvenor, playing in left field, fattened his already considerable batting average by making three of the Purple hits.

Poly secured a temporary advantage in the second inning when two men were on base with no outs, but the next three men fled out. Gonzalez, the opposing left fielder, connected for a double in the fourth inning, but was left stranded on third base. The freshmen were absolutely impotent at bat until the seventh inning when Grosvenor made a hit and proceeded to third on Schwartz's sacrifice. McGlynn, however, made the third out when he was caught at first by a narrow margin. In the eighth Lonsdale and Bowden were substituted for Ripa and Schlosser respectively. In this decisive frame Bowden walked, Hurd was hit by a pitched ball, and after one out was made, Captain Wallace hit a double, scoring Bowden. Grosvenor made his third hit, scoring Hurd, and as Wallace took third, the opposing catcher threw to the third baseman who missed the ball, allowing Wallace and Grosvenor to cross the Plate.

The scoring was as follows:

Poly Prep...	0	0	0
Williams '31...	0	0	0

The line-up and batting order was as follows:

Poly Prep: Sheldon, 3b; Fenton, 2b; Ray, 1b; Phillips, ss; Gonzalez, lf; Saydah, rf; Kaydowh, cf; Higgins, c; Heermans, p.

Williams '31: Thomas, 3b; Wallace, ss; Grosvenor, lf; Langmaid, cf; Schwartz, rf; McGlynn, 1b; Ripa and Lonsdale, 2b; Schlosser and Bowden, c; Hurd, p.

Choir to Render Song Written by Prof. Wild

In place of the usual organ selection, the choir will render tomorrow morning a song, entitled Carmen Guilclmense, the words of which were written by Henry Daniel Wild, Professor of Latin, and the music by Sumner Salter, a former director of music at Williams. Although this selection has been given for years at the Commencement exercises, it is unfamiliar to the undergraduate body. The words are as follows:

Senes:

Nos senes vero memores priorum,
Sera maturae fidei gerentes,
Nunc domum enram veteremque laeti
Visimus omnes.

Iuvenes:

Laece gaudentes veneramus alma
Vos coronatos hedera dierum!
Iam simul laudem validam canamus
Matris amatae.

Omnes:

Ece nos reges sumus et beati
Splendidi vitae iocundis auro,
Fontium geminis quoque purpuraeque
Taeniorum!
Guilclmenses socii fidelis,
Gloriamur qui colimusque nomen
Fortis auctoris, cupidi sequemur
Semper honorem.

Tennis Team Ends

Successful Season

Sewall, was also victorious in all his doubles matches.

After the cancellation of the M. I. T. match due to bad weather, the team, several of its members having had but one day of outdoor practice, opened the season against Union. Little difficulty was encountered here, and the Varsity dropped but one match. The next contest, the one with Bowdoin, gave a premonition of what was to be the team's main weakness throughout the season, namely a lack of balance at the foot of the lineup. Adsit, as number five, and Shoff and Denison, playing in the third doubles, were the only Williams men to lose their matches. 15 of the total of 25 matches dropped by the Varsity during the spring were accounted for by the men playing fifth and sixth singles and third doubles, while the first four men, Wolf, Captain Banks, Sewall, and Chase, veterans of last season, won all but ten of their contests.

The high-water mark of the season was reached on May 12, when the Varsity, after having defeated Wesleyan 6-3 on the previous day, won from Yale by the margin of one match. Wolf, playing number one against Captain Reed of Yale, exhibited the best tennis of the day, but Captain Banks lost to Pitman in three sets. The outcome of the dual match depended on the final doubles contest, which Wolf and Banks took from Pitman and Mears of the Blue. The Wesleyan contest was taken without difficulty, as Adsit and Denison were the only Purple netmen to lose.

All hopes for retaining the eastern intercollegiate championship were dashed the following week when the strong Princeton team took all but one singles and one doubles match. Wolf, playing his hardest match of the season, lost after a hard struggle to Van Ryn, one of the highest-ranked players in intercollegiate tennis. Banks lost to Appel, and paired with Wolf, finally succumbed to Van Ryn and Appel, who hold the National Intercollegiate doubles title, after forcing the first set to deuce. Chase won twice for Williams' only two points.

The fact that the contest with Harvard and the New England Intercollegiate tournament occurred simultaneously, making it necessary for Wolf and Banks to play five matches apiece on one particular day, was one of the causes for the 6-3 defeat at the hands of the Crimson. Showing effects of their strenuous schedule, Wolf and Banks were defeated in both singles and doubles by Whitbeck and Hill in matches which they might very possibly have won under ordinary conditions.

CLASS DAY SPEAKERS

The other speakers at the Class Day exercises which will be held on Friday, June 22, at 2.00 p. m. are: Harry Lincoln Foster, Class Poet; Thomas Porter Robinson, Orator to Lower Classes; Charles Francis Gaskill, Ivy Orator; Gordon Bailey Washburn, Ivy Poet; Talcott Miner Banks, Class Historian.

Permanent possession of the eight point trophy for winning the championship of the N. E. I. C. L. T. A. was secured for Williams by victories in both the singles and doubles of the tournament at Longwood. After working up to the semi-final round, Wolf decisively defeated Roycroft of B. U. to enter the finals. Banks also advanced to the semi-finals, but lost to Martin, also of Boston University. Wolf then won from Martin, 6-1, 6-0, 6-4. In the finals of the doubles, Wolf and Banks overcame Kuki and Wigglesworth of M. I. T. after a struggle.

The final contest of the season was played against Amherst here on Memorial Day. Although it rained throughout the afternoon, the Varsity played in good form, and Wolf, Banks, Sewall, Chase, and McGregor were victorious to take the match at 7-2.

Following are the scores for the season:

Williams 8	Union 1
Williams 7	Bowdoin 2
Williams 6	Wesleyan 3
Williams 5	Yale 4
Williams 2	Princeton 7
Williams won N. E. I. C. L. T. A. singles and doubles
Williams 3	Harvard 6
Williams 7	Amherst 2

Television Methods to be Demonstrated

made to illuminate in turn every point of the miniature lantern slide to be transmitted, through the medium of a scanning disk with 16 small holes arranged in a spiral. The light then passes into a photoelectric cell, which allows a weak current to flow, the strength of which is proportional to the intensity of the light entering the cell. The variations in this minute current are then amplified about 80,000 times through the use of vacuum tubes, after which they are strong enough to blink a special neon lamp. The neon lamp has the peculiarity of being able to light up and go out practically instantaneously in time with the variations in the current, and thus it blinks in time with the variations in the light passing through the different portions of the picture being transmitted. The neon lamp is viewed through a scanning disk exactly the same as the one at the transmitter, which has the effect of reconstructing the original picture. Thus, upon looking into the receiving disk, one sees, in pink and black, an image of the lantern slide at the transmitting end.

For convenience the two disks have been mounted on the same shaft and are turned together, but in actual practice they are separated by any desirable distance, with a wire or radio circuit to carry the current. Besides the experiments conducted by Messrs. Manning and Pierce, attempts have also been made to receive the pictures now transmitted by station WGY in Schenectady. These experiments, conducted by H. Kuper '30 with the assistance of the Physics Department, use an ordinary broadcast receiver with a neon lamp and scanning disk. Due, however, to distortion in the receiver and other difficulties the pictures obtained so far have been too indistinct to use for demonstration purposes.

STAR ALUMNI TEAM TO OPPOSE VARSITY

'Old Grads' Will Have Strong Nine for Commencement Game
Here on June 21

When the Varsity baseball team trots on Weston Field on the afternoon of June 21 to play the Alumni, it cannot expect to meet a weak opponent, but, instead, it will be forced to play against a squad which has drawn its players from the best of the stars of recent Williams nines. The contest will be one of the features of the Commencement period, and, with many alumni in Williamstown for reunions, it should prove to be one of the most interesting and entertaining games of the year.

The Varsity has had its share of setbacks this season and it will be more than anxious to redeem itself to some extent by registering a defeat over the "old grads". The Alumni nine will not be composed of a group of stiff, unconditioned men enjoying the luxury of middle age, but will consist of men chosen particularly for their baseball playing ability who were in the graduating classes of the last five years, the team numbering among its members some of the most famous athletes of modern Williams history.

The Alumni team has been organized by Hoyt '23, who will play second base, and it boasts of such stars as Fisher '25, one of the greatest athletes ever turned out by Williams, Eddie Monjo '23, the famous ball hawk of five years ago, Deane Walker '27, captain and star of last year's nine, Harry Watkins '25, a brilliant flycatcher, Sam Ferris '27, star pitcher of last year, and possibly Buck Austin ex-'28, first baseman extraordinary. Against a lineup composed of such outstanding stars, the Varsity will be forced to display its best brand of ball in order to gain a victory. The undergraduate line-up will probably be the same as has been representing Williams in other games except that both Tittman and Alexander, who have been out of the game for the last few weeks, with wrenched knees, will no doubt be able to play.

The tentative line-ups and batting orders are:

Varsity—Putnam, ss; Thoms, cf; Delano, 3b; T. H. Smith, rf; Foster or Alexander, lf; Winn, 2b; Tittman, Alexander, or Tyson, 1b; Smith, c; T. H. Smith, Singmaster, or Wolcott, p.
Alumni—Buck '24, cf; O'Brien '24, 3b; Richmond '23 or Austin ex-'28, 1b; Fisher '25 or Watkins '25, rf; Monjo '23, lf; Walker '27, ss; Hoyt '23, 2b; Coe '25, or Stephenson '23, c; Ferris '27, Fincke '24, Gregory '24, or Holmes '23, p.

custom in past years the class that is holding its twenty-fifth reunion will hold a memorial service in the chapel. The regular prayer meeting in Mission Park will be held at 4.30 p. m. In the evening Charles L. Safford, Director of Music, will give an organ recital in Chapin Hall, this music bringing to a close the series of recitals

Commencement procession will begin at 10.00 a. m., and the exercises themselves will be held at the close of the procession in Chapin Hall. Commencement week will be ended with the Alumni luncheon to be held in the Lasell gymnasium. As in past years some of the freshman and sophomore dormitories will be reserved for the visiting alumni.

Golfers Complete Creditable Season

Wheeler split exactly even in his season's matches. He has to his credit in particular one of the three victories in the Harvard meet. Fall won two of the three matches which he played and then resigned his place to G. Nye, who was victorious in three of the last five encounters, including points against Dartmouth and Yale. His Wesleyan match was defaulted. Due to frequent shifts in the playing order, little is to be learned from a general survey of foursome results. Blaney and Williams were an invariable combination which won five of its matches.

PURPLE BALL TEAM OPPOSES DARTMOUTH

Hanover Nine Will Invade Williams-town with Strong Team for Closing Game

After a rest of three weeks due to final examinations the Williams Varsity will resume its activities in intercollegiate circles when Dartmouth is encountered on Westou field June 23. The Commencement Day game will be the last chance the Purple will have to break its streak of bad luck and turn in a victory; however the Big Green team will have the advantage of actual competition and will present plenty of opposition for the home squad.

Comparative scores show that, although Williams has not won as many games as the Indians, her record against strong teams is the better of the two. Vermont defeated Dartmouth 7-0 while the Purple held their opponents to a 1-0 score. The Hanover club showed its most powerful evidence of strength when it defeated Penn State 7-5 in a contest which was close from start to finish, a ninth inning rally deciding the outcome. The strong Fordham nine inflicted a 2-1 defeat upon the Big Green, who retaliated the following week by overcoming Boston College 7-6 in the second game of the season between the two colleges. The Dartmouth-Brown encounter was a 0-0 tie when called because of rain. The Indians have been somewhat handicapped the same as Williams by the inclement weather, but recently have been showing good ball.

Breckinridge seems to be the best twirler for the Green and has had plenty of experience. Walsh and Harris are the heavy hitters of the team, although Fusonic and Lane have been connecting consistently. McDonough will probably do the receiving. Marsh and Sands, third and second basemen, while not especially heavy hitters are fairly good and are rated as a fast pair of infielders. The entire club is fielding well and is at present in second place in the league with Pennsylvania, Cornell and Columbia.

The Purple squad has been improving throughout the season and only the worst of luck has kept the team from turning in victories. The past two games especially were lost by nothing but pure bad luck. The excellent showing made against Vermont, who defeated Dartmouth twice this season, shows that the squad is capable of playing ball. C. Smith will catch the game and Singmaster will probably start in the box with T. Smith in right field. Alexander may be back on the first sack by that time and if so his hitting strength will aid the team considerably. Winn, Putnam, and Delano will comprise the remainder of the infield. Delano has been hitting consistently and looks like a dependable fielder. Foster and Thomas will roam the outer gardens and both of these men are capable of doing the job.

The probable lineup is as follows:

WILLIAMS	POS.	DARTMOUTH
Putnam	s.s.	Walsh
Thoms	c.f.	Lane
Alexander	1b.	Fusonic
T. Smith	r.f.	Parker
Delano	3b.	Marsh
Foster	l.f.	Harris
Winn	2b.	Sands
N. Smith	c.	McDonough
Singmaster	p.	Breckinridge

Examination Schedule

NOTED EUROPEANS TO LEAD 'INSTITUTE'

Plans for Eighth Annual Politics Session Are Announced by Dr. Garfield

MEETING WILL CONVEENE FROM AUGUST 2 TO 20

'Institute' Will Concentrate Upon Reorientation of American Foreign Policy

Taking as main topics of discussion the American foreign policy in the Pacific and Caribbean and the problem of American agricultural relief, statesmen and scholars of international repute will conduct lecture courses and round-table conferences at the eighth annual session of the Institute of Politics, which will convene in Williamstown from August 2 to 20 under the chairmanship of President Harry A. Garfield. The roll-call of leaders will include such men as Dr. Louis Pierard of Belgium and Dr. Otto Hoetsch of Germany, two outstanding parliamentarians of Europe, while for the first time in the history of the Institute a woman, Halide Edib Hanum, a Turkish feminist, will lecture and preside over a conference.

In outlining the purpose of the coming session of the Institute, Dr. Walter R. McLaren, executive secretary, who has recently returned from Europe where he perfected arrangements with the European lecturers, has issued the following statement:

"As all the great powers of Europe have accepted, in principle at least, the Kellogg proposals to renounce war as an instrument of national policy, our foreign policy must reorient itself, and with that object in view, the program of the Institute concentrates half its time upon the two closely related areas of the Pacific ocean and the Caribbean. Two round-table conferences and several meetings of general conferences will be devoted to each of these areas. By this concentration, the managers of the Institute have responded to the increasing importance of the Pacific as a coming center of interest in world affairs.

"By taking into our group of lecturers and conference leaders a Turkish feminist, the Institute acknowledges the increasing importance of the position occupied by women in the creation of public opinion on world affairs.

"As the problem of our agricultural surplus and agricultural relief is still unsolved, the Institute provides for its further discussion. Closely related to the problems of international trade, are those connected with the protection of citizens and their property, especially their investment in foreign countries. As our investments grow, so likewise grows the importance of our relations with the foreign countries in which our investments are placed."

SENIORS HOLD ANNUAL CLASS DAY EXERCISES

Reception, 'Moonlights', and Reunions Follow Senior Songs, Poems, and Speeches

Formal ceremonies of the 134th commencement began last Friday afternoon when the annual class day exercises took place in the presence of alumni, parents, and friends. After the seniors had completed their exercises, there was a reception at the President's house, and later on in the evening the annual "Moonlights" contest, followed by a Musical Clubs concert, which immediately preceded fraternity reunions at the different chapter houses.

George Dikeman Sterling, of Chatham Center, N. Y., opened the ceremonies in the Chapin Hall auditorium with the President's address. After extending a welcome to the alumni and visitors on behalf of the Class of 1928, he discussed various problems of college life which have been particularly prominent. Following this introductory speech, Harry Lincoln Foster, of Morristown, N. J., read the class poem, after which the class rose and sang "Our Mother".

Led by the class marshals, Stanley Raymond Anderson and Charles Francis Boynton, both of New York City, the procession then moved to the Thompson Memorial Chapel, where the class, according to time-honored custom, planted the ivy. After this ceremony Gordon Bailey Washburn, of Worcester, read the Ivy Poem, and was followed by Charles Francis Gaskill, of Worcester, who delivered the Ivy Oration. In his speech he mentioned the ivy as symbolizing the unity and friendship the class has maintained for the past four years and the bonds which now link it forever with the College. This part of the exercises was then closed by the singing of "Ninth the Shadow of the Hills".

At this point the seniors proceeded to the Stetson Hall Campus, where Wentworth Brown, of Berlin, N. H., gave the Library Oration. Following this, the class joined in singing "Come Raise a Song to Alma Mater". The procession now moved to Mission Park for the closing speeches. Thomas Porter Robinson, of New York City, the Orator to the Lower Classes, stressed the need of loyalty in all phases of college life. The only speech of the afternoon not of a serious nature was (Continued on Sixth Page)

FACULTY CONFERS DEGREES

Augustus Noble Hand, Ralph Adams Cram, and Walter Gifford Also Honored

Four honorary degrees of Doctor of Laws, two of Doctor of Science, two of Doctor of Humane Letters, one of Doctor of Divinity, and one of Master of Arts were conferred by the trustees of Williams College at the 134th annual commencement exercises held in Chapin Hall this morning. Of the ten men, seven attended Williams, while the remaining three were Ralph Adams Cram, noted architect and author; Walter Sherman Gifford, president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company; and Augustus Noble Hand, prominent legal authority and judge. Various members of the Faculty conferred the degrees.

In presenting George Alfred Cluett for the degree of Master of Arts, Professor Maye said, "Mr. President: I present as candidate for the honorary degree of Master of Arts, George Alfred Cluett: A member of the Class of 1896; loyal friend of the College and representative citizen of Williamstown. In conferring this degree Williams again emphasizes its traditional attitude, that the interests of Williamstown and Williams College are one and inseparable, and that good citizenship is in itself worthy of academic recognition."

In presenting Professor Walter A. Bratton for the degree of Doctor of Science, Professor Pratt said, "For the degree of (Continued on Sixth Page)

AMHERST AUTHORITIES INDORSE NEW POLICIES

Substitute Proctors for Honor System—Withdraw Driving Privileges Entirely

Faculty and student sentiment concerning drastic changes in Amherst's administration and college rulings came to a head on June 1, when, after the faculty had passed a resolution substituting a proctor system for the honor system, a large majority of the college met in the chapel and afterwards burnt the dean in effigy. The chief reason given for the administrative change was that students were unwilling to report cases of dishonesty but the faculty added a proviso to the resolution to the effect that the honor system might be re-established if the present plan proves unsatisfactory.

Under the proctor system, students may not leave the examination room at all during the three hours, several classes being in one room under the supervision of a number of proctors. Smoking during the three hours is prohibited. The institution of the proctor system brings to an end a 23-year precedent, and also overrides a student vote taken this spring which showed a preference for the honor system. By her action, Amherst joins the ranks of several institutions, among whom are Leland Stanford University, Union, Cincinnati University, and Western Reserve, who have also abandoned the honor system.

Abolition of driving privileges to Seniors and Juniors was instituted at the same time, it was decided to have mid-year instead of term examinations. Prerequisites were decided as necessary for admission to the most sought-after major courses, and seniors in the future will have to attend church after "Senior Chapel", which has not been the case heretofore.

TENTH INNING RALLY SUBMERGES VARSITY

Alumni Pound Ball Hard To Score Three Runs in Extra Frame, Winning, 5-2

For nine innings the Varsity ball team, with Singmaster on the mound, fought on even terms with a team composed of Alumni, but in the first extra period, Alumni bats began to function, and, with the aid of some loose playing by the Varsity, accounted for three runs, making the score 5-2. The game, played for the most part in a drizzling rain, was listless and uninteresting, but as hostilities went on, there were more and more examples of good baseball, the most notable of which was the powerful slugging of the Alumni in the last inning.

Gregory, pitching for the visitors, turned in an excellent performance, allowing but three hits. He was given fine support by his team-mates, who not only played well in the field, but delivered at bat when hits (Continued on Third Page)

Tennis, Golf, Lacrosse Squads Elect Captains

Harry Florian Wolf '29, number one for the past year on the Varsity tennis squad, was chosen captain for the 1928-29 season at a meeting of the tennis squad held in Jesup hall last Tuesday. Wolf is not only the holder of the Rockwood Challenge Cup, but has twice been winner in doubles in the N. E. I. C. A. and is this year's singles champion.

Wolf prepared for Williams at St. Peter's Preparatory School where he was an active member of the tennis and basketball squads. Since coming to College he has been on the tennis team for three years and was a member of the basketball squad during the past year. He is also a holder of the Rice Book Prize in Latin and was awarded sophomore honors.

Following three years of consistent playing J. G. Williams '29 has been elected to the captaincy of the golf team. Williams prepared for Williams at the Thacher School, Ojai, California where he was a member of the golf, baseball, and football teams. Since freshman year he has confined his activities to golf, the fire brigade and the Purple Key.

E. J. Collins '29 was elected to captain Williams' newest sport, lacrosse. Collins prepared at Poly Prep where he played soccer, lacrosse, and football. Since entering College he has played football and lacrosse and was a member of the wrestling squad.

Frank Mather, of the Princeton Faculty, Discusses a Tentative Program of Junior and Senior Colleges

Proposing a tentative program entailing the establishment of a Junior college, which at the end of two years of study would grant a Bachelor of Arts degree to those students "who desire much college life with little academic work", and along with this a Senior college for undergraduates who display "a promise of real scholarship", Frank Jewett Mather, '89, of the Princeton faculty and a prominent authority on art, in a recent issue of the Educational Review proposed a solution to the important problem of the place of the undergraduate. The author describes the position of the modern student as follows: "In the upperclass years of a modern college the average undergraduate simply has no place. . . The problem seems to be to exclude him from the upper classes without unfairly discrediting him, and to make his sojourn in the under-classes more secure, dignified, and profitable."

Mr. Mather said that we might borrow the traditional English pass degree, if the "imitation of membership and sharp competition did not make this impracticable." After casting this system aside on these grounds, the writer explained his plans for two colleges to meet the two different types of students that are being educated in our colleges today—those "who want college life with serious study and those who want college life with study at a minimum." For the former, the two year college would be suited and give them that "minimum of information which may reasonably be expected of a liberally educated man." A degree would be awarded at the end of the two years, and students who have shown special aptitude either on entrance or during the period they were at the Junior college, could enter a Senior college, where they would study independently under faculty supervision. Instead of the Bachelor of Arts degree a Master of Arts degree would be given on graduation from this college.

Mr. Mather states that the opposition to such a plan would be "in the inert generalizing sense of college faculties and officials, and in the sentimental devotion of the average alumnus to the traditional cult of college life. . . Yet I believe that even an alumnus, if very tactfully led, might be induced to take a reasonable and unselfish view of a college problem. Undergraduate opposition is the least of my misgivings. It would flare up and soon pass. Indeed, the old school undergraduate is (Continued on Sixth Page)

THE YEAR

Although the departing undergraduate is just now more interested in the immediate future than in the immediate past, it is fitting that he look back over the past year at Williams with some degree of solicitude. It has been a year of steady progress, rather than of spectacular triumphs. We have seen the ripening and development of many new projects and the introduction of others. Within the complex organization of the College, in matters social and scholastic, much dead wood has been thrown overboard, and much young timber added. And so a brief review of some of the highlights of 1927-28 should be both instructive and interesting. We have listed what appear to us the more important problems or phases of our College life. The remarks are necessarily cryptic, but perhaps the reader will be able to form from them some idea as to the extent to which events of the past year have contributed solutions.

Curriculum. Requirements were broadened for choice of subjects in Freshman year, History 1-2 being open. The elective in the major was also extended. Honors work was still popular with upperclassmen, a total of 66 enrolling in 14 subjects. Three new courses were added to the curriculum for next year, these to be known as Chemistry 9, Philosophy 10, and Economics 12.

Social. Last fall rushing season was conducted under the general supervision of an arbiter, selected from the Faculty and paid a salary by the various fraternities for his work. In a detailed report to the Interfraternity Council, Professor Leigh, acting as the first arbiter, said, "... I am convinced that there is no more favorable college body anywhere in the country for pioneering in the establishment of honest and decent interfraternity relations." At their mid-winter meeting, the Trustees appropriated funds for the re-furnishing of the Commons Club. Houseparties, given throughout the year, were declared to be altogether proper, there being apparently no violations of the new rules. Two proms were held.

Student Government. Important steps taken by the Student Council during the year were: the abolishment of the ruling on limitation of undergraduate activities; the abolishment of the No-Deal Committee and managerial elections; the passing of rules providing for the election of Freshman class officers at mid-years instead of in the fall, the individual selection of Junior Advisors for the purpose of making this job a campus honor, and for student supervision of deportment in chapel.

Athletics. The football team had a fair season, marked by an emphatic use of the new lateral pass ruling and the creation of two alternating "first" teams. An itinerant rally on the eve of the Amherst game caused Coach Doug Lawson to exclaim, "Never in my seven years at Williams have I ever beheld such spirit displayed by the College on any occasion." Amherst won, 7-6. Mr. Charles Caldwell, Princeton '24, three-letter man and all-American football player, was appointed as Williams' first all-year football coach, starting next fall. The opening of the new wing of the gymnasium, together with the new basketball court, gave a decided impetus to the "Athletics for all" policy. Members of the N. E. I. C. S. A. held their annual meet in the new pool, at which Williams placed third. A few days later, Schott '29 broke the national collegiate record in the breast stroke. An effort was made to raise basketball to the status of a major sport when a petition to this effect was published above the names of the major managers and the president of the Student Council. At a College meeting, held December 8 to discuss the question, strong opposition was forthcoming from hockey adherents, who demanded postponement of the matter until they had a covered rink. The Reono advocated either major letters for both sports with strictly limited awards, or the present minor letters with generous awards. This spring the track team was defeated by Wesleyan for the first time since 1919. The tennis team, in the persons of Wolf and Banks, won the singles and doubles of the New England intercollegiate tournament, and thereby gave Williams permanent possession of the trophy. Amherst won the Trophy of Trophies for the first time in history. Interest in baseball was, for the most part, at a low ebb.

Religion, etc. Bible tests, given to sophomores and freshmen this year for the first time, revealed the fact, according to the Reverend Mr. Twichell, that there are many "religious illiterates" in College. The Williams Christian Association had an active year, raising subscriptions of over $7,000 for the community chest, co-operating with the Red Cross in rescue work during the November flood, and maintaining a boys' club in Spring Street.

Dramatics. Cap and Bells tried two departures from the ordinary type of collegiate dramatics, presenting at Christmas, Jabberwocky, based on Alice in Wonderland and this spring, The Tragedy of Hamlet, based on the Italian Commedia dell'Arte. "The Little Theatre opened its third season with the most successful performance of its history", stated Professor Newhall in a review. Throughout the season, this organization gave many one-act plays. Mr. Harry Irvine, Shakespearean actor and Cap and Bells coach, remarked upon the poor facilities for dramatics at Williams. The Record agreed with him. Nothing happened.

M. TURNER '15 GIVEN CONSULATE AT PARIS

Williams Graduate's Promotion to Important Position Follows
Work in Ceylon

A dispatch from Washington to the Torrington Register announces the promotion of Mason Turner '15, of Torrington, Connecticut, from the post of American consul at Colombo, Ceylon, to that of consul at Paris, France. The latter is one of the most important posts in the United States consular service.

MASON TURNER, 1915
United States Consul at Paris

At present Mr. Turner and his bride, Miss Boadicea Cates, an English girl who has been teaching in Bishops College in Ceylon, are on a honeymoon trip to India following their wedding in Ceylon last month. It is expected that the couple will proceed to Paris immediately upon their return to Ceylon. The post vacated by Mr. Turner will be filled by Stillman W. Ellis, who has been consul at Leeds, England.

Mr. Turner has been in the consular service for over five years, his first appointment being as vice consul at Colombo. He graduated from Williams with the class of 1915 after receiving his preliminary education at St. Paul's school, Concord, N. H.

DAWSON DISCUSSES CONDITIONS IN SYRIA

'All Countries Are Responsible for Peace That France Imposes on Near East'

"Upon America more than upon any other great power, though none can escape their responsibility in this matter (the situation in Syria), lies the onus of transforming the existing dubious illumination into the bright light of liberty", said Benjamin F. Dawson '08, one of the few foreigners who actually witnessed the recent hostilities in Syria, when interviewed by a Record reporter on existing conditions in that country. Mr. Dawson went on to say that "any so-called peace which France may, in the absence of humane intervention by the other Powers, succeed in imposing upon Syria will not be a peace of mutual compromise and right dealing, but will be a 'peace' thrust upon a small nation beaten, bullied, and maltreated past the power of articulate protest, to the verge of death."

"No adequate estimate of the present situation in this unhappy country can fail to take cognizance of five vital factors which act and react in each other to produce, in the mind of the observer, an impression of chaotic instability and, on the conduct of the inhabitants, an evanescent and sterile activity of mind as incalculable in its processes as bewildering in its frenetic and violent manifestations. The first, and perhaps the most important of these factors, is the plethora of religious communities", consisting of Moslems, Christians, Jews, and Post-Islamic Doctrines. The next factor is the attitude of the French toward these religious communities based partially on dim historical events and more recently on deliberate calculations of policy. The mentality of the Syrians themselves is the third element, these people never having had time "to acquire a national pride" and until recently always having hoped to be mistaken for Frenchmen. The fourth consideration which must be taken into calculation is the peculiar, almost mystical superiority which distinguishes the Druses from all other tribes of Syria. The final reason which must be considered is twofold: "the intrigues of the Great Powers in the Middle East and the anti-European feeling, which,

GIFTS TO COLLEGE TOTAL $374,243.00

Contributions Come from Alumni, Graduate Organizations, and Friends of College

From July 1, 1927 to date, Williams College has received $374,243.00 in gifts, which are classified into funds for general purposes, special purposes, endowment funds, and current expenses. In the first category come the contributions of $30,481.97 from the estate of Francis Lynde Stetson, and $45,000 from the estate of Margaret Olivia Sage.

The largest donation for special purposes is that of Herbert H. Lehman of the Class of 1899 for the construction of Lehman Hall at the cost of $52,058.75, while contributions for golf course improvements total $41,760.00, and those for the new gymnasium $23,872.43. There have been fifteen sources of income for endowments, the largest being one of $30,000 from the estate of the late Alexander White, and the others ranging from $185.00 to $25,000. For current expenses, the Carnegie Foundation has provided $10,716.25 for retiring allowances, and the Williams Loyalty Fund almost an equal amount for increasing faculty salaries. Other gifts, numbering fifteen in all, are from $10.00 to more than $3,500.

The total amounts in each category are as follows:

General purposes	$75,481.97
Special purposes	144,221.99
Endowment funds	122,456.25
Current expenses	32,082.79

Total $374,243.00

though it may be overlooked at first glance, is deep-seated."

In giving a picture of contemporary conditions in Syria, Mr. Dawson said that attention "must be focused on the Druses, those sturdy inhabitants of a tiny, sterile mountainous region of Syria. As they have borne almost the entire burden of the day, so must the greater share of honor also be theirs. For indeed it is a marvellous thing that they have done. In defense of their elementary rights, they, with never more than 1,500 rifles in the field at any one time, with but the scantiest of equipment, have withstood, for nearly two years, the whole might of the most powerful military machine at present on earth. Failing their inspiration and courage; failing their uncompromising refusal to be bribed or butchered into tame submission, the whole of Syria has lain till now groaning in her night of slavery."

"But the freedom of Syria is not yet. The night of slavery has drawn to the red dawn of war. Yet it may well be the dawn of a more glorious day. Certain things the whole civilized world, through the League of Nations, has for years been pledged to give to Syria; such things as justice, security, peace. None of these things, which are the commonplaces of life to the humblest citizens of Europe and America, has Syria enjoyed since she was confided to the keeping of France for the purpose of being instructed in the Western ideals of civilization. She has seen brought up against her the full panoply of military might. Her church towers, in defiance of international law, have been stuffed with machine guns and negro mercenaries of an alien religion. She has seen her finances squandered, her protests mocked. All this is happening in our day."

"The entire world must be held accountable. France stands in Syria as the sponsor of all civilization. She promised things in the name of all nations. The nations should see to it that these things are performed. And had it not been for the almost incredible bravery of the Druses, the complete violation of all these promises would never have been remarked. It is barely believable that these things can be done after nearly two thousand years of Christianity, and done with the sanction of the League of Nations for adequate license. But the world would seem to be so engrossed in its own peculiar activities, it would appear to be so occupied by certain tragic happenings in China and elsewhere, that the death-cries of a small nationality may well pass unheeded in the general clamor of more resounding events."

Purple Golfers to Enter National Intercollegiates

An effort is being made to secure a complete six-man team to represent Williams this year at the annual Intercollegiate Golf Association Tournament which opens over the Appawamus Country Club course at Rye, N. Y., tomorrow and will last until Friday. Captain Blaney, J. G. Williams, Heller, and K. Smith are at present planning to enter.

Although colleges and universities throughout the country will be represented by individual stars, the strongest contenders for team honors will probably be found among the line-ups which the Purple golfers have met earlier in the year, with Princeton taking the odds. Watts Gunn of Georgia Tech will defend his title won at Garden City last June. Captain Blaney, who has been defeated this season only by Captain Lanman of Yale, and that on the eighteenth hole, may be expected to advance far into the heart of things before meeting difficulty.

ALUMNI NOTES

Charles Covert, Harold Field, Warren Hooen, Seward Prunyn, Edward Salomon, Alvin Schlosser, Danforth Starr, and Donald Wells are enrolled at the Harvard Business School. Tower Thompson is attending the School of Literature, while Robert Baker is doing graduate work in philosophy prior to going to Oxford University as a Rhodes Scholar.

DR. GARFIELD RECEIVES DEGREE FROM HARVARD

Honorary LL.D. Awarded Williams
President at Cambridge
Commencement

At the 292nd. Commencement Exercises of Harvard University on Thursday, June 21, Dr. Harry A. Garfield, president of Williams College, was one of a distinguished group to receive the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws. In the presentation speech, Dr. Garfield was lauded as a "scholar, public administrator in the strain of war, and for a score of years the strong, vigorous, and judicious president of Williams College."

Other men to receive the degree of Doctor of Laws were Dwight Whitney Morrow, American ambassador to Mexico and well-known member of the firm of J. P. Morgan, Ernest Martin Hopkins, president of Dartmouth College, George Wigglesworth, noted lawyer and scholar, Herbert Putnam, head of the Congressional Library since 1899, and Alfred Ernest Stearns, principal of Phillips Andover Academy. The degree of Doctor of Science was awarded to David Linn Edsall, Dean of Harvard Medical School, and to George Richards Minot, a professor at the Harvard Medical School who has made notable achievements in medicine. William Coolidge Lane, librarian of Harvard for 30 years, and Bronson Murray Cutting, courageous newspaper editor in New Mexico, were given the honorary degree of Master of Arts (M.A.).

Dr. Garfield, who became president of Williams in 1908, has been awarded since that time seven honorary degrees. The certificate of Doctor of Laws he received from Princeton and Dartmouth in 1908, from Amherst and Wesleyan in 1909, from William and Mary in 1921, and finally from Harvard in 1928. The degree of Doctor of Humane Letters was conferred upon Dr. Garfield by Whitman College in 1919.

Tenth Inning Rally Submerges Varsity

meant runs. The Varsity was somewhat hampered by several of the best players out of the game, and Coach Fox was forced to rearrange his line-up in several positions. T. H. Smith was called upon to catch, while Winn covered shortstop and Inverso played at second, in order to fill the gap left by Putnam, who was called out of town.

However, even with the Varsity patched up as it was, the Purple players gave a good account of themselves, fighting an uphill battle all the way, but finally being forced to accept defeat when the graduates rallied in the tenth. In this inning Ferris slammed out a long triple to the running track in left center and scored a few minutes later on a passed ball. Hoyt was walked and scored when Bowdy's bid for a hit was poorly played. He scored shortly afterwards on Holmes' hit. The side was then retired when Holmes was forced at second.

Until the last inning the two nines had fought on even terms. The alumni drew first blood in the third inning when a two-base hit by Ferris, a walk and two errors produced two runs, but the Varsity tied the count when runs were scored in the fourth and sixth. The first run was tallied by Delano when he singled, went to third on an error and stole home, while the tying run was counted by Capt. Smith when he walked, stole second, and crossed the plate on an error. A final effort was made by the Varsity to pull the game out of the fire in the tenth, after the Alumni had scored their three runs, but it was to no avail. Singmaster opened the inning with a single, but was left stranded when the next three men were retired in order.

Eight Plays To Be Presented

Those who linger in Williamstown during the summer months will this year have the opportunity to indulge their taste for the legitimate stage as well as for politics and Berkshire breezes, thanks to the eight week series offered by the Berkshire Playhouse at Stockbridge. Beginning July 2 the Playhouse will present a new play each week, chosen from the works of Barrie, Shakespeare, Shaw, and others, and featuring such actors as Janet Beecher, Cissie Loftus, Margaret Wycheley, O. P. Heggie, and Ian McLaren. Further information and tickets may be secured at Graff's Book Store in Williamstown, by telephoning Stockbridge 99, or by request to the Berkshire Playhouse through the mail. Subscription seats for all eight plays are also available.

TRUSTEES APPROVE CHANGES IN FACULTY

Three Instructors Appointed and One Assistant Professor Is Added to Staff

Faculty appointments for the year 1928-29 formed the principal part of the work of the Williams College Trustees at the annual meeting held last Friday morning in Chapin Hall. The following resolution was also adopted in recognition of the gift of the Class of 1888 of $10,801.45, which, together with the class's former gifts to the Williams Professorship Fund defrays the cost of building one of the entries of Williams Hall:

"Resolved: that this Board has heard with the deepest satisfaction of the continued interest and loyalty of the Class of 1888 just evidenced by its contribution of the balance of the entire cost of an entry of Williams Hall over the earlier and generous contribution of the class when the hall was constructed; and that the Secretary formally express to this loyal class the appreciation and gratitude of the President and the Trustees of Williams College for this gift to the College, to be applied to the Williams Professorship Fund for the increase of salaries. It is gratifying to know that this class shares the opinion of this Board that the present greatest need of Williams is to make possible a substantial increase in the compensation of its teachers."

The following are the appointments made by the Trustees:

Mr. James B. Brinsmade, Assistant Professor of Physics, and Mr. Elbert C. Cole, Assistant Professor of Biology, were advanced to the rank of Associate Professor in their respective departments;

Mr. Paul Birdsall was appointed Assistant Professor of History for three years;

Mr. William J. Calvert, Jr. was appointed Instructor in English;

Mr. H. I. Dorwart was appointed Instructor in Mathematics as a substitute for Assistant Professor Wells, who will be absent during the coming year on sabbatical leave;

Mr. John T. Perry was appointed Instructor in Geology;

Dr. Arthur Noehren was appointed College Physician for one year;

Professor Howes was appointed Dean of the College and Professor Agard Assistant Dean and Secretary of the Faculty;

Mr. Hoyt was elected secretary of the Board.

ALUMNI NOTES

1925

Announcement is made by Mr. and Mrs. John H. Fahey of Boston of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Margaret Fahey, to Franklin D. Rudolph of New York City. Miss Fahey graduated from Skidmore College with the class of 1926. The wedding will take place in New York on Thursday, July 19. Mr. Rudolph has recently been transferred from the research division of the American Can Company to the general sales department in the main office of the company at 120 Broadway, New York.

HUTTON ELECTED 1929 MANAGER OF BASEBALL

Seven Managers Selected After Competitions in Baseball and Track

Norman Hutton, Jr., of Chicago, Ill., and Joseph K. Close, of Toledo, Ohio, have been chosen to fill the positions of assistant managers of baseball and track as a result of the spring competitions. Honor of selection as assistant manager of golf and manager of Freshman baseball fall to R. Miller, of Auburndale, and C. S. Willmott of Watertown, N. Y., while Richard Ely of Westfield, C. Covell of Philadelphia, and William E. Park of Norton will hold the assistant managerships of tennis, lacrosse, and freshman track, respectively.

Hutton prepared for Williams at Pawling where he was prominent in athletic and scholastic activities, and last year played on his class football team. Close entered Williams from the Hill School and in his Freshman year won a place on the editorial board of The Record. Miller has been active in Cap and Bells and as photographic editor of The Record this year, and Willmott has played on the varsity soccer and basketball teams during the past season.

Ely prepared at the Choate School where he was active in basketball and track, and since coming to Williams has held the position of president of his class for two years and has been a member of his class basketball team and the varsity squad. He was elected this year to the Purple Key Society. Covell occupies the post of advertising manager of The Record, while Park was active in athletics during his first year.

In Memoriam

JESSE LYMAN DOUGHERTY

It is with a feeling of great personal loss that we wish to express our deepest sympathy to the family and friends of Jesse Lyman Dougherty on this occasion of bereavement. During the two years in which our lives and his have been in close contact, we have come more and more to appreciate the vital character of his relations with us and his thoughtful devotion to College, Society and friends,—a devotion faithful and unselfish. Although our expression of sorrow and regret for his passing is at best inadequate, yet we are sincerely thankful for the privilege of association with him, and the opportunity of establishing an intimate friendship which memory will preserve.

Sigma Phi in Williams College

During the period of his College life with us, Jesse Lyman Dougherty had won the affectionate regard of his classmates and of all who knew him. In this hour of sudden bereavement, the Class of 1930 unites in extending to his family its very deep sympathy.

Commons Club Wins Intramural Trophy of Trophies With 143 Points; Phi Sigma Kappa Is Second with 119

Having won four out of the fifteen intramural contests and having scored heavily in the others, the Commons Club with a total of 143 points won the H. H. Lehman intramural trophy of trophies for the second consecutive year. The Commons Club trailed Sigma Phi during the fall sports, but with a gain of 20 points in the basketball tournament it passed the nearest rival and held a comfortable lead throughout the remainder of the year.

Phi Sigma Kappa with victories in wrestling and swimming together with many second places earned a second rating in the trophy summary. As a result of a first place in the baseball league and the consequent 20 points for that sport, Delta Upsilon ended in third place, Phi Gamma Delta following only two points behind. Chi Psi finished in fifth place with 105 points.

Noted Europeans to Lead 'Institute'

socialist and labor-union leader in the Belgian parliament and Dr. Hoetsch, of Berlin, a member of the Reichstag since 1920, and an outstanding nationalist and authority on Russian economic, political, and social questions. The subject of the latter's lectures will be "Germany's Foreign and Domestic Policies", while Dr. Pierard will lecture on the current political problems of Belgium. The other noted European to be at the forthcoming session of the Institute will be Graham Wallas of London. He is professor emeritus of economics at London University, and was appointed Lowell lecturer at Harvard in 1914, and Dodge lecturer at Yale in 1919, and is the author of many books.

The first woman to lecture, Halide Edib Hanum, will take as her subject "Modern Turkey and Its Problems". Mme. Halide Edib is a former leader of the Turkish nationalist movement. She organized the Turkish ministry of education under Mustapha Kemal Pasha, and is well known as feminist, revolutionary author, and social reformer.

Among the outstanding Americans who will participate in the conferences of the Institute are Dr. George H. Blakeslee of Worcester, a professor of history and international relations at Clark university, who has recently returned from a survey of conditions in the East; Professor Henry T.

Collings of the University of Pennsylvania, Professor R. D. McKenzie of the University of Washington, and Professor Edwin M. Brochard of Yale.

The general public, as well as the members of the Institute, are invited to attend the public lectures and special addresses to be held in Chapin Hall. Round-table conferences are confined strictly to those members of the Institute who have been assigned to them, while general conferences are open to all members of the Institute. A number of the latter type will be conducted by the leaders of the round-table conferences, who will present the main topics that have been discussed at their round-tables.

The completed list of the conferences, together with their leaders, is as follows: "The Problems of the Pacific", Professor George H. Blakeslee of Clark University; "Protection of Citizens Abroad", Professor Edwin M. Brochard of Yale University; "Inter-American Trade and Commerce", Professor Harry T. Collings of the University of Pennsylvania; "Agriculture and Agricultural Surplus; and International Approach", Professor R. T. Fay of the University of Toronto; "The Caribbean Area", Professor Charles W. Hackett of the University of Texas; "Modern Turkey and Its Problems", Halide Edib Hanum of London; "Population Around the Pacific Rim", Professor R. D. McKenzie of the University of Washington; "Social Re-Adjustment Through Voluntary Control", Professor Graham Wallas, London School of Economics.

The lecture courses are: "Modern Turkey and Its Problems", Halide Edib Hanum of London; "Germany's Foreign and Domestic Policies", Dr. Otto Hoetsch of Berlin; "Current Political Problems in Belgium", Dr. Louis Pierard of Brussels; "Social Re-Adjustment Through Voluntary Control", Professor Graham Wallas of London.

A general conference on the problems of Africa will be conducted by Dr. Raymond L. Buell of the Foreign Policy Association of New York during the latter days of the session.

Frank Mather Discusses a Tentative Program

already in such evil case that such a program as I have proposed would work a positive relief to him, offering him with dignity and security a brief but sufficient experience of college life instead of a longer period of study largely spoiled through increasing hazard and insecurity."

The author goes on to say that the advantages of such a program would be numerous. The undergraduates would be free to pursue business careers at the "fitting age of twenty instead of twenty-two; specialists through the superior training of a senior college without the drag of a moiety of unwilling or incompetent students, saving a year or more of the now unreasonably long term of study in the university and higher class of professional school. The great number of professors now teaching in every college could be cut down and thus decrease the expenses of the institutions, while at the same time it "would greatly increase the efficiency of upperclass (senior college) teaching by limiting it to fit and responsive students."

Trustees Honor Ten

Doctor of Science I present Professor Walter A. Bratton, of Whitman College. Mr. Bratton graduated from Williams in the class of 1895 and almost immediately thereafter was appointed head of the Department of Mathematics in Whitman College, and in 1907 was made its Dean, both of which positions he holds to this day. As a teacher in his chosen field he has few equals. He has had an unusually large part in the development of Whitman College and has represented in the Far West the best traditions of New England. We are fortunate today in being able to give public recognition to the achievements of one of the worthiest of our alumni, and at the same time to emphasize the spiritual bond between Whitman and Williams."

In presenting Dr. Richard Mason Smith for the degree of Doctor of Science, Professor Mears said, "Mr. President, I present to you for the honorary degree of Doctor of Science: Richard Mason Smith. After graduating from Williams College with Phi Beta Kappa rank in 1903 he completed his education with distinction at the Harvard Medical School. Dr. Smith soon became a noted authority and writer on the care and medical treatment of children. He is a teacher of child hygiene at the Harvard Medical School and School of Public Health. He contributed to the public welfare by his interest in the Infant's Hospital and Child's Hospital of Boston. He continually serves as the sympathetic adviser to many anxious parents in times of worry and distraction. Because of this distinguished record it is most fitting that this loyal alumnus should be thus honored by his Alma Mater on this, the twenty-fifth anniversary of his graduation."

In presenting Mr. George Benjamin Rogers for the degree of Doctor of Humane Letters, Professor Maxcy said: "Mr. President, I present as candidate for the honorary degree of Doctor of Humane Letters George Benjamin Rogers: A graduate of the College in the class of 1888. For thirty years a teacher of youth in one of the oldest and most famous schools of New England; a wise counselor of the young; an open-minded seeker after truth; filled with the spirit of understanding, he has ever kept before him, the 'goal of a life of service and of fitness to serve.'"

In presenting Mr. Ralph Adams Cram for the degree of Doctor of Humane Letters, Professor Weston said, "Mr. President: For the honorary degree of Doctor of Humane Letters, I present Ralph Adams Cram: architect, author, and scholar of international distinction; learned and sympathetic student of the Middle Ages and the Renaissance, in his writings and in his architecture he has interpreted their transcendent genius to our day and generation; Builder of churches and cathedrals, he has preserved in its integrity the structural perfection of the Gothic which is its aesthetic glory and the spiritual significance which is its soul; Williams College confers this honor upon him in this building which his genius has created."

In presenting the Reverend Maurice A. Levy for the degree of Doctor of Divinity, Professor Morton said, "Graduate of Williams in the class of '97, graduate and trustee of Newton Theological Institution, pastor of First Baptist Church, Pittsfield. A leader in the pulpit, on the platform and in organization, he fights the good fight of the church militant in the ministry of reconciliation. As a shepherd he feeds many besides his own flock, and as a citizen he carries on with vigor the arduous task of religion to make the secular sacred."

In presenting Walter Sherman Gifford for the Degree of Doctor of Laws, Professor McElfresh said, "Mr. President: I present to you as candidate for the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws, Walter Sherman Gifford, a graduate of Harvard College of the class of 1905. Serving his country in war as director of the Council of National Defense, and in peace as head of her greatest public utility corporation, a scholar winning large success in the administration of material concerns, by his own illustrious example and by the unanswerable logic of his statistics he bears convincing testimony to the fact that scholarly achievement in college prepares for subsequent success in fields of practical affairs."

In presenting Charles C. Nott, junior, for the Degree of Doctor of Laws, Professor McLauren said, "Mr. President, I present for the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws Charles C. Nott, junior, of the Class of 1890; graduate of the Harvard Law School, member of the New York Bar, Judge of the Court of General Sessions in New York City, reformer of the procedure of this court, pioneer in the appreciation of the psychology of crime, exponent of equal justice for all."

In presenting James Addison Young for the degree of Doctor of Laws, Professor Wild said: "Mr. President: I present to you for the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws: James Addison Young, a graduate of Williams College in the class of 1888; District Attorney of Westchester County, N. Y., from 1902 to 1908; Justice of the Supreme Court of the State of New York since 1916, for six years serving as Judge of Trial Term; in 1922 appointed by Governor Miller as Associate Judge of the Appellate Division, Second Department, and later reappointed by Governor Smith. Of clear mind and broad vision he exemplifies the truth of the old saying that it is the function of a good judge to enlarge justice. His scholarly decisions have been authoritative and far-reaching in the midst of the changing conditions of our time. Regarded by his associates on the Bench as one of the leading jurists of his State, Mr. Justice Young also wields the influence of a great citizen. His intellectual force is governed by his high integrity. Through sound learning and a gift for just interpretation he transmutes law into public benefits."

In presenting Augustus Noble Hand for the degree of Doctor of Laws, Professor Doughty said, "Mr. President, for the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws I present to you Honorable Augustus N. Hand, Judge of the United States Circuit Court for the Second Circuit. Graduated with highest honors from Harvard University in 1890 and from the Harvard Law School in 1894, his usual ability and profound learning in the law have won for him an enviable reputation and a place of high distinction among his colleagues of both Bench and Bar. Nor have the exactions of a crowded professional career narrowed his interests. Not only has he ever heeded the call of opportunity promising the advancement of good government, but religious, educational and philanthropic organizations have always found in him a sympathetic and helpful counselor and friend. For Williams College to admit him to the most honored class of her Alumni is but to bestow honor where honor is due."

Seniors Hold Annual Class Day Exercises

given by James Speed Reid, of Springfield, Ill., who delivered the Pipe Oration, during which the well-known pipe was passed around the ring of graduates to receive a puff from each member of the class.

As the concluding exercise of the class the group proceeded to the top of the chapel tower and dropped a watch on the pavement below, its breaking denoting good luck for 1928. All then joined in a final singing of "The Mountains".

From four until six o'clock President Garfield received alumni, faculty, members of the graduating class and friends of the college at his house. At eight o'clock the Prize Rhetorical Contest was held on the Chapin Hall Portico, in which five juniors and three sophomores took part. In this "Moonlight Exhibition" were C. A. Elliott, T. Greene, D. R. Little, J. F. McKean, and R. B. Sewall '29, and B. D. Gilbert, H. K. Straw, and F. K. Thun '30. Following this a program was given by the Musical Clubs. Fraternity banquets and reunions then took place at the different chapter houses.

Blindfolded . . . in scientific test of leading Cigarettes, Princess Paul Chavchavadze selects OLD GOLD

"I was much intrigued by the invitation to make a blindfold test of your leading brands of American cigarettes, to see how they compared with each other and with those I had smoked abroad. Could one really taste the difference? I wondered.

"But when I was handed these cigarettes, one by one, I realized at once that there was a difference and that the test was conclusive. One cigarette was so much more appealing, so much more delicate in flavor. Oh, and so much smoother!

"When the test was over and I was told that the cigarette of my choice was OLD GOLD I understood at once why this cigarette is so popular among my American friends."

How Test Was Made

Subject was blindfolded, and, in the presence of two responsible witnesses, was given one each of the four leading cigarettes to smoke. To clear the taste, coffee was served before each cigarette. The Princess was entirely unaware of the identity of these cigarettes during test. After smoking the four cigarettes, the Princess was asked to designate by number her choice. Without hesitation she replied, "No. 3" . . . which was OLD GOLD.

Williams Golfers Do Well in Summer Tournaments

Since the end of the college semester last June the Williams golf team has been well represented by Blaney '28, captain of last year's team, and J. Williams '29, present captain. Both men competed in the intercollegiate golf tournament held last June, Blaney advancing to the second round where he was eliminated by Ames, captain of the Princeton team, while Williams went to the third round before he was put out by Stewart of St. Johns College. In the second round of this tournament Williams eliminated Watts Guma, member of the Walker Cup team and one of the most prominent amateur golfers in the country. The Williams captain was also elected secretary of the Intercollegiate Golf Association.

During the summer Blaney and Williams were successful in other tournaments. Blaney won the New England amateur championship, considered an important match in the amateur golfing world. He entered the national amateur tournament, but failed to qualify by two strokes. In the California amateur championship Williams advanced to the quarter finals before he was eliminated. Although no definite plans have as yet been made, it is expected that the annual fall golf tournament will be held in about two weeks over the new Taconic course.

'Kappa Alpha' Wins Interfraternity Scholarship Cup for the Fourth Time; Non-Fraternity Group Second

For the fourth time in succession Kappa Alpha has won the Interfraternity Scholarship Cup for the highest scholastic rating among the 15 fraternities on the campus. Kappa Alpha scored 335 points during the year 1927-1928, as compared with 347 for the previous year and 323 for 1925-1926, and surpassed its nearest rival, the Non-Fraternity group, by six points.

The same system of scoring is employed in compiling these averages as is used in figuring the data for Phi Beta Kappa

W. C. A. TO ENTERTAIN FROSH IN JESUP HALL

New Men Will Be Presented to Members of Faculty and Representatives

In order that the freshmen may become better acquainted with each other, with members of the Faculty and with representatives from each house, as well as learning about the various activities, the Williams Christian Association will hold its annual reception for the incoming class in Jesup Hall at 8.00 p. m. Saturday evening. Following the introductions, in the south room of Jesup, the freshmen will adjourn to the auditorium for several short talks, after which refreshments will be served on the first floor.

Upon arrival the new men will be given printed identification tags which are to be attached to the coat lapels to facilitate introductions. (These tags will be used also during rushing season by the incoming class and should be saved for that purpose.) Each freshman will be presented by Rohrbach, '29, President of the W. C. A., to Dr. and Mrs. Garfield, other members of the Faculty, and an undergraduate from each fraternity and the Commons Club. When these introductions are completed, the gathering will move to the auditorium. There Anderson, '29, captain of the football team, will make the first short talk on athletics. He will be followed by Kobbé, editor-in-chief of THE RECORD, who will explain the campus literary activities. Harris '29, president of the Adelphe Union, will speak next in regard to debating, musical, and dramatic organizations; while Overton '29, managing editor of THE RECORD will discuss competitions in general. Clark, '29, president of Gargoyles, will say a few words about honorary societies, and Rohrbach will conclude with some remarks on the Williams Christian Association.

At the conclusion of the speeches, the freshmen will reassemble on the first floor for refreshments.

College Preacher

The Reverend Joseph H. Twichell, College Pastor, will deliver the first sermon of the year at the regular morning service tomorrow at 10.35 a. m.

Fall Tennis Tournament

Play for the Rockwood Cup, symbolic of the tennis championship of the College, will begin Saturday, September 29, on the Sage Hall Courts. The entire student body is eligible to enter this annual tournament, and the varsity rankings next spring will be based largely on the results of this fall's matches. Entries may be made on the sheet posted in Jesup Hall until Thursday, September 27, at 6 p. m.

Cross Country to Begin With R. P. I. October 13

Friday, September 21—Six veteran runners are expected to report to Coach Seeley this afternoon at Weston Field for the first work out of the 1928 cross country season, which begins on October 13 with the R. P. I. meet. Captain Moore, last year's star runner and a consistent placer, will be supported by Greene and Herrick '29, and Chapman, Fitcher, and Reeves '30 all of whom ran on last year's team.

The schedule this year includes four meets, the first in Williamstown with R. P. I. and the second with Hamilton at Clinton. Last year the Williams runners managed to nose out Hamilton thru Moore's sprint at the end of the race for first place. Middlebury, which was also defeated last season, is the next meet, followed by that with Wesleyan on November 10. The final contest is the N. E. I. C. C. A., on November 17.

DR. SAMUEL F. CLARKE DIES DURING VACATION

Professor Emeritus of Natural History Taught Here Thirty-Five Years

Samuel Fessenden Clarke, professor emeritus of natural history in Williams College, died this summer on August 12 at his home on South Street. He was called to Williams in 1881 and served as professor of natural history until 1916, when he retired from active participation in the work of the department.

Professor Clarke was born at Geneva, Illinois, in 1851, and entered Sheffield Scientific School at the age of twenty-three. He graduated in 1878, and received his degree of Ph.D. from Johns Hopkins University one year later. After serving as professor of natural history for a short time at Smith College, he was called to Williams by President Carter in 1881 as a full professor.

Professor Clarke received a degree of M.A. from Williams in 1891, and was elected President of the American Society of Naturalists in 1914. He abandoned all his work in 1916 and lived quietly at his home here until his death this summer. His body was cremated at his own request and the ashes interred in the College Cemetery.

Baseball Team Elects H. H. Putnam Captain

Henry H. Putnam '29, third baseman of the baseball nine and a player of two years' varsity experience, was chosen to lead the team for 1929 at a meeting of the lettermen held late last June. Putnam has alternated at third base and shortstop during the last two seasons, after captaining the freshman team in his first year at Williams.

Putnam prepared at St. Paul's Academy in St. Paul, Minnesota, where he played football, basketball, and baseball. He represented his class in all three sports in his freshman year, and last fall played quarterback on the 'varsity eleven. He is also a member of Gargoyles and Purple Key societies.

W. C. A. Reception

Because of the difficulties in obtaining correct mailing lists, it is possible that invitations to the W. C. A. reception have failed to reach every one who should be included. All the members of the faculty, their wives, and the entire incoming class are cordially invited to this reception whether they have received invitations or not.

Notice to Freshmen

1. Every freshman should familiarize himself with the interfraternity agreement, which is printed in full elsewhere in THE RECORD.
2. THE RECORD and Advisor should be watched for further notices.
3. Post office boxes should be secured.
4. Every man should familiarize himself with the location of the various fraternity houses.
5. There will be meetings of the freshman class on Monday and Thursday evenings, September 24 and 27, at 7.30 p. m. in the Jesup Hall auditorium.
6. The arbiters and the chairman of the Interfraternity Council will consult any freshman during office hours concerning any matters pertaining to the interpretation of the rules or to permissions to dine with members of the Faculty and upperclassmen before or during the rushing period. The office, located in Jesup Hall, will be open from 7.00 to 8.30 p. m. until further notice. Otherwise, communicate with W. H. Doughty by calling 14.

two associates are Assistant Professor Miller and Professor Wild. The one change in the regular set of rules is that freshmen will be given until 1.30 p. m. to return their final invitations instead of 12.00 m. The complete set of rulings follows:

In order to further the best interests and welfare of Williams, fifteen fraternities have entered into an honorable agreement to bind themselves in the entertaining and pledging of the first year men with the following regulations.

Liberian Concessions, Prohibition, and Kellogg Treaties Cause Verbal Battles

LIBERIA CABLES ITS PROTEST

Round Tables, Led by Authorities, Are Attended by Numerous Famous Members

Subjected to the heated interest and stormy denials of rubber magnates, State Departments, and African Presidents from without, as well as to the admirable fervor of Wang and Ho, young Chinese Nationalists, the question of the extraterritorial privileges of the Hungarian legation at the Theta Delta Chi house, and the eternal strain of the prohibition debate from within, the 1928 session of the Institute of Politics proved to be the most stimulating of the latter's eight years of history.

Dr. Garfield delivered the opening address on August 2 before an audience of twelve hundred at the Convocation of the Institute in Chapin Hall. In his welcome he expressed the opinion that it was particularly appropriate during this period of the presidential campaign to turn for a moment from domestic to international affairs. Dr. Garfield introduced Mme. Halide Edib Hanun, prominent Turkish woman suffragist and author now in voluntary exile because of her disagreements with Kemal Pasha. Mme. Halide led one of the outstanding Round Tables on modern Turkish problems.

The three special conferences on critical international problems of the month of August were the occasions of the most tense interest of the session. Hon. Zumoto, Japanese journalist, defended Japanese control of Manchuria on the grounds that it would keep out Russia and Bolshevism, and that Manchuria would be released as soon as it was able to take care of itself. Wang and Ho replied with ardor on the behalf of China in a debate which resembled the issue between U. S. and the Philippines.

Dr. Garfield, chairman of the Special Conference on prohibition, found no defender of the Eighteenth Amendment and undertook the assignment himself. Mr. Bentley W. Warren, Williams College trustee, took a position for legal reasons in favor of abandonment of the prohibition amendment in the same manner as the South has neglected the amendments on the negro question. Norman Hapgood presented the views of Gov. Smith. Dr. Louis Pierard, of the Belgian Parliament, explained European semi-prohibition, while Professor C. R. Fay of the University of Toronto described the workings of the Canadian law.

The Kellogg Treaties were the subject of the final Special Conference on the day before those treaties were finally signed. At this last minute Dr. Borchard of the Department of International Law at Yale dropped a bomb shell into the meeting

The last chance for members of the class of 1931 to make the editorial board of THE RECORD will be the annual fall competition for sophomores, which will begin with a meeting of all those interested on Sunday, October 7. Further announcement of the competition, which will last approximately two months, will be made in a later issue. The first competition for 1932 will be held after Christmas recess.

not bid or pledge any first year man of Williams College or obtain from him any promise regarding future bidding or pledging. I also agree upon my honor that, during the period extending from two weeks before the opening of College until the beginning of the Third Rushing Period, I shall not communicate, verbally or by letter, with any first year man except:— (1) to transact usual College business; (2) to greet him or to carry on a brief non-fraternity conversation upon the street; (3) to carry on during the dates of the first two rushing periods conversations on non-fraternity matter."

2. Necessary business and social contact between fraternity members and first year men during the period of the Interfraternity Agreement shall be subject to the regulation of the Interfraternity Council.

3. This agreement is to be binding upon every undergraduate member of Williams College fraternities, provided that it is signed by four-fifths of the undergraduate members of each fraternity, from the time of its signature to the end of subsequent year.

4. Each fraternity is held responsible for any infraction of this agreement by its alumni in Williamstown.

5. Prospective students may be entertained any time previous to the two weeks immediately preceding the opening of the College in the year of their entrance, but prior to these two weeks there shall be no bidding, or pledging, or promises of any nature made regarding possible future bidding or pledging.

6. All men entering Williams College in September, 1928, are considered as first year men under this agreement.

Part Two

1. There shall be a non-undergraduate Arbiter elected each Spring by the unanimous vote of the Interfraternity Council.

2. There shall be elected in like manner two non-undergraduate Associate Arbiters whose functions are hereafter set forth.

3. The duties of the Arbiter shall be, (a) to explain to the freshmen before Rushing Season the system of rushing, (b) to supervise in general along with the Chairman of the Interfraternity Council and his assistants, the machinery of Rushing Season; (c) to investigate fully all rumors and complaints of infraction of the Rushing Agreement brought to his notice. For this purpose the Arbiter has the right to summon before him at any time any member of a fraternity or any first year man.

4. The Arbiter with his two associates by a unanimous vote shall adjudge the guilt or innocence of any House involved and determine which punishment shall be imposed.

5. In the event that a House be found guilty, the Arbiter shall, before imposing the punishment, report the decision to the Interfraternity Council. The Council may, by a two-thirds vote, veto the decision reported by the Arbiter.

Part Three

1. In view of the binding and serious nature of the pledge, a first year man breaking a pledge with any fraternity shall be ineligible for membership in any fraternity in Williams College for a period of six months following such a break. During this period no fraternity at Williams shall entertain him at its house or discuss fraternity matters with him. Furthermore, such a break shall be reported at once to the Chairman of the Interfraternity Council.

2. No fraternity or member of any fraternity shall bring influence to bear directly or indirectly upon any man pledged to another fraternity calculated to excite dissatisfaction on the part of such a man with his fraternity relations.

3. First year men may at any time consult the Arbiter or the Chairman of the Interfraternity Council for information on the Rushing Agreement.

4. No fraternity or any member of any fraternity may escort any first year man to or from any dates except by special permission of the Interfraternity Council. (Note: Phi Sigma Kappa, Delta Phi and Psi Upsilon have been given permission to meet their rushees at the Greylock Hotel and return them to the same.)

5. Violations of this agreement on the part of any fraternity shall render it ineligible to communicate with, to entertain, or to pledge any first year man for a period of two weeks after the close of the Third Rushing Period, or for two weeks after pronouncement of punishment.

6. At the discretion of Arbiter and his two Associates, the following punishment may be substituted for that in Article 5: violation may render a fraternity ineligible to communicate with, to entertain or pledge the individual first year man or first year men concerned in the violation for a period of two weeks after the close of the Third Rushing Period, or for two weeks after pronouncement of punishment.

7. After a pledge has been broken by mutual consent one week must elapse before the Freshman concerned may be pledged by any other Fraternity.

Part Four

1. Rushing season shall be divided into three periods: A, B, and C. Period A shall begin with the dinner date of the second Saturday after the opening of College and shall extend through the third evening date of the Monday following. Period B shall begin with dinner (6.00-7.30) date of the following Tuesday and

SUMMER CAMP AGAIN CONDUCTED BY W. C. A.

Kepner, Aided by Ten Councillors Directs Boys' Annual Outing on Lenox Lake

About sixty boys from the various Boys' Clubs of Williamstown attended the annual summer camp, managed by the Williams Christian Association, at Lenox, July 2-10. Under the direction of Kepner '28, and assisted by two associates and eight councillors, the campers enjoyed a thoroughly successful, if somewhat curtailed, outing on the Stockbridge Bowl Lake, the estate of Miss Tappan.

Shepler and Cornelsen '28 were associate directors, and were in turn assisted by Phelps '29, McKittrick '30, Bowden, Letchworth, Mason, A. M. P. Clark '31, J. Stubbs of Harvard, and Brandon Marsh of Dartmouth, all of whom were councillors. The boys were divided into six "tribes", which competed against each other in such games as baseball, soccer, volley ball, swimming, track, and hare and hounds. An outside game of baseball was played, with the Boys' Club of Blackinton. In addition to the sports on land, the boys enjoyed numerous water sports afforded by the lake.

The outing was supposed to have lasted two weeks, but due to an epidemic of septic sore throat in nearby Lee, it was thought best to take every precaution possible against contagion, which necessarily shortened the camp session by one week.

shall extend through the second evening date of the following Thursday. Period C shall begin with the dinner date of the Friday following and shall end with the second evening date of the same evening.

2. During period C there may be bidding and pledging.

3. During the first period the day shall be divided into the following rushing dates: Dinner (6.00-7.30); First evening date (7.30-8.30); Second evening date (8.30-9.30); Third evening date (9.30-10.30). There shall be but four dates each day, except Sunday, September 30, when there shall be seven. On that day there will be three extra dates, from 1.00-2.30; 2.30-3.30; 3.30-4.30. During the second and third period, the day shall be divided into the following dates: Dinner (6.00-7.30), First evening date (7.30-8.45); Second evening date (8.45-10.00).

4. At close of period C, there shall be unrestricted bidding and pledging of all unpledged undergraduates.

5. The Interfraternity Council shall conduct the transmission of invitation for periods A, B, and C, and for period A shall determine the apportionment and order by lot in a manner to be regulated by a by-law.

6. For period A each first year man must accept one invitation from every fraternity offering him one, or refuse all. Period B he may accept not more than two invitations from every fraternity he pleases. For period C he is free to accept whatever invitations he may choose.

Important

Period A: First year men will receive their invitations through the mail Saturday, September 29, and MUST mail their replies to the same before 12 noon of the same day.

Period B: First year men will receive their invitations through the mail Tuesday, October 2, and MUST mail their replies to the same before 1.00 p. m. of the same day.

Period C: First year men will receive their invitations through the mail Friday, October 5, and MUST mail their replies to the same before 1.30 p. m. of the same day.

The members of the following Fraternities have signed the above Agreement and are bound by it:

Massachusetts Alpha of Kappa Alpha Massachusetts Alpha of Sigma Phi
Williamstown Chapter of Delta Upsilon
Alpha Theta of Chi Psi
Zeta Chapter of Beta Theta Pi
Zeta Chapter of Zeta Psi
Williams Chapter of Alpha Delta Phi

Lambda Chapter of Delta Psi.
Epsilon Chapter of Delta Kappa Epsilon.
Iota Chapter of Phi Gamma Delta.
Massachusetts Alpha of Phi Delta Theta
Iota Deuteron of Theta Delta Chi.
Chi Chapter of Phi Sigma Kappa.
Delta Delta of Psi Upsilon.
Williams Chapter of Delta Phi.

Graham Issues Call for 1932 Football Candidates

Candidates for the 1932 freshman football team are requested to report at Cole Field on Monday afternoon at 3 p. m. when Coach Graham will meet all those interested in trying out for the team. Practice will be limited to conditioning exercises and drills in the fundamentals of kicking and passing at first, scrimmage being delayed until the players become hardened. Mr. Graham urges all those who like the game to come out whether or not they have had any football experience.

The first game on the 1932 schedule is with Pittsfield High School on October 20, followed by the contest with the R. P. I. Freshmen on November 3. Pittsfield is expected to present its usual strong team which last year tied the freshmen 7-7. The last home game is played with the Wesleyan Freshmen on November 10, and on November 17 the team will go to Amherst for the final game of the season with the Lord Jeff yearlings.

BOARD DEFERS ACTION ON DRIVING PRIVILEGES

Students Warned Against Abuses
Which May Lead to Drastic
Change in Rule

Renewal of the driving privileges granted to seniors and juniors, provided such privileges are not abused, was voted by the Board of Trustees of the College at their meeting during the Commencement period last June. Definite action on the much mooted question of ownership of automobiles by upperclassmen was postponed only on condition that students, parents, and faculty cooperate to remove the abuses arising from such ownership, and to this end a letter containing a copy of the resolution was sent during the summer to the parents of every student of Williams College.

Following is the resolution adopted:
"The Trustees are convinced that there are abuses resulting from the use of automobiles by college students, but they do not wish unreasonably to take drastic action limiting the personal privileges of the undergraduates. It was therefore

"Voted: to defer definite action concerning the ownership and operation of automobiles and other forms of motor vehicles and to request the cooperation of the students, parents and faculty to the end that the abuses may be corrected."

Boyd Edwards '00 Made Mercersburg President

Boyd Edwards '00, for five years a Trustee of the College, and for 18 years an outstanding pastor in the East, was this summer elected to the position of Headmaster of Mercersburg Academy, Mercersburg, Pa. Mr. Edwards' appointment followed a term of six years as head of Hill School, Pottstown, Pa., and he will take up his new duties at the beginning of this school year.

After graduation from Williams, Mr. Edwards attended Union Theological Seminary for two years. In 1904 he accepted the pastorate of a Brooklyn Church, which office he held until 1910, when he accepted the position of pastor of an Orange, N. J., church. This he resigned in 1922 to become head of Hill. His five-year term as Trustee of the College ended last June. He is also a trustee of Mount Holyoke College.

FACULTY FAVORS NEW ENGLAND FOR SUMMER

Professors Milham and Hardy Are Among Those Back From Sabbaticals

With the return of six members of the Williams Faculty who have been on sabbaticals or absent on leave, five other professors have left for a year, all but two going to Europe. Of the Faculty members who were away for the summer only, the majority seem to have favored New England as a vacation spot, over 10 remaining in Williamstown, although about seven professors continued their winter activities by teaching at various summer schools.

President Garfield, after presiding over the 1928 session of the Institute of Politics, spent the rest of the summer in his new home in Duxbury, Mass., while Dean Howes passed most of his vacation at Greensboro, Vt. Of the professors recently returned from longer vacations, Professor Milham has completed a year's trip around the world, and Professor Wetmore has returned from a sabbatical year spent in Italy, during which time he made a trip to the excavations of Roman ruins in Africa.

Professors Kellogg and Hardy drove to Williamstown from Florida where they arrived at the end of a trip through the Panama Canal after a year's stay in California. Professor Licklider is back from a half-year's sabbatical in Europe, as is Dr. Carlton, College Librarian, while Associate Professor King, who has returned from a year of study in Munich, Germany, completes the list of men back from more lengthy vacations.

A trio of Williams Faculty members, Professors Wild and McElfresh and the Rev. Mr. Twichell, spent an interesting vacation at Bear River, Nova Scotia, while Assistant Professor Cole reports a summer of intense interest teaching in the Marine Biological Laboratory at Wood's Hole, Mass. Mr. Brown returned to his usual post of treasurer of the Murray Bay Golf Club in Quebec, while Assistant Professors Schlesinger and Avery took motor trips, the former in Wisconsin and the latter in Maine. Professor Maxey spent his vacation at Gloucester, Mass., and Professor Smith went to camp on Lake Memphremagog in Quebec.

Perhaps the most enjoyable vacations, however, were those spent by Assistant Professor Wynne and Mr. Pooley. The former taught at New York University the first part of the summer, and later was married, the couple spending their honeymoon in Gloucester, and the latter, who will teach at the University of Vermont this winter, was also married last summer.

Assistant Professors Cru and Wells have left on sabbaticals in Europe, the former going to France and the latter studying at Oxford. Of those absent on leave, Assistant Professor Buchler, after a summer abroad, is now at Harvard studying for a Ph.D. degree, while Mr. Quinn is occupied in researches in geology and Mr. Spring is in France working on a book.

Garfield Addresses New Fresh in Mass Assembly

In the first mass meeting of the year, the Freshman class gathered in Jesup Hall last Thursday afternoon to be addressed by members of both the faculty and the student body, each stressing a vital part of the new life entered upon by the first year men and its relation to the college. The speakers included President Garfield, Dean Howes, Assistant Dean Agard, The Reverend Mr. Twichell, and Rohrbach and Doughty '29.

After extending a welcome to the incoming class, Dr. Garfield spoke in a general way of the college and its significance as an institution. The Dean, speaking for the faculty, mentioned the points of contact between students and faculty, while Dr. Agard spoke of the duties of each individual as a member of the college. Rohrbach '29 explained the Junior Advisor System and Doughty '29 gave some desirable information prior to the actual rushing season.

MANY ADDITIONS MADE TO COLLEGE EQUIPMENTPaving of Spring Street, Completion of Lehman Hall Among Improvements

With the long awaited paving of Spring Street and the completion of the alterations to Currier Hall heading the list, a number of valuable improvements to the College campus and the town have been culminated during the summer months. Among the other achievements of the contractors and builders active here since the closing of College in June are the completion of the new Freshman dormitory, Lehman Hall, the sandblasting of Griffin Hall to make it harmonize with the red brick of the other buildings of the same style, the building of a retaining wall and entrance at the east end of the gymnasium, and the digging of a tunnel under Spring Street to contain heating pipes and electric wires leading to Morgan Hall and adjacent buildings.

The paving of Williamstown's main business street, long famous for its impassability and readiness to become a river of mud, comes after years of agitation as the result of a town meeting held last spring, at which the necessary funds were voted. The street was made one yard wider, paved with concrete, and equipped with curbstones by D. S. McGrath, Contractor, of Cheshire, who also constructed a concrete sidewalk along its east side. In honor of the completion of the work a celebration attended by more than 5000 people was held last Saturday under the auspices of the Spring Street merchants. The pavement, long more adapted to aquatic sports, was sprinkled with oatmeal and used for dancing, music being furnished by the Scotch Kiltie Band and the Mount Hope Orchestra.

The finishing touches to Lehman Hall, the Freshman dormitory donated by H. H. Lehman '99, were added during the summer. The hall is divided into two entries, each of three floors. The rooms, which are in the form of double and triple suites, have fireplaces and wood paneled walls. The building forms a corner of the Sage-Williams-Chapin Hall quadrangle and provides accommodations for 28 freshmen and four junior advisers.

The retaining wall erected between the Lasell Gymnasium and Goodrich Hall forms an impressive entrance to the former building, beside fulfilling its function of strengthening the foundation of the structure on the hill. A concrete sidewalk and curb were constructed by Charles Buel, Contractor, of Riverside, along the sides of the lawn and driveway in front of Morgan Hall. Other improvements to College property include the redecoration of the managers' office and the offices of THE RECORD in Jesup Hall.

Foaming Freshmen Form to Face Ferocious Foes

Forming on the Freshman "quad" about eight o'clock last Wednesday evening, over 200 members of the class of '32 turned out, locked arms, and marched toward Morgan to the tune of "Where's Thirty-One?" The sophomores were scarce, so the freshmen yelled louder. Rules were forgotten as frosh trod down the grass, wore sweaters, and otherwise conducted themselves in manner unbecoming to any other night.

The sophomores were still scarce at 8.15, so the mob entered the movies. Free shows continued for the rest of the evening for those lucky enough to enter as a freshman disguised. The mob mounted the stage while the show stopped. "Art" at the ticket door gnashed his teeth.

The mob got under way again, proceeding to the Morgan campus. Twenty-five natural enemies appeared, armed with a hose, which weapon inflicted due damage until it was reversed into the Morgan entry. Finally the sophomores organized and waited near West College. The mob struck hard, and the evening broke up in individual fights, the sophomores being greatly outnumbered.

Seven Remain in Competition

Only seven men have remained in the football managerial competition, according to a recent statement made by Manager Hubbard '29. These men started work last spring and will compete until the close of the season, when the leaders will receive the positions of Assistant Managers of Varsity football, Varsity soccer, Intramural, Freshman football, and Freshman soccer. The competitors, all of the Sophomore class, are Bancroft, Beattie, Denne, Dorrance, Grosvenor, Schlosser, and Wurst.

CALDWELL ASSUMES POST AS HEAD COACH

Former Princeton Star Succeeds
'Doug' Lawson in Charge of Varsity Eleven

Coming to Williams as head coach of football, Charles Caldwell, star athlete and three-letter man at Princeton in the class of 1924, has been holding the regular fall practice for the Varsity eleven during the past week. Mr. Caldwell is succeeding "Doug" Lawson, of Harvard, who has coached here during the last six years, and his coming marks a new policy of the Athletic Council in employing an all-year coach for football for the first time in history.

While at Princeton Caldwell was chosen as a member of one All-American football team, besides receiving honorable mention on two others. In addition to his gridiron laurels, he won his "P" in basketball as a forward, and in baseball as a pitcher. After his graduation he was signed by the New York Yankees, but left professional baseball to become Freshman coach at his alma mater. In 1926 he was assistant to the famous Bill Roper at Princeton who gave him the highest recommendation for the position here.

At a meeting last spring at which he addressed the prospective candidates for this year's Varsity, Coach Caldwell said that his principle will be "a few plays well learned," and that the team will primarily be "well grounded in the fundamentals." He stated further that his attention will be given to the perfection of a single strong team, "as strong as the best of the material."

Captain Wolf Obtains Tenth Tennis Ranking

Although the Williams representatives in the National Intercollegiate Tennis Tournament during the week of June 25, Calvert '28, Wolf and Chase '29, and J. S. Clark '30, did not progress far as a team, Wolf held Van Ryn of Princeton in the third round to the same score by which the latter defeated Marsh last year, 6-4, 6-4, and thereby secured tenth place in the individual ranking issued during the summer. The team was weakened in the singles by the absence of Banks '28, who had to remain in Williamstown for Commencement on June 25.

Chase and Clark were defeated in the first round, but Chase advanced to the quarter finals in the consolation tournament. In the doubles Wolf and Captain Banks, who arrived in time so that the New England Championship duet could be put in the field, survived two rounds, but fell to Dunlop and Ferguson of Texas, 6-4, 6-4, in the third. Calvert '28 joined Chase to make up the second doubles team. They drew the Princeton pair in the opener and were put out 6-1, 6-1.

New 18-Hole Golf Links Will Soon Be Completed

With several completed holes already in play, the new 18-hole course of the Taconic Golf Club is now nearly finished. The undertaking was made possible by generous gifts of land to the College by Mrs. W. H. Doughty and Mr. J. H. Denison '90, and by contributions of some $50,000 by alumni and friends of the College.

The course, over 6,300 yards in length, occupies a tract of 110 acres extending from South Street through to Water Street and touching the southern boundary of Weston Field. Although the management of the course will remain in the hands of the Taconic Golf Club, it has been incorporated with the provision that two-thirds of the Board of Directors shall always be officers or alumni of the College. The new officers of the Club are: President, G. H. Cluett '96; Vice-President, W. H. Doughty '98; Secretary-Treasurer, H. L. Agard. Faculty and students are to be given full use of the course for the annual fee of $35 and a non-resident membership will be open to alumni for $15.

1929 'Gul' On Sale
Agents for the few remaining copies of the 1929 Gul will be in the Freshman dormitories the latter part of this week and all of next week to sell last year's annual. The Gul is especially valuable to the new men in that it hastens their knowledge of the College organizations and the men in these groups, as well as of the teams, fraternities, and other organizations.

NEW BLOOD

Welcoming freshmen to Williams is more than a matter of etiquette. It requires an understanding heart, a strong arm, and a cordial voice. The modern undergraduate probably has his share of these admirable qualities, but freshmen of even the greenest hue must sometimes suspect ulterior motives in the extravagant fuss which is made over him during his first week or two at Williams.

There was a time, so we are told, when passing examinations was the least difficult part of entering college. But the elaborate system of hazing, which then seemed such an essential preparation for higher learning, today has dwindled to a somewhat self-conscious attempt at bravado by a small group of the less sophisticated sophomores. Some of us stood in the rain last Wednesday and heard the meek and very pathetic voice of an ancient custom all but drowned out by the triumphant "One-nine-three-two" of a tremendous freshman class as it marched intact up and down a concrete Spring Street.

1932 was apparently happy for a while that night, but their real "hazing" comes later—in the modern way. Physical chastisement has been supplanted by certain well-known forms of mental torture. For one thing, greater freedom in the mapping out of courses is paid for by increased doubts and fears during the crowded hours of registration. And before the fog has quite lifted, comes the climax of many days of tense anxiety.

New rushing machinery has been installed to make the operation as painless as possible, but little can be done to lessen the importance it holds in the imaginations of the much discussed and much dissected patients. This period of enforced social stratification is in itself a stern substitute for the old-fashioned paddle. Today the freshman may have acquired all his admission credits with ease, but he has yet to learn the verdict of the rushing juries—perhaps to learn that he is guilty of being loud or wet or "different" when he tried so hard to be smooth and wise and interesting.

No doubt it is partly for reasons like this that the three upper classes at Williams are becoming more and more gentle in their treatment of the newcomers. Certainly the general attitude is one of cordiality. Instead of commanding the freshman, we advise him; instead of growling at him we explain things to him; instead of scolding him, we give him a reception with ice cream and cake.

THE RECORD's welcome to 1932 is mingled with some regret that it must be divided so soon and so ruthlessly into fraternity delegations, but also with confidence that the raw incisions will quickly heal into another strong and healthy class of Williams gentlemen.

If Spring Street is the most spectacular improvement around town to gladden the heart of the returning undergraduate, certainly the new golf course is the most luxurious. The fact that alumni and trustees of the College made the additional nine holes possible means that undergraduate golfers can now take an almost personal pride in the grounds. It should also make us especially careful of the tender blades of young grass, and conscientious about such matters as replacing divots. In this way members of the team or duffers on the P. T. squad can show their appreciation of this beautiful course, and at the same time improve their game in one of the most pleasant of all gentlemanly sports.

ALUMNI COLUMN

NEW YORK ALUMNI HEAR PRES. CARTER

Many Toasts Proposed As Alumni Gather at Annual Banquet in 1893

(The following is taken from the January 12, 1893 issue of The Weekly, which then corresponded to THE RECORD.)

The annual dinner of the New York city alumni was held at the Hotel Brunswick on Thursday, December 15. The college was represented by President Carter. The following report of the speeches is taken from the New York Tribune.

"With the remembrance of the old college among the Berkshire hills strong within their hearts, over one hundred members of the Williams Alumni Association of New York City met again last night to eat another annual dinner, to land their Alma Mater and to revel in their recollections of the old college days. Last night's dinner received added importance in the eyes of the alumni through the fact that in next October the historical old college will celebrate its centennial, and thus gave the speakers an opportunity, which was well improved, to review the achievements of the institution and to prophesy as to her future.

It had been expected that the oldest living alumnus of the college, David Dudley Field, of the class of '25 would be present, but he was compelled to be absent. The Rev. Dr. Henry M. Field, of the class of '30, was the oldest graduate there. A letter from David Dudley Field was read. He regretted his inability to attend the dinner, and expressed the wish that the association would accept as the toast offered by him, "Williams College, Gem of the Mountains".

"The president of the Williams Alumni Association, John C. Goodbridge, Jr., '63, was toastmaster. He was rewarded by many rounds of applause and frequent bursts of laughter at his witty allusions. He proposed as the first toast: "Williams College", and the president of the institution, Dr. Carter, responded to it. He made a speech full of enthusiastic admiration and love for the college. He alluded to the invitation sent to Williams to send an exhibit to the World's Fair, and made some humorous suggestions of things which might be sent there. Among other articles he mentioned the old carved, high-backed chair which was never used, and which has been useful only once in his memory. That was to serve as a target for the wit of a professor who said that the chair was to be used by the president when he got his back up. Dr. Carter became serious soon and spoke on the practical needs of the college and its outlook. He said that without undue boasting he could announce that Williams would soon have the best facilities for studying physics, biology, and chemistry of any college in the country. (Loud applause).

"The next toast, 'The Dawn of Our One-hundredth Year,' was responded to by the Rev. R. R. Booth, '69, who said that the two things he hoped to see were that the salaries of all the professors would be increased so that none would be less than $3,500 a year, and the erection of a big, fine dormitory. Paymaster General Edwin Stewart, U. S. A., was the next speaker, and he responded to the toast: 'The First Educational Institution in Hoosac Valley—Fort Massachusetts.' He told of the capture of that historic fort by the French and Indians, and gave a thrilling description of the brave fight of its eighteen defenders. Here, he said, were thus taught the lessons of duty and courage. He then explained how Colonel Williams obtained a grant of the land, and how he bequeathed it to found a public educational institution. 'Perhaps he was impelled to this,' said the speaker slyly, 'by the bad state of his affairs, for he wrote thus at about this time: 'Affairs are in a bad state. The rum cannot hold out more than nine weeks. I feel that the end is near'."

"The Three R's of College Education; Recitation, Recreation, and Reminiscences," was the next toast. It was responded to by Dr. R. P. H. Vail. 'Graeco-Roman Classics and Their Relation to Man as a Complex Being' was the subject elucidated by Carrol Perry, and the Rev. J. S. Zelig answered the toast 'Our Annual Dinner, Ourselves and Each Other.'"

Link and Jinks Separate

A partnership of eight years' standing was dissolved on Tuesday, September 11, when the firm of Link and Jinks, since 1920 well known to members of Williams College, was broken up by the sale by Jinks of his interest to his partner. The two had been in business for eight years to the month when the partnership was dissolved. Jinks has not announced his future plans.

He bought his pen on the way to class!

He bought a Waterman's No. 7. He was delighted with the color band feature that enabled him to quickly and accurately select a pen point exactly suited to his style of writing.

You will be as delighted as he was if you visit your dealer and try Waterman's No. 7.

All over the country men who know are employing this No. 7 scientific method for selecting accurately the pen point best suited to their style of writing. No. 7 is offered in six different styles of pen point. Each is identified by a distinctive color inlay band on the cap. Individualized pen point fitting is thus made practical for the first time.

Dependable, speedy pen performance such as Waterman's gives saves valuable time for thought—a decided advantage during exams.

Football Squad

Gets Under Way

The football season this year begins with the Providence College game played in Williamstown on September 29 followed by seven increasingly hard games and ending with Amherst on November 17. Coach Caldwell, when speaking about the prospects this year, said that there was a great scarcity of big men for line material, and urged that every one, experienced or not, should at least try out. Experienced quarter-back material, with the exception of Putnam '29, is also scarce, though the veteran backfield men are fast rounding into shape.

Graduation left some big holes in the Purple line with the loss of Dunning, Howard, Lawder, and McQuatters whose places the coaches have been working hard to fill. Lasell, who played center last year has been changed over to a guard position. D. P. Williams is back again for the end assignment, Muller is at center, and Captain Andersen is a source of strength at his guard, but beyond that new men are filling the positions or fighting for them. The veteran backfield of Brown, Chase, Howe, and Putnam '29 has been showing its old form with Eisner and Coughlin '29, McAllister, Stayman, and Wheeler '30, and Langmaid '31 furnishing a wealth of reserve material. So far several of last year's letter men have not reported, but may turn out within the next few days.

Assisting "Charlie" Caldwell this year are A. Barr (Whoops) Snively of Princeton and "Art" Fox who had charge of the backs two years ago. Snively was captain of the 1923 team at Princeton and an All-American lineman that year, besides being the best forward passer in the East. Last year he coached football at Rumford, and is now taking charge of the linemen. His grass drills are a great aid in toughening the players. "Art" Fox has been taking care of the ends this year, putting them through the fundamentals of charging and blocking.

Although there had been several short scrimmages in practice so far, there have been few injuries and all of them rather minor ones. Ross Brown wrenched his knee, and Andersen cut his eye, but beyond that there have been nothing but sore muscles. The coaches are making every effort to keep the squad in good shape and to prevent injuries by means of special hardening exercises. Practice has been devoted mainly to a firm grounding in the elementary principles of football with just enough scrimmage to try out plays under fire.

Wesleyan and Amherst have been having their difficulties this fall in organizing their teams, but the fact that they have only a few letter men is due to the different coaching methods. Columbia has a large number out with many of last year's players on hand to furnish a nucleus for a strong team. R. P. I. has been hit hard by an eligibility rule which is preventing several of their best players of last season from practicing. Providence College, the first opponent on the 1928 schedule, is almost an unknown quantity but they are rated as having a fairly strong team.

INTERCOLLEGIATES

HIGH PRICE OF BEING RUSHED—Fraternalities can entertain Freshman at dinner during the first semester—if the guests pay cash for the food. This is a part of the recent proposal of the Brown Interfraternity Governing Board, which recommends that cash expenditure be the only taboo in relations between fraternity men and Freshmen before the rushing period.

Famous star selects OLD GOLD

"One cigarette of the four I smoked in the blindfold test was like shooting; a scene successfully after a whole series of failures. It just 'clicked' and I named it as my choice. It was OLD GOLD. Which clears up a mystery, for the supply of OLD GOLDS in my Beverly Hills home is constantly being depleted. It seems that Strongheart and Rin-tin-tin are the only motion picture stars who don't smoke them."

—"The Circus."

How does OLD GOLD do it?

What's the secret of OLD GOLD'S winning charm? The answer is very simple. Three types of leaves grow on the tobacco plant . . . coarse, heavy top-leaves, irritating to the throat . . . withered ground-leaves, without taste or aroma . . . and the heart-leaves, rich in cool and fragrant smoking qualities. These golden-ripe heart-leaves give OLD GOLDS their honey-like smoothness. That's why so many people choose them. And that's why you too can pick them . . . even in the dark.

SOCCER SEASON TO START THIS MONDAY

Strong Aggregation of Veterans
Is Expected to Report to Coach Bullock

Soccer practice for 1928 will start on Monday afternoon, according to a recent statement by Coach Bullock, who urges that all available men report regardless of previous experience. The coach hopes to place two fairly well-balanced teams on the field in order that the squad may not suffer for lack of material.

There will be a meeting for all prospective candidates for the team either Friday or Saturday night, and all should try to report then. Notice of the meeting will appear in the Advertiser. According to a recent announcement, the Athletic Council has secured the services of Mr. Kirkland, of North Adams, who will assist Mr. Bullock in coaching the eleven. Mr. Kirkland comes from Scotland, where he achieved considerable fame by his playing on the leading teams there.

J. D. Christie '29, a regular of two years' standing, was chosen last fall to lead the present aggregation. Hopes for a high scoring and consistent team are not idle at the present moment, as graduation has not depleted the ranks of last year's outfit to any great extent. In addition to Captain Christie, Phelps, Willmott, Field, Neilson, Olmsted, and Gregory '29, Barton, Bright, Willmott, Thoms, Marx, Clyde, Sherman, Babize, Park, McNeil, Travers, and Thurston '30, and a number of last season's freshmen are expected to report.

A stiff schedule has been arranged by Manager Willard to include four contests at home with M. I. T., R. P. I., Hamilton, and Wesleyan, and games away with Harvard and Amherst. October 27, the day of Columbia football seige, is an open date, but several contests will probably be arranged with North Adams teams before the intercollegiate season gets under way.

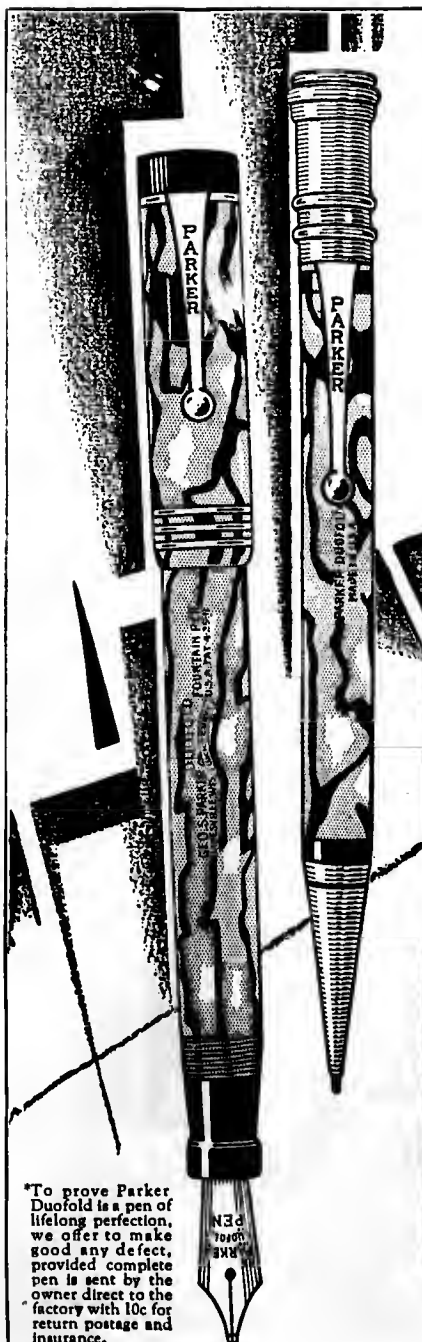

The schedule as it now reads is as follows:

October 6—M. I. T.	at home
October 13—R. P. I.	at home
October 20—Hamilton	at home
October 27—Open
November 3—Harvard	at Cambridge
November 10—Wesleyan	at home
November 17—Amherst	at Amherst

Campus Regulations for '32 to Remain Unchanged

Campus regulations governing the incoming class are identical with those of the last few years, and must be strictly adhered to by members of the Class of 1932. They are as follows:

1. Freshmen must never appear on the street coatless or bareheaded, and must wear the regulation Freshman cap in Williamstown and North Adams until the spring recess.
2. Freshmen must not smoke on the street at any time of the year.
3. Freshmen must not sit in the front rows in Lasell Gymnasium and Jesup Hall, nor in front rows or boxes at the theatres in North Adams unless accompanied by a man of a higher class; they must occupy seats in the gallery at College meetings and smokers in Jesup Hall.
4. Freshmen must not wear purple in any form unless they have won varsity or class insignia, and then only on jerseys and sweaters.
5. Freshmen must yield precedence to upperclassmen on the street and in trolley cars and upon entering and leaving all buildings.
6. Freshmen must not wear preparatory school insignia on caps, jerseys, or sweaters.
7. Freshmen must not sit on Spring Street benches. Only seniors may sit on the Lab. fence.
8. Freshmen must not wear leather or fur coats.
9. Freshmen must not dance at the Greylock.
10. Freshmen must not wear knickerbockers or army breeches. Freshmen and sophomores must not wear corduroy or moleskin trousers.
11. Freshmen must not sit in the center section of Walden's theatre unless accompanied by an upperclassman.
12. Freshmen and sophomores must not lead varsity cheers or the singing of The Mountains.
13. Freshmen must not walk on the grass of Chapin Hall campus.
14. By order of the Dean, freshmen and sophomores must not have automobiles.

T. P. Robinson Discusses Psychological Complexion of Williams Campus in Prize-Winning Dunbar Essay

The following essay which won the James R. Dunbar prize last spring, provides an analysis of life on the Williams campus which should be of particular interest to members of the incoming class.

Stability and Power

With feverish activity, with no time to look back and think, America today is struggling for efficiency and organization. Like cattle in the New York subways . . . crowds of people hitting and jostling each other in the streets . . . everywhere a restless hurry. Many intent and yet not knowing why; others with eyes haunted with the need of action. Few daring to stop to consider "whither?"; few who are not craving the objective stability of routine. Every night and all night a desperate attempt to glut themselves on nervous hilarity beneath the sensuous white light of Broadway. What does it mean, this wild hurry, this constant whirl? Pagans, worshipping the God of intense and momentary pleasure? Herbert Hoover, the dependable, the efficient, and the organizing genius, will probably be the next President. He will go to the White House because in him we see what many of us lack. We Americans are an emotional people. Our judgments are not reasoned. By a kind of intuitive insight we react emotionally and decide by feeling. Usually America is right. It did not take any logic for us to choose between Lindbergh and Levine. We felt Lindbergh was the true, the other a sham. But because we are emotional, because we as a race are in the youth of our energies, we have to routinize our life to offset the conflict and instability within ourselves. We have not yet learned to conserve our powers or to contemplate our feverish past and vital future.

The younger generation has been caught in this vortex of their elders. We in Williams have some of the same fever for activity and hectic "busyness". Leisure and quiet relaxation are alien to many. It is as if we had bottled up inside a great power, an overflowing energy, which must escape. To stop would mean the accumulation of more energy and a greater intensity when the outlet came. Thus we work, we are busy, we are diverted, but few of us sit and think and relax. Our student ideal is the Aristotelian well-rounded man rather than the specialist. The "grind" in his specialization is too much of an objectified example of our own peculiarity. He is too intense. Balance and breadth of vision and judgment are what we admire. Our ideal must be a man who does credit to his scholastic work, but at the same time, who contributes something to the organized life of the College. And he is raised in our estimation even more, if he is capable of forgetting the seriousness of life and of himself for a moment, and has time for a game of pool at Cabel's.

But underlying this sometimes feverish search, this craving for order and efficiency I think there is a fundamental cause. Hocking maintains that the necessary reason for the State, is so that it may provide a peaceful, fair, and permanent environment in which an individual's dynamic will to power through ideas may operate. The restless man in the subway, the student at Williams College . . . we are all unique wills to power; each one of us has an individual destiny to fulfill, by the very limitations and ingredients of our own personalities. Thus the desire for objective order has a double motive, but gropingly realized by us now. It is sought as an equalizing balance for the restless instability that many of us feel within; but this very routine, this very organization of our affairs, also provides the peaceful, fair, and permanent environment so necessary to the fulfillment of our dynamic will to power. We are children born for power. As the State is necessary to the man in the subway, college organizations and activities are necessary to the Williams student. In many ways we are at Williams the microcosm of the larger State.

The student campus at Williams is complex and highly organized. This very complexity of ours is often the humorous butt of some of our cynics and wits. They laugh at extra-curricular activities, at our taking our petty college duties seriously. But critical youth has little patience with mere ornamentation or artificiality. And in this most critical of environments student organizations persist, nay, prosper. And why? One reason, as I have said before, is that in them many students find a definiteness, an order, which relieves the conflicts and cross-purposes felt in themselves. But Williams is also a little world; it is a society which needs its laws, its executives, its promulgation of news, its entertainments, its work, and its managers. These are all a part of that essential aspect of any social state, a fair, peaceful, and permanent environment, erected and maintained by the very wills to power, which can only operate successfully in such a medium. Thus our college activities graduate from the position of diversions into the category of the necessary.

And this search for power has been encouraged, and rightly so, by a gradual change that has come over the student mind in the last ten or twenty years. Even in my four years here it has been perceptible. I do not mean to infer that the general personnel of students is radically different, although today I believe a more intellectually inclined and in some ways a more mature freshman is entering Williams. It is rather a difference in attitude of mind, the result of an administrative change. Gone are the perambulator days of twenty-five and thirty years ago, when a student was expected to be and treated like an irresponsible and frolicking child. More is expected of him today. He is met and treated like a man by the powers that be. The result is that he acts more like a man than before. He is given responsibility and the government of his own student affairs as far as possible. This placing the student upon a basis of equality, this giving to him the responsibility of his own conduct, this ceasing to treat him like a child, it is true may have increased the muscular tension of his face, may have made him more conscious of his own conflicts and his own destiny of power. But this very self-consciousness is the forge of strength. It is the correct and only preparation for the intense sphere of active life which lies without. Some alumni may bewail the passing of general pranks and the characteristic pose of irresponsibility. But even if the fun now is of a more serious variety, there is plenty of it, and Spring Street still continues to have its benchwarmers and classrooms their practical jokers.

Thus extra-curricular activities are, not only the necessary result of our will to power and our need for objective order, but also they are one of the mediums through which this very power is achieved. Some men express themselves solely in the intellectual field. The dynamic and power seeking law of their nature is sufficiently appeased with study, with hook, with "argumentative walk and disputatious lounge". Perhaps their's is the greatest satisfaction, the fullest power. But unfortunately the great majority of students cannot find full satisfaction in the intellectual life itself. The need for expressing themselves in other ways is felt; they must gather unto themselves some other phase of the life around them; they must make their place, however humble, in another sun. Self-expression is the key-note of our life here. The successful pedagogic method is that which recognizes and develops this.

But the ways of self-expression are manifold. Here you have the social lion, the good-looking senior, known for his ability to impress the opposite sex, an excellent mixer, and the arbiter of style in clothes. This is his domain. Then there is the unsuccessful extra-curricular man, who proceeds to either build up a defense or transfers his energies to other fields. It is not uncommon for a student who fails to win campus positions in his sophomore year, to show a correspondingly increased intellectual activity his junior and senior years. A balance is maintained for frequently a Phi Beta Kappa key recompenses for the lack of a Gargoyle pin or vice versa. We have also the athletes who express themselves in the more primitive manner. Nor should we forget the hierarchy of the intelligentsia and their plaything "The Graphic and Literary Monthly."

One of the great values of extra-curricular activities and other mediums for self-expression, is that a man who engages actively is kept occupied. This may seem a rather negative recommendation. But anyone familiar with the psychology of the average undergraduate knows the phrase "fed-up" and what it implies. Because of the rather monastic and transitory nature of the educational process, we are prone to become infected with the germ of futility. Our life here seems often purposeless and unimportant. This field of student psychology is one that has been hardly touched upon. I think it holds startling surprises for many "well-meaning" but aloof parents. We do not know how profitably to enjoy leisure. The static and restive moment seems to hold for us an unsolved mystery, a feared futility. It is part of our American heritage. The unoccupied students, except in cases of sheer laziness, so often escape to the bands of the uncrowned Baechi and Hoosack Falls, or become "fed-up" and leave college. The damp, chilly days of

13 NEW MEMBERS ARE APPOINTED TO FACULTY

Two Williams Graduates Included In Enlarged Faculty For Coming Year

Another large increase in the number of faculty members has been made this year with the appointment of thirteen new men, three of whom are granted the rank of assistant professor. Since the size of the undergraduate body remains practically the same, this enlargement of the faculty will result in a proportionate reduction in the size of classes.

The new assistant professors are Peter H. Odegard, Walter Peirce, and Paul Birdsall. Mr. Odegard comes to Williams from Columbia University and will enter the Government Department. He is a graduate of the University of Washington, class of 1922, and received his M.A. degree there in 1923. Since that time he has been studying at Columbia and was awarded his degree as Doctor of Philosophy this June. Mr. Peirce, who is to be a member of the Romance Language Department, graduated from Ohio Wesleyan University in 1894. Two years later he received his M.A. from the University of Michigan, and gained his Ph.D. at Johns Hopkins in 1906. Mr. Birdsall is a graduate of Harvard, where he was awarded his B.A. in 1921 and his M.A. in 1925. Following his graduation he taught for two years at St. Paul's School, Concord, and returned to Harvard in 1926 to become an assistant in History and an assistant dean of the University. He becomes an assistant professor in the History Department here.

Of the other new men, two are graduates of Williams, while a third spent one year here. Telford Taylor '28, who was the winner of the New York Times Current Events Contest as an undergraduate, will be an instructor in History, and Alfred Romer '28 an assistant in Chemistry. Dr. Arthur Noehren, who is to be Health Officer of the College, studied a year at Williams before transferring to New York University. After his graduation, he studied theology at Princeton, received his degree, and began work for an M.D. at the University of Virginia. Before completing his course he went to spend several years in India as a missionary, but returned to complete his studies at Virginia. For the past thirteen years he had been employed as National Physical Director by the British Government in India, Burma, and Ceylon.

The other appointments made at this time are Elwyn L. Perry as instructor in Geology, Lewis M. Knapp in English, Cecil L. Rew in the Romance Languages, Robert H. Oster in Physics, William J. Calvert, Jr. in English, Harold L. Dorwart in Mathematics, and John T. Perry in Biology.

SOCIETY

While the reverberations provoked by the foreign invasion of the past summer under the auspices of the Institute are still rumbling in the Berkshires, a new horde has surged in from over the seas, greeting each other on the streets of Williamstown with mutual understanding too deep for words: "How did ja leave Budapest?" But enough for generalizations:

Doughty and Sewall '29 spent the summer in the apartment of an absent aunt in Paris. 'Nuff said.

Lisle and Strong '29 bicycled through southern England. When interviewed by a Record reporter, they said they figured two miles on a gallon, which we can't understand, because bicycles don't run on gasoline—especially in southern England.

The Hales and Newton '29 were for a time thought lost in France, but have since appeared from behind mugs of Munich beer.

It is reported that a number of unnamed students encountered a certain lively Dr. Jack somewhere in Germany and abandoned their itinerary several days to find out what he was doing. Object: Black-mail.

Beals '29 was visited with appendicitis while abroad. It is with surprise and sympathy that we learn that he could not stand the pace.

Lyon '29 and Rabbitt '31 have joined this summer's crop of elite globe-trotters. The former is still playing milkmaid on a cattle ship (Dean Howse please take note), while the latter polished brass on a South American tramp steamer.

Cornelison '28, Howse and Hoge '30 were last seen touring Europe. If any reader should locate the party, please have Howse report to THE RECORD office.

On this side of the seas:

Clark '29 broke down under a job in Springfield, and spent the rest of the summer recuperating in the care of a young lady along the Maine coast.

Schott '29, after being beaten by one and one-half yard in the Olympic tryouts, decided to take up banking.

Overton '29 lost his slicker in Western Canada on a motor trip so he couldn't keep dry. Eynon '31 brought him home.

Noble, Tittman, and Wells '29 gave rooms and baths to old women at Princeton Inn.

Several students who remained in Williamstown to work for the Institute, preferring to have Europe brought to them, are reported to be strong advocates of the extraterritorial rights of Hungarians.

A couple of the above mentioned were engaged in making room in the swimming pool for Mesdames Wu and Ho and all the little Wangs.

From this number of student employees, Dr. Garfield with his usual executive shrewdness chose Haviland '29 to operate the loud speaker. It, or rather "We", that is to say, they, came to be known to the Institute as the loud squeaker.

T. P. Robinson Discusses Psychological Complexion

January, February and March, are the "fed-up" months. This is when a certain amount of leisure, of just simply "doing nothing" is forced upon us, and so many of us are lost.

The fact is we do not understand ourselves; we often lack a definite realization of purpose. There are great energies working within which are not comprehended. As a balance to this inward conflict, we crave objective routine and organization. In answer to these energies we erect and maintain a permanent, peaceful, and fair environment. Only vaguely do we realize that such an environment is vitally necessary to us as dynamic destinies of power. The result in both cases is the same—object; but in the first case the cause is a sense of lack, while in the second it is a vaguely but vitally felt need. Both I think are only varied manifestations of the supreme fact, sensed as indubitably true by all, that order is the way of life . . . chaos the way of death. Our desire for objective routine and our organization of our environment, our student activities and our self-expression, our inability to tackle leisure and our occupation, therefore, can be understood. Gropingly we are trying to achieve self-consciousness which will clearly show us our own powers and our own place. In a lesser degree we are experiencing the peculiar conflicts of the American character.

An education should fit a man for life in the outer world. This life we have seen is one of restless activity bound by efficiency and routine. Because we too are Americans, and because Williams is a microcosm of the larger State, the same activity and organization exist here. But the educational process develops self-consciousness. The Williams student understands himself and the future better than the man in the subway with eyes hungry for action. We are fortunate in our education. We have had a chance to meet in smaller ways the same problems in our little world of Williamstown. We have gathered a synthesis of human contact, knowledge, and activity, which fits us for leadership. And this is our stern responsibility . . . to take our place as leaders, more fortunate and more enlightened, in the hectic and on-rushing whirl—American life.

Institute of Politics Strikes Fire in Stormy Eighth Session

with the declaration, concurred in by prominent international lawyers of the country, that the treaties were futile, because now for the first time the Great Powers would in part legalize war, and noxious to the United States because they would give the rest of the world the legal right to attack the United States in case of a disagreement. Dr. Pierard of Belgium retorted that if the people of this country accepted Professor Borchard's view progress in Europe would be set back fifty years and Bolshevism would be rampant.

Evening lectures were given throughout the month to audiences of three to six hundred in Chapin Hall by prominent foreigners. Mme. Halide traced the history of Turkey from the days of the Ottoman Empire to date and treated in detail the Young Turk revolution of 1908. Dr. Pierard, whose working men's legislation is now being borrowed from its native Belgium by Mussolini, spoke on political aspects of post-war Belgium, including the Belgian liquor law and the relation of church and state. Count Carlo Sforza, former Italian Minister of Foreign Affairs and principal speaker of the 1927 session of the Institute, recited a number of amusing and pertinent incidents from his personal recollections concerning responsibility for the World War.

"Methods of Social Direction" was the general topic dealt with in both lecture and Round Table by Dr. Graham Wallas, emeritus Professor of Social Psychology at London School of Economics. He was cut off short in the midst of the development of his theories when he was called home due to the sickness of his wife. Dr. Otto Hoetzsch, professor of History at the University of Berlin gave a very scholarly exposition of present German problems and emphasized the debt of Germany to the United States for many features of its constitution.

A thorough discussion of the situation in modern China was presented in a series of lectures by Dr. C. C. Wu, Chinese Ambassador to the United States, who dealt with political problems, and Dr. James Yen, author of a simplified Chinese language, who treated the educational aspects.

The nine Round Table groups were in several cases led by the lecturers already mentioned, each leading discussion on topics related to his lectures. Mme. Halide was one of these, and Dr. Wallas' Round Tables on social psychology in its relation to government were the center of lively discussion by Professor Doughty of Williams and Dr. Thwing, President Emeritus of Western Reserve. Professor Collings of the Wharton School of Business covered recent Latin American economic developments and the Nicaraguan question. Professor Hackett of the University of Texas handled the legal phases of the same Latin American problems and is credited with having made clear to many for the first time the exact status of the American oil properties in Mexico.

No doubt Dr. Raymond Buell's statements in the course of his discussion of African problems attracted more attention to the Berkshire hills than any other single item. The trouble came when, after dealing with League mandates and missions in Africa, Dr. Buell blamed American policy for keeping back progress in Liberia and proceeded to attack the Firestone rubber concessions as being taken from Liberia through the machinations of the State Department. Firestone secured 2,000,000 acres of rubber land for $160,000 and then forced a $5,000,000 loan on the Liberian Government at 7%. Vehement denial of the alleged tactics was made by Mr. Firestone, the State Department, and President King of Liberia. The fact that Firestone went to Liberia in accordance with Herbert Hoover's policy in regard to the British rubber monopoly brought in the domestic political issue.

Two more discussion groups on oriental problems were led by American authorities. Professor MacKenzie of the University of Washington came to the end of his treatment of "Population Problems of the Pacific Rim" with the conclusion that there is no immediate danger from the Yellow Peril in California. Intimate acquaintance with the prominent contemporary Orientals helped place Professor G. H. Blakslee's discussion of the Far East among the most popular of the session. Professor Blakslee is from Clark University.

The social life of the Institute was not the least impressive feature. Five hundred guests attended the opening reception at Dr. Garfield's home. Dr. Garfield also held open house each evening after the lectures. Teas, given by Bishop Robert Paddock of Williamstown, Professor McLaren, and the various Round Table leaders, offered excellent opportunity for informal discussion. An Oriental Tea was given at the Delta Kappa Epsilon House by the Oriental members of the Institute. In addition there were weekly dances at the Taconic Club and much less formal gatherings in the pool each afternoon from four to six.

The session, which brought credit to the Institute and to the College, was a success through the efforts of Dr. Garfield, Professor McLaren, Andrew Ten Eyck, in charge of the press work, and Professor Johnson, in charge of lodging and the commissary department at the College Commons, not to mention a number of Williams students who worked for the Institute during the summer. Though the original financing plan expired with the eighth session, Dr. Garfield announced that the Institute would be continued indefinitely, while plans are being made for its enlargement.

INTERCOLLEGIATES

VAGABONDING—Harvard, Brown, and Hamilton are taking seriously this comparatively new idea of voluntary attendance in courses not officially carried by the student. Announcement of the most promising lectures of the day is now a regular feature of the college press. In addition student opinion of the various courses as units is published as registration aid. Are they frank?

"History 7-8: The lectures are sometimes entertaining and often instructing, but as a steady diet they are worse than a bore."

FLUNK REPORTING 1-2?—The faculty of M. I. T. has agreed to give theme credit to members of the reportorial staff of 'The Tech' in connection with required courses in first and second year English. They didn't promise what the grades would be.

ATTENDANCE IS LARGE AT ANNUAL RECEPTION

Freshmen Meet the Faculty and Men and Methods of the College Body

More than 95% of the members of the entering class took advantage of the opportunity offered to make the acquaintance of the personnel and organization of the College offered by the annual Williams Christian Association reception held in Jesup Hall last Saturday evening. In addition to an unusually large number of the Faculty, the reception line included this year a group of students representing the undergraduate body.

Rohrbach '29, president of the Christian Association, presided over the ceremonies and introduced the Freshmen to Dr. and Mrs. Garfield, who headed the long line. At the conclusion of the introductions, the guests adjourned to the auditorium where the working of the various campus organizations was explained in short talks by their respective leaders. Anderson '29, captain of football, covered the field of athletics, Kolbe '29, editor of The Record, told of campus literary activities, while Harris '29, president of the Adelphe Union, dealt with public speaking and dramatics. Overton '29, managing editor of The Record, spoke of publications and competitions in general, and Doughty '29, made several rushing announcements. Clark '29, president of Gargoyle, explained the various honorary societies, and Rohrbach concluded in behalf of his own organization.

After the talks the Freshmen returned to the lower floor where they met in the various nooks and corners in groups according to entries and, while partaking of ice cream and cake, had the opportunity of forming a closer acquaintance with their several faculty advisors, a privilege which has not in former years been offered at so early a date. The evening was enlivened by the gaiety emanating from the Purple Knights as their contribution to the occasion.

Wesleyan Devotes Large Sums to Salary Increases

Wesleyan University, according to the announcement made last Friday, has received gifts amounting to $600,000 to be added to the endowment fund as assistance in "creating an income sufficient to raise the faculty salaries to their proper level". The sum will be placed at the disposal of the centennial committee, which is composed of trustees and members of the alumni council.

Wesleyan's centennial year comes in 1931 and it is their aim to raise at that time $1,000,000 in gifts to increase the salaries and provide for the retirement allowances of faculty members. Other funds desired include $500,000 for additional scholarships and loans to students; $250,000 for the library, $150,000 for adequate courses in art and music, $100,000 for the restoring of East Hall, $50,000 for the remodeling of Rich Hall, $325,000 for adequate athletic facilities and smaller sums for a number of purposes.

World Cruise Again Cancelled

Because of insufficient enrollment the round-the-world student cruise which was to have sailed this fall has again been cancelled, and Professor G. N. Messer, of the Physical Training Department, has accordingly postponed his sabbatical leave until next year, he announced recently. This year's projected tour met the same fate as the 1927-28 one which died a natural death when too few students registered to make it financially possible. The 1928-29 trip, however, came nearer to running, as a sufficient number had tentatively signed up, but uncertainties and delays in final registration made it too risky to proceed.

Freshman Rule Change

As printed in the Freshman handbook and in the last issue of The Record, Campus Regulation No. 13 specified that no freshmen are allowed to walk on the grass of the Chapin Hall campus. By a 1927 ruling, this law was changed so that freshmen are prohibited from walking on any of the College campuses.

Three Changes Made in Football Rules for 1928

To correct the confusion growing out of last year's rulings, three important changes have been adopted in the football rules for 1928. They provide:

1. That a backward or lateral pass must be tossed at least two yards to be classes as such and that it may be recovered but not advanced by the defending side.
2. That either a muffed or a fumbled punt may be recovered but not advanced by the kicking side.
3. That no player on the side making a forward pass who has crossed the line of scrimmage may interfere with an opponent until the ball has been touched.

The first two of these rules represent a compromise between last year's code and that of 1926. Protection is now removed from lateral passes, but further development of this feature of the game will not be greatly hindered. The second rule eliminates the necessity for discriminating between a muffed and a fumbled punt by classing them together. The third change was effected because of the belief that the present system is unfair in allowing blocking of the defense on forward pass plays.

BOOKS ARE WRITTEN BY FIVE PROFESSORS

Study of Prehistoric Period and Discussion of Buddhism Are Included

Five books written by members of the Faculty, and dealing with a variety of subjects, are now either in the hands of the publishing companies, or approaching completion this fall. Professors Cleland and Pratt, Assistant Professors Buflinton and Cru, and Instructor Spring have been engaged in this work, and the latter two are not present on leave, completing their volumes.

The book written by Professor H. F. Cleland, of the Geology Department, is

PROF. H. L. CLELAND
Whose Book "Our Prehistoric Ancestors" Was Published Last Week

titled "Our Prehistoric Ancestors", and was published last week by the Coward-McGann Co. of New York City. It deals with the events of the prehistoric period which were most influential in shaping modern civilization. Professor Pratt's work, entitled "The Pilgrimage of Buddhism", traces the development of the oriental religion, and discusses the various forms of Buddhism. It will be published about the middle of October by the McMillan Co.

Professor Cru is at present in France, arranging for the publication of his World War bibliography, which he recently completed after four years of research. The book is one of a series in the French language covering the chief economic and social aspects of the War, and was compiled from personal accounts of French combatants. Mr. Spring, of the same department, is also spending a leave of absence in writing a volume in French. The Philosophical Novel of Gobineau is a complete account of the work of Count Arthur de Gobineau, famous French diplomat of the 18th century.

ROTH QUARTET WILL OPEN CONCERT YEAR

Hungarian Group To Play in Chapin Hall Tonight Sponsored by Mrs. E. S. Coolidge

Characterized as "a string quartet of the first rank" by Olin Downes of the New York Times, the Roth quartet of Budapest will play a program of chamber music in the opening concert of the 1928-29 series at Williams, Tuesday night at 8.15 in Chapin Hall. Coming direct from their triumph last Friday night in Pittsfield, where they played as the closing feature of Mrs. E. S. Coolidge's musical festival, the musicians will perform at Williams also through the courtesy of that well-known patroness of music.

The present members of the group are Feri Roth and Jenő Antal, first and second violins; Ferenc Molnar, viola; and Albert van Doorn, cello, and, having rehearsed together for three years, have gained an enviable reputation in Europe. Although the original organization was founded in Berlin in 1921, it has been heard in America this year for the first time. The warmth of its reception, however, is evident from the words of the New York critic, who states that its "performances were received by a very critical audience with unstinted enthusiasm . . . a gathering of exceptionally experienced listeners sat intent and absorbed . . . if the quartet elects to continue performing in this country, it appears certain to gain an influential following."

To quote the critic further: "The playing had a variety of color and shading that matched its poetic shading and rare sensibility. It was attentive to classic tradition and yet most flexible and spontaneous in manner. There was not a conventional or a static measure. Colors and sonorities fluctuated like light on water, as a result of the inherent life and musicality of the performance. It was a recreation of some of the most beautiful chamber music that Mozart penned, and as such afforded as fine a pleasure as is provided by chamber music literature."

This concert is but one of many of similar character which Mrs. Coolidge has sponsored at the College. Among others in recent years, she has sent the London String quartet, the Elshuco trio, and the Persinger quartet of last season. The group which will play tonight under the direction of M. Roth has selected the following program:

- I. Quartette in F. Major. Opus 18 No. 1 L. van Beethoven
- II. Quartette Maurice Ravel
- III. Quartette in A. Minor. Opus 41 Robert Schumann

Notice to Freshmen

The attention of the first year men and transfers from other colleges is again called to the following particulars regarding the coming rushing season:

1. Every man should familiarize himself with the interfraternity agreement, printed in the previous issue of The Record.
2. The Record and Adviser should be watched for further notices.
3. Post office boxes should be secured.
4. Every person should familiarize himself with the location of the various fraternity houses.
5. There will be meetings of the freshmen class on Monday and Thursday evenings, September 24 and 27, at 7.30 p. m. in the Jesup Hall Auditorium.
6. The arbiters and chairman of the Interfraternity Council will consult anyone during office hours concerning any matters pertaining to the interpretation of the rules or to permissions to dine with members of the Faculty and upperclassmen before or during the rushing period. The office, located in the Jesup Hall reading room, will be open from 7.00 to 8.30 p. m. until further notice. Otherwise, communicate with W. H. Doughty by calling 14.
7. The Interfraternity Council advises all new men that there is no house whose initiation fee exceeds $100.

CALENDAR

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 25
8.15 p. m.—Concert by Roth String Quartet of Budapest. Chapin Hall.
SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 29
3.00 p. m.—Football. Williams vs. Providence College. Weston Field.

U. S. Marine Band Will Play Here October 28

Through the efforts of Collins '29, Manager of the Musical Clubs, and Sewall '29, President of the Little Theater, the United States Marine Band will give two concerts, under the auspices of the aforementioned organizations, on Sunday afternoon and evening, October 28, in Chapin Hall. The approaching season for "The President's Own", as the band is called, will be the most ambitious one ever attempted by this organization, and the College is fortunate in being able to secure its services.

Captain Taylor Branson, leader of the band, has secured for himself and his co-workers nationwide fame by virtue of extraordinary musicianship. The permanency of the organization is one reason for its extreme popularity, which has insured a very busy tour at this time. The variety of the program will be great, ranging from the ecstatic Fourth Symphony of Tchaikowsky to the sweet melody of a Victor Herbert libretto.

'Phi Betes' Honor Shoaff, '29

John Dryer Shoaff, of Fort Wayne, Indiana, was elected secretary of the 1929 delegation of Phi Beta Kappa at a meeting of that body held last Saturday.

72 STUDENTS ENROLL FOR HONORS COURSES

English Has Largest Group With 23 Students; History Second With 12 Men

With a total of 72 men signed up for honors work for the coming year, 39 juniors and 33 seniors, the new system, which allows a liberal opportunity for independent study, has attracted more students this fall than in the two preceding years of its existence at Williams. Except for a marked increase in the French and Economics departments, approximately the same number of students have elected honors work in the various departments as

PROF. T. C. SMITH
Chairman of the Honors Committee

last year, English being most popular again with 23 men and History second with 12.

According to Prof. T. C. Smith, Chairman of the Honors Committee, the system has worked successfully here at Williams since its adoption in 1926, and practically every man eligible has taken advantage of the opportunity this year. Professor Smith points out that "honors work is by no means limited to grinds or even all-around stars, the only pre-requisite being an ability and keen interest in one field." Several of the men registered this year, many of whom are prominent in every branch of extra-curricular activities, have a general average below B.

A list of the number of students who have elected honors work in the different departments and also the number of juniors who are beginning a major in each is as follows:

VARSITY FIRST TEAM OVERWHELMS SCRUBS

Five Touchdowns Scored Against Second Eleven; Howe and Langmaid Star

Scoring five touchdowns to their opponent's none, the Varsity football team easily defeated the second eleven in the longest scrimmage of the year held on Weston Field Saturday afternoon. Howe displayed the best running of any of the backs, going over the line twice, once after a sixty-yard run, while Chase and Langmaid repeatedly hit the scrubs' forward wall for substantial gains.

The Varsity was on the offense most of the time, receiving four out of the five kickoffs, and holding the scrubs to small gains whenever the latter had the ball. Howe did the punting for the first team and got off some good kicks during the afternoon. Most of the plays were through the line or around the ends, the open passing game, characteristic of the 1927 Williams eleven, being used very little.

The lack of experienced and heavy linemen still presents a serious problem, but the backfield is composed of veterans with the exception of Langmaid who, though playing his first year of varsity football, threatens to displace a regular in the all-1929 backfield. Brown is as yet out of the game with a wrenched knee, and it is not yet known if he will be able to face Providence College in the opening game this Saturday. The squad members are otherwise comparatively free from casualties, the intensive pre-season drilling having put them in good condition for scrimmaging.

Throughout Saturday's scrimmage the first string backfield of Putnam, Howe, Langmaid, and Chase tore off large gains at will, while Coughlin, when substituted, also showed good form. The line displayed more power than at any other time this season, smothering their opponent's plays, and opening up large holes for their own backs. Lasell has been switched to guard from the pivot position, with Muller, doing the passing now. Capt. Andersen is holding down his position in good form, but the rest of the line is on the whole inexperienced.

Providence College will open the season here next Saturday afternoon and promises a hard game from early reports. Two years ago they beat the Purple eleven by a close margin in the season's opener. After this the team will play seven games, facing Columbia, Union, Wesleyan, and Amherst on consecutive Saturdays. Four games will be played away from home this fall, the team going to New Brunswick, Maine, to face Bowdoin, to New York, Schenectady, and Amherst.

Following is the Varsity line-up which started Saturday's scrimmage: ends, Ashby and Whittlesey; tackles, Denning and Schwartz; guards, Capt. Andersen and Lasell; center, Muller; quarterback, Putnam; backs, Chase, Howe, and Langmaid.

PROF. MILHAM TAKES TOUR AROUND WORLD

Sabbatical Trip Includes Visits to Japan, China, India, Near East and Europe

Approximately 30,000 miles of water travel en route around the world combined with numerous protracted and illuminating stopovers in countries visited served to make Professor W. I. Milham's sabbatical year most intriguing, according to the account rendered to a Record reporter recently. Additional interest was added to the tour by the amount of time spent in the Orient,—particularly among the happy hunting grounds of the Chinese war lords which at that time were more or less quiescent due to the repressive measures of the late Ching-Tao-Lin.

Early November of last year signaled the departure of the Milhams on a Dollar Line boat for Kobe, Japan. Stops were made at Havana, Panama, Los Angeles, San Francisco, and Honolulu, and Christmas was spent in Kyoto. After New Year's it was decided to undertake the overland trip to Peking via Korea. Winter in the latter province proved to be rather dreary, and Professor Milham was glad to reach Mukden, whence, due to the offices

SUSPENDED SENTENCE

Few of us will be quite so vain as to imagine that the decision of the Trustees to postpone drastic action on the car situation was brought about by anything resembling undergraduate "pressure". What has been done with a comfortable degree of personal safety by the powers of other petrol-soaked colleges could certainly have been done here as well. For, unfortunately, the very reasons which brought the matter of car ownership to a head would have made excuses plausible for abolishing the privilege.

The Trustees evidently preferred to give the boys another chance to grow up of their own accord, and in so doing they also presented eloquent rebuttal to the tiresome charge that Williams students are ever the babes of a paternalistic despotism.

So the rod has been saved—or at least poised in mid-air for a while. Whether it must soon descend with a resounding whack depends of course upon whether the child becomes spoiled. The fact that the Trustees saw fit to suspend sentence, however, would seem to indicate that they believe we still have it in us to reform. There is nothing subtle about the significance: we are on parole, and it will not take many violations to make pedestrians of us all. The Trustees are not bluffing.

Of course in any community, be it Boston or Williamstown, there is bound to be a certain percentage of automobile accidents over a certain period of time. The law of averages takes care of that. We can but take the ordinary safety precautions, and trust to God that the other fellow will not hit us.

We cannot think that the so-called car situation became a situation here or at any other college merely because there were accidents. It is the circumstances leading up to and surrounding the crash which make all the trouble. Reckless driving, stunt driving, one-armed driving, are really not as characteristic of modern college men as their less gentle critics would have it. But there is one type of driving—one condition of driving—which never seems to become quite obsolete in any of these dry United States. A serious offense in the eyes of the Law, deans and trustees have little choice in dealing with such cases. When they persist, a college is forced, almost willy-nilly, to take steps in removing the cause and the temptation—if only to protect its good name.

Drunken driving is, we imagine, the chief cause for such widespread interference of "student rights" by college authorities. And this, we also imagine, is what the Trustees here had uppermost in mind when they somewhat euphemistically requested "the co-operation of the students, parents, and faculty to the end that the abuses be corrected." Of course there are other "abuses" besides drunken driving. Keeping a car without registering it at the Dean's office is one of them. The operation of cars by underclassmen is another. In fact the list might be extended ad infinitum, for the ways of abusing a privilege are many.

It would be a pitiful commentary on the mental age of men who are supposed to be taking a great interest in self-government and educational responsibility, if they should fail to justify the confidence which the Trustees have implicitly placed in them by suspending sentence on car culpability. From a more material angle, it would be nothing less than a shame, if all future seniors and juniors were compelled to walk their way through college simply because one or two heartless drivers did not keep on the road.

COACH CALDWELL

If the newspaper reports are true, Coach Charlie Caldwell begins his first year at Williams with nothing exceptionally brilliant in the way of material. What he does begin with, is a clean slate, for what it may be worth. Perhaps we cannot quickly forget some of our previous defeats—in fact it will probably do us good to remember for a little while longer such things as the Wesleyan game—but at least Mr. Caldwell will not be embarrassed by the perennial cropping out of his past sins, as so many football coaches are. As far as we are concerned, Coach Caldwell's chief importance lies in the present and the immediate future.

There is no doubt that his position just now is difficult, his job a tough one. The actual business of organizing and training a college football team is one thing. But when the coach must work with men he has never seen before, when he must get across to them new theories of the game, new signals, new methods, it is quite another thing. This was Coach Caldwell's task as he faced the season. And now of course he is expected to put everyone in a good humor by winning a lot of games. The alumni have a habit of judging a coach by the number of victories won. When they come up to Williamstown for a week-end in the fall they want to see the team win, and they don't want alibis. The undergraduates are not usually so cold-blooded, for being on the spot, they have seen what goes on behind the scenes.

The College should be slow to grumble this fall. No more than Rome can football teams be built in a day—especially when some of the materials are lacking. The most effective way we can support the players is by supporting the new coach. Williams men have the spirit: it burst out once last year in the Amherst rally. Let it burst out again next Saturday to start the Purple team through its first season with Coach Charlie Caldwell. Let it be loud. Let it be long.

A few softly spoken words on the etiquette of leaving the Thompson Memorial Chapel are called for. Not everyone seems to be aware of an old Williams custom that prescribes that juniors shall wait as patiently as possible in their respective pews until the last senior has passed down the aisle; that in the same manner sophomores shall wait for juniors, and that freshmen shall wait for sophomores. If the lower classes see fit to preserve this custom, they, too, may eventually know the joy of being the very first to see the blue sky and the green grass after their daily meditation.

Life and Customs of Williams Undergraduates Described by Stuart Emery in Magazine Article

In a somewhat colorful but almost entirely true article, Stuart M. Emery, '11, Assistant Editor of the American Legion Weekly, added Williams to the series of colleges given a little free publicity by the well known College Humor. To an unobserving outsider reading the write-up, Williams might seem a place to secure a leisurely education while indulging in such pleasant pranks as sallying forth to collect a policeman's headgear for the wall of your room. Since Mr. Emery ran rather lightly over the myriad and strenuous activities of the undergraduates.

Beginning the article is an inclusive description of Williamstown and the surrounding country, portraying the beauties of Greylock, which Mr. Emery forgot to mention cannot be seen from Williamstown, and correct in most points except that "age-old Greylock's shadow" does not stretch "in the New England twilight across the white bars of Weston Field," Greylock being a little to the south and east. Such minor details, however, do not mar the beauty or value of the article for an outsider. Spring Street was given a prominent place: "Spring Street with its stores and benches, its billiards, neckties, shirts, sweaters, and hamburger sandwiches, is the Rialto, the Broadway, the Pall Mall, the Saville Row of Williamstown." The author aptly says: "You can sell your Herodotus and Horace at one end and, passing rapidly through the temptations of malted milk or some snappy suitings, deposit the seventy cents in the Williamstown National Bank at the other end or something slightly less than a minute."

Williams is defended against the appellation of being a "rich man's college," and then after a short summary of the history of the college, including its recent war record, Mr. Emery explains why it is not a "poor man's college." It is the Golden Medium, he meant to imply, no doubt. Fraternities received their due notice in this description of Williams, and also the "good old days" of rushing were dragged into the picture. Such excellent customs as rolling a beer keg from West College into the front window of Bemis' store were recalled to mind along with the Shirt Tail Parade and the Cane Contest.

Judging from the writer's remarks, Williams students would all seem to be hardy men and able to hold their liquor like gentlemen, much like the similar students at those great universities at New Haven and Princeton. "Heavy, heavy, what hangs over the hip" was cracked up as a great game up here among the Berkshire Hills. Houseparties were given a noble treatment by Mr. Emery, who frankly gave the true impression that the girls at Williams parties are incomparably more beautiful than elsewhere. All the "dope" about the uses of husky divans in secluded corners of fraternity houses is let out in one fell swoop, along with such interesting items as the practice of giving particularly attractive girls standing invitations to houseparties. The dancing, or as known in Mr. Emery's day, the "twitching" team was given the standing of professional entertainers being invited to all really important functions in Albany and Troy. A little truth came out at this point when it was explained that "our rivals" from Union and R. P. I. were "undoubtedly glad to see us present at teas and dances. If someone slips on the stairs or upsets the bum stand they can always say it was 'just another one of those Williams men'."

The author gets down to serious propaganda at about this point in his article with the following: "Williams is closer in spirit and atmosphere to Princeton than it is to Amherst or Wesleyan or any other institution of its size. Spring Street and Nassau Street are vastly alike in many ways. Its contact with New York and Boston is constant, despite the hundreds of miles that separate it from the 'settlements'. There is nothing to keep the undergraduate at Williamstown from the outside world if he has the guts, except possibly the lack of car fare and you can always borrow that in half an hour at Cabé Prindle's. Or you can sell your roommate's suit."

Towards the end of his article Mr. Emery gets in a masterly defense or rather ballyhoo for the small college. Knowing everyone in the college is indeed an advantage which Princeton and Yale cannot enjoy. At Williams: "Common tastes and congeniality count for more than numbers. You are likely if given to the wanderlust, to wake up in someone else's house or dormitory on Sunday morning. If the food at the chapter grows a trifle sketchy, as Greek letter food has a habit of doing, you can try asking yourself out to dinner at the other houses where your particular friends are located."

Williams activities are given a short write-up in this article, followed by an explanation of the educational system, and then Mr. Emery ends with: "Our critics, and we have plenty of them, are prone to call Williams men 'exclusive' and 'clannish'. We admit cheerfully to the latter fault, if fault it be, for men from the same college more or less hang together both during scholastic years and afterwards. It may or may not be just another Williams tradition. After all, there are not such an awful lot of us."

Intramural Activities to Begin on October 1

Intramural athletic activities will start this year on October 1, when the first matches of the tennis and golf tournaments will take place. In order to promote facilities for intramural events, a new athletic field has been constructed to the west of Cole Field and will be ready for use by the opening of the touch football series in the middle of October. Concrete stands are also to be built.

Due to the overcrowded spring schedule in fraternity athletics, the Athletic Council has decided to shift the golf and tennis contests to the fall, and these will open with elimination matches starting on October 1. A round robin series for semi-finalists in these sports is scheduled for October 8, while the championship will be played off two weeks later. The next events start on October 9 when the annual freshman-sophomore soccer tournament will begin. Five games will be played, the last one on October 23.

The underclass track meet will be held from October 16-18 and will be followed on the 31st by a cross-country run. First round matches in touch football must be completed by October 20, while the interfraternity cross-country run will come on November 7. The final contest preceding the Christmas holidays will be the interfraternity swimming meet, to be run off from November 26-December 2.

The holders of Waterman's fountain pens are made of rubber. Years of experience and experiment have demonstrated that there is nothing like rubber for fountain pen holders; nothing that is as light, as resilient, as pleasant to hold, and that has the advantage of being stainless.

Color effects in hard rubber have always defied the rubber chemist until our research engineers finally solved the problem. This notable achievement has resulted in a beautiful line of two-tone stainless ripple-rubber holders in Ripple-Blue-green, Ripple-Rose and Ripple-Olive.

The new two-tone Waterman's pen has a real collegiate look. It is a pen you will be proud to own. It will be a constant companion throughout your college and business career and a valued memento of your college days. Dependable, speedy pen performance saves valuable time for thought—a decided advantage during exams.

Two-tone pencils are made to match two-tone pens.

Commons Club Now Has an Alumni Organization

When approximately 100 alumni, faculty members, and undergraduates gathered in the Common Room of Currier Hall on the evening of June 22, the initial step was taken towards the formation of a Commons Club Alumni Association. This meeting, marking a new phase in the recent development of the Commons Club, was presided over by Carl J. Austrian '14, a founder of the Club, and was addressed by President Garfield whose historical sketch of the organization was followed by a speech by Haviland '29 on its present policy.

Preceding the meeting a buffet supper was served, at which time friendships were made and renewed. Among the prominent Williams Alumni in attendance were Rev. Dr. H. P. Dewey '84, H. J. Brown '85, F. T. Wood '98, and C. M. Davenport '01, members of the board of trustees, as well as Prof. A. G. Canfield '78, M. J. Hawley '78, M. W. MacLay '09, C. L. Hedden '12, W. A. Crosby '14, W. O. Wyckoff '14, and H. Perkins '23.

As a result of this meeting, an informal association, with membership open to all Williams Alumni, has been organized, and an Alumni Council has been selected to cooperate with the undergraduate administration in bringing about closer relations. The Commons Club has, this fall, obtained a number of rooms in Currier Hall and fitted them for the accommodation of Alumni who may wish to visit Williamstown at any time during the college year.

Books Are Written by Five Professors

The third volume of a series of books on European history known as The Berkshire Studies in European History, to which Professor Newhall of the History Department has already contributed a volume, will be written this year by Professor Buffinton. The struggle between England and France in the second Hundred-Years War, 1689-1815, forms the basis for Professor Buffinton's treatise.

First 'Alumni Review' Is Ready

Featuring an article entitled "Trustees by Divine Right or Democracy?" and written by an alumnus, the first issue of the Williams Alumni Review will appear about October third. This number will also contain pictures of the alumni groups who celebrated their twenty-fifth and fiftieth reunions last June and copies of the class poems read at that time. The editorials discuss problems of particular interest on the campus at the present moment, while an unusually large number of alumni notes will complete the magazine. Beginning with the current number, H. L. Foster '28 takes up his position as assistant editor of the Review.

1929 To Nominate Officers

Nominations for the officers of the class of 1929, to serve during the coming year, will be submitted within the next two weeks by a recently-appointed nominating committee consisting of W. R. Schott, Chairman, J. E. Gailer, T. K. Hess, J. K. Reeves, and W. R. Titus, Jr. '29. Nominations for 1930 and 1931 will be proposed as soon as the Senior elections are completed, but the officers of the incoming freshman class will not be nominated this year until after the mid-year examination period.

Fall Golf Tournament To Open

Entries for the annual fall golf tournament can now be made through Williams '29, captain of the golf team, or Dick Baxter at the Taconic Country Club. This tourney, which is run each fall to determine the college championship and also to aid in selecting players for the team in the spring, is this year to consist of 18 holes of medal play. The matches will start as soon as entries have been completed.

Infirmary

R. Shoaff '30, and Shepard '32 are at present confined to the Thompson Infirmary. If an undergraduate becomes seriously ill, his parents are immediately notified by the College authorities.

27 States Included in Freshman Registration

Twenty-seven states, ranging from Vermont to California, the District of Columbia, Canada, and France were represented in the registration of 1932, the largest class in College history. There was again a slight decrease in the percentage of New England students at Williams, particularly in the surrounding states, and proportionately a decided increase in the numbers from the Atlantic and Central States, as well as from the South, a region which formerly sent almost no students to New England colleges.

New York State again established itself as the geographical center of Williams students, with a total registration of 69, a figure far above the normal enrollment. The Middle Atlantic States together comprised 45% of the freshman student body, the highest number in many years. Although Massachusetts ranked second only to New York in individual registration, with 40 students, the New England enrollment again decreased, only 8 men coming from other near-by states. On the other hand, the Central States of Ohio, Michigan, Illinois, and Indiana contributed more than 20% of the enrollment, increasing by one-fourth the figure established over the past 28 years, while the South sent three times its usual quota. Other individual leaders were Illinois, with 19 students, New Jersey, with 17, and Ohio and Pennsylvania, each with 14.

MANY ALUMNI VIEWED VICTORY CELEBRATION

Large Number of Noted Visitors Attended Service Honoring War Heroes

(Rewritten from THE WILLIAMS RECORD
Monday, Sept. 29, 1919.)

In order to commemorate the part of Williams men in the World War alumni and undergraduates combined to plan an impressive ceremony intended to show the appreciation of the College to those men who served their country either in active service or in the reserve units which were stationed in Williamstown. Known as the "Victory Celebration", the occasion was marked by the presentation of the Williams Victory Medal to all of Eph's sons who were in the army, navy, or marine corps of the United States or in any military organization of the Allies.

Major General Leonard Wood, honorary 1902, delivered the presentation address while Professor Bliss Perry, '81, then head of the English Literature department of Harvard, was also one of the speakers. The first celebration of its kind to be held at any college, the occasion took on a national aspect. All available uniforms, complete with insignia and decorations, were to be seen in and around Williamstown, while a special military band furnished the music for the returning alumni.

According to statistics compiled in June of that year 1721 Williams men were active in some branch of the service. This comprised over 40% of all known Williams men, either graduates, undergraduates, or sometime members. Especially to be noticed is the record of the class of 1917 which had 101 men in the service out of a total of 103. The victory medal, made of bronze, had on the obverse side a trench-line of doughboys with full equipment about to charge over the top. It bore the legend, "For Humanity, 1918". On the reverse side was a portrait of Colonel Ephraim Williams in his officers' continental uniform mounted on a charger. The designer, James E. Fraser, of New York, also designed the Congressional Victory Medal.

In addition to Major General Leonard Wood the occasion received importance by the presence of Calvin Coolidge, then governor of Massachusetts, Captain Riley of the governor's staff, ex-president Franklin Carter of Williams, Colonel Archibald Hopkins, who represented the veterans of the Civil War, and Major William Pew. President Garfield read the Roll of Honor. Following a short procession and march, which was participated in by the guests, faculty, and students, approximately 700 Williams men gathered in Chapin hall for the ceremony. Many men who died in action were represented by relatives or friends. Following a short and austere service the medals were presented by Major General Leonard Wood, who gave way to Governor Coolidge. The service ended with the singing of The Mountains.

Prof. Milham Takes

Tour Around World

of Chang-Tso Lin, one train a day made the 23-hour trip to Peking. Here Chang had the situation well in hand and perfect order was maintained.

From Peking the Milhams went to the former Port Arthur of Russo-Japanese War fame, and thence to Shantung where things were quiet, mainly due to the dislike of the Chinese for winter campaigning. Various other points of interest were visited before arrival at Canton, where the necessary entourage of the traveler consisted of one guide and 14 coolies, daily wages for one of the latter consisting of the equivalent of 18c. At the end of February the Philippines were given a cursory glance and a trip was taken to Singapore and Penang in the Malay States which resulted in initiation into the questions of rubber and tin mines.

After a month in India Professor Milham left for Suez from Ceylon and spent two or three weeks in Egypt and Palestine. In the former country technical autonomy seemed to have had no effect on the maintenance of law and order, but the dependence of both Egypt and India upon outside control for their prosperity seemed to be obvious in spite of the recent utterances of separatists in both places. From Cairo access to Jerusalem is made easy by the new Allenby railway which follows the old caravan route.

In Italy, the next country visited, outward prosperity was in evidence, and traveling was made very pleasant. Later in the spring Marseilles was reached, and Professor Milham was enabled to observe the close of the spring semester at his old university at Toulouse. The summer session at the University of Grenoble was the next attraction, and after getting in touch with this the Milhams sailed for home from Marseilles.

Professor Frank J. Mather Jr. Praises Recent Architectural Improvements on Williams Campus

"I was struck most by the unity of the campus", said Frank Jewett Mather, Jr., '29, Professor of Art and Archaeology at Princeton University, when he returned to Williamstown a short while ago after an absence of four or five years. Mr. Mather, who is the author of various books on painting, among them being, "The History of Italian Painting during the Renaissance", "The Portraits of Dante", and "Modern Painting", went on to say that the architectural beauty of Williams has been so enhanced that now it ranks as "one of the most delightful campuses of colonial type".

He praised Mr. Cram for the work he has done on the campus in restoring Griffin Hall and dormitories of East College to the original brick, and stated that Professor Weston deserved much credit in fitting Lawrence Hall for the Art Department and creating a "sympathetic environment." The speaker stated that Hopkins Hall interrupted the unity of the rest of the campus. Mr. Mather went on to say that there were things of interest and rarity in the illuminated manuscripts in the Chapin Library, and that the collection of Japanese paintings and Syrian slabs in the Lawrence Hall art museum probably comprised the most important collegiate collection in America.

In commenting upon the present curriculum, Professor Mather stated that he was "much in favor of the general plan of

40 Candidates Reporting to Varsity Soccer Squad

Varsity soccer practice for the current season has been taking place daily this week on Cole Field, while a large squad of 40 men, including eight letter men of last year, has enabled the coaches to pick four teams for scrimmaging, during the last few days, after preliminary calisthenics had taken the worst kinks out of the players. Mr. Kirkland, of North Adams, with plenty of experience obtained in his native Scotland, will assist Coach Bullock this year in demonstrating the finer points of the game.

The letter men include: Capt. Christie, Phelps, Bright, Strong, Neilson, J. Willmott, Sherman, and S. Willmott. The schedule this year is the same as last, except that M. I. T. has been substituted for Clark University in the opening game. It is as follows:

'ZEST AND VITALITY' MARK ROTH RECITAL

String Quartet Presents Works of Masters With 'Vigor and Concentration'

(Courtesy of Mark Harris '29)

The Roth String Quartet, which has come into sudden and certainly well deserved prominence, appeared in recital at Williamstown last Tuesday evening, due to the generosity of Mrs. E. S. Coolidge. Both the program and its presentation were of very high calibre. The writer can recall no recital of chamber music which has given him more pleasure. Many seem to have shared his enthusiasm.

It is not often that one hears the superb genius of Beethoven, for which the great symphony orchestra sometimes seems inadequate as the medium of expression, poured into the intimate mould of the string quartet. The effect suggests an exquisite cameo bearing the characteristic vigor, concentration and controlled imagination of its maker. In the quartet heard Tuesday evening Beethoven spread the range of the strings upward in the violins and downward in the cello with the result that the framework took on a breadth irresistibly suggestive of his symphonic writing. Upon the framework he has set pure gems of ornament and within the structure he has built solidly with firm, vigorous, and compact figures. The performers, comparatively youthful also,

McKean '29 ELECTED HONOR SYSTEM HEAD

Seniors Choose Sewall as Fourth Representative—Bowden '31
New Secretary

In preparation for the coming year's duties, a meeting of the Honor System Committee was held last Monday evening in Jesup Hall, at which McKean '29 was chosen to act as chairman of the committee and Bowden '31 as secretary. Sewall '29 was elected to serve with Beals, Lisle, and McKean as Senior representative on the committee at the Senior class meeting last Wednesday evening, while the additional representatives from the three lower classes have not yet been chosen.

For the past three years McKean has been prominent in class and college activities, being a member of the Purple Key Society, Delta Sigma Rho, and Adelphe Union, as well as filling the office of class secretary last year, to which position he has recently been reelected. Sewall is president of the Little Theater and a member of Phi Beta Kappa and of the tennis team, while Bowden played on his class baseball team last spring.

The general functioning of the Honor System was explained to the members of the incoming class by McKean '29 in the short meeting after Chapel last Thursday. For their further information, the constitution of the Honor System is printed below, together with the regulations governing instructors in the administration of the system.

Junior Class Elects Six to 'Gulielmsonian' Board

Elections which took place when the Junior class met in Jesup Hall last Monday resulted in the choice of Alan E. Baxter of Cleveland Heights, O., Joseph K. Close of Toledo, David R. Heaton of Fort Wayne, Indiana, Charles S. Hyde, Jr. of Syracuse, N. Y., Colin G. Jameson of Santa Barbara, Calif., and Louis R. Thun of Wyomissing, Pa., as members of the 1930 Gulielmsonian Board. The newly constituted editors later appointed Jameson Editor-in-Chief and L. Thun, Managing Editor.

Baxter prepared for Williams at the Cleveland Heights High School and since coming to College has taken part in Cap and Bells and Little Theatre productions, and has become a member of the Purple Cow and Graphic boards. Close attended Hill School, and is at present Associate Editor of The Record and Assistant Manager of track. Heaton prepared at the Fort Wayne Central High School and since entering Williams has been elected to the Graphic, become Associate Editor of The Record, and been prominent in debating. Hyde, who is a graduate of Andover, is a member of The Record Board, as is Jameson, who prepared at the Thatcher School, Ojai, Calif., while L. Thun came to College from the Riverdale Country School and played on the 1930 football eleven.

Students are reminded that, as today is the last day of Daylight Saving Time, all clocks should be turned back one hour this evening. Eastern Standard Time is officially resumed at 12 p. m.

Many Names Are Listed for Tennis Tournament

Over 75 signatures testified interest in the annual Fall tennis tournament when the entries closed last Thursday night, at which time the drawings were made. Although in number of entrants it is almost 25 less than last year, the tournament brings together almost the same list of stars, for, of the first string men, graduation took only Banks, runner-up to Wolf last year.

The latter, captain-elect of next year's tennis team, is favored to retain his title, although he will be hard-pressed by Sewall, third man on last season's team, and by Denison, another regular. The Fall tournament is instrumental in determining the starting lineup for next Spring. Play in the first round should start as soon as the drawings are posted in Jesup Hall. A complete list of entrants appears below:

Buck, Denison, Faison, Herriek, Hobart, Hoge, Lisle, Nye, Owen, Sewall, Strong, Tittman, and Wolf '29; Baldwin, Bie, Clark, Clarke, Covell, Doherty, Hoyt, Jepson, N. D. Johnson, McKittrick, Newhall, F. Nye, C. Nye, Shoaff, Straw, Webb.

CANDIDATES REPORT FOR 1932 FOOTBALL

First Practice Held on Cole Field
Last Monday for Squad of Eighty-five Men

Featuring setting-up exercises and dummy tackling Coach Graham is shaping up a freshmen squad which promises to be one of the heaviest yearling teams developed in recent years. Not only are the majority of the candidates above the average weight for first year material, but the list of 85 men include both preparatory and high school stars who should be a valuable addition.

Since this the first week of freshman practice the afternoons have been spent in long exercises such as "push ups", rolling, touching the toes, etc., followed by tackling practice on the dummies. The line and centers have had a bit of practice in pushing a dummy line, while the backs and ends have been receiving and sending forward passes. The backs seem to show a lot of speed in spite of their weight and several men have already displayed their adeptness at running back punts. While there are about 85 men reporting daily, the list of experienced players is exceedingly small. Scrimmage and signal drills will probably be delayed for a while, the first game being October 20.

CLOSE GAME ANTICIPATED

Williams Team Expected to Make Good Showing After Three Weeks of Work

Coming here with a veteran squad, including five members of the 1926 eleven, which won a 10-7 victory over Purple two years ago through a field goal in the last half, the Providence College football team

COACH CALDWELL

Whose Team Makes Its First Appearance against Providence College this afternoon will open the 1928 schedule against an untested Varsity on Weston Field this afternoon at three. Although the visitors will outweigh the Williams team approximately ten pounds to the man, the speed of the Purple team is expected to compensate for this; so that a hard game is expected, although the home squad is hampered by the loss of Rohrbach, Gailer, and Callaghan on the line.

The Varsity has been practising since September 10, and, after three weeks of intensive work, is gradually rounding into condition under Caldwell's coaching. During the past week there has been one hard scrimmage, in which the line of the second team showed great development and gave the varsity forward wall a hard fight. There are a dozen experienced backs still

PROF. M. N. WETMORE
Who Has Just Returned from an Extensive

Excavations fresh from the sand, Carthaginian coins, museums daily visited, the Forum and the Palatine, the Lago de Garda,—in short, months of leisure to all appearances, yet congested with all things near to the heart of a Latinist, is the impression which one receives of the activities of Professor M. N. Wetmore of the Latin Department during his sabbatical year. Though proceeding with measured tread over ground for the most part familiar, Professor Wetmore left few spots untouched in the British Isles or western or southern Europe, not to mention the north coast of Africa.

The first three or four weeks of his holiday, beginning in the summer of 1927, were spent in motoring throughout Scotland, which Professor Wetmore describes as cold, wet, and beautiful. During these weeks and the time covered by a leisurely progress southward through England, 21 cathedrals were made the object of special study, in addition to the many ruins more casually visited.

Professor Wetmore resumed his journey by auto at Calais and soon found himself in Switzerland. After making the customary rounds he crossed the Alps at Simplon Pass into northern Italy, where he spent a month visiting Milan, Verona, Lake Como, Lago de Garda, Maggiore,

THE HONOR SYSTEM

Among the various traditions and customs which the freshman is invited to gulp down during his first few days at Williams, the matter of fraternity seeling seems at present to be the biggest and the most indigestible. This should not, however, obscure the fact that there are many other worthy institutions that are just as vital to the welfare of the College, though perhaps not so obviously connected with the welfare of the individual as a Greek-letter pin. Of these, none is more sacred and few older than the Honor System. In continual use since its spontaneous origin in 1896, Williams has conducted all examinations and written work in class upon the principle that a man's word of honor is better guarantee against cheating than the police-patrol of professors and proctors.

To put such trust in students when, perhaps one stolen word would mean the difference between passing and flunking a course, is a courageous thing to do. But what is far more commendable in our case is the fact for it is a fact—that of all the educational institutions that have given the system a trial, Williams is one of the few that has been justified in clinging to it. The Class of 1932 inherits no dubious experiment in the Honor System.

To outsiders and to members of colleges where cheating at its worst is still regarded as a sort of risky game, it is incredible that the Honor System really works. And perhaps until they have actually seen it in operation, many of our own freshmen, still in the fog of prep-school prejudices, have their doubts. Let them but manage to stay here long enough to take a mid-year examination (for this is the supreme test) to be convinced that Williams has solved a serious and delicate problem where so many others have failed.

External circumstances have very little to do with the success of the Honor System. Such things as geographical location, numbers, and social class do not materially affect the college man's idea of honor when it comes to cheating in the examination room. In its design the system is practically the same everywhere, yet it fails at Yale, succeeds at the University of Virginia; fails at Amherst, succeeds at Williams. How can we escape the conclusion that the Honor System depends almost entirely upon the character of the men who pledge themselves to support it?

For this reason we may call the Honor System an established institution only in the sense that Williams men have always been of the right stuff. It can never be called permanent for by its very nature its destiny rests with each new batch of men that gather here. Potentially, at least, the present Freshman class can demolish in a sickening second what their predecessors have been building and cherishing for over 30 years. We suggest that those men who are meeting the Honor System for the first time think seriously of this that Williams may be spared even the hint of such a calamity.

Upon the resignation of Jameson '30 from associate editorship of THE RECORD Charles S. Hyde, Jr. '30, of Syracuse, was chosen to fill the vacancy.

Williams Team to Open Season Today

competing for regular places in the lineup. This fall more attention has been placed on the fundamentals of the game and a few "well-learned plays"; so that the 1928 team is expected to play straight football and not stress an elaborate lateral or forward passing attack.

Of the team that will probably start Saturday's contest, seven are letter-men, Williams, Lasell, Muller, and Captain Anderson in the line, and Putnam, Howe, and Chase in the backfield, while Ashby saw quite a bit of service last fall, and Langmaid was the individual star of the freshmen eleven last season. Coughlin, Eizner, MacAllister and Wheeler are other experienced backfield men, who will probably play before the end of the game. Stayman, another back, hurt his ankle and will probably not play this week, while it is doubtful if Brown, star half of last year, will be in good shape. Watson, who played a regular guard last year, has reported lately and shown up well in practice, while Miller, a sophomore, has displayed promise at tackle.

Although the visitors won only one and lost four of the seven games played in 1927, Archie Golembeski, their coach who was considered one of the finest guards developed at Holy Cross, is expecting a better showing this year with a team made up almost entirely of veterans. Fleurent at quarterback jumped into the lineup two years ago when he was instrumental in bringing the ball to Williams's 25-yd. line, where the winning field goal was made. Captain Nawrocki, 183-lb. tackle, Watterson at center, Zande, 190-lb. guard, and Szydla, a halfback are other experienced men who played on Weston Field two years ago.

The rest of the team is made up of men who played last season, with DaGata, the star of the 1927 attack, at his old position of fullback, and Gibbons at one of the halves. Wheeler and Jern will be at the wings, and White, the heaviest man on the team at one of the tackle jobs. M. Zande will pair with his more experienced brother at guard. Memories of their victory over Williams have stimulated interest in the opener at Providence; so that quite a number of students are expected to accompany the team to Williamstown.

The probable line-up is as follows:
WILLIAMS: l.e., Williams; l.t., Miller; l.g., Lasell; c., Muller; r.g., Capt. Anderson; r.t., Deming; r.e., Ashby; q.b., Putnam; l.h.b., Langmaid; r.h.b., Howe; f.b., Chase.

1912 COLLEGE BODY ELECTED PRESIDENT

Following Conventions and Rallies
Hughes, Republican, Defeated
Wilson, Democrat

(The following is taken from the March and April, 1912 issues of The Record and reprinted by request from the issue of March 24, 1928).

Preceded by rallies and campaigns, the members of Williams College in March and April, 1912, following the fashion of their seniors, entered into the presidential nominating campaign in earnest. With Jesup Hall as the headquarters for both parties, the Republicans in their zeal to see Taft or Roosevelt elected, and the Democrats, equally desirous to procure the honor for Wilson or Clark, presented a scene which tended to rival the real party campaigns.

According to the usual custom the Republican campaign was waged first. James R. Garfield, '85, spoke before the Roosevelt-for-President rally and not only bitterly flayed the Taft administration (then in office) but preceeded to show that Roosevelt was the only logical contender. The rally was attended by most of the faculty and College body. Not to be outdone Professor Doughty assembled the Hughes enthusiasts and conducted a similar rally. Townsend '12, and Utley and Nightingale '13 composed a student committee for the Hughes movement. The Taft regime held a very quiet rally which foretold of a later explosion. The College was then divided into states and Republican National Committeemen and State chairmen were elected. Hedden '12, chairman of the committee, promised the College that he would strike a very remarkable keynote for the meeting.

Meanwhile the Democrats under the noisy, but nevertheless capable leadership of Fay, Hawkins, McCredie and Rand, '12 Hotchkiss and Troy and Ely, Mason and McCook, '14 were not idle. Not only were arrangements made for bands, bunting, etc. from North Adams, but stunts and songs were prepared by the enthusiasts. Rallies were held for Wilson and Clark and plans were laid to carry the College by storm. The Democratic ranks seemed to be somewhat smaller than those of their rivals, but they planned boisterous rallies and parades to make up for small numbers.

When it came time for the Jesup Hall Convention, the Republicans, unable to forget their natural tendencies even in the heat of the battle, calmly proceeded to charge all College Democrats one dime to view the spectacle, while townspeople were forced to pay 25 cents. Representatives from the leading papers of the East, The New York Tribune, The Boston Herald, The Boston Journal, and The Boston Transcript, and THE RECORD were established in the press box as the delegates entered following a parade around the campus. Hedden '12 opened the convention and struck his keynote as promised. Following loud and noisy minor business matters the important matters were brought to light. The group advocated a Postal Savings Bank at Azherdian's (now Nelson Domin's) a federal supervision of Dr. Barret's Soap Trust; permanent endowment of Tiberius and the recall of all warnings just issued. Kellogg '12, made a short speech nominating Taft and peace was restored only after a group of conspicuous urchins had been dispelled for their vociferous cheering. Roosevelt and Hughes were nominated and a ballot was taken; Taft 150, Roosevelt 123, and Hughes 50. Van Duesen '12 and Utley '13 made vigorous speeches which showed their effect on the second ballot when Hughes received 160 votes, Taft, 151, and Roosevelt 12. On the third ballot, after four hours of hot, wordy discussion led by Wickes '12, and in spite of the fact that stuffing of the ballot box was suspected and petty jealousies threatened to ruin the organization, Hughes was nominated.

The Democrats, having become disgusted with their opponents deemed it wise to make their Jesup Convention as short as possible. When they convened on the following Tuesday the unit rule of voting as a state was followed. In spite of intentions it took six ballots to nominate the Democratic choice for the presidential chair. Wilson was leading Bryan (William Jennings) Clark, and Harmon on the first ballot. Here Alabama entered the excitement by casting 24 votes for Underwood. The second and third ballots showed Underwood to be leading the field with Wilson a close second. A deadlock occurred for the two ensuing ballots, but a shifting of votes gave Wilson the nomination. Professor Garrett Droppers was the unanimous choice for the vice-presidency.

FRATERNITY RUSHING
EXPLAINED TO FROSH

Agard, Doughty, and Haviland
Speak at Monday and Thursday
Jesup Meetings

Fraternity rushing rules were explained to the members of the Class of 1932 at two meetings in Jesup Hall held on Monday and Thursday evenings. Assistant Dean Agard and Doughty '29 had charge of the meetings, explaining the rules in detail and answering questions raised by the freshmen.

On Monday evening, Doughty introduced Assistant Dean Agard, who contrasted the old system of rushing with the present. He pointed out that the slipshod system of former days has been supplanted by the present orderly arrangement in which few conflicts arise and in which little trouble is experienced. He then went into a detailed description of the rushing rules, answered questions, and announced the Thursday meeting, to which the freshmen were told to come after an exhaustive perusal of the list of rules.

Haviland '29 then explained the function of the Commons Club, announcing the banquet which will be held for all unpledged men immediately after the last rushing period.

At Thursday's meeting Assistant Dean Agard again spoke for a short while, and Doughty went over the entire set of rules again. He explained the only change which has been made from last year's rushing system, that by which freshmen without postoffice boxes are to call in Jesup Hall for their bids, instead of at the general delivery window in the postoffice. Several questions were asked by members of the class, after which the meeting terminated.

'Zest and Vitality'

Mark Roth Recital

played with marked zest and sensuous power.

The second number, by Maurice Ravel, was a striking and purposeful contrast. How different was his rare and elf-like atmosphere, supernatural and elusive, in contrast to the almost naive verve of the Beethoven. As workmen, Ravel and the early Beethoven seem near a common level. But the refinement and sophistication of the Frenchman is notably in the lead, as judged by the two quartets now in hand.

The Schumann took a position halfway between the marked classicism of Beethoven and the modernism of Ravel. After a somewhat monotonous and fuzzy first and second movement, it left off its slight redundancy and became rich in meaning. Not as self-conscious as Ravel, but more passionate, Schumann in the third movement of this quartet sounds the romantic note of aspiration and deep longing. With a final movement rather suggestive of Beethoven, the Schumann work, and with it the recital, came to an end.

To this program the artists brought a plastic delivery, not hinting on the tendency to crystallization which appeared in the playing of the wonderful Flozaley quartet toward the close of their long career. Perhaps the Roth ensemble is not as perfect as it may be some day. Perhaps there were hints of overplaying the strings in a moment of extreme intensity. But there can be no doubt that this new quartet plays with authority and a truly wonderful sonority and vitality. They have the spontaneous freshness of youth.

Rohrbach is Elected

1929 Class President

Union Conferences, was chairman of the College Edificious Committee in his second year, was Recording Secretary last year, and is now president of the organization. Rohrbach was class singing leader in his Freshman year and has been on the Chapel Choir since then. He was on the Varsity track squad last year. Rohrbach is a member of Gargyle and the Purple Key Society.

Since coming to Williams, Richard H. Chase has been prominent in football and tennis circles, having played on both Freshman and Varsity teams in each sport, as well as being a member of the wrestling squad in his Sophomore year. Chase was elected class secretary in his Freshman year. He is a member of Gargyle and the Purple Key Society.

Winston Pealy was a member of the Freshman football, swimming, and baseball teams in his first year, and has swum the breast stroke event on the Varsity swimming team since then. He has also been a member of the Varsity football squad for two seasons. Pealy is a member of the Purple Key Society and Gargyle. John F. McKean was on the Freshman track squad and was elected to THE RECORD editorial board in his first year. He was a member of the debating team and of the Boys' Work Committee of the W. C. A. in his Sophomore and Junior years. He was secretary of the Honor System Committee last year, and has recently been elected chairman of that organization. McKean belongs to the Purple Key Society.

Those elected to the Student Council from the Senior Class are Peals, R. E. Clark, F. Aviland, Overton, and Strong, all of whom have been prominent in extra-curricular activities. Lawrence Peals was a member of the track team in his Sophomore and Junior years, and at the close of the last season was chosen captain for the coming year. He has also been a member of the Honor System Committee and was secretary of the Philosophie Union last year. Robert E. Clark was a member of the Freshman football, tennis, and baseball teams in his first year. He was elected class secretary in his Sophomore year and also to the Student Council. Last year, he was secretary of the Student Council, as well as manager of track and a member of the Varsity football squad. Clark is a member of the Purple Key Society and Gargyle.

John G. F. Aviland is a member of the Outing Club and of the Boys' Work Committee of the W. C. A. He is president of the Commons Club and belongs to Gargyle. R. C. Overton was editor-in-chief of the Will last year, and is at present managing editor of THE RECORD. He was a member of the debating team in his Sophomore and Junior years, and was a member of the track squad last year. Overton belongs to Delta Sigma Rho, Phi Beta Kappa and Gargyle. De ter Strong was assistant manager of the swimming team last winter and is vice-president of the W. C. A.

Richard B. Sewall, who was elected to the Honor System Committee, has been a member of the Varsity tennis team since his Freshman year. He is president of the Little Theatre and the Classical Society, and is a member of Gargyle and Phi Beta Kappa.

Following the two conventions, campaigns were waged for the election and every precaution was taken to prevent bribery, stuffing of the ballot box or buying of votes. In spite of the last measure an increase in sales of tobacco and sodas was noted by the campaign managers. As a result of the straw ballot taken the following Saturday Hughes lead Wilson, 237 to 128. Taft received the largest number of preferential votes, 130 and Roosevelt was second with 75.

Padua, Venice, Ravenna, and Bologna. Thence across the Appenines for ten days in Florence and on to Rome for the winter.

This seven month period was devoted to museums and galleries and weekly visits to the haunts of Caesar and Cicero about the Forum and the Palatine.

The spring of 1923 was launched with a swing down to Naples, Herculaneum, Pompeii, and Cumae, but found its high point in a trip to the north coast of Africa. Five days were spent in Tripoli, port of disembarkation, and then the road led to Leptis Magna, where remarkable new excavations are being made. Contrary to conditions in Italy, where the new discoveries are carefully concealed until such time as the government may have published its report, here the marble columns, as perfect as they were 1800 years ago, bearing clear inscriptions, may be viewed while the excavators are at work.

On the return to Rome a day was spent amid the Roman ruins at Cagliari in Sardinia. After devoting several days to bidding farewell to Rome and Florence, Professor Wetmore took brief refuge from moss and ruins at the sea side resort of Rapallo, and then moved on for ten days in Nice, from which Monte Carlo was inspected without winning or losing a cent. The desperate seriousness of the players proved the most impressive feature.

Europe was not left behind without three weeks in Paris during this past summer, during which time a three day trip was undertaken through the chateaux country. Finally, the George Washington brought the Wetmores back to the U. S. A., and their holiday came to an end in Williamstown on July 10.

amination room during the entire time in which the examination is in progress, that is, until the time specified has expired.

ARTICLE II

Section 1. The presence of proctors in examinations is hereby discontinued.

Section 2. The instructor may be present in his examination room at his option.

Section 3. The instructor shall announce beforehand the time that will be allowed to complete an examination, said time in no case to be more than three hours for final examinations and one hour for each of the other examinations. The nature of the paper is to be adjusted to these requirements.

Section 4. During the examination each student shall have perfect freedom of action and conversation provided he does not annoy or interfere with the work of others.

ARTICLE III

Section 1. There shall be a committee consisting of ten members, who shall represent the student body and deal with all cases involving violation of the Honor System.

Section 2. The members of this committee are to be elected at a class election to be held during the week beginning with the second Thursday of the first semester of each year, with the exception of the representative of the Freshman class, who is to be elected during the second week of the second semester. The committee shall organize for the year during the week beginning with the third Thursday of the first semester of each year.

Section 3. The membership of this committee shall consist of four Seniors, three Juniors, two Sophomores, and one Freshman.

Section 4. The chairman of this committee shall be chosen by the committee from its Senior representatives, and its secretary from its Sophomore representatives.

ARTICLE IV

Section 1. In case of reported frauds in examinations, the committee shall summon the accused person or persons, and witnesses, who shall be from the student body only (except that a member of the Faculty may present evidence of fraud in any paper handed in to him), and shall conduct a formal investigation, publicly or secretly, at the option of the accused. In case of conviction the committee shall determine the punishment under the following regulations:

First: In case of fraud by a member of the Senior, Junior, or Sophomore class, the penalty shall be a recommendation to the Faculty of his separation from college.

Second: In case of fraud by a member of the Freshman class, the penalty shall be a recommendation of suspension for a time to be determined by the committee.

Section 2. A vote of four-fifths of the committee present shall in all cases be necessary for conviction.

Sec. 3. The chairman of the Honor System shall make a report of the activities of the committee at two college meetings to be held in the months of January and May respectively.

Sec. 4. These reports shall include the total number of cases dealt with by the committee, the number of acquittals and the number of convictions with the punishment inflicted.

Sec. 5. The names of those men found guilty of fraud who have been dismissed from college shall be made public at the above meetings only, and shall be published in no other form.

ARTICLE V

Section 1. Every student of the college shall be expected to lend his aid in maintaining this Constitution, and to report to the committee of ten any fraud observed by him in any exercises conducted under the Honor System.

ARTICLE VI

Section 1. The Faculty shall make provision for printing and distributing this Constitution to the members of the Freshman class on or before the second Thursday of the first semester of each year, and shall publish a general statement of the System in the college catalogue.

Section 2. The student committee shall make provision for interpreting the Honor System to members of the Freshman class on or before the second Thursday of the first semester of each year.

ARTICLE VII

Section 1. This Constitution may be amended by a three-fourths vote of those present at a mass meeting of the college, provided that the amendment so adopted be ratified by the Faculty.

(Section 1 of Article I amended, 1908.)
(Article IV amended by the addition of sections 3, 4 and 5, 1921.)

RULES GOVERNING INSTRUCTORS IN THE ADMINISTRATION OF THE HONOR SYSTEM

I. The "honor statement" shall be required on all written work done on paper in the classroom, but on no other work.

II. The "honor statement" shall read in every case: "I have neither given nor received aid in this examination (or exercise)."

III. The students shall be seated alphabetically and separated in such a manner as to prevent the accidental giving or receiving of aid.

IV. Students shall not change the seats assigned them without the permission of the instructor, and examinations shall be held only at the time and place designated by the Faculty.

V. In case of the presentation of a paper without the signed "honor statement", the instructor shall notify the student, who shall sign the paper in his presence. Otherwise, the student shall be reported absent from the exercise.

VI. Students must be present at the opening of the exercise, or, if tardy, render an excuse satisfactory to the instructor, otherwise, the student shall be reported absent from the exercise.

VII. There shall be only two announced examinations each semester in addition to the semi-annual examinations.

VIII. The same examination questions shall not be used in any course for divisions meeting at different hours.

IX. The instructor will be present in the examination room solely to insure the observance of these regulations, to issue the question papers, to answer questions, and to receive the examination books.

X. Final examinations are to occupy three hours only, and no other examination may extend beyond one hour. The instructor shall announce beforehand the time allowed for the examination, and the nature of the paper is to be adjusted accordingly.

SEASON'S OPPONENTS OPEN WITH VICTORIES

Amherst, Wesleyan, Columbia, and Bowdoin Win; Middlebury Is Amherst's Victim

To be matched with the success of Williams in her opening game with Providence is the fact that four of the six remaining opponents who launched their gridiron seasons last Saturday have also decisive victories to their credit, while Middlebury met defeat only at the hands of Amherst, and R. P. I. has not yet tested her strength. General slowness in the execution of plays, and fumbles, which were the direct cause of scoring in the Bowdoin and Wesleyan contests and were not absent on Pratt Field, were sufficient indication that the games were the first of 1928, but forward and lateral passes and brilliant runs, perhaps the result of immature defense operations, left the contests far from uninteresting.

Of outstanding interest is the Amherst-Middlebury game, due both to its bearing on next Saturday's outcome and to its indications concerning the grand climax in November. The Amherst line, chief point of doubt and speculation, may be said with moderation not to have justified the worst of Sabrina fears, and the work of Kirk, Stearns, Moses, and Felt proved reasonably effective, though the accomplishments of Heisey, Grosskloss, and the Wilson brothers in the back field were frequently poorly supported. The first Amherst touchdown resulted from a pass in the Wilson family, while Grosskloss from his position at left half, squirmed and drove through the Middlebury line for the second. In the absence of Captain Britain, veteran end, the outstanding player was Heisey, also at left half, who, on the first play of the last period went through left tackle for his team's final score. These tackle thrusts and a series of 16 to 18 yard passes completed by the Wilsons and Tener combined to make up the scoring strength of the Amherst line-up.

Though penalties aided the Middlebury advance for its single touchdown, the Vermonters tied the Sabrinas in the second half scoring and are credited with having an edge on their victors throughout the

President J. E. Park of Wheaton College Suggests 'Club Colleges' for Those Seeking 'Good Times'

President J. Edgar Park of Wheaton College, Newton, an annual preacher in the Thompson Memorial Chapel, in an address before the North Berkshire Teachers' Association, suggested the establishment of 'club colleges' for those who go to college primarily for 'good times'. Having been informed by a student of a New England college that he gets a good deal out of college, yet only from his association with other men, President Park feels that purely social institutions would 'drain off this element from the academic colleges where libraries and classrooms still exist.'

Parts of Dr. Park's address, which are reprinted from The North Adams Transcript, are as follows:

"As long as your roots are in the common ground of humanity and you are continuing to grow you are a good teacher. If your roots are in books or in theories or in a rock suspended in mid-air you are either wondering today why every one seems willing to take the risk of losing your services or why your pupils are so stupid."

"Teaching catches in the atmosphere of compressed and controlled enthusiasm. Unless it is continually striking you as a curious and partially inexplicable fact that nearly all alphabets begin with 'a' and proceed to 'b' you will be a poor teacher of letters. This romantic interest in 'a', 'b', and 'c' must in the true teacher of the baby be also extended by researches in the part of the teacher into the mysteries of further knowledge."

"What is true of the teaching of a sub-

Soccer Team Points for Opening Match Saturday

After the first week of practice the varsity soccer squad is gradually assuming the proportions of a cooperative organization and is pointing this week to the opening game of the season to be played with M. I. T. this Saturday on Cole Field. As yet, no definite team has been picked, but the probable line-up will include the seven letter men named previously and four others whose experience entitles them to a position.

A chalk talk was given to the squad on Friday night by Mr. Kirkland, the assistant coach, who explained the official rules and regulations of the game, the position of players, and various attacks and formations. Offside, the throw in, goal and corner kicks, and fouling were defined and made clear. Scrimmage has followed preliminary exercise in the daily practice this week, three full teams being used.

Commons Club Plans to Encourage Alumni Visits

Following out its plans for encouraging closer contact between the members of the Commons Club and the alumni, the Alumni Committee of the club, has prepared a report of the Alumni Smoker held at Commencement time last year which is now in the hands of the printer. As soon as it is ready it will be mailed to all the alumni of the club, in order to acquaint them with the work that is being done.

Further plans of the committee, in addition to its regular work of entertaining visiting alumni at the club, contemplate the publishing of a history of the Commons Club in Williams College, which started in 1908, and existed until the founding of the present club in 1914. In order to assist in the work of entertaining the visiting alumni, the committee has set aside rooms for their accommodation on the top floor of Currier Hall, which will be open to all members of the club's Alumni Association.

jeet is also true of the teaching of a pupil. The teacher of imagination is planning not merely for the pupil's a, b, c, but for the l, m, n that lie farther along his course. And the subject upon which I am to speak to you today is this: What are the qualities which should entitle a student to a college education? What students should be encouraged to go to college? A student fit for college should have that goal before him from early primary years.

"I was talking a few weeks ago with a student in one of our men's colleges in New England. He was very dissatisfied with the president of the college; and on my asking him the cause of his dissatisfaction, he said the President was a scholar and that he overemphasized the scholarship in college. 'Now,' he said, 'I don't care anything about books or reading. I go to college for the association with the men that I find there. As for philosophy or literature or any of these things I simply do not care for them, but I get a great deal out of college life.'

"Our president does not appreciate the position of a man like myself. Here I am entering my senior year and the only course that interests me in the senior year is the course on Money and Banking. Now, the president has gone and fixed it so that nobody can take the course unless he has a grade of B in his previous years. Now, I have only C and I am closed out from the only course that would interest me in my senior year, because of this new president's attitude."

TENNIS TOURNAMENT PROGRESSES SLOWLY

All First-Round Matches Must Be Completed by Thursday, October 4

Only three first-round matches have been completed so far in the annual all-campus Fall tennis tournament. In the upper half of the draw, Morris '31 defeated McKittick '30, 2-6, 6-0, 6-1, and in the lower division, Forbes '32 won over Jepson '30, 6-2, 7-5, while Booth '31 lost to

H. F. WOLF, 1929
Captain of the Tennis Team, and One of the Seeded Players in the Fall Tournament

McGlynn '31, 6-4, 6-4. The tournament will be instrumental in determining next year's tennis line-up, but none of the seeded players have as yet seen action. All first-round matches must be completed by Thursday, October 4, and the scores posted in Jesup Hall. The eight seeded men are listed in order: Wolf, Sewall, Shonff, Clark, Hoyt, Dennison, Groehl, and F. Nye.

Faculty Is Entertained at Commons Club Smoker

In accordance with its plans for furthering student-Faculty intercourse, the Commons Club opened the year's program last Sunday evening with an informal smoker held in the Commons Room in Currier Hall. This gathering, marking the official opening of the Club's new lounge room, was the first of a number of such meetings intended to utilize the excellent opportunity offered by the Club for increasing contact between students and Faculty.

The evening's conversations centered chiefly around the current political campaigns, on which radically different views were forthcoming. Haviland '29 thanked the members of the Faculty for their interest in the Club, and promised a greater number of Faculty activities for the coming year.

'32 Fall Tennis Starts

With an entry list totalling 85, the first round of the Freshman fall tennis tournament commences this week as an aid in determining the tennis potentialities of the incoming class. All matches in this round consist of two out of three sets and must be played off according to the pairings posted in Lasell Gymnasium before Oct. 13. Gold, silver, and bronze medals will be awarded respectively to those placing first, second, and third in the tournament.

Those wishing to attend are asked to remain in their dormitory rooms, where they will be called for by club members between 6 and 6.30 p. m.

Cross Country Squad Holds Daily Workouts

Cross country practice is now well under way, with a squad of eleven men, five of whom won their letters in the sport last fall, reporting regularly to Coach "Doc" Seeley. In preparation for the opening of the season, which begins on October 13 with the R. P. I. meet, daily runs of varying length and over a number of courses are being held, culminating on Saturdays with a five mile dual circuit of the Taconic course.

The men who constitute the Varsity squad, all of whom have had previous track experience on either College or Freshman teams, are as follows: Captain Moore and Herriek '29, Chapman, Fitcher, Reeves, Reynolds and Strother '30, and Goodbody, Guernsey, Harris and Suffer '31.

SIDELIGHTS of the Providence Game

Martial spirit was injected into the stands on Saturday by the stirring advent of the Greylock Band which played, in addition to the customary old favorites, a lilting waltz or two, undismayed by the parous efforts of a syncopating echo to take its Orphean strains in vain.

The arrival of the Purple Varsity on the field was accompanied by terpsichorean gambolings, and common, or garden tumbling to an extent which would justify them in the appellation of Caldwell's Ironsides.

Much interest was displayed by the cheering hundreds in decoding the names of the opposing teams as printed in the program, and popular approval of this diversion had scarcely flagged before Dixie the dingo strolled on to the gridiron at a measured trot, followed by Mickey the Mongol, the one-man steam-roller. Dixie was never so much in the favor of his public as when, having been baulked of a tackle, he covered several cubits in high while reclining restfully upon his tummy.

HOWE AND LANGMAID STAR ON THE OFFENSE

Visitors Score in Opening Minute of Play; Home Team Shows Greater Power

Although outweighed by their opponents ten pounds to the man, a light but fast Varsity eleven, playing its first game under Coach Caldwell, showed signs of future power in overcoming the veteran Providence College team by a 20-13 score in the first game of the 1928 season, held on Weston Field Saturday afternoon before a good-sized opening crowd. Providence scored on the second play of the game, when Jörn recovered a Williams fumble for a touchdown, but before the end of the half the Purple had tied the score, and added two more touchdowns in the final periods, while Providence scored in the fourth quarter on a series of successful forward passes. Howe, with two touchdowns, one after a fifty-yard run, and Langmaid led the offense, but on the whole there were no individual stars, the team playing together.

In the matter of first downs, the count was even, each team making six during the game. During the closing minutes, Providence opened up a sensational passing attack, which Williams seemed unable to solve. Out of fourteen tries, the visitors completed nine, these being directly responsible for their second touchdown. After their initial epidemic of fumbling, which put them behind six points, Williams played the stronger game for the rest of the first half. Howe opened the second half with a fifteen-yard end run, and after two tries through the line, he tossed a pass to Langmaid who crossed the goal line.

The home team showed its superiority during the third quarter, threatening the Providence goal the majority of the time. Soon after the start of the period, Howe travelled fifty yards on one of his famous runs to score another touchdown. Langmaid dropped the point. Williams did not score again until the opening of the final quarter. Two successful passes from Howe to Langmaid put the ball near the goal line, when Howe again went outside right tackle for a touchdown. The visitors then opened with countless passes, many of which were completed for gains of one to fifteen yards. A short

Sicilian Cities, Alps, and Birthplace of Shakespeare Visited by Professor Licklider During Trip Abroad

Featured by a visit to the ancient cities of Sicily, walking trips in the Alps, and a two weeks' stay near the home of William Shakespeare at Stratford-on-Avon, a highly interesting sabbatical tour of Europe was recently completed by Professor Albert H. Licklider of the English Department. After leaving the United States in March on the S. S. Colombo, Professor Licklider passed the remaining spring months in the sunny climes of Sicily and Southern Italy, later journeying north to spend July and August in Switzerland, the Italian lake district, and England.

Stays of one day each at Gibraltar and Casablanca on the Moroccan coast provided the first break after the ocean passage. After a short side trip into Spain, the voyage ended when Sicily was reached. Here Professor Licklider spent the month of March. Many of the famous ancient towns on the island were visited, particularly Palermo, Segesta, Girgenti, Siracusa, and Taormina. The excavations at Pompeii recently culminated proved of interest and the early Greek theatres were made an object of study. Sicily is famous as the home of marionettes, and the opportunity of viewing performances by these little string-motivated figures at the scene of their origination was one not to be neglected.

Paestum, location of several Doric temples of the fifth century B. C., still in a good state of preservation, was the next spot to be visited, and several weeks were spent on the coast of Southern Italy, especially at Ravello, whence several walking trips about the mountains inland were undertaken. Professor Licklider passed the latter part of April on the beautiful island of Capri, a few miles from Naples, and on May first he proceeded to Rome. While making the rounds of the attractions of the Roman capital, he happened upon four other well-known Williamstown residents, namely, Professor and Mrs. Milham, and Professor and Mrs. Wetmore.

Florence, Venice, and other northern cities occupied the month of June, and July found the traveller at Cortina in the Dolomites or eastern range of the Alps. Walking trips proved enjoyable here and in Switzerland, where the next few weeks were spent, Grindelwald and Zermatt being Mr. Licklider's principal headquarters. At Zermatt he met Tyson '29, descending the Matterhorn.

Little time was spent in crossing northern Europe, and Professor Licklider arrived in England about August 15, in time for the annual Shakespeare festival held at the great poet's birthplace, Stratford-on-Avon. According to the usual custom, each evening and several of the afternoons of the several weeks during which the celebration lasted was devoted to the production of one of Shakespeare's plays. A rare novelty was offered in the presentation of 'Timon of Athens', a play seldom seen on the stage because little adapted for dramatic purposes. On September first embarkation on the S. S. Carmania put an end to a six months' visit to the continent across the Atlantic.

Besides offering an excellent topic of conversation for rushing last Saturday's football victory was a fitting debut for our new coach. The hope that Williams is entering upon a new era on the gridiron has become a feeling of certainty but quite apart from the matter of victories the Providence game gave promise of an interesting and thrilling season. Caldwell, Suively, Anderson, the backfield, and a very sturdy line have won over the College. It should be easier now to sing "... with them in every play."

ONE COLLEGE, ONE SOCIETY

Saturday, Sunday, Monday ... Scintillating conversation, brilliant jabs of repartee, incomparable wit, dazzling intelligence, a neatly turned phrase here, a priceless bon mot there. Long eloquent silences. It runs something like this: So you went to Exeter? Let's see, did you know a fellow there by the name of—that's funny, what was his name? Bob something, I think. Dark, athlete. Graduates next year, or maybe its the year after. Guess he was before your time anyway (ha, ha). What courses you taking? Like it here? Well, glad to have met you, secya later. So you went to Andover? Let's see ...

Newly washed faces are carefully studied through the softening smoke screen of many free cigarettes. The cut of a vest or the curve of a collar catches the critical eye. Characters are being judged. And after a week of this penetrating psychoanalysis, new delegations will arise according as they are worthy to wear the button.

It may appear nothing short of miraculous that our fraternities, resting their strength upon such precarious foundations, can still manage to rise to important heights. Birds of a feather—no matter how drab that feather—will probably always flock together, but the almost mechanical ease with which the proper pledge will finally drop into the proper pigeon-hole is to us always something quite wonderful. To some extent the explanation can be found in the fact that our social divisions are all selected on the one principle that a man must never be "different". Theoretically, of course, the fraternity thrives on the notion that in some magic way its members are necessarily superior to the rest of mortals. Their hearts are more brotherly, their handshake firmer, their morals purer. Consequently, the fraternity man seldom realizes, and never admits out loud, that on the contrary, it is an element of almost stagnant sameness that first splits the campus into 15 separate and sedate groups, and then again into the finer shades of hat clubs, honorary societies, and mystic number cliques.

Granting that there are certain superficial signs that serve to differentiate one fraternity man from another, it is just as true that there exists a common characteristic, vaguely called "a point of view", which remains constant. Individual fraternities may run pretty much to type (we have the brawn type, the brain type, the high-hat type, the low-brow type), but fundamentally these differences are not half as marked as the one difference—be it ever so imaginary—that seems to separate the fraternity from the non-fraternity man. One group is rather solidly the same throughout; the other touches both extremes.

This is no time to criticize the rushing system. It probably is the best we can do, and as a matter of fact other colleges have been known to hold it up as the nearly perfect example. A word of praise to the arbiters and the Interfraternity Council for making what we have, work as well as it does, would be more appropriate. But it is our sincere hope that no freshman who finds himself unpledged next Friday evening will feel he needs consolation. He has nothing to be ashamed of, for indeed, who may presume to declare which group gets the better of rushing—pledged or unpledged? Mutual respect between these very artificial divisions in the greater unit of Williams as a homogeneous college, will do much to cover up whatever scratches this week may leave upon the surface.

last two periods. Smith, star Middlebury sprinter, was the leading spirit and cleared left end in the final quarter for a 10-yard run across the line. Huntington, left tackle, took the point with a placement kick. Second honors among the Panthers were shared by Guarnaccia, Whitman, and Captain Webber, the latter two of the line. Middlebury's outstanding strategic accomplishment was the recovering of the ball on her own kick-off at the opening of the game. Later attempts at forward passing were a failure.

Passing, on the contrary, was the outstanding feature of Bowdoin's victory over M. A. C. Murphy and Adams, the ends, on the receiving end of passes from the halfbacks, Larcom and Chapman, were responsible for the second score, while the first touchdown was the immediate outcome of a fumble. R. P. I., fourth team on the Williams schedule, was the only opponent not to play last Saturday.

With seven inexperienced men, Columbia registered the expected defeat of Vermont, 20 to 0. One of the recruits, Scott at right half, was responsible for two of the three touchdowns, while Kumpf, a veteran and individual star in the backfield, was second in the scoring as a result of his work through the line. The most spectacular player was Liflander, substitute quarter, who staged a series of lengthy runs in the second half. In the meantime, Union seems to have been more or less over-run by Manhattan, with a 27-6 score.

Wesleyan opened scoring against Bates with Teek's 35-yard run after scooping a fumble. Straight football, in particular Lockwood's off-tackle plays and the line plunges of Saunders, account for the

'Trustees Should Buy Pony Lawn-Mower to Keep the Town Greens Neat'

(Reprinted from the issue of THE RECORD for Oct. 1, 1924.)

In the good old days when long-haired leaders of thought among the virile sons of Eph expounded fiery words of wisdom and advice from the sacred columns of the Argo and the Williams Weekly, many and awe-inspiring were the expostulations that issued from the editorial sanctum. Sincere, without doubt, they offer an amusing contrast to the present dignity and gravity of our editorial comments. Let the interested reader peruse the following:

"The appearance of a quantity of orange peel on the sward in front of Morgan Hall causes us to notice a most untidy habit some men in the building have of throwing fruit and papers from their windows, instead of into a waste-paper basket. This is a custom very common on the outskirts of towns and villages, where goats feed upon the discarded material with great relish, but in our well-ordered village everyone should have a pride in keeping the grounds, especially around such a prominent dormitory as Morgan Hall, in a neat condition. We trust the offenders will reform."—Argo, 1884.

"However aesthetic we may be, we must still be practical, and as accidents will happen in the best regulated communities, we call attention to the following subject to prevent further mishap. No one will deny that the presence of bicycles on Main Street adds not a little to the picturesqueness of the town. Last year nearly all the bicycles had bells, but this spring, for some reason, that article of safety has been neglected. Why, we are at loss to know. In the average city, and in towns smaller than our own, a law has been passed to the effect that all bicycles must be provided with bells, making it a serious offense for a person breaking this statute. At the present time, a pedestrian on the street hears a yell behind him and jumps to one side scarcely in time to avoid being run down. Perhaps it is safe enough for the student who is pursuing a college education which is supposed to keep him from being rattled, but for some of the townspeople, and particularly for the ladies, it is quite dangerous. So far, the pedestrian has been fortunate to jump in the right direction, but luck turns, and a person run over by a bicycle, especially when coming down one of our high grades, will receive serious injuries. The remedy for this is slight, while the results may be of a different nature, and we hope the owners of the machines will take some pains in correcting the evil."—Argo, 1884.

"Does it not seem strange that such beautiful lawns as we boast of, extending from one main avenue to the other, should be allowed to grow until nothing but a scythe or an equally clumsy machine for reaping and harvesting grain is able to cut them? Why not invest in a pony lawn mower, a machine that will do its work much more rapidly and satisfactorily than scythe or reaper? The campuses, of course, are always kept in excellent order. But such extensive and beautiful lawns that line the main avenue are certainly deserving of better treatment than ordinary meadows, and instead of being devoted to the raising of hay, should be kept in repair. The town would thus present the appearance of a park to the summer visitor."—Williams Weekly, 1883.

"The road to Weston Field across the old campus has proved itself very accommodating, but if the Board of Health doesn't institute a reform soon in the present disposal of grocery refuse, it is liable to fall into noxious desuetude. It is very fortunate that our ball games are no longer played on the old diamond, for no catcher with an ordinary constitution could endure the sickening stench that arises from the mass of rubbish behind the old backstop. It has already got over the fence and is making rapid strides across the campus. We have seen Christmas Lake in all the glory of miasmic halo, with its glistening surface bedecked with tin cans and old shoes, but for odors this swampy queen of the night was never a circumstance beside her illustrious successor of the tomato can and the decayed potato."—Williams Weekly, 1883.

45-yard advance for the second touchdown, while Siloway proved infallible in establishing his claim to the extra points. Here the passing game was of little success, since Bates never completed a pass in seven tries, and Wesleyan gained but little ground with the five which connected out of 11 chances.

SMITH-ROBINSON CLUB WILL RALLY THURSDAY

Professors Allen and Miller Will Address First Meeting of Local Democrats

Meeting Thursday evening of this week in Jesup Hall Auditorium, the recently formed Smith-Robinson Club will be addressed by Professors Allen and Miller of the Williams Faculty. Mr. Allen has just returned from the Democratic State Convention at Boston, where he served as a member of the Committee on Resolutions, and will give the audience an account of the proceedings at the convention.

Mr. Miller will be the chief speaker of the evening, his subject, being "Liberalism in Politics". He will start by defining his idea of liberalism, and consider whether liberalism should be judged by attitudes or by specific measures. His next point will be the question of what is the state and how may the idea of liberalism be related to the idea of the state.

It is Mr. Miller's contention that Governor Smith is the more liberal of the candidates in the coming presidential election, and he will attempt to justify his contention by a discussion of the issues at stake this year. He will explain to the audience the manner in which the liberalism of both candidate and party platform may be weighed, and will follow the reasoning which led him to support Governor Smith in this election.

Final Competition

The annual Fall Record competition for the members of the class of 1931 will start next Sunday, with a meeting for all candidates in the editorial office in Jesup Hall immediately after chapel. At the close of this competition, which will last until December 7th and will provide the last opportunity for sophomores to make the Board, two men will be taken on.

MICHIGAN UNIVERSITY PROPOSES NOVEL PLAN

Suggested Reorganization Provides Administrative Isolation of Lower Classmen

Significant and outstanding among the recent groping attempts of the colleges and universities of the country to remedy the patent evils of modern higher education is the proposed inauguration of a new departure in administration at the University of Michigan, the University College. This move, which has been approved by a majority of the departments of the institution, is described as an effort to put some system into the educational chaos which too many entering students encounter.

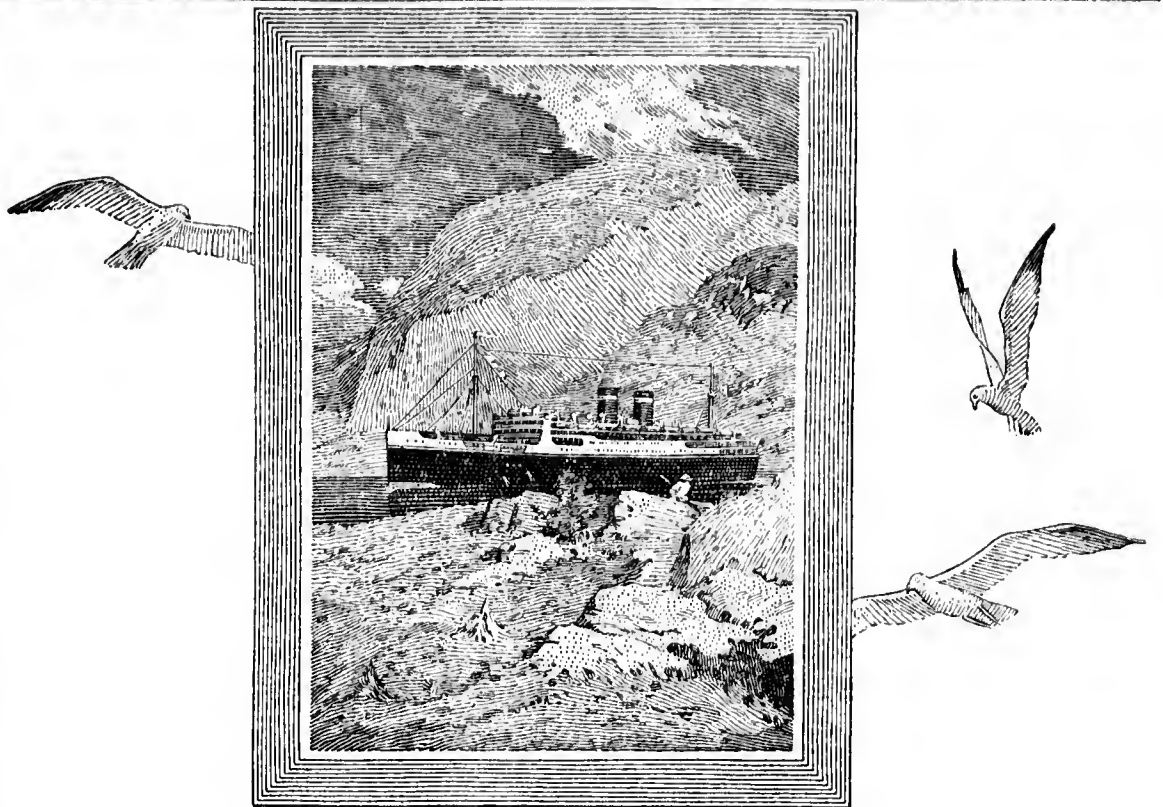

Briefly, the plan implies a new University unit, a horizontal division, which would set the sophomore and freshman classes apart under a new administrative body. The reorganization would differ from the ordinary "Junior College" idea in that it would be directed from a university and not a high school point of view. With this in mind the entering freshman "would be placed in a position to find what a college education is all about before Senior year." The indecision and frequent missteps in choice of majors would be obviated so far as possible by close supervision and competent advice, and "every effort would be made to instill a more effective appreciation of the whole field of knowledge before embarkation upon more highly specialized subjects" in the third year. The last statement is not meant to imply that any set group of courses would be obligatory, but individual work would be "of balanced content and arranged about some special aptitude or interest." In default of the latter, introductory courses inclusive of several fields would be offered.

The system provides for a comprehensive examination at the end of Sophomore year, which will give the University an opportunity to ascertain whether the student should be encouraged to go on into more specialized fields or to end his college career at that point. In this way the University hopes to be able to select and evaluate the human material with which it works far more efficiently and effectively than ever before, and results are expected by both progressive and conservative supporters of the plan amply to justify their carefully considered judgment that benefit will accrue to both the student and to the institution upon its inception.

'Air Pockets' Theory Is Shown To Be Fallacious

Belief that machines being operated on the Taconic Trail are affected by a sort of "air pockets" was definitely dispelled last week when an Adams automobile dealer, with an auxiliary feed on the vacuum tank of his car, went over the steep climb without any difficulty. The numerous instances occurring this summer are considered merely as cases in which the vacuum tanks of the cars failed to furnish fuel rapidly enough to maintain a uniform flow of power.

The Adams automobile agent, P. D. Powers, attempting to prove the fallacy of the theory that air pockets existed, started to drive a North Adams garage-man over the trail. As in numerous other instances this summer, however, the car stalled on the way up. The next day he attached an auxiliary to his vacuum tank and negotiated the climb three times without difficulty. Powers then got his friend, and, hiring a disinterested third party to drive, attempted the climb in the latter's car. It stalled when within 100 yards of the summit. This proves definitely that it is merely the inadequacy of the vacuum tanks to force fuel into the motor fast enough to satisfy the laboring engine, and not, as reported, air pockets such as are encountered by aviators.

Electricity opens a new era of ocean travel

Miraculously quiet and vibrationless, luxurious and swift, the new electrically operated S. S. California, largest American-built passenger ship, has opened a new era in ocean travel.

Electricity drives the California so efficiently that the fuel bill for the initial coast-to-coast trip was even less than the Canal tolls. Electricity mans the winches, bakes the bread, makes the ice, polishes the silver. And electricity cools the cabins and provides passengers with the comforts found in the finest hotels.

Complete electrification makes the California an engineering marvel and a commercial success; it is booked far in advance, a sister ship has just been launched, and another is under construction.

On sea or land, in every walk of life, electricity is in the van of progress. Undreamed of yesterday, the electric ship is a symbol of the electrical industry's part in modern civilization and a prophecy of even greater accomplishment.

This monogram is found on great motors that drive the California, and on a multitude of electric appliances which contribute to the comfort of her passengers. It is an emblem of skilled engineering and high manufacturing quality.

Williams Eleven Beats Providence

while before the final whistle, a sustained advance after three successful heaves put the ball over the goal line.

First Quarter

Providence kicked off to Williams's ten-yard line, where Putnam received the ball and returned it to the twenty-yard line, stepping out of bounds. Howe tried a right end run, but was stopped for no gain. On the next play, Langmaid fumbled, and Jern of Providence recovered the ball and made a touchdown. Dubieny missed the dropkick for the extra point. Providence kicked off to Williams's ten-yard line, where Howe received the ball and returned it to the thirty-yard line. On an attempted outside play, Howe fumbled but recovered, and the ball was moved in. Howe made six yards around left end, and Langmaid followed with three through center. Howe then punted to Providence's twenty-five yard line, where Fleurent was thrown in his tracks. Syzda tried right end for a one-yard gain, and then Dubieny punted to the forty-yard line, where Putnam fumbled but recovered, Howe went off right tackle for two yards, and Langmaid hit left guard for three yards. Howe punted to the five yard line, where Fleurent made an unsuccessful attempt to reverse his field, and was thrown in his tracks. Providence was offside on this play; so it was returned to Williams. Langmaid fumbled again, but recovered. Howe made seven yards around right end, and on a sneak play Putnam went through center for five yards. Howe punted to the goal line, where Fleurent was thrown by Ashby on the three-yard line. Gibbons pierced center for four yards, and Syzda made it first down off right tackle. Dubieny made a yard through left guard, and then punted to the forty-yard line, where Putnam caught it and returned it eight yards. Howe made two yards through center and an additional yard through right tackle. Langmaid tried center again for a two-yard gain. Howe kicked to the ten-yard line, where the ball was touched dead. Dubieny punted out of bounds on Providence's thirty-yard line. Langmaid made four yards through center, but Howe was stopped on a left end run for no gain. Providence was penalized five yards for offside. A pass from Howe to Langmaid was incomplete. Langmaid missed a dropkick from the thirty-yard line, Syzda made four yards around left end. Dubieny kicked to the thirty-yard line, where Putnam caught the ball and returned it twenty-five yards. Langmaid hit center for four as the quarter ended. Score: Providence, 6; Williams, 0.

Second Quarter

Howe made fifteen yards around right end. Langmaid was stopped at center, but on the next play made two yards through the same place. A pass from Howe to Langmaid was completed for a touchdown. Langmaid missed the dropkick for the extra point. Providence kicked off to Howe, who returned the ball from the five to the twenty-yard line. Howe punted to the forty-yard line, where Fleurent received the kick and ran it back five yards. On an attempted run around right end Syzda was stopped for no gain. A pass from Gibbons to Syzda was good for six yards, and Dubieny plunged through center for three yards. Muller of Williams was hurt on this play. Time was taken out. Lasell was shifted to center, and Williamson came in at guard. Providence was penalized five yards for offside. A pass from Dubieny to Fleurent was incomplete. Dubieny punted to the twenty-yard line. Howe ran around right end for eleven yards. Syzda of Providence was hurt on this play, and time was taken out again. Putnam gained nothing on an attempted right end run, Williams was penalized five yards for offside. Langmaid made a yard through right tackle. Howe punted to Providence's thirty-five-yard line, where the ball was touched down. Gibbons made ten yards on a left end run. Dubieny carried the ball offside, and then Syzda made five yards off right tackle. A pass from Gibbons to Syzda was incomplete. Dubieny punted to the twenty-yard line, and Putnam returned it five yards. Howe tried right tackle for no gain, and then was stopped on a left end run. Howe punted to the forty-five-yard line, where Fleurent was stopped in his tracks. A pass from Gibbons to Fleurent was good for five yards, and after this Providence took time out. Another similar pass was incomplete. Dagata kicked to the eighteen-yard line, Putnam running back to the thirty-yard line. Howe tried a pass, which was intercepted by Dubieny. When Providence was offside, the ball went to Williams. Howe made a first down off right tackle, and Langmaid went through center for two yards as the half ended.

Score: Williams, 6; Providence, 6.

Third Quarter

The original Williams team started the second half. Lasell kicked off to Providence's fifteen-yard line, Dubieny returning the ball to the thirty-yard mark. Watterson was hurt on this play. Fleurent made two yards around right end, and Dubieny added three more around left end. Dagata tried center for first down. Fleurent was stopped on an attempted end run, while Dagata was unable to make anything through center. Dubieny then punted to the forty-yard line. Howe scored a touchdown on a fifty-yard run off right tackle. Langmaid dropkicked for the extra point. Lasell kicked off to the twenty-yard line, Gibbons running back to the thirty-five-yard line before he was tackled. Dagata was stopped on a line plunge, and Ashby nailed Fleurent for a loss on the next play. Dubieny kicked to the twenty-five-yard line to Putnam. Howe was stopped for no gain off right tackle. Howe took the ball on an outside end, after it was moved in, Langmaid went through left guard for four yards. Howe punted to the twenty-five-yard line, and Fleurent returned the ball two yards. Dubieny fumbled on the next play, and Lasell recovered the ball for Williams, but Dubieny then intercepted Howe's attempted pass. Dubieny made a yard through center. Fleurent fumbled and recovered on an attempted end run. Dubieny punted to Putnam, who brought the ball to the forty-eight-yard line, before he was stopped. Howe was stopped on a right end run, and then Langmaid plunged through center for five yards, and on the next play added three more. Howe punted to the ten-yard line, where Fleurent was hit by three Williams men at the same time. Foster made five yards off right tackle, and Dubieny added seven more off left guard. Dubieny tried the same place and made eight yards. Foster fumbled but recovered. Gibbons went off left tackle for three yards and then around left end for four more. Dubieny kicked to the thirty-yard line, Putnam running back to the forty-seven-yard mark, as the quarter ended. Score: Williams, 13; Providence, 6.

Fourth Quarter

Howe circled left end for fifteen yards. On the next play Putnam was downed in his tracks. Langmaid pierced left tackle for four yards, and a pass from Howe to Putnam was completed for a seven yard gain. Langmaid made it first down on a rush through center. A short pass from Howe to Langmaid was good for a yard. Another pass to Langmaid was completed for ten yards and another first down. Howe went off right tackle for another touchdown. Langmaid dropkicked the extra point. Lasell kicked off to the twenty-five-yard line to Dubieny, who went to the thirty-seven-yard line, before he was tackled. Two passes from Gibbons to Mathews and Wheeler were good for five and ten yards respectively. Two more passes from Gibbons to Foster and Dubieny added six more yards. Dubieny went off right guard for first down.

President J. E. Park Suggests 'Club Colleges'

"This represents the type of mind of a great many students both in men's and women's colleges. They are frankly not interested in study though few of them would express it so clearly as this young man did. They go to college for social reasons. They like having breakfast on Sundays in each other's rooms. They enjoy especially getting away from the restrictions which father, and sometimes mother, still imposes upon the home.

"But they have no particular interest in any subject of study and they feel that it is the duty of the faculty to get them through their examinations. The various credits are the United Cigar Company coupons and the degree is the premium—the gaudy gilt vase in the window.

"Under the leadership of institutions like Harvard University a change is taking place in the temper of American colleges. Just as in ancient days a temple which had been erected originally for worship and which had become cluttered up with merchants and merchandise was cleaned out before a whip of small cords, so progressive spirits are trying to rid American colleges of incompetent, frivolous souls who have no right to be there, and to re-establish them in their ancient purposes again, that they may become temples of learning.

"What is really needed today, and I pass this suggestion on as being one of the surest methods of making money imaginable, what is really needed today is the establishment of at least two large 'club colleges' somewhere in the east, as near as possible to New York city. These colleges would attempt to give youth the good times for which at present so many people come to the academic colleges. They would perfectly frankly be without libraries or classrooms but they would be fitted with comfortable armchairs cigarette stands and repair shops for the inevitably broken automobiles. Arrangements for bootleggers and fraternity and sorority houses would have to be of the finest and the broken autos suggest also a comfortable hospital and a good morgue.

"The aim of these 'club colleges' would be to enable young people to meet with one another and to gain that much wanted education which youth gains from intercourse with youth. Not only would the students of these 'club colleges' have a pleasant time but they would drain off this element from the academic colleges where libraries and classrooms still exist and so allow the old-time colleges to fulfill their real mission in life that of providing higher education.

"From the college point of view young people seem to be divided in general into three main classes. The first and lowest grade just escapes being classified as high-grade feeble-minded and gets into school by the skin of its teeth. Young people who belong to this class of rather commonplace mentality, if they are rich, will be doomed to spend their lives idling as social success. If they are poor they will join the corresponding class of unskilled loafers sitting in park seats, and drifting from one sporadic employment to another. This great class of amiable, inconsequent, wandering minds have of course no real place in college. They should go certainly to the 'society colleges' which should be founded for their benefit where they can be taught the art of putting in time in a comfortable and leisurely manner, supported by the community.

"We are concerned only with the two upper classes of mentality.

"The next in scale consists of those people who are possessed of the middle class virtues—accuracy, memory, industry, and such like. It is towards the production of these virtues that education in Anglo-Saxon countries has been largely directed in recent years. The rarest masterpieces of imaginative literature have been prostituted to this end, that they should afford a subject for the exercise of memory, concentration and accuracy. Wordsworth speaks of those who are so lost to fine feeling as to 'pick and botanize' upon their mothers' graves, and the practical Anglo-Saxon has been guilty of precisely this indifference when he has used the masterpieces of Shakespeare and the poems of Shelley or Keats as the fields through philological discussions for the training of memory and accurate observation and crossword puzzle analysis.

"Yet there are many minds which are doomed never to rise higher in this world than the partial attainment of these middle-class virtues. It is becoming plainer to us as we proceed in educational knowledge that such people should be encouraged to go immediately from high school into business, that they are eminently qualified to learn the gentle art of taking the nickel away from the other fellow. They are the most useful packages of industry. They are cog wheels in the great industrial machine. They are absolutely invaluable in every side of life as mechanical parts of the great contrivance. An accurate industrious individual with a photographic memory is a priceless acquisition to any commercial institution and he will be happier there, if he has no higher gifts.

"But if their mental equipment goes no higher than this it is a grave question whether they have any place in college, whether they should not go directly into buying and selling which is to be their life work. Some of them who possess in addition a not too scrupulous fancy may be fit for advertising."

North Street Is To Be Open Early in November

Rough excavation on North Street, the road which runs down the steep grade between the Phi Gamma Delta House and the Greylock, is nearly completed, and the work of smoothing and grading the road-bed which has already been begun will be well under way by next week. When this street is open to traffic, probably early in November, the extensive highway program that has been carried on in Williamstown during the summer will be completed.

The contractors, the Kelleher Corporation of Turners Falls, have employed a large steamshovel to dig a deep cut from the corner of Whitman Street to Main Street. This section is to be paved to continue the cement surface from Main Street to the Moody bridge and the present steep grade will be materially lessened. Forms in which to pour the cement will be put in place the first of next week. Although local traffic is little hampered by the work, a suitable detour has been arranged through Whitman and Park Streets.

Freshman Caps Ready Tuesday

The Freshman caps will be put on sale next Tuesday at Prindle's, according to an announcement made recently by Betham and Brown '29, who hold the concession this year.

AT A COUNTY CRICKET MATCH ON A FAMOUS ENGLISH GROUNDS

"WELL PLAYED, SIR!"

On their cricket fields many generations of Englishmen have been imbued with the very highest principles of sportsmanship. With these discriminating gentlemen the BBB OWN MAKE briar pipes have been accepted as the traditional favorite.

Most sportsmen enjoy to the full the good things of life. For generations BBB OWN MAKE briars have been carefully selected, appreciatively smoked, and fondly cared for by particular pipe smokers.

BBB OWN MAKE pipes are masterly made, as always, of the choicest century-old briar root. Each combines—in those distinctive shapes that appeal to fastidious tastes—expertness of manufacture and perfect smoking qualities. The traditional cool mellowness is assured by the famous old individual-baking process, exclusive with BBB OWN MAKE.

BBB OWN MAKE briar pipes are made either in the highly polished smooth finish or in the sand-blasted ripple finish, all with the red diamond on the stem. The price of each is $5.

Williams Eleven

Beats Providence

A short pass from Gibbons to Foster was completed for a one-yard gain. Gibbons lost a yard, and Foster missed a pass. An attempted pass to Sharkey went wild, and Williams took the ball again. Howe made a yard around left end, and then kicked to the thirty-eight-yard line to Sharkey. Providence opened up their passing attack again. The first one was incomplete, but on the second play Sharkey caught one of Gibbons' passes for an eight-yard gain. Another pass to Wheeler added four yards and first down. Chase hit the next heavy on the ground, but then Dubieny completed one to Gibbons for a touchdown. Dubieny made the extra point by a drop-kick. Dubieny kicked off to Putnam on the fifteen-yard line, the latter going to the thirty mark before he was stopped. Howe was stopped off right tackle for no gain. Wheeler hit center for one yard, and then was stopped on a play through left guard. Howe kicked to the thirty-eight-yard line, where the ball was touched down by Hood. Dubieny tossed a pass to Brady, which was good for seven yards. Williams was penalized for being offside. Dubieny tried a pass to Wheeler as the final whistle blew. Score: Williams, 20; Providence, 13.

Brown To Use 'Sacco' System

Following closely the lines set by 'Doug' Lawson, head coach of football at Williams last year, Coach Tuss McLaughry of the Brown University eleven has adopted the two team system, whereby two entire Varsity teams equal in strength are used alternately during a game, for his charges at Providence. Coach Lawson, whose dividing of his squad into "Saccos" and Vanzettis" proved rather disastrous in the final games of the season here last year, because of lack of sufficient good material for two complete lineups, is assisting Coach McLaughry as line coach for the Bruins.

SOCCER TEAM OPENS AGAINST ST. STEPHEN'S

Captain Christie Leads Team in First Game of Season on Cole Field Today

After preliminary practice extending through two weeks, the varsity soccer team will open its fall schedule this afternoon on Cole Field at 1.00 p. m., opposing the eleven from St. Stephen's College. A fairly experienced team, which includes six letter men, will take the field today, but its strength is still an unknown quantity.

COACH BULLOCK
Whose Team Opens Its Schedule Against
St. Stephen's Today

Coach Bullock has continued the daily scrimmages and engaged the freshman first team for the first time last Thursday, when the probable line-up for the initial contest was ascertained. Yesterday the squad indulged in a light workout, practicing the goal and corner kicks, the throw-in, and shooting into the goal. Two changes have been made from the line-up of last year, Neilson occupying the center forward position, displacing Bright, who subsequently will start at center half.

The St. Stephen's eleven is also playing its opening game today. As soccer is the only fall sport being played at the college, the team ought to contain first class material, capable of giving the Purple plenty of opposition. Following are the probable line-ups of the two teams:

WILLIAMS	ST. STEPHEN'S
Thoms	o.l. Kates
Willmott J.	i.l. Maldonado
Neilson	e. Keen
Christie (Capt.)	i.r. Rieciardi

Four Year Liberal Arts College Is Being Menaced by New Junior Colleges, Thinks Pennsylvania Dean

"Education, friendship, and the devotion to something beside himself—these are what the American college has given and will continue to give if the 'expert' is not allowed to crush its first two formative years back into the precocious maturity of the high school and drag its last two up in the professional atmosphere of the graduate school," writes Dr. Arthur Hobson Quinn, dean of the faculty of the University of Pennsylvania, in an article in the current issue of Century Magazine. Dr. Quinn, who has taught English and Mathematics at the university for thirty-four years, vigorously defends the four year college, which, like Williams, provides the undergraduate with knowledge of subjects necessary to "the education of a gentleman", from the attacks of those who favor its division into junior and senior colleges.

The ideal curriculum, in the opinion of the writer, is the one which "charts out the great fields of human knowledge and sees that the boy does not leave college without having been required to have at

Final Competition

The final opportunity for members of the class of 1931 to make the editorial board of The Record will be afforded in the annual sophomore competition commencing tomorrow, October 7, immediately after Chapel. At that time all sophomores interested should meet in the editorial offices in Jesup Hall. The competition will last eight weeks, ending on December 8. At the close of the competition, two men will be elected to the board.

Tickets Issued by Theatre

Subscription tickets for the complete 1928-29 season of the Williams Little Theatre will be issued shortly, and those desiring reservations should communicate with W. F. Hartwell '30, business manager of the organization, as soon as possible. Those on the subscription list are given the same seats for each performance, and the most desirable section of the theatre is reserved for their use.

1932 GRIDIRON TEAM DEVELOPING RAPIDLY

Squad of Eighty-five Men Shows Power and Speed During Week's Practice

Emphasizing line plays and passes Coach Graham is rapidly developing a powerful freshman team which promises to give the Varsity a hard battle when the two meet in their first scrimmage next week. A weakness, that of tackling, which has been noticeable among the yearlings heretofore has been practically overcome not only by the stringent drills on the dummy, but also with a stiff practice in live tackling.

The backfield shows a great deal of promise, the tentative first lineup including men who are not only heavier than the varsity, but also fast and shifty with the advantage of preparatory school experience. The first signal drill was held last Wednesday, Varsity plays being used. The speed of the backs in tearing around the ends and through the line gives sign of another strong yearling aggregation. The line is also composed of men who have been active in football prior to their entrance at Williams. The men are large, averaging close to 170 pounds, and a majority seem to be capable of handling themselves to the best advantage.

The rather tiring setting up exercises performed by the freshmen under the careful eye of Coach Graham have served to put the men in the best of condition. The only thing that remains is to give them the plays, and after a few days of signal drills, to start them in on some hard scrimmaging. As a whole the 1932 squad looks larger and faster than the Varsity and many are expecting a real tussle when the two teams meet. The yearlings are handicapped by a lack of experience, but a week of scrimmage against the upper classmen should prove to be valuable. In the remaining two weeks which precede their first game most of Coach Graham's time will be spent in weeding out his material and in developing his big, hard hitting team.

MOUNTAIN DAY CLIMB IS PLANNED BY W. O. C.

Overnight Greylock Trip To Go by Way of Hopper Trail; Day
Hikes Suggested

Greylock's summit, as in other years, will be the goal of a group from the College headed by the Williams Outing Club on Mountain Day. Under the direction of Covell '30, secretary of the club, the party will ascend by way of the Hopper Trail, leaving the Jesup Hall steps at 4:30 p. m. on the day that the chimes play "The Mountains," and being transported to the foot of the Hopper Trail, whence the ascent will be made on foot.

The trip, the purpose of which is to view the sunrise from the top of Greylock on Mountain Day, will afford an excellent opportunity to pass off the Greylock requirement for membership in the W. O. C. Although the party will make the ascent in a body, individual groups may come down by way of any of the several trails which afford access to the summit. Day trips are suggested by the W. O. C. for those who cannot get away for the overnight trip. It is pointed out that all the nearby trails are in excellent condition at the present time and the early change of foliage this year enhances their beauty.

For those making the Greylock ascent, two blankets, a poncho or slicker, an extra sweater, and an extra pair of socks are advised. Food may be either carried or purchased at the top house. The W. O. C. is ready at all times to give out information on any trails.

Golf and Tennis Open Intramural Schedules

Considerably hindered by rushing, the intramural golf and tennis matches have lagged somewhat behind schedule in the opening series slated for this week, only one of eight golf matches having been played off by Thursday, and two tennis matches remaining unplayed. This week's program has consisted of elimination matches leading to a round robin series for the semi-finalists which will commence next Monday, while the championship will be played off two weeks later.

In the only golf match completed, Phi Delta Theta defeated Delta Psi. There has been considerably more action among the tennis players with the result that the series was only two matches behind schedule on Thursday. Delta Psi and Alpha Delta Phi won over Kappa Alpha and the Commons Club respectively, and Psi Upsilon and Delta Phi defeated Delta Kappa Epsilon and Beta Theta Pi.

Interclass games will start Tuesday with the first of the annual freshman-sophomore soccer contests which will take place every Tuesday and Thursday until five have been played.

1932 Harriers Progress

With a squad of 24 men, freshman cross-country is making rapid progress in daily work-outs. These practices, which are under the direction of Coach Seeley, consist of runs over the various courses, the distance of these runs increasing from day to day. Preparation is for the first meet of the year to be held here on November 3 against the R. P. I. freshmen. The list of the new men out for cross-country follows:

Ach, Alexander, Burnett, Davol, Estabrook, Gildersleeve, Green, Hadley, Hord, Lawson, Lieber, Miller, Palms, Potter, Rauh, Reeves, Roy, Searl, Skinner, Sramek, Swift, Turner, Walter, and Warner.

Hoover Club Planned

Plans are being made for the formation of a Hoover Club. Those interested in joining are asked to meet in Jesup Hall at 7:30 Sunday evening. Efforts are now being made by the Williams Forum to secure a speaker for next week.

CALENDAR

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 6

Red Cross Appeals

The Red Cross Committee of the Williamstown Welfare Association wishes to call the attention of the student body to the fact that an appeal has been issued to the residents of this community to contribute, for the devastated area in Porto Rico, light weight clothing of all kinds, in reasonably good condition. Summer clothing now being discarded in this climate could be put to excellent use in the South.

All such contributions may be sent to Mr. Botsford's office, in Jesup Hall, which is open from 9 to 12 A. M. and 1 to 4 P. M. daily, excepting Saturday P. M.
Mrs. George W. Schryver, Chairman.

College Preacher

The Reverend Arthur Lee Kinsolving, D.D., of Grace Church, Amherst, will conduct the regular Sunday morning services in the Thompson Memorial Chapel at 10.35 a. m.

SEEDED PLAYERS WIN FIRST ROUND MATCHES

Progress in Fall Tennis Tourney Causes No Upsets—Wolf and Sewall Win Easily

Practically all the remaining first-round matches in the annual all-campus fall tennis tournament were played off this week without any serious upset, all seeded players who saw action coming through successfully. Capt. Wolf, playing in the preliminary round, defeated G. L. Nye '30 without the loss of a single game, while Sewall '29, second ranking player, dropped but a single game in each of his sets with Zwissler '30, and Clark '30 won over Hobart '29 by a 9-7, 6-0 score.

Of the remaining seeded players, Hoyt '30 took an extremely close match from Buck '29 7-5, 4-6, 6-4, and Groehl '31, first man on his class team last spring, defeated Polyziodes '30 6-0, 6-2. Following are the results of the preliminary and first round matches played to date, the name of the winner appearing on the left:

Professor King Passes Sabbatical Leave in Long Visit to Germany and Other European Countries

"I was impressed all over Germany by the fact that unfavorable economic conditions do not hamper the people in my educational work", said Associate Professor J. F. King of the Chemistry Department, when interviewed about his sabbatical leave, the greater part of which was spent in that country. Professor King landed in Holland, travelling through that country to Germany, where he spent the winter in study at Munich, taking trips to Austria and Italy; while last summer he journeyed through France and England.

After landing at Rotterdam, short stops were made at Delft, the Hague, and Amsterdam, after which Professor King started for Hanover, visiting Hildesheim, where many wonderful old buildings are still standing. Dresden proved particularly interesting with its famous art museums, and its "Technische Hochschule", the finest institute of its kind in the world. This school at Dresden was recently built by the state of Saxony, and

PANTHERS THREATEN FAST ATTACK TODAY

Middlebury Brings Many Fighting
Veterans of Past Defeats
at Purple Hands

SMITH IS OPEN FIELD STAR

Visitors Outplayed Amherst for Two Periods, Though Losing
By 19-7 Score

Accustomed to the small end of the score at the hands of her "Little Three" opponents, yet credited with having outplayed the victorious Sabrinas throughout the second half last Saturday, Middlebury will seek revenge for two years' defeat on Weston Field this afternoon at three, starting six veterans from the line-up which last year necessitated Coach Lawson's remark that the Purple had been "outfought by a beaten team". Considering the addition of Guarnaccia, brother of the Harvard back, and Smith, star sprinter and open field runner, to the backfield, Coach Caldwell declares that the Williams team must make a decidedly better showing than that which won its first game in order to emerge today with a margin of one touchdown, necessary to shed a favorable light on the Amherst contest in November.

Practice on Cole Field during the week has emphasized general conditioning and light scrimmage, but has resulted in several injuries, which, if not serious, will probably weaken the line-up for several weeks. Muller, Stayman, and Brown will be out for some time, and McAllister has recently been added to that list. Wheeler, though listed among the casualties at present, is expected to start the game in the backfield. Trauernicht will probably be found in Muller's place at center. The only additional shake-up in the line developed during the week is the fact that Whittlesey has yielded his position at end to Elting in order to balance Captain Andersen as guard.

Middlebury got off to a surprising start at Amherst last week when Johnson, Panther quarter, recovered a clever on-side kick-off executed by his teammate Willis, and carried it to the Sabrina 27-yard line. But the real center of scoring strength was the running of Smith, who made the sole trip across the line at the end of a spectacular end run. Both Smith and Guarnaccia are expected to test the Purple line, which will again find itself considerably outweighed man for man. Middlebury as well as Williams is playing its first games under a new coach. Apparently the passing game has not received emphasis in either quarter. Whitman, who will oppose Trauernicht at center, and Captain Webber, end, are Coach Beck's most promising products in the line.

The probable line-ups are as follows:
WILLIAMS: i.e., Elting; i.l., Miller; i.g., Whittlesey; e., Trauernicht; r.g., Andersen; r.t., Gardner; r.e., Ashby; q.b., Putnam; i.h.b., Wheeler; r.h.b., Howe; f.b., Brown '31.

MIDDLEBURY: i.e., Maynard; i.l., Huntington; i.g., Kennan; e., Whitman; r.g., Allen; r.t., ManNarry; r.e., Webber; q.b., Johnson; i.h.b., Guarnaccia; r.h.b., Willis; f.b., Smith.

"is a great credit to it in this time of high reparations."

The summer of 1927 was spent in Saxony, studying German. Here Professor King lived in the home of a German Professor, where he was taken in as a member of the family, none of whom could speak English. At this time he also visited the Gymnasium in Zittau, this corresponding to the American high school. For six weeks he was a guest and attended the different classes. On leaving Saxony a visit was made to Prague, which is considered the most interesting city, architecturally, in all Europe.

In October Professor King registered in the University of Munich as a graduate student, being a Fellow in chemistry. Here he studied with Professor Fajans, who is internationally famous for his work on the structure of matter. His work consisted of the carrying out of a research problem on the "adsorption of radio active ions on colloidal substances", in addition to attending the regular classes of chem-

Applications for Scholarship Must Reach Professor Wild By October 10

Announcement was made today that the final date for receipt of applications for Rhodes Scholarships has been set as October tenth, and that all applications by Williams men must reach Professor H. D. Wild before that date if they are to receive consideration by the committee. The 1928 election will be held December 8, and the scholars so selected will enter Oxford in October, 1929.

A candidate to be eligible must be a male citizen of the United States and unmarried, between the ages of nineteen and twenty-five, and have completed at least his Sophomore year in College. The qualities which will be considered in making the selection are literary and scholastic ability and attainments, qualities of manhood, truth, courage, devotion to duty, sympathy, kindness, unselfishness, and fellowship, exhibition of moral force of character and instincts to lead, and physical vigor.

A candidate may apply either in the State in which he resides or in the one in which he has received at least two years of his College education. Elections will be held this year in Massachusetts and thirty-one other states, therefore Williams will be allowed to present at least one candidate this year. Two Williams graduates are at present holders of Rhodes Scholarships, R. F. Baker '27 and C. T. S. Keep '28, who are sailing this fall to begin their studies.

Hoover Swamps Smith
in Hamilton Straw Vote

As a result of a presidential straw vote held at Hamilton recently by the Hamilton Life Hoover was credited with over three times as many undergraduate votes as Smith, while incomplete returns from the faculty indicated at least a two to one victory for the Republican candidate in that quarter. Actual figures gave Hoover 287 votes, Smith 88, Thomas (Socialist) 4, Will Rogers (Vocalist) 2.

The greatest support of the G. O. P. aspirant lay in the Freshman class, and thus the two opponents came out on nearly even terms among the older undergraduates who are actually qualified to vote in the election. The Smith men also can boast that the Hamilton chapter of Phi Beta Kappa is Democratic without exception.

La Prensa, the New York Spanish Daily, has recently announced the inauguration of a nationwide contest among schools and colleges for the best news items written in Spanish on interesting events in classes or departments of Spanish. Such stories will be printed in La Prensa under the heading Notas Escolares, and each month the writers of the two best items will receive prizes respectively of $10.00 and $5.00. Articles should not exceed 200 words and should be accompanied not only by the address of the sender, but by the signature of a Spanish professor as indication of originality.

THE ROUND TABLE

Smootho, or How It's Done

Time: 5.30 p. m.

Scene: Living room of the Triple Pi Featernity during the open season on freshmen.
The brethren are lined up, while Meadows, high fakin' of the house, sits at a desk. On a portable stand nearby are Stacomb, Brilliantine, Shoe Polish, Toothpaste, Aqua Vida, Bath Salts, Listerine, and Zip.
Brother Jeeves is drill sergeant.

Brother Jeeves: Ready now, step, one,
two, three, bow, speak.

Chorus of Brethren: I am very glad to see you this evening, Mr. Zileh.

B. Jeeves: No, no, Bolkus. You're all out of time. How'n hell do you expect to impress any freshman if you grunt and mumble like that? Try it again.
One, two, three, bow, speak.—That's much better. You'll get on to true Pi Pi style after a bit. We'll have inspection next.

(Brother Meadows gets up and goes to the end of the line taking a large black notebook.)

B. Meadows: Smirk, tonight you will meet
Waxwise, Ginsberg, Gump, and J. Q.
R. T. Wallingdunge III. Waxwise comes from Bala-Cynwid, and knows all the aristocracy of Patagonia. Don't forget that your father's great uncle was the Baron Ickleheimer, but don't mention that you are going in the grocery business. (Meadows goes a little closer to Smirk.) And here (handing him a bottle of Listerine) try a bit of this.

Smirk (scowling): Ummmmmm

Meadows (turning to next man and looking him over critically): Say, Pain, haven't you shined your shoes yet. And you've got that same hellish green tie on.
Whadda ya think you are anyway, an artist or a poet. Here are your assignments: Jones, Brown, Wilson, and Van Bloop.

Pain: Aw, I don't want Van Bloop. He's a fairy. I had to give him the dictionary to hold last time to keep him from flying out the window.

Meadows: That's all right. He's a legacy; so just control yourself. (To next man) Bologna, What's this I hear about your telling fairy tales to the freshmen.

Bologna: Oh, you mean Spitzbaum. I just told him about the bears that come down out of the mountains in the winter. He'd believe anything. Anyhow we don't want him. He said he gets prickly heat.

Meadows: Better be careful. Tonight you take Garfinkle, Dumkopf, Beery, and Diefenderfer.

B. Bologna: Oh yes, Beery's the one with the snaky sister. Black hair, black eyes, and what contours.

B. Smirk: Must be a Hindu or some such.

B. Bologna: Is not. Here's a picture.

All: Give him the works. Smooth squad.

Meadows: All right, I'll take him.

All: Mooooo.

Meadows: (Assuming an air of importance) Brooksie you are to take the same men as Smirk only beginning with

CAMPAIGNING THE CAMPUS

It is almost a maxim that nothing begins until after rushing. We cannot even pick a new president of the United States before we have first picked our new fraternity delegations. That is probably one reason why Mr. Hoover and Mr. Smith have so far aroused only mild interest among the student body: the campus has been concerned with more important bids for popularity.

But now that our little intra-social campaigns have come to a close, we may find it easier to turn our attention to the eye and ear entertainment of the presidential campaigns. We could not very well escape them, if we would. It's in the air.

The old-fashioned political rally, with its slogans, shouts, and speeches may not find a place in the Williams of 1928, for our more robust passions have been dissipated upon other things besides politics. Collegiate ballyhoo belongs to another age, when men grew beards and did not hesitate to advertise the merits of their party (or their father's party) with a punch in the jaw. This quenching of political fireworks on the campus may be attributed either to the uplifting influence of A. N. P. (a course in American national problems, now called Political Science) or else to the sophistication of the modern softy. In neither case, is the net result altogether lamentable.

Education in anything has the somewhat fortunate effect of a wet blanket on our more primitive emotions. The more we learn about the workings of our Government, for instance, and the deeper we dig into the secrets of political melodrama, the less do we feel like expressing our opinions with mere hisses or hurrahs. In other words, the more we think, the less we are likely to yell. This growing tendency to think intelligently about matters political may strip our patriotism of some of its star-spangled glory, but we become more dignified, more sensible in the process. One of the functions, and as we see it, one of the happy results of a college education is to enable us to take our politics through the head, instead of on the wave of second-hand emotions and prejudices.

Smith and Hoover clubs are already beginning to take form at Williams. They indicate that interest in presidential elections, if less noisy today, has by no means died out. We should encourage them as means of stimulating intelligent thought on the merits of the candidates and the issues of the campaign. The Record cannot do much more. As non-partisan representative of student body opinion, we do not feel that we should sing the praises of any particular party, but we do throw open our columns for whatever political correspondence may come from individuals. And as the heat of the campaign becomes felt in cold, remote Williamstown, we hope that both Hoover and Smith adherents, who, in one way or the other, are so near the voting age, will feel free to fight some of their battles on this page.

ALUMNI COLUMN

(The following article was written by H. Lincoln Foster '28, assistant editor of the Williams Alumni Review and appeared in the October issue under the title of "Alumni and Education.")

Recently the undergraduates have become intensely self-conscious about the four years they are spending in a pleasant college atmosphere on their fathers' money. They have been asking themselves numerous questions about the value of what they are required to do or can choose to do while they are in college. They are no longer content to drift along in the easy flowing stream of "higher education," which for so long has been chiefly athletic and social higher education. Naturally much of their criticism is the result of a youthful restlessness which would be present under any existent conditions. But some of the undergraduates have very definite ideals as to what they want to get out of college, and they are taking the initiative in demanding that the authorities give to them the things they want, in the manner the undergraduates themselves want them.

The curriculum has undergone many radical changes within the last two years,

MORTIMER KOLLENDER, JR., 1928 who is employed by the Chase National Bank in New York City.

most of which has been due directly to the effort of a student curriculum committee. The work of this committee has met with excellent administrative co-operation and student appreciation. In a poll of the 1928 class, by far the greatest number of answers to the question, "How has Williams improved in the last four years?" had direct reference to the changes made in the curriculum and the co-operation between faculty and students which brought about these beneficial shifts. This is certainly a symptom of at least an intellectual maturity within the undergraduate ranks.

The alumni, of course, are in no such intimate connection with the college work as the undergraduate, but they can

UNDERGRADUATES AND ALUMNI JOIN IN ATTACKING FEEBLE CHEERING AT GAMES

Deplore Half-Hearted Support and Blase Attitude of Majority of Spectators—Urge Cheerleaders To Draw Out Enthusiasm

To the Editor of THE RECORD:

Dear Sir:

If the cheering at last Saturday's game is a true indication of the spirit existing at Williams, the situation is indeed nothing short of calamitous. Working on unfamiliar material, Charlie Caldwell has produced what is apparently the first real football team for years, and one would naturally expect the undergraduate body to awake from their pessimistic lethargy and cheer in a way that would convey some meaning. But no. Despite the fact that the team earns a real victory, the stands for the most part utter their faint approval and indulge in a few isolated yells. Nor are the cheerleaders apparently capable of providing a remedy; they have failed to have the freshmen and even upper classmen doff their hats at the singing of The Mountains.

It is indeed hard to believe last Saturday's exhibition was a true indication of feeling. There are signs of potential spirit,—but it is the job of the cheerleaders to transform that dormant enthusiasm into useful support at the psychological moments and the duty of the spectators to give that support wholeheartedly when it is called upon.

We are confident that there will be an improvement in the attitude of the cheerleaders,—the college body must do the rest.

To the Editor of THE RECORD,

Dear Sir:

I am taking the liberty of enclosing a clipping which I cut from the Boston Evening Transcript.

I am firmly convinced of the truth of this article and in view of the half-hearted and mediocre cheering at the Providence game Saturday, I wish that THE RECORD could, through its columns, foster better spirit along these lines.

A Williams Alumnus
No single happening of the week-end in college football attracted more widespread attention than the close call that Notre Dame had against Loyola University of New Orleans, which is coached by Clark Shaughnessy, the former Minnesota star. John F. Kelleher of Cambridge, Boston College '28, who is pursuing graduate studies at the South Bend institution, writes interestingly to the Transcript about a phase of Notre Dame football that perhaps is little known. His letter, penned a few hours after the Rockne team had surged in the closing moments to beat Loyola 12 to 6, follows:

"Just a few lines this time on the spirit of the student body at Notre Dame. Last Thursday night they held a 'Pep' meeting in front of the main building and the attendance was 2800, almost the entire student body. Those who were absent were off-campus students. They held these meetings as a rule right after supper, thereby getting the entire student body together on short notice. The band meets those who eat in the college dining halls at the doors and from there make the rounds of the ten dormitories on the campus."

COMMUNICATION

Although communications may be published unsigned if so requested, the name of the writer must in every case be submitted to the editor. The Board assumes no responsibility, however, for the facts as stated nor for the opinions expressed in this department.

To the Editor of THE RECORD,

Dear Sir:

Last summer, while on an automobile trip, I had the opportunity, for the first time, of visiting the spot where Colonel Ephraim Williams fell in battle. It is located at the side of the state highway between Lake George and Glens Falls, N. Y., and is marked by a stone enclosed by an iron railing.

I believe that the remains of our college founder are supposed to lie in a vault in the chapel. This, however, is not an established fact, and there is just as much likelihood that his remains rest in the plot near Lake George as in the chapel vault. At any rate, the spot is marked as being the grave of Colonel Ephraim Williams.

One can imagine my surprise and chagrin, when I found this place being used as a picnic ground and dump heap by traveling tourists.

Inside of the plot were strewn old paper bags, banana peels and orange skins, while in order to read the inscription on the stone I found it necessary to remove a discarded orange crate which had been placed there by some thoughtless person.

In addition, not ten feet from the stone, was an ugly looking black barrel marked "Rubbish". This was half filled with papers and garbage. That, in itself, seems receive information concerning the intellectual activities of the college through the various publications (not the Cow) and especially from the yearly report of the officers of administration. If the alumni would interest themselves they could get the information.

The alumni do have one advantage, however, in that they are now in a position to look back upon their own college course with a critical eye, critical in a practical sense. No matter what is said to the contrary, college is and must be, if it is to mean anything in a man's life, a very definite preparation for the future. As such, the work should be planned with all the care and efficiency that can be commanded. The alumni can offer some very fine suggestions for changes and improvements in the college work of today. The undergraduates have done their part from their point of view. The alumni should express themselves from their point of view, in these columns or through other channels. There is an opportunity to render real service to the college, service other than a carping criticism of the contemporary lack of athletic prowess.

had enough but the appearance of the place made it apparent that the tourist preferred to throw their leavings inside of the plot, rather than in the receptacle placed there for that purpose.

I would suggest that, if the proper college authorities take this matter up with the New York State Highway Commission, such an atrocious condition might be rectified. Or, perhaps, a group of alumni in the vicinity of Glens Falls would be willing to see that the place is put and kept in decent order.

At any rate, let us see that this spot is protected, from disrespect and vandalism, in the future.

Eugenics Favored as Study

Eugenics and genetics as required college courses are coming more and more into favor, according to a report of the American Eugenics Society, headed by President Little of Michigan. Questionnaires sent out to 254 colleges and universities indicated that not only were such studies favored for students of biology, sociology, and medicine, but in addition half the replies advocated them for prospective lawyers, and a quarter for all college men, whether intending to enter a vocational career or not. As a present instance of this feeling it is interesting to note that last December the Wesleyan undergraduate body voted 375 to 33 in favor of the following proposition: "That the subject of Sex and Eugenics should be fully covered by one of our present generalization courses."

Geo. S. Parker Offers Also,
 Pressureless Touch, Non-Breakable Barrel, and a *Guarantee Forever Against All Defects

Never before have modern style and efficiency been so combined in a fountain pen.

36 years' experience, 47 improvements, 32 pen patents, five modern, flashing colors are represented in this one pen.

Barrels of Parker Permanite are 28% lighter than rubber, yet non-breakable.

Through Pressureless Touch, a Duofold eliminates all effort. The feather-light weight of the pen itself starts and keeps it writing. No pressure from the fingers—no strain—no fatigue.

On each barrel find and read the imprint, "Geo. S. Parker—DUOFOLD." That is the only way to be sure you have the genuine.

In a special test in 55 colleges the Parker was voted the favorite pen. You'll agree when you've tried the modern Duofold. Do it now, at a near pen counter.

Four Year Liberal Arts College is Being Menaced

esprit de corps, and it must be preserved by close cooperation between the college authorities and every undergraduate organization that stands for solidarity and for the natural instinct that leads men to form associations. That such cooperation is in active operation is known to every college administrator; but that fraternities which thirty years ago were indifferent to the scholastic standing of their members, watch now with great care over it, may be news to those who clamor for its abolition."

"Is it not time that the public conception of so-called 'college life' should begin to square with the facts? The old idea that a boy went to an isolated spot for four years and then 'commenced life' persists still in the minds of those unacquainted with the changes that have been brought about in American education. The boy who enters a university has been already in close contact with life and remains in even more vital relation to it during his residence.

"The undergraduate, of course, is under none of the delusions which agitate the critics of the colleges. He knows he is like any other boy from eighteen to twenty-two except that he is being furnished with standards that are higher than those of his brother who proceeds earlier to the practical atmosphere of a bank or an insurance company. Notwithstanding the current delusion, he does not seek 'snap courses', because they are usually hard to find. What he absolutely refuses to suffer is boredom, even at the price of ease. In short he is a keen young person, who is eager for the right kind of guidance, and while he overemphasizes his 'activities' and his various societies and 'hats' and 'keys', that is only human."

Dr. Quinn closes his essay with a plea for the preservation of the four year liberal arts college, "whose progress has been upon the broad highway of the human understanding, reaching back, as it always has done, to the fountains of knowledge, and leading forward, as it must continue to do, into the realities of life."

Cheering at Notre Dame

pus, gathering up all stray students. After making the rounds they march to the quadrangle in front of the main building where the fireworks take place.

Cheer or Get a Ducking

"It is tradition here for all men on the campus to attend these 'pep' meetings; those failing to do so are dealt with summarily by the students (which means a ducking in the lake). Well, I am still raving over the spirit and enthusiasm displayed by these 2800 men on Tuesday night. After the meeting Earl Clinton, former center on the B. C. team, who is out here with me, came into my room and said, 'Who couldn't play football with that gang howling in your ears?' No wonder these fellows can play such football."

"I concluded then and there that the student body, with its spirit and enthusiasm, plays a great part in the success of the Notre Dame team. This was already proven on Cartier Field today when the big, powerful Loyola College team from New Orleans proved a tough assignment for Rockne's men.

"It was the toughest battle ever waged on this historic battlefield, and Rockne's men had to use everything they had in the line of plays to pull the game out of the fire. It is said here on the campus that this was the first time in the history of Cartier Field that a Notre Dame team left the field at the end of the first half on the short end. I suppose you have read all about the game and the outcome, but I am going to tell you about the spirit of the student body, which I think played a great part in the battle today.

Incomparable Cheering

"After Loyola scored its touchdown in the second period, the N. D. team showed signs of weakening, due I think, to the heavy pounding it was receiving from the heavy Loyola team. The cheer leaders, noticing this along with many students in the stands, immediately started an outburst of cheers that could be heard for miles. You would have to be present to see the effect on these eleven men wearing the blue of Notre Dame.

"From then on the N. D. team held the upper hand and with the continuous howling of the students it was readily seen that N. D. couldn't be defeated. When the team came on the field after the first half I was dumbfounded at the reception they received from the student body. I have heard cheering sections at Harvard, Dartmouth, Yale, Holy Cross and B. C., but I have never heard one that could compare with this one at Notre Dame.

Students Love the Game

"Somehow or other these men love the game of football and they believe that if they can't play it they can cheer and sing and Rockne tells us that the cheering section in the stands is just as important a factor in the game as each of the eleven men on the team. Well, to continue, Loyola late in the fourth period kicked to Morrissey, the N. D. quarterback, who fumbled. The ball was recovered by Loyola on N. D.'s ten-yard line, with only six minutes to play and the score tied. The student cheering section got busy with their 'Fight, team, fight!' and 'Hold them, Notre Dame!' cheers, and, sure enough, they held them for downs.

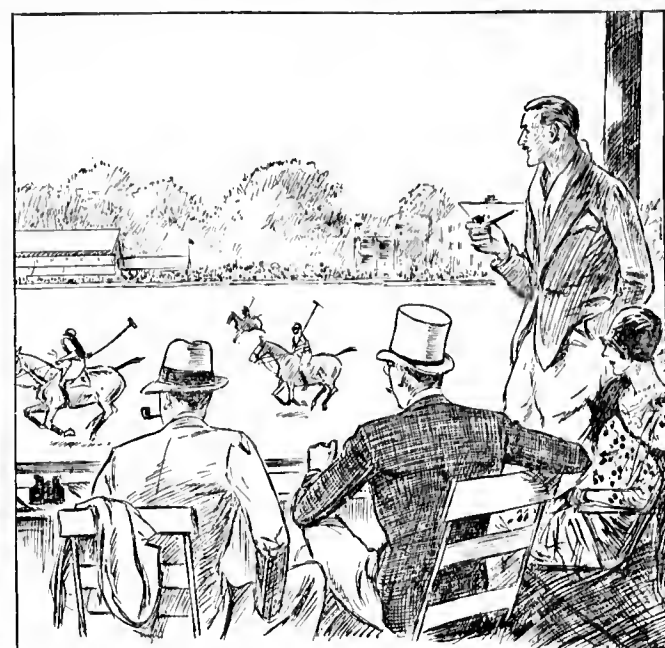

"Of course you have read how the Notre Dame team came back and carried the ball down the field, Rockne putting man after man into the game and using every play they had in order to score, which they finally did. Spirit, spirit, spirit—it is the war cry around here every day and has been since I have been here.

it. Here are a few more announcements. The joke and etiquette books are on the table in the office. The topic for propaganda this evening is that every frat but our beloved Triple Pi is hiding certain members who are not too presentable. And by the way don't let anyone see Brother Soapy. All you members of the Dill Pickle, be sure to leave your best tassled hats on the hall table. You men all know how important it is that we get the right sort of men for Pi Pi Pi. You cannot do it by being ordinary intelligent human beings. Flatter those that need flattery; praise not those that deserve it, but the ones who fall for it. Lay it on thick. The thicker the better. As you all know our rival, Alpha Omega, is using certain scurrilous tricks which we have not been able to get ahold of; so we must get right down to business and fight. (Cheers and a few Poops) Lets have setting up exercises now: Smile, grin, laugh, register surprise, wonder, superiority. That's great. (Doorbell rings) Here they are. Go to it.

CHAMPIONSHIP AT STAKE

Modern polo was developed in the English army, where loyalty to the game's high principles seems a part of every player. It is natural that, for generations, these exacting sportsmen have shown a preference for the one traditionally excellent briar pipe—the BBB OWN MAKE.

In FAR outposts of the Empire and at home, polo has appealed to dashing spirits as the great sporting partnership between man and his friend, the horse. And a bond between these most exacting sportsmen and their briar pipes has caused the BBB OWN MAKE to be carried into every corner of the earth.

Generations of pipe smokers are familiar with the high standards of BBB manufacture. Excellent smoking quality, unusual coolness, traditional mellowness and beauty from the choicest briar roots—these are the characteristics for years associated with BBB OWN MAKE pipes.

Amherst to Organize a College Brass Band

Following the example of many colleges in the East, among them Williams, Amherst is now taking definite steps toward the organization of a college band to furnish music at the important games of the football, basketball, and baseball teams throughout the year. A drive is now underway to establish a fund of one thousand dollars from alumni donations to support the organization, and the services as coach of Mr. Charles F. Smith, professional director of the Yale University Band, have already been secured.

The project of creating the new musical organization was ratified by the Amherst Student Council last week, and the interest in it shown by the student body seems to indicate that it will be successful. The fund will be used to buy the larger instruments required. The band will probably make its first appearance at the Amherst-Hamilton game, and will surely be on the spot when the Snbrinas meet Wesleyan and Williams next month.

Leave In Europe

istry to review his chemistry and to observe their methods of teaching. He said that his observation seemed to show the German chemistry student had more professional interest in his subject and consequently did better work than the average American college student.

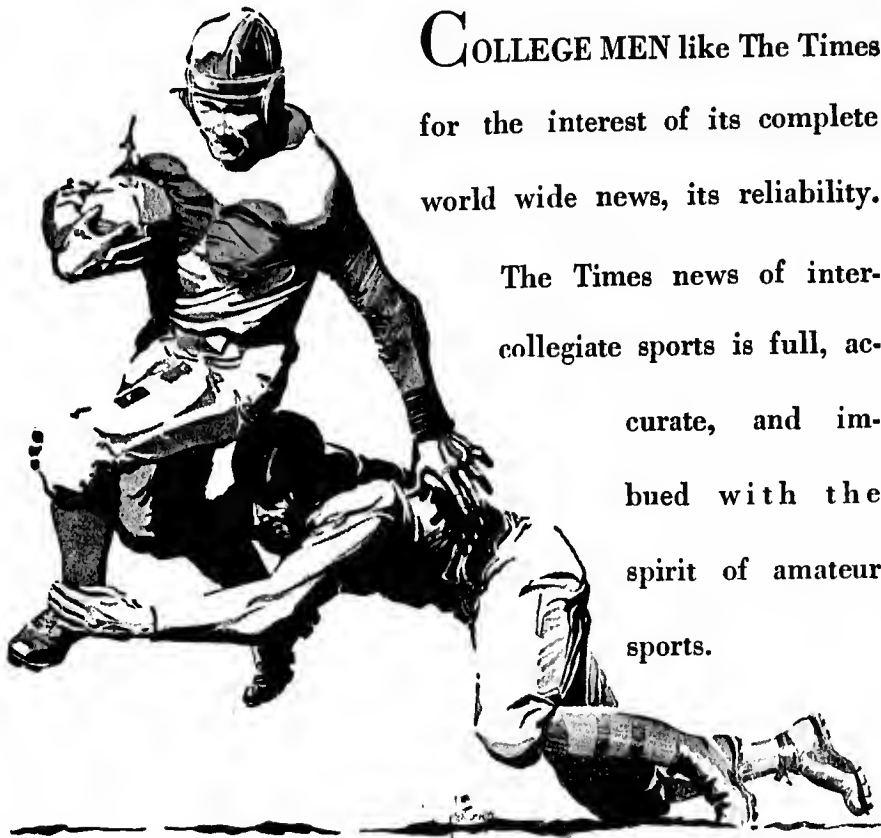

Munich proved to be the most interesting city in Europe to Professor King. This city, which is approximately the same size as Boston, is free from the rush and heavy traffic of a big city, and retains much of the provinciality of an old German city. Here the opera is excellent; the music wonderful, with such international artists as Elman and Kreisler. In the fall there is the October Fest, which is a great street fair and circus, with crowds coming from all over Germany for a period of two or three weeks. At Christmas one meets the true Christmas spirit. Coming between Christmas and Lent is the world-famous Carnival Time, which is like the celebrations in southern France or the Mardi Gras in New Orleans. It is somewhat similar to New Year's Eve in New York, but lasts for eight weeks. With the arrival of Lent all the breweries brew a special beer. Once the Pope stopped all beer drinking during Lent. The people of Munich sent a sample to him to see if he would not reverse his decision. The journey took so long that the beer changed its composition, but the Pope gave his consent to this, although it was three or four times as strong as the regular beer.

Professor King passed his Christmas vacation in the Alps in a typical village, 3000 feet high, and surrounded by mountains 10,000 feet high, the chief recreation being climbing the nearby peaks. During the spring a six weeks visit to Italy was made, most of the time being spent at Merano in the old south Tyrol of Austria, which is still being Italianized by military force. After this, Professor King travelled all through Italy, going to Rome, Bologna, Naples, Pompeii, Florence, and Venice. On the "best day of the year" he climbed up Mt. Vesuvius, where he even went into the crater, where it was a "shock to hear the terrific roar and to see the fragments of lava shooting into the air". This volcano, which has a large eruption about every twenty years, is about due for another one, the last coming in 1907.

In May, Professor King attended the meeting of the "Bunsen Gesellschaft" in Munich, this being one of the main chemical associations. Later he was invited to the University of Erlangen to a celebration given by the Roentgen Institute. Short visits were made at Nuremberg, which is an old city in a wonderful state of preservation; and at Garmisch-Partenkirchen, where the ascent of Mt. Kruezeck was made to get a view of the famous Mt. Zugspitz. A visiting trip of German Universities was next on Professor King's itinerary. First he inspected Tuebingen, which has an environment something like Williams, Heidelberg, Goettingen, Berlin, and Jena. During the course of this trip he visited the Kaiser Wilhelm Institute and in Jena, the famous glass works of "Schott und Genossen" and "Zeiss".

The summer of 1928 was passed in France and England. On a visit to Oxford he met Professor Leigh who was the first Williams man he had seen since Professor McLaren left Munich in February. After seeing both English and German Universities, Professor King expressed the opinion that Williams was more similar to the Colleges of Oxford and Cambridge than to the continental institutions. Johns Hopkins is now patterning after this, in abolishing the B.A. degree and having the students work directly for the Doctor's degree.

Old Gold hits a homer for Babe Ruth in Blindfold cigarette test

"Yes, I am well over 21... so I could see no reason why I shouldn't make the blindfold test. As I tried the four leading cigarettes I kept this 'box score' on the results:

No. 1 . . . . out at first
No. 2 . . this one 'fanned'
No. 3 . . out on a pop fly
No. 4 (OLD GOLD) a home run hit!

HOOVER CLUB PLANS VIGOROUS CAMPAIGN

Princeton Professor Will Speak on Republican Candidate in Jesup Thursday

GARFIELD LENDS SUPPORT

Overton, Gilbert, Gross, Haviland, and Hoyt Elected Officers of Organization

Formed for the purpose of disseminating throughout the college and vicinity information concerning Hoover and Curtis through outside speakers and the Club itself, and acting in conjunction with the town Republican Committee, of which Mr. George Walter Schryver is the head, the Williams College Hoover Club held its first meeting at 7.30 on Sunday in Jesup Hall. At this time, the Club, which is connected with the national Hoover organization through its sponsor, Charles M. Davenport, Williams 1901 and Trustee of the College, adopted a constitution and elected the following officers: Richard C. Overton '29, president, Benjamin D. Gilbert '30, first vice-president, Harold B. Gross '30, second vice-president, John G. Haviland '29, secretary, and Franklin K. Hoyt '30, treasurer.

The first public meeting of the Hoover Club will be held at 8.00 on Thursday, to which everyone in college, Republican, Democrat, Socialist, or Laborite, is invited. At this time, Professor Philip Marshall Brown, Williams 1898, will speak for Hoover and Curtis under the joint auspices of the Hoover Club and the Forum. Since his graduation, Professor Brown has held various posts in the diplomatic service of the United States from 1901 to 1910. He is the author of several treatises on international relations, and he is at present Professor of International Law and Diplomacy at Princeton. Professor Brown is prominent in the national campaign in support of Herbert Hoover, to which work he is devoting a large portion of his present subbiatical year.

At the same meeting on Thursday, Overton '29 will explain the purpose and functioning of the Hoover Club and also the question of both local and absentee voting. Gilbert and Gross '30, who are at the head of the registration committee, are in charge of signing up men for the Club, and anyone who is interested and has not already been approached should obtain registration cards from these men.

In conjunction with the Thursday evening meeting, there will be a town rally for the Republican state candidates at 4.00 on Thursday at the Hoover headquarters on Water Street. At this time, the speakers will be Frank G. Allen, present lieutenant-governor of Massachusetts and Republican candidate for governor, and Benjamin Loring Young, Republican candidate for United States Senator, who is opposing David I. Walsh.

PROF. MILLER SPEAKS FOR SMITH'S ELECTION

Attacks Hoover Policy of Silence in Speech on Liberalism at Jesup Meeting

"Liberalism cannot be defined in terms of a set of issues, it is a matter of attitude, and it is the political attitude," was the chief point stressed in Professor John W. Miller's address on "Liberalism in Politics" which was delivered at the Smith-Robinson meeting held last Thursday evening in the Jesup Hall auditorium. Before Professor Miller's speech, Professor Samuel E. Allen spoke briefly on "Tolerance", praising Governor Smith's record in welfare legislation and attacking the undercover campaign in the South directed against Smith on moral and religious grounds and alleged to be encouraged by the republican party.

At the outset of his speech, Professor Miller emphasized the general ignorance of the American people on the subject of what politics is, and stated that he would attempt to draw a line on which honest disagreement would be possible, and try to bar out some of the ridiculous reasons people generally give when announcing the fact that they are going to vote one way or the other. After a consideration of the opinions of Plato and Aristotle, together

SOCCER TEAM OPENS SEASON WITH VICTORY

Promising Williams Eleven Swamps
St. Stephens in One-Sided
Contest by 5-1

By maintaining almost continual possession of the ball and keeping its opponent busily occupied in trying to protect its own goal, the Williams soccer team swamped an inexperienced and poorly-conditioned St. Stephens eleven last Saturday on Cole Field by a 5-1 score. The home team had no alters all its own way from the very start, scoring in every quarter, while the only score by the visitors was made in the last period on a cleverly executed pass from the left wing to center.

Because of the line trapping and kicking of the backs, the Williams team was able to force the play most of the time, and but for the inaccuracy of shooting into the goal, the score would have been far greater. The pass work was usually well effected, the backs, particularly, placing the ball just where it was most desired. The forwards were always able to work the ball right into enemy territory but missed many chances to score because of a lack of firm driving power. The opposing team gave all it had, but was no match for the Purple, as it was quite inexperienced and tired easily.

Bright, playing this year at center half instead of at center forward, was easily the outstanding player of the game, completely baffling the visitors' threats and constantly feeding the ball to the forwards, besides scoring two goals himself. Gregory and Leber, fullbacks, proved a stone wall against attack and often sent the ball back into enemy territory, half the length of the field. The halfbacks also gave a fine account of themselves and kept the visiting forwards entirely at their mercy. Thoms was the most dependable forward, centering the ball accurately from his wing, but poor support rendered him ineffective.

Williams obtained possession of the ball at the outset of the game, and within two minutes of play, Christie bounced the ball off his head to Phelps, who then made a beautiful long shot into the goal for the first score. For a moment following this, St. Stephens braced but soon succumbed to a renewed attack which brought the ball again within scoring distance. Many

'Purple Cow' Competition

An opportunity for the members of the class of 1932 to make the managerial board of The Purple Cow will be afforded in the annual freshman competition which will commence Friday, October 12. This competition is the only one that will be run for positions on the business board open to members of the class of 1932. At the end of the competition, two men will be elected to the board. Those desiring to compete should meet in The Purple Cow office in Jesup Hall at 12.40 next Friday. Further details will be given at that time. Watch for notices in The Adviser.

FRATERNITIES PLEDGE 151 MEMBERS OF 1932

Percentage of Freshmen Taken Is 63.7, Compared with 63.2%
of Class of 1931

One hundred and fifty-one freshmen, out of a class of two hundred and thirty-seven, were pledged to the fifteen fraternities on the campus as a result of the 1928 rushing season, which ended last Friday evening, the percentage of first year men pledged being 63.7%, an increase of .5% over last year and the preceding year. In addition two transfers in the class of 1931 were also pledged. The percentage of 1932 pledged is slightly larger than in 1926 and 1927, but is smaller than the percentage of the present senior class, which was 66.5%. Phi Delta Theta has the largest delegation with 17 men, while Psi Upsilon and Zeta Psi are next with 16 apiece.

Coach Seeley Chooses Cross Country Lineup

As the result of time trials held Saturday morning, Coach 'Doc' Seeley has selected a Varsity cross country team of nine men, of which seven will be chosen before each meet to represent the Purple. The season opens this Saturday, when the harriers will endeavor to outrun the R. P. I. team over the Taconic Course.

The recently chosen lineup is as follows: Captain Moore and Herriek '29, Chapman, Fitcher, Reeves and E. V. Reynolds '30, and Goodbody, Guernsey, and Saffern '31. Moore, Herriek, Chapman, Fitcher, Reeves, and Reynolds were all members of the Varsity track and cross country teams of last season, while all three of the sophomores represented their class in both sports during the past year.

M. W. Maclay '09 Speaks at Commons Club Dinner

Approximately 70 freshmen responded to the invitation sent out to members of the Class of 1932 to attend the Freshman banquet given by the Commons Club in Currier Hall on Friday evening, October 5. Dinner was served to 172, after which speeches were given by Mark W. Maclay '09, president of the Gargoyle Alumni Association and a member of the Alumni Council of the Commons Club, and Haviland '29, president of the club.

In his introductory speech, after welcoming the freshmen, Haviland spoke on the history of the Commons Club and its purpose at present. Mr. Maclay's speech, which was of special pertinence to the incoming class, dealt with the present social system of the College, and the part the Commons Club can play as a social organization for all Williams men. In concluding, he assured his audience of the continued backing of the Alumni.

MUSICAL CLUBS PLAN CONSTRUCTIVE POLICY

Ambitious Season Includes Longer Trip and Possible Entry in Glee Contests

As announced by Manager William Howes Collins '29 the program of the Williams Musical Clubs for this year will include many constructive departures from the traditional policy, and the entire plan for the 1928-1929 season is by far the most ambitious ever attempted by the Clubs since their foundation. In addition to securing the valuable services of Mr. C. I. Safford as coach, lightening and popularizing the program, and lengthening and dividing the winter tour into two parts, the management has also made provision to arrange for the entry of the Clubs into the New England Intercollegiate Glee Club Contest at Boston, if sufficient talent turns out, and into the National Intercollegiate at New York, if the results at Boston, justify this course.

The innovations in policy are dictated, according to Manager Collins, by the desire of the management of the Clubs to show appreciation of the alma mater by enhancing the name of the College in the eyes of the communities visited, which naturally regard the men composing the ensemble as representative Williams undergraduates. Potential sub-freshmen may base their choice of a college on the impression created.

Naturally one object in planning the season has been to make the trip enjoyable for the members of the Clubs, and negotiations are under way for two or three week-end trips to women's colleges in this

Musical Clubs Competition

All sophomores desiring to enter a competition for the three managerships of the Musical Clubs should report to-day at 12.40 in the Jesup Hall office. The competition will last until the Christmas trip. If Tuesday happens to be Mountain Day all prospective competitors should meet in the office on Wednesday.

Always threatening what she never came anywhere near doing: with a brave offensive which never carried the ball into Williams territory, never scored a first down to match the Purple's 13; with a series of passes which were not always wild, yet failed in nine out of ten tries and were three fatally intercepted; with a ball carrier in Smith who gave visible evidence of potentiality for the brilliant open field work which scored against Amherst, yet never twisted his way more than three yards beyond the line of scrimmage; Middlebury remained scoreless on Weston Field last Saturday afternoon. In the meantime, Howe and Langmaid, occasionally sharing notable honors with Williams and Wheeler, passed or cracked or clipped the wings of the opposing line for the 20 points which definitely throw down the gage to the Little Three.

The fortune of the forward passing game bears the most direct relation to the final score, since the way was cleared for each touchdown by some one or more of those six connections out of 12 chances which yielded an average of better than ten yards apiece. The Panthers made equal use of the aerial attack, which also helps to account for the score, in as much as the three which fell into the hands of Purple intruders turned the greatest menaces of the day into the Williams scoring column. Critical importance in accounting for the final result must be attributed to the fact that the line pitched a no hit game; and if in the mid field they occasionally let their backs hit an unbroken wall, yet within reach of the goal the way was always waiting.

After a scoreless first half, the triumphs of the second came as the result, not of a Middlebury slump, but of an awakened attack. The game throughout was characterized by freedom from fumbles and the abundance of penalties, which, however were not of the sort to mar the spirit of the game. In short, neither team claims all-American laurels, but it was a good game of football.

Immediately after the kick-off, Middlebury opened with her trump and played Smith, but the Williams line took the trick. Then, as if the adversaries were experiencing a period of mutual uncertainty, there ensued an exchange of punts during which each offering of Huntington was thrown

That the Williams football eleven has at least three hard battles in store for it before the season is over was made apparent by the results of the games in which its opponents participated last Saturday. In one of the most thrilling struggles ever seen on Pratt Field, Amherst came from

A steady march down the field in the final period, and a series of brilliant end runs by Grosskloss, gave Amherst its only touchdown and its victory over Bowdoin. The Maine team had tallied in the third

UP AND DOWN THE SCALE

Williams men who have sensitive ears will greet with mingled hope and relief the signs of new life that are beginning to emanate from the emaciated Musical Clubs. For many years this once jolly organization has steadily become less jolly, until it seemed that each annual cry from its cracked and creaking voice must surely be its last. But after death comes the renaissance.

The new Musical Clubs is getting itself together with the avowed purpose in view of rising "to a position as one of the leaders among eastern college musical organizations". Should this ambitious goal be attained, it would be a distinct, not to say unique, honor for Williams. Certainly few will hold that the Royal Purple has ever excelled in the role of wandering minstrel. While our jubilant friends from Wesleyan carry off first prize in a national singing contest at New York, Williams songsters are content to slink about New Jersey rendering "Sylvia" the way she has always been rendered. Of course a few very loyal alumni try to make their wives and their wives' friends give the boys a hand, but even for them the sterility of these annual affairs must be an embarrassing hardship. The Clubs, with a better sense of business than of music, usually lug around with them as bait a fertile, if less classic, dance orchestra, and the poor fish go home happy.

The picture which some thirty starchy young men make as they carefully arrange themselves in mathematical composition upon a platform is not altogether unpleasant. In fact there is always a certain tintype sentiment inspired by a college glee club in the abstract. But when they open their mouths we begin to feel somehow that little glee clubs should be seen and not heard. If the plans of this year's organization go through, however, we may hope for a big transformation in these immaculate boys who so gallantly strut their stuff upon the stage of some woman's club in the Oranges. The reason, of course, is Mr. Safford. If he can't give them life and spirit, we very much fear that no one can. And we hope that the new coach will concern himself not only with the cultivation of voices, but with the lifting of a few faces as well. If only he can make some of them look happy some of the time, we feel sure that audiences will be far more inclined to pardon an occasional misplaced note or two.

Perhaps we should explain the general decline of collegiate singing as one of the evil effects of Prohibition, and let it go at that. This may not account very fully for the situation at Williams, but there is no doubt that the art of terrible singing is not what it used to be. The intricacies of close harmony have given way to a shallow Vo-do-de-o-do; sweet Adeline lies under the piano, forgotten, while the Rhythm Boys beat their synthetic feet on the Mississippi mud; orthophonic rhapsodies have lulled to sleep our barber-shop quartettes. Today, when we want a song, we use a tungsten needle, instead of our own God-given vocal chords.

Let us preserve a decent remnant of that venerable trinity, Wine, Women and Song. The first they have taken from us; the second is hidden; and the third is canned. If we must troop about the country giving concerts every Christmas, let us show the suburbs that Williams can sing at least as well as other colleges. If we cannot represent our Alma Mater with a virile voice and a well-tuned mandolin, let us confine our stunts to the athletic field. Let us either enter into this new era of music-making with some old-time gusto and old-time harmony, or let us forever keep our mouths shut.

MORE TO COME

We are glad to learn that the College Band has not really evaporated in thin air, but that it is merely closed temporarily for alterations. Mr. Safford is making valiant efforts to whip it into shape again, and we urge co-operation from the student body. It is time we got over the habit of regarding the Band as a huge joke: it made an excellent showing last year in the face of much smart ridicule, and there is no reason why it should not make long and rapid strides ahead this year.

When the call comes for volunteers soon, there should be no dearth of musical talent because the Band does not yet reek with campus honor and glory. The demand of the student body, it should be remembered, first brought it into existence; the support of the student body should carry it through this period of adolescence.

'SPIRIT' AGAIN

"College spirit" has long been a subject of heated controversy among alumni and students of Williams, with urgent appeals for louder cheering recurring at spasmodic intervals. As a result of such criticism, the very word has become a living bugbear to the undergraduate mind. Reiterated remonstrances have the effect of deadening spirit, while additional requests for louder yelling blame the modern undergraduate mind, which sometimes is prone to consider any show of enthusiasm to be out of keeping with the proper sophistication of the twentieth century student. This intangible thing is not a quality, which can be deliberately attained through effort, but, on the other hand, is a condition of mind, undergoing a continual evolution. Williams has not yet stamped spirit as a useless entity, for she still grows languidly enthusiastic over her football games.

This fall after a half-hearted exhibition of cheering at the opening game came the usual criticism. Last Saturday the Middlebury game brought an improvement, which gave signs of real enthusiasm before the end of the season, but it is doubtful if the change was the result of any censure.

On the other hand, it is much more probable that the improvement came from added confidence in the football team and Coach Caldwell, after the first exhibition against Providence. Williams is not an institution where football is the one and only interest, the virtual life of the College, where the success of a year is dependent on the number of gridiron victories. Here the game still holds the status of a sport and not that of a commercial enterprise. Student and alumni appeals seem fruitless. Confidence is essential. When this comes, even the modern mind, which holds indifference to be the paragon of excellence, comes out of its cocoon, and makes itself known. After all, spirit, to be genuine, must be spontaneous.

FROSH FROLIC IN 1907

Peerless Paragons and Fanatics Feature Grand 'Peerade'

(The following is the account of the Freshmen Peerade as it appeared in the October 7, 1907, Record.)

There may have been in former years Freshmen Parades untouched by the 1907 wave of reform, they may even at that time have made an imperishable impression and received a preponderance of approval, but never before in Williams-town were seen the Frivolous Fanatics, the "Peerade of Peerless Paragons," which made interclass history Saturday afternoon under the guiding hand of the 1908 senior committee. True it is that the invitations this year were not in the form of a summary demand but were couched in diplomatic terms, but this did not detract from the attendance on the part of 1910 and 1911. On the contrary 1910 had a representation larger by eighteen than the sophomore delegation in last year's Kappadocian Carnival.

The line of March was the same as that made famous by similar antecedent parades. Starting at the Gym, the ambiguous aggrandizement went without halt to the Greylock, less than half a parading away. There the morbid sightseers assembled from Occident and Orient, were satiated with the antics of the underclassmen. Swinging around into Main Street again the Frivolous Fanatics marched down Spring Street, along Latnam Street to Weston Field. After the football game the line was again formed and proceeded to the Gym, where posters were distributed in pieces.

The Parade, a pantomime of human life emotion was reviewed by a cosmopolitan crowd which lined both sides of Main Street in dense and serried ranks. At the head of the frivolous procession was the senior committee in the inevitable drag. Then came the melliferous band, the names of the members of which have been suppressed for evident reasons. The general tone of the band, while at times powerful and versatile, seemed often to lack that depth of feeling and melody which was divined from the music sweeping from their instruments last Friday night during their first but only rehearsal.

Each specialty was a feature, but probably the greatest novelty ever seen and heard within these precincts was the quartette six men strong. The Derby, not a hat but a kingly sport, was graphically represented by fractious wooden horses, astride of which were experienced whips. The Hallroom boys were from an artistic viewpoint, the best presentation of the day, but were closely pressed by the stately men and bearing of "His Father's Son". The most ambitious act was "Seeing North Adams", in which the abnormal proclivities were typified. The company in this act were eight in number. Other new features were "The Heavy Weights", "Ancient and Modern Self Defence", "Grinds", "The Removal of Clark Hall", and "Smoky Moke, Pittsburg's Only Representative", which afforded a charming symphony in soot.

All the freshmen who did not have assigned parts were clad in panama jackets, turbans, and attempted nonehuliant airs, and were lined up behind the pageantry.

with Rousseau, he suggested that the state be defined as an attempt to realize man's social tendencies, bearing it always in mind that this involves a problem in consent and the means of securing it, the political parties being charged with the latter function.

Turning then to a consideration of the two candidates he insisted that there was only one point to be settled, does the candidate fulfill the requirements of government, leaving his private personality entirely out of the question? Mr. Miller next charged the G. O. P. with being derelict in performing its duty, and attacked particularly the mantle of silence which has been made a fashion by Coolidge. He attacked Hoover's stand on Prohibition (quoting him as referring to it as a "noble experiment"), farm relief, and the tariff. He also charged that Hoover was guilty of juggling figures in his speeches. After an appeal for relief from "the same soggy platitudes", he closed with the statement that it is Smith and not Hoover who makes the campaign interesting.

Sweeney '28 Deplores Lot of Non-Fraternity Men as Conducive of Disillusioning Inferiority Complex

(The following, written by Edward C. Sweeney '28 and entitled Undergraduate Society At Williams, was awarded second prize in the annual Dunbar Essay Contest held last year.)

Comparatively few years ago, the College had not as yet recognized the contribution of Athletics to a wholesome, satisfactory, and profitable student life. Its purpose was and is primarily intellectual. But to secure this it found that provision must be made for compulsory Physical Training, and for organized and supervised intramural "Athletics for all". The best facilities for this have been provided by the new gymnasium.

Social opportunity, like Athletic, is a further demand for a satisfactory and profitable student life. It fulfills the human longing for congenial society in which a man can express himself and find the stimulation which quickens thought and gives meaning and profit to the life of study. Neither the isolated nor the forlorn student responds to the intellectual adventure of college; learning has no dynamic significance save as it engenders social accomplishments for social application. But social application requires social opportunity. And, if the purpose of college is preparation for citizenship, the civil virtues and technique must find occasion for their exercise.

Provision for social activity for all students at Williams is utterly inadequate. The College assumes no responsibility to provide for this, as it is committed to the "laissez-faire" principle that only spontaneous groups can succeed. The fraternities as spontaneous, independent attempts to provide this lack, were inevitable, and Williams is now permanently attached to the fraternity system of undergraduate society. For the fraternity man, the system is ideal, but not all can become fraternity men without the system losing the spontaneous character that perpetuates it. The neutral is a necessary element constituting a third of the student body at Williams. For these two hundred forty odd neutrals the College provides the Commons Club which, incidentally, is completely at variance with its principle of social "laissez-faire". The present Commons Club facilities were never devised for the dignified and comfortable accommodation of one third of a student body of eight hundred men. No such numbers were then imagined. With the crowding that now exists, "esprit de corps" is impossible and the organization sinks into the "hash house" atmosphere. In fact the dining room exhausts civilized potentialities for one hundred men, while the lounge rooms, despite the recent additions, become congested and repellant with a crowd larger than seventy-five. This means that, despite the present congestion, over half the neutral body finds absolutely no social "hearth-fire" on the campus and is left to flounder in the glorification of its own independence. For an educational institution, above all others, such social stratification is unjust and needs correcting.

But perhaps this picture is a little hasty-drawn to display its deep-seated truth. Consider that Williams is located in an isolated village in the hills. How can a student find social expression that he is accustomed to in his city home? Feminine associates of respectable character are few. Smith, a weary sixty miles away, is the nearest girls' college. The impersonal entertainments of the city cannot be enjoyed in the vicinity. And even at that, the College avowedly discourages students from leaving town by limiting Sunday morning chapel cuts—though this condition has been slightly improved. But with all this, our geographical isolation has its virtues which I do not wish to dispense with. I only object to the unnecessary unnaturalness of our present environment. Within the college the student body is extremely uncoordinated. There is no common meeting place as there is no College Union and, Currier Hall excepted, not a single dormitory has a common room. Outside of athletics and class rooms there is no mutual meeting-ground. The student body is divided into fifteen independent fraternity units, and the neutral body into innumerable cliques. The fraternity is a group, in principle, at least, capable of furnishing congenial society. But where in the vicinity of Williams College can the hungry neutral satisfy his desire for human fellowship in a way that will not warp his character?

I call the fraternity system ideal for the fraternity man, but perhaps that is an exaggeration. The fraternities have the difficulties inevitable for all group life. The group is never entirely compatible, but, to offset this, it is given every possible compensation. The houses are aesthetically attractive and comfortable. This automatically tends to soften mental antipathy, and furnishes an indispensable base for group loyalty. The splendid facilities are an inducement for friendship between slightly incompatible personalities. The second compensation is the traditional mental attitude instilled in students from youth. That is, fraternity membership is the dream of every pre-collegiate student. Recall the hope and anxiety with which every freshman faces rushing week. This mental attitude tends to reconcile the pledge when he is disillusioned by his fraternity brothers. With these two powerful forces working unconsciously for the fraternity group, it is no wonder that the fraternities succeed.

On the other hand, the neutrals are dreadfully handicapped on every side. In fact, their success in the Commons Club is almost unaccountable without resort to the inherent sociability of man. Consider the Commons Club, which is the one bright side of the neutral group, and notice the influences affecting group life. The physical facilities are hopelessly inadequate to properly provide for the membership. They in no way favorably compare with the fraternity houses. Think of the contrast the freshman must feel on his arrival in the Club immediately after his rushing dates at the magnificent houses. And within these meager surroundings he is jammed with students, even the names of whom, for the most part, he does not know. There is room for less than half to sit down. In the lounge room, even though every seat is occupied. Is it surprising that he is not contented? Is it any wonder that he does not like it, and seeks something new? He may try a boarding house. There, if he is lucky he falls into a group of his own taste, which at best is held together by mutual sympathy for their common, outcast condition. Table sociability is the extent of the group's social activities. A common meeting-place, dances, entertainments, all ordinary group functions, are impossible of realization.

The Club is handicapped in other ways. The members are not selected as are the fraternity groups, but in this I find the least complaint. With practically no exceptions all members are of a congenial social nature, except where lurking forces have warped their character. The feeling of inferiority, resulting from failure to make a fraternity, is the greatest problem of the neutral group. Upon the unsuccessful outcome of "rushing", the freshman is confronted with his personal lack as never before. He has been rejected. The effect of this shock is profound, and it is seldom that the freshman can rationally face himself as he is, recognize his true limitations, and plod on to overcome them. Brooding is almost inevitable in the form of excuses for his downfall or for picturing fairyland realizations. And this is not an occasional incident, but a constant preoccupation. There is no relapse or final termination until satisfied, and that, by the very process, is precluded. Latent qualities of the individual remains undeveloped. The time wasted in worrying over conditions augments his difficulty in securing campus jobs, which alone can keep him busy and provide a relaxation from studying. The neutral cannot give his best to any pursuit. An unhealthy mental attitude is inevitable. A man becomes more socially unengaged. And what is still worse, this interferes with all serious endeavors. This mental attitude stunts intellectual attainment, and for this reason, fundamentally affects the College as educator.

Now just what does the fraternity do to justify its place as the greatest of all college ambitions? Examine with what the fraternity provides a man, both in and out of college, that the neutral does not get. The fraternity furnishes a suitable environment within which a group may perform its normal activities. It provides a place for "bulling" and an opportunity for the development of friendship. Good facilities are indispensable pre-requisites for the growth of such complex groups as college societies must be. Unnoticed, the surroundings inspire a man and make him feel at home. The fraternity also has considerable influence in a guiding capacity. The upperclassmen may command the respect of the freshmen and direct them in their curricular and extra-curricular enterprises. Lax students may be brought to study, and those competing for campus jobs and athletic teams encouraged and aided. Socially crude members are polished by example and scorn. If in these duties the actual fraternity falls short, it is not for lack of ideal, but because of the complications of human society at its best. Most of all, in the fraternity, a man feels himself a unit of a permanent society which commands his respect and inspires him to carry on. This stability comes from alumni backing, and gives a man a proper idea of the relation between himself and the society in which he must later live. Off the campus, the benefits derived from fraternity membership are equally marked. The fraternity gives a man a standing with his friends of both sexes, and passes him as a good fellow with strangers. The general effect of the above influences fills the fraternity man with confidence in facing the world. He has been living high and knows it. He possesses the self-assurance that will get him the same place in the outside world.

But every word in praise of the accomplishments of the fraternity is an indictment of the system which necessarily leaves out a large part of the college. The virtues of the fraternity are what make the lot of the neutral so unbearable. The college, by its very neutrality, is a party in the ignoble stratification. Visualize the neutral. His cherished ambition has been denied him before he has barely learned his way about the campus. If he is to use any facilities, he must submit to the herding of the Commons Club. Rooms, once dignified, are ruined by the "eat and run" attitude of the crowd. The socially unpolished are made worse by contagiously careless manners. Each freshman, feeling his condition a mistake, believes himself superior to the rest and ignores the upper classmen as hopeless outcasts. The unhealthy mental state of the rejected, which frustrates both intellectual and other accomplishments, prevails universally. Nowhere is there self respect. His friends at home feel that he has not made the grade, and he must everywhere invent apologies for his defeat. Of all the blows that his career has thrust upon him this is probably the hardest. With the present fraternity situation, a third of the college is subjected to a degraded warping for the four years that should be the happiest of life.

But why, you may ask, should the college as an institution concern itself with the social condition of the students? "Its function ends with the classroom." But this is not true. The purpose of the college must at least include the duty of developing students in all their potentialities. Sheer intellectual capacity without a perspective of life is useless, not only for individual happiness, but for the good of society and the advancement of knowledge. The social condition on the campus vitally affects the college corporation in three respects. The first concerns the harm done to individual life. Among the neutrals, individual character is warped. If countless are not permanently harmed, due to their environment and mental attitude above described, they are dangerously handicapped. Surely the college is not an institution for the development and glorification of two-thirds of its members and the damnation of the rest. In the second place, the present social situation ruthlessly creates discord on the campus. The social grading forms a barrier which prevents the free play of friendship. The neutral who courts fraternity friends is suspected of seeking a bid, while the fraternity man who associates with neutrals is frowned upon by his brothers. In the last respect, the system develops neutral alumni who are not interested in the college and its well being. And why should they? For them the college remains a place of learning, but learning de-personalized, and not part of an organic good-fellowship. Without a house in which to gather, there is little incentive to return. The charge that the fraternity man does not belong to the college because he is absorbed in his fraternity is carried one step further in the case of the neutral. The neutral belongs to nothing. Surely no one can deny that the college as an institution is vitally concerned with the social condition on the campus. The very "do nothing" policy of the college has permitted the growth of this unfortunate social arrangement.

The college must recognize its obligation to permit the fulfillment of the social demands of all the students and strive to satisfy them in the best way. Certainly some improvement in the present situation is easy to suggest. In general, the College should attempt to adopt an all inclusive social system, which, at the same time, will little destroy the spontaneity of social grouping. The fraternities must be preserved, as they are valuable foci for association, but their exclusive prestige is unjust. The opportunity for social equality must be provided, as it is the hopeless inferiority of the neutrals that leads to the difficulties which I have described. Without hesitation the college should furnish the neutral group with facilities equal in every way to the fraternity houses. The Commons Club should be enlarged and made handsome so that it will be equal in comfort and beauty to at least the average fraternity house at Williams. Surely that is not so high as to be unattainable. Until this is done, no internal improvement in the group can be expected, as pleasing equipment is the indispensable prerequisite for the formation of self-respecting college societies. They act as a common bond for the group loyalty of members who are themselves not wholly compatible. The Administration should also become an interested party and act with the alumni of the Club to stabilize the Club and to give it a historical background for its students, so that they will feel themselves members of a self-respecting, enduring society. Given handsome facilities and proper backing, the Club has potentially all that is necessary for it to accomplish as much for the individual as has the fraternity. The self-respect and cooperation within the group will gradually develop of its own accord. The rejected mental attitude, that begins with the freshman's ambition to become a fraternity man, may be greatly lessened by the cultivation of the wholesome opinion that a man may completely realize himself and make himself a power on the campus, while a member of the Club. This will be aided by an explanation in the catalogue and to the freshmen, to the effect that the College furnishes proper equipment and fosters a congenial group life through the Commons Club, which is equal to the fraternity in all its potentialities and depends only on the cooperation of its members, like the fraternity, for its success. It is understood that the Club is open to all men who enter Williams and who do not provide themselves with their own group life by joining a fraternity. The cultivation of this attitude, under the above circumstances, will go far to eradicate the warped mental attitude found in the neutrals, which peculiarly complicates the problem of the Commons Club.

The Commons Club will not be made into a new fraternity by the above improvements, as it will not select its members in any way. In the Commons Club the fraternities will have a new eternal rival which will offer equal opportunities for congenial group life. But internally the fraternity will not be weakened at all in its power to aid and develop its members as it does now. The fraternity remains necessary in order to break up the student body into small units. Only its exclusive prestige, which has thrived on the sad predicament of the neutral, will be undermined.

As the College recognized and provided for the athletic demands of the students, so the demands of the students for congenial group life must be satisfied, if it is humanly possible, in order that Williams may turn out intelligent men with a liberal perspective of the wholeness of life. Surely the College as a corporation cannot acknowledge that it has an obligation to create social stratification. Its very passivity has made it a party to a system disastrous to one-third of its students, and it is high time that this be corrected. It is only by considerable financial expenditure and the cultivation of a wholesome attitude towards undergraduate societies that this condition can be substantially improved.

THE ROUND TABLE

POLITICAL COMMENT

Sir Roundtable recently announced to a RECORD reporter that he would support the regular candidates of the Physical party, Lionel Strongfort and his running mate, Sally P. Atica, in the coming presidential election. For some time Sir Roundtable has been carefully feeling out the issues, and the time is come for his supporters to rally round the crux of the situation.

The eminent gentleman gives as his first reason for endorsing the candidates the fact that they are so far beyond the other nominees in the all-important matter of sex appeal which has never been stressed sufficiently in previous elections. Both Lionel and Sally, for example, appeal to both sexes. Children have been known to cry for Sally, and Lionel is notorious in physical circles and has been in the public eye for some time.

"The main issues," says Roundtable, "are not Prohibition or Religion. The McNary-Haugen Bill can never relieve the farmers; let Sally do it. We do not believe in Coolidge prosperity, but in better bodies for Americans. We grant that Smith and Hoover have great intellectual abilities, but I ask you, Gentlemen, how are their bodies? The answer is obvious: their valves need grinding. Our candidate, "Lovingcup" Strongfort, as he is familiarly known, stands squarely behind the issue, "Live most and serve best." We admit that our candidates do not wear brown derbies, but neither do you. Is our proud American civilization to be crucified on a cross of Bacchanalian banality? And as for the tariff," cried Sir Roundtable, viciously expectorating into our reporter's unsuspecting hat, "what of it?" (At this point the interview was interrupted by the arrival of a selected group of cows who requested that Sir Roundtable have Lionel pose for the news photographers wearing a set of their horns.)

Business Board Elects

As a result of the recent competition for the Business Board of THE RECORD, the following members of the Class of 1931 were added to the Board: Barton C. Evans, Worcester, Mass., as second assistant Business Manager; William G. H. Acheson, Pittsburg, Pa., as assistant Advertising Manager; Robert Starkey, Garden City, L. I., as assistant Circulation manager; and Clarence W. Bartow, South Orange, N. J., as assistant Subscription Manager. A meeting of the members of the Class of 1932 who are interested in trying out for the Business Board will be held in Jesup Hall at 7:30 on Tuesday to explain the competition which will start shortly.

'Record' Competition Starts

Twelve members of the Class of 1931 have entered the third and last competition of that class for the Editorial Board of THE RECORD. At the end of the competition, which will last eight weeks, two men will be elected to the Board. The following men have entered: Garth, Goodbody, Husband, Lavino, Manning, Ogden, Oxtoby, Rabbitt, Reynolds, Sheridan, Vipond, and C. Welles '31.

Miss Helen E. Davis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard H. Davis of New York City was married to Reginold W. Pressprich in St. James Church Thursday afternoon. The ushers, all Williams graduates, were John M. Mackie '21, John A. Stephenson, Jr. '21, George F. Perkins, Jr. '25, Donald C. O'Brien '24, Valentine A. Ely '25, and John E. McKelvey '24. The couple will reside at 60 East 96th St. after a wedding trip.

Soccer Team Opens Season With Victory

shots were wasted and a good many were nicely stopped by Bloomquist, the opposing goalie, who managed to withstand an almost continual bombardment throughout the game with a large degree of success. His support was very weak at all times, as the Williams forwards were breaking through at will. Gregory and Bright were chiefly effective in the Purple offense, the latter narrowly missing a score on a penalty kick, neatly blocked by Bloomquist. In a hard-fought scrimmage before the goal, Neilson added another tally, leaving the score 2-0 at the end of the half.

The home team again kept the ball in St. Stephens territory after the opening of the second half, and after several shots had been made, Bright dribbled through the backs to score number three. A few minutes later he scored again on a free kick. Following this the Williams backs weakened momentarily but recovered in time to ward off a threatening score. In the final period three substitutions were made in the Williams forward line. At one point, Kates, the visiting outside right scored on a pass from left. In a final attack by the Purple, in which many corner kicks were made, Park scored the fifth goal from a general melee in front of the St. Stephens goal.

Following are the line-ups and summary of the game:

WILLIAMS (5)	ST. STEPHENS (1)
Phelps	o.r. Kates
Christie (Capt.)	i.r. Maldonado
Neilson	c. Keen
Willmott J.	i.l. Ricciardi

quarter when, near the end of the period, Larson dropped back after line thrusts by his team had failed, and kicked a field goal from the 25-yard line. In the last few minutes of play, Amherst took the ball near midfield and advanced it to within 18 yards of the Bowdoin goal, from which position Grosskloss took it over the line on a clever run around end. The playing of Cappman, of the losers, indicated that he would have to be watched this Saturday.

Before a crowd of 15,000 people at Baker Field, New York City, Columbia's team had little trouble in turning back the Union College eleven by a margin of four touchdowns. On account of the blistering heat, both teams slowed up after the first half, and except for occasional flashes of brilliancy, played a typical, dull, early-season game. With a revamped line and improved backfield combination, the Garnet put up a better defense than was expected, but their attempts to score through the air were ineffective, and they were unable to make a single first down at straight football. Frequent fumbles were made by both teams and the punting, on the whole, was very poor. Liflander, Columbia halfback, and Kumpf, who made three of the touchdowns, starred for the Blue and White. Finnegan and Peter, backs, and Clark, Hansen, and Engle on the line, were outstanding for Union.

Against the Connecticut Aggies, Wesleyan made a very poor showing, and allowed the Nutmeg backs to cross her line five times after a number of unusually long runs. The Aggies started scoring early in the game, and Wesleyan had but one chance to score, which was wasted when a pass was intercepted. On the third play after the opening whistle, Fisher of the victors skirted right end for 65 yards and the first six points. On the next kickoff Ryan received the ball on his 16-yard line and raced the length of the field for the second score. A 35-yard end run added another touchdown, and an intercepted Wesleyan pass accounted for the fourth. Wesleyan rushed the ball to the Aggie's ten-yard line in the last quarter, but Tombar seized a pass and raced 90 yards for the final score of the game.

St. Lawrence from Canton, New York, won over R. P. I. by the close score of 14-12, when Percy, the star up-state halfback scored twice from the 35-yard line. Providence, Williams opponent of last week, tied Norwich 6-6.

Hoover Club Plans

Vigorous Campaign

These men are making a whirlwind tour through this section of the state as they are forced to concentrate their activities in the eastern part.

Dr. Garfield, after offering his support to the newly-formed organization, outlined his reasons for his voting for Mr. Hoover as follows: "The three main issues of the campaign are prohibition, farm relief, and the foreign policy. While many desire that these questions be kept in the background, they have nevertheless become leading issues. I favor Mr. Hoover's stand on each of these three, particularly on the prohibition question. Prohibition ought not to be, but has been made a political issue. If one believes in the modification of the Volstead Act, a friend and not an opponent of the Eighteenth Amendment should be relied upon. Certainly those who do not respect the law as it stands cannot be trusted either to modify it or to obey a modified statute."

President Garfield was associated with Mr. Hoover first as Assistant Food Administrator and later as Fuel Administrator in the Wilson administration, and came into close personal contact with the candidate during that interval. Adding a word in regard to the ex-Secretary's ability as an international statesman, Dr. Garfield remarked, "Mr. Hoover has a wider knowledge of foreign relations than any other man in the country."

The following men joined the Hoover Club at its first meeting on Sunday evening:

Great Offensive Breaks Panthers

for a loss from the toe of Howe or Williams. Forseeing no honor even in the success of dilatory measures, Langmaid shoved the line four yards, Howe took four at the expense of the right end, Langmaid finished up the ten yards, and Howe in turn broke loose for 15; but this first advance was nipped in the bud by an off-side penalty. At this point Smith reached the peak of his career in a shifting, twisting, three-yard run; on the next play he was thrown for a five-yard loss by Williams. Yet there followed, for the last minutes of the initial period and the first of the second, Middlebury's day if she ever had one Howe was caught nine yards behind the line on a delayed pass.

Though unable to take offensive advantage of the opportunity, at the opening of the second quarter the Panthers continued to stop Howe at the line, while McLeod wound Langmaid up pretty tightly and a second pass failed. Hereupon Middlebury launched her aerial endeavors, an event which may be looked upon as the turning point of the game; it turned a question mark into an exclamation. The first was incomplete, a mishap which was duly corrected by Langmaid, who intercepted the second. Immediately the latter proved as obliging in connecting with what was meant for him by Howe, whereupon Howe skirted right end. But for a second time a penalty dulled the edge of enthusiasm. Wheeler and Eisner replaced Howe and Langmaid and the charge went on under the shadow of the goal until a third penalty turned them back. And a third time the rebuffed assailants surged onward, while Putnam cracked the line and a pass from Wheeler to Eisner netted ten yards. But Wheeler was soon mobbed well behind the line of scrimmage and was forced in the next play to resort to a good try for a drop kick, which, however, did not break into the scoring.

The second half opened with a stirring exchange of penalties. Middlebury made her last stand while Smith first died on the line, and finally was thrown for a three yard loss off right end. Then burst forth the Great Offensive. Langmaid made a pass from Howe good for 25 yards and first down; Howe cleared right end for first down; a second pass, Howe to Ashby, resulted in a third first down; Howe clipped left end for first and goal; Langmaid took the ball home over center. After the kick-off the same impetus bore on. Chase brought the ball back beyond mid-field, Howe found eight yards leeway at left end, and Williams took Howe's pass 35 yards to the goal line. Langmaid kicked the point. Immediately upon the resumption of play he went through the line for eight yards and again for ten.
